GENERAL CONFERENCE BUDGET

The receipts for all the General Conference boards and committees up to the end of May total $206,556.53. This is 27.4% of a budget of $752,760.

The fact must be mentioned that the funds for the Foreign Mission Board, the Relief Board and the Peace Committee are very low. We urge you to carefully study the above information and earnestly solicit your sincere prayers to uphold and support the work of the various boards and committees of our conference.

Next month ends the first half of the year. This office will then prepare a tabulated report so all readers can better evaluate the receipts for each board or committee in relation to its budget.

Very sincerely,
A. Theodore Mueller, Office Manager

CHOIR DIRECTORS, LISTEN!

Choir directors will be interested to know that Walter H. Hohmann has recently composed a new choir selection for mixed voices entitled, "Bless Thou The Lord."

This item is put out by the Hall-McCreary Company, in Chicago, Illinois, their catalog No. 1666, priced at 18 cents per copy.

This is another in the growing series of productions from a much-loved leader in things musical among our Mennonite people; and churches everywhere, we feel sure, will welcome this edition to our church library. It is dedicated, "To Bethel College for its Sixtieth Anniversary Celebration," Anthem for Mixed Voices, A Cappella, based upon Psalm 103: "This is a psalm of praise to God for his great mercy.

This item is available in quantity through any of our Conference book stores: Berne, Newton, or Rosthern, Saskatchewan.

readers the above requirements are perhaps assumed but many ex-CPS hospital men can testify to a lack of any one or all of these "conveniences."

Perhaps most of the reports given by returning CPS men who worked in mental institutions centered around the physical aspects of patient treatment. To be sure this aspect proved the most shocking to many of us. The contrast between the average mental institution and one manned by Christian personnel is truly significant.

Untold Damage!

A third factor is supervised treatment. It is important that the specialist (psychiatrist) who gives treatment understands our Christian convictions and our background. It is possible to do untold damage to the confused mind if this is not taken into consideration. Our own hospital will engage only such specialists and personnel who are understandingly sympathetic towards our Christian faith.

It should be understood that the state institutions are in a state of transition, and we should support every effort to improve them for the sake of humanity. In the next ten years it is quite possible that mental institutions may truly become mental "hospitals." Environmental standards may be comparable to those of our other state functions such as schools. But even though the physical standards may be improved in the future, we cannot hope for the state mental hospitals to develop a Christian atmosphere. To attain that Christian environment (and we must not be content with anything less than this for our mentally ill brethren and sisters), the church mental hospital seemingly is the only satisfactory solution.

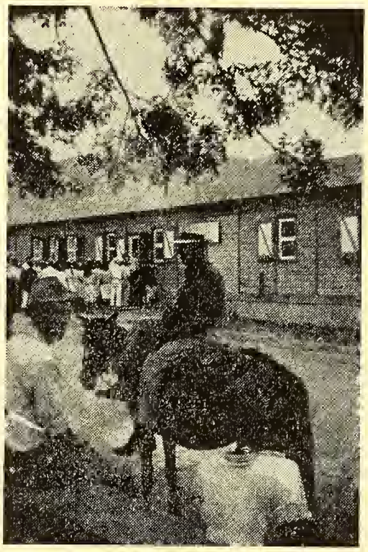
Puerto Rico: The Land of Contrasts

by Lydia Santos, North Newton, Kansas



Waiting line at the clinic. LaPlata Hospital

I read a book about Puerto Rico not so long ago. I don't recall the author right now, but I was so impressed at the way the author talked about the Puerto Rican people! In the first paragraph he writes: "Puerto Rico is a land of contrasts," and I really agree with him, not simply because he says so, but because I am a Puerto Rican myself and I know my people very well.

The American visitors who go with a critical mind to Puerto Rico can always find many faults and bad things as soon as they step out of the airplane; but there are those Americans who go there with a different purpose. They hear that Puerto Rico is a beautiful island with a climate that is nice, so they go down there to observe the beauty of it. They usually come back to the States full of enthusiasm and write books about the beautiful island. Of course let's not forget that they always carry their cameras around, and take pictures of everything.

Now getting back to my point, I would like to comment somewhat on this "Puerto Rico: a land of Contrasts."

Yes, it is a land of contrasts. We can seen on one side the nice green valleys with clear running rivers and at the other end we see rugged mountains, bare and rocky, with no grass. But this is part of the beauty of the island. There is something in those mountains that makes us feel at home, and we love to look at them, climb on top of them, and look down to the cities and the valleys. Those mountains are part of our history and we like to exalt them. Let us think for example of the chain of mountains crossing the island from east to west. They are called "La Cordillera Central." There are small towns near that chain of mountains. They are rather high up and the weather is nice and cool all year long.

Nature is the greatest source of contrast and we can always re-create ourselves by just observing and looking around. Lovely flowers, singing birds, rivers and lakes; all can tell us much about the island by just observing them. Puerto Ricans are fond of flowers, and in almost every home there is a little garden at least. We get satisfaction out of it and enjoy having flowers around all the year.

There is not only contrast in nature, but there is contrast in the people itself. Puerto Rico is made up of all kinds of people. When the Spaniards discovered the island in 1493 they brought with them many of their customs and ways of living. Then they tried to get rid of the natives—Indians; but some of them survived and married the Spanish conquerors. It is here where the Puerto Rican "race" originated. This intermarriage of Spanish and Indians gave rise to a third group of people. Those Spaniards who did not marry Indians kept their wives and had pure Spaniard children. The Indians were finally destroyed by the Spaniards so that we don't find any Indians anymore.

Then came the slave trade and this was when another kind of people came into the picture. The intermarriage of Whites and Negroes gave rise to the Mulattos. So that now we have many of them. We see that we are a people that come from different backgrounds. But there are still those who have kept their own descendancy clean. Now, about 75% of the people are considered as white and 25% considered as dark or negroes.

But even though we are a mixed race, we get along together. We love our own people and don't discriminate against them.

Negroes, Whites and Mulattoes go to the same schools, churches, and other public places. We are made of one blood like God made us.

This is one thing that has impressed me about the United States. They think that they are practicing what God tells them, that all people are made of one blood, and yet they discriminate against other races. A Christian country cannot have race barriers; this only leads to destruction. Let's be one, like the Father commands us to be and forget race and prejudice.

Another contrast is that of the rich and the poor. This is really one of the greatest problems in our island. In the first place only a few people own the land, and the rest of the people mainly Jornal-

Puerto Rico and the Rural Church

by Richard E. Johnson

The rural church, like any other church in town or city, has only one prime reason for existence—to change life through the power of our Lord Jesus Christ. The factors that affect that purpose are different for churches in different situations, however, and the rural church meets a very particular set of circumstances that make its approach necessarily distinctive. Ever since the Apostle Paul expressed his need to "be all things to all men" in order that he might awaken them to the message of redemption, the church has had to adapt itself to the needs of its constituents in order to make its sublime message effective at different levels of life. At times, certain churches have made the adaptation so radical as to change the fundamental nature of their message, and with this danger in mind, we may establish the two extremes of a governing principle for the work of the rural church: it must always speak forth its divine unchanging message in such a way that its power is not lessened nor its truth altered; on the other hand, that message must not be so firmly set in a man-made mold that it cannot reach needy individuals in varying patterns of living.

View across the LaPlata Valley

How can we apply this principle to the country churches of an island in the Caribbean, particularly when the island has a history of four hundred years of ineffectual religious domination which neither produced satisfactory level of spiritual nor secular culture? The tradition of those four hundred years still remains as a ghost of the past, and the people who have gotten out of its direct influence still carry with them superstitions and fears which do not allow them to break readily with the old way—even though they are not satisfied with that way. The problem in our rural churches is not evangelism, for people are ready and willing to accept the power of God to change their lives, but the problem follows that initial step; for the new convert must return to his home situation where buckets of cold water will be poured on his ardent spirit by those who are convinced that all of Puerto Rico is Christian (at least religious) and that this new step he has made is sheer nonsense. The only means at our disposal to confront the problem is to work our church program on a community-wide basis instead of a purely individual basis, and where this is being done, excellent results are reported. The little country chapel with termite-eaten walls and leaky tin roof is condemned to be a lonely voice crying in a wilderness until it embarks upon a broader program of evangelism and Christian service which leaves its impact upon the whole neighborhood.

In the face of all of Puerto Rico's puzzles, such as: overpopulation, unproductive land, shaky sugar economy, poor health, the church cannot stand mute and unmoved. Although we have come to minister to the spiritual needs of the people, we know that we must liberate captives, heal the broken-hearted, cure the sick, and teach the unlettered, for we cannot divorce these factors from the spirit of a man. When this spirit of service becomes the key to church activities in the community, the rural evangelical church in Puerto Rico will find a tremendous response from the campesinos and a glorious new outlet for its energies which will make it grow in grace every day. We shall then take our place with the common man and shall speak out prophetically against the inhuman exploitation of men by their brothers; we shall also stand out by contrast with the "old" religious tradition which has just announc-

Christian Witness in Bleeding Berlin

There are three and a half million people in Berlin. Fortunately they are not all starving and freezing to death. But very nearly all of them live under conditions which we would consider impossible if we were suddenly called on to part with the comparative luxury of our average Mennonite home. They are disillusioned with life and often insist that God has betrayed and forgotten them.

We can hardly blame them. How would we feel if our cities had been destroyed and looted, if those to whom we had blindly given our loyalty were suddenly proved international murderers and executed by foreign courts within our own borders, if foreign flags flying from our own flagpoles continually reminded us that our country no longer existed as such, and if we were no longer permitted to travel at will even to visit close relatives within the boundaries of that country which we had once called our homeland? And in Berlin all this that applies to Germany as a whole is concentrated in one city divided into four parts between the four powers.

As Christians of North America we see very quickly that we have an obligation before God to these who are less fortunate than we are. In the few weeks that Anne and I have spent in blockaded Berlin we have seen many ways in which Mennonites can begin to fulfill that obligation.

Mothers of Berlin need opportunity to mend the family clothes. At present they have neither the cloth nor the thread for this. Just today we saw an eight- or nine-year-old boy walking on pieces of board with straps for his shoes stumble over his awkward footgear and fall into a puddle of water. We did not laugh. Many children wear cloth shoes. Occasionally rugs are turned into shoes. Young people need an opportunity to see that there is actually something worth living for. We have heard of those who have tried to slash their wrists. One person out of every five in Berlin is sixty years of age or older. Eighteen per cent of these live entirely alone, very often in places that can hardly be called rooms and without a single person whom they can call their friend or relative. These people, just as much as our own aged parents, should have the privilege of a bit of comfort in their latter days.

As we give material things our lives and our testimony must also present God. A middle-aged woman sat in our room and for a solid hour unburdened her heart of a mournful tale of woe. She climaxed her account with the statement that the Christian Church is hopelessly lost in selfish greed and worldly politics. She was searching, she said, for something else to fill the need of a God in her life. We counted on your prayers while we told her of Christ and Christianity as we have learned to know it. We wish you could have seen, as an answer to your prayers, the expressions of new hope that we were privileged to see on her face.

Like our missionaries in China, Africa, and all other parts of the globe, we too count on the support and prayers of our church conference people as we minister to the needy in a great, bleeding city.

—Harold and Anne Buller.

Big Jim's Choice

For the third straight season Jim McIntyre, the University of Minnesota's All-American center and captain, has wowed basketball fans across the nation.

Big Jim is a basketball coach's dream. When he stands stocking-footed, McIntyre's hair brushes the six-foot, nine-inch mark, and he tips the scales at 235 pounds. Sports experts and fans around the country rate the lanky-legged Minnesota whiz an all-time great because of the terrific game he plays.

So it's no wonder that until recently Captain Jim thought or dreamed of little else but playing professional basketball after graduation.

Turned loose on any hardwood court, he is a oneman scoring machine. Last year this Scotch-Swedish giant poured in a total of 360 points, the highest individual score for a season in the University of Minnesota's cage history. He holds both the three and four-year conference scoring titles, amassing more points than any other cager in Big Nine history. And for two years, Big Jim has been named on various national honorary teams. The Associated Press twice chose him as All-American basketball center. When the magazine-for-men True polled basketball coaches for their choice of a championship team, the mentors selected the Minnesota pivot man, Jim McIntyre, for center.

As a matter of fact, Jim could have realized his life-long ambitions after his junior year at the University of Minnesota. A professional club in the basketball Association of America invited him to play one season on a Washington, D. C. team. Salary, $12,000.

But the invitation came too late. Earlier, Jim had accepted a better invitation, and turned over his personal ambitions to his Head Coach, the Lord Jesus Christ. Since then this All-American basketball star has used his reputation as an athlete as a means of witnessing for Christ.

Affiliating himself temporarily with Youth for Christ, the congenial, soft-spoken athlete has filled his week ends with speaking engagements. People flock to see this giant-sized champion, but he points them to his Redeemer. Big but humble, Jim consistently minimizes his own ability and emphasizes his utter dependence upon the Lord for strength and guidance.

McIntyre is enthusiastic about what he believes is God's plan for his life, youth evangelism. "As long as I can keep up with them," he laughs, "I want to work with young people."

Come next fall, McIntyre expects to enroll in seminary for his Bible training. He will also coach basketball. But his big job, he feels, is to continue to point others to Christ as Saviour.—Christian Life

Kloeb Classifies Gara As Mentally Defective

Judge Frank L. Kloeb in his pre-sentence statement to Larry Gara reverted to the customary interpretation of the Conscientious Objector position. As seems frequently to be the case, Judge Kloeb discounted the first two sections of his classification of C. O.'s—Sincere Objectors and Opportunists—and relegated Mr. Gara to the third of his categories, that of the Mentally Defective.

Judge Justifies His Opinion

The Judge in attempting to justify his opinion cited numerous actions on the part of Mr. Gara which to His Honor appeared irrational. Actions such as refusing to cooperate with and protesting against race segregation in the prisons in which Gara was held for his convictions during the recent war. It should be pointed out, that it is impossible to understand the Christian mind by studying his reactions to the human legal system. The Christian follows a higher authority and this method of analysis is not applicable in the area being investigated.

Gara Keeps Convictions

Through the eyes of materialistically inclined individuals, the stand taken by Larry Gara certainly is foolhardy. A conversation between the judge and the prosecuting attorney indicated that Gara would be given freedom on bail until his case reaches the court of appeals, if he would only promise to keep his mouth shut, and keep his convictions to himself during that time, but Gara refused. Why? Why does a man endure prison, solitary confinement, meager diet, and psychological tortures when freedom is offered if he will only recant?

Our Faults and Excellencies

by Chrysostom

Let us not be over-curious about the failings of others, but take account of our own. Let us bear in mind the excellencies of other men while we reckon up our own faults. Then we shall be well pleasing to God.

He who looks at the faults of others, and at his own excellencies is injured in two ways. By the latter he is carried up to arrogance, through the former he falls into listlessness. When he perceives that such and such a one has sinned, very easily he will sin himself. When he perceives that in anything he has excelled, he becomes arrogant.

He who consigns to oblivion his own excellencies, and looks at his failings only, whilst he is a curious engineer of the excellencies, not the sins of others, is profitable in many ways.

And how? I will tell you. When he sees that such an one hath done excellently, he is raised to emulate the same. When he sees that he himself hath sinned, he is rendered humble and modest.

If we act thus, if we thus regulate ourselves, we shall be able to obtain the good things which we are promised through the loving kindness of our Lord Jesus Christ.

ed over the radio that the fixed prices on certain special services of the church have been raised.

The economic problem makes it difficult to minister to the needs of our people, for there is not enough income in the communities to maintain church work at its needed level. As a result, mission boards carry a heavy load of subsidization to rural pastors and churches. Yet, by adapting itself to the situation, many a church has found the answer to this hard nut to crack. A pastor at the east end of the island in a fishing village has his own boat and fishes three days a week to enable him to carry on the work of the pastorate with the meager income he receives from the church and mission. Another at the south side is a skilled shoemaker who plys his trade to supplement a wholly inadequate income. They have found the answer to their challenging situation by adaptation; yet the adaptation has not altered the purpose nor the means of attaining it.

The Commission on Rural Work of the Associagun to work at this matter of adaptation to the cir-tion of Evangelical Churches of Puerto Rico has becumstances in which the work finds itself, and it is the purpose of the various rural church "projects" throughout the island to furnish a concrete example of that adaptation on a working scale. Pastors' institutes, seminary extension courses, and literature are forming the front line of approach to the new program. We stand united with all the various cooperating Protestant groups on the island in this great plan: to preach the unchanging Christ to those who are perishing for want of Him; and to preach and teach Him in such a way that we shall meet people at the point of their greatest need with a loving concern for all that they may have suffered; and to identify ourselves with our brothers in the spirit of our Lord who came "not to be ministered unto but to minister."—Rio La Plata.

eros or "wage-earners" have to work for the landlord at low wages. There are more poor people in the island as a whole, and it is difficult for them to find jobs in order to earn a living. So, poverty is a great problem and a very difficult one to get rid of.

At this time it will be well to mention the population, as it is very much connected with poverty; usually the poor are those with big families. The rich usually have few children or none. This is paradoxical, but is very true. Puerto Rico is over-populated; this is the greatest problem that the island faces. With the new scientific discoveries the life span as a whole is longer. Fewer people die now because the medical attention is better. The birth rate is large as compared with death rate. One of the things that has helped in this problem is the emigration of people to the United States, mainly New York City.

I could go on giving more details and mentioning more contrasts but this gives an idea of what Puerto Rico is like. A land of contrasts, yes, but also a land of poverty—and of beauty.

Wedding Music

The month of June is known as the month of weddings. Pastors tell us however, that weddings occur in any month, and June has no longer monopoly on marriage cermeonies. However, June seems a logical time to consider wedding music.

Dr. Roberta Bitgood, director of music at the Ev. Lutheran Church of the Holy Trinity in Buffalo, N. Y., writes about wedding music in The Telescope-Messenger, and we cull the following from the article:

When the average person has a sentimental attachment for a piece of music he cannot as a rule judge its suitability in an objective manner, so it is rather difficult to discuss this matter without giving offense. However, it might be in order here to list a few compositions that seem suitable for a church wedding. There are those who are eager for suggestions—who would like to get away from some of the more hackneyed selections that are not particularly churchly. These numbers have all been used effectively. Solos:

If Thou Thy Heart Will Give Me -------- Bach
My Heart Ever Faithful -------- Bach
Open Wide, My Heart, Thy Portals -------- Bach
Be Thou Faithful Unto Death -------- Mendelssohn
Calm as the Night -------- Bohn
I Love Thee, Dear (Ich Liebe Dich) -------- Grieg
O Perfect Love -------- Barnby
The Greatest of These Is Love -------- Bitgood
Entreat Me Not to Leave Thee -------- Gounod
O Perfect Love -------- Burleigh

Organ selection are usually left to the discretion of the organist. However, requests do come in which can easily be met. Often, however, someone has a favorite piano selection which they request, and this may not be suitable for the organ or for church. I have had brides present me with quite a list of selections which were rather hard to collect when some of my regular repertoir would have seemed better —but we aim to please. Just to list a few from a long list of favorites:

Song Without Words -------- Bonnet
God's Time Is Best -------- Bach
Sketch in D Flat -------- Schumann
The Swan -------- Saint-Saens
Prize Song (Meistersinger) Wagner
Serenade -------- Schubert
Cantilene Nuptiale -------- Dubois
Londonderry Air -------- arr. Coleman
Echo Caprice -------- Mueller
Intermezzo -------- Callaerts
Will 'o the Wisp -------- Nevin
Aria in D -------- Bach
Melody -------- Gluck

WE HAVE ABANDONED WAR

A typical modern state, cumbered with its heavy armament but well-nigh bereft of other values, reminds one of nothing so much as a naked savage, lugging around his javelin and poisoned arrows. States today seem nearer to the stage of barbarism than do many individuals.

By the abandonment of war, we in Japan have emerged from the era of barbarism. Thus we have been accorded a chance to make ourselves the most progressive and civilized.

If only we had done this willingly ten years ago, history would have taken another of all the nations.

Our new constitution will become a milestone in the realization of world peace. For the first time in human history, by our abandonment of war, the warning of Christ has been accepted by a national government: "All they that take the sword shall perish by the sword."

We are going to alter the definition of a "great" state. A truly great state is not necessarily big or rich or quarrelsome with its neighbors. The great state is the one which is wise, moral and God-fearing. The ideal we pursue is that of making Japan a state with which God can be pleased. Thus may we arrive at the summit of civilization and set an example of a peace-loving state. Though not large or rich or strong, we may thus become truly great.—Kagawa.

Beyond Our Own

OCEAN GROVE, NEW JERSEY—The 163rd recorded Annual Conference of the Church of the Brethren was held here from June 14 to 19, with Dr. Paul H. Bowman of Timberville, Va., acting as moderator. Up to 10,000 were expected to attend, including delegates from all parts of the world.

The Church of the Brethren, a traditional "peace" church was founded in Schwarzenau, Germany, in 1708. During the time of William Penn the young church moved almost enmasse to the colony of brotherly love in America. Today there are 180,000 members and 2,000 individual churches.

MUSKOGEE, OKLAHOMA — Concern over the lack of educated American Indian leadership was expressed here by 250 Indian and government representatives, and Protestant churchmen, in a resolution calling for the establishment of a million dollar American Indian Scholarship Board.

At the closing session of the fifth triennial conference of the National Fellowship of Indian Workers, held last week at Bacone College, delegates asked for a scholarship fund to provide professional and technical training for some 400,000 American Indians and Eskimos.

An urgent appeal for Senate action to relieve the plight of Indians dispossessed from their homes through construction of the Missouri River Basin development plan was voted by the conference.

Noting that construction on Garrison Dam has already begun, the resolution declared that 155,000 acres and 289 of the 357 homes on Ft. Berthold Reservation will soon be flooded, causing disruption of the social and economic life of the people.

WHEN IS A SITUATION RIPE for beginning a home mission work in a given area? This was one of the perplexing questions that arose in the discussion of the work of evangelization at the Northern District as well as every other district of the couple of weeks ago. (For a detailed report of the Conference see page eight and nine.) In the Northern District as well as every other district of the General Conference families from our Mennonite churches move out of closely knit communities into the nearest large cities where there may be no Mennonite congregation to minister to them. Now while it is true that the old Jewish regulation called for a synagogue wherever there were at least ten Jewish families, the problem in denominationalized Protestantism is not quite so simple. Today a faithful Mennonite pastor feels bound by conscience to encourage a family moving from his parish to the city without a Mennonite church to become associated with another denomination rather than suspend all church activities except when visiting at the home church. In any case a family that is strongly spiritual will take the initiative in this matter, not even waiting for the pastor's suggestion. This, of course, is the unusual rather than the usual. There are probably many more families of a weaker spiritual dynamic who are, for some reason or another, compelled to move to the larger population centers, or who may be lured by the quick profits of city jobs. It is probably the latter group that has been the major concern of our home mission work. If this is true, then it would seem that the answer to the problem is not that setting up a church in every case. Futhermore, whoever is sent into such a situation must be especially prepared in spirit and in mind. For he will have a larger concentration of discouragement than the average pastor who has his block of solidly spiritual families as the foundation of his work. In a situation without such a basic working nucleus the entire evangelistic drive—the lifeline of any congregation—must come from the leader himself. For the above reasons the matter of selection of workers is most crucial, for a rapid turnover of leadership in such a work would be worse than none.

All of this would seem to lead to several conclusions. First, it is conceivable that district conferences may be responsible to send a qualified worker into a city having a number of Mennonite families who have neglected affiliating with some church, with the express intention of helping them find a church home. Ordinarily this task could best be done by the home pastor of each family, but usually a pastor's time is so crowded with various responsibilities that he is not in a position to give the detailed attention needed by such cases. If however, there is at a given period a concentrated movement of Mennonites to a given city, then the consideration of the establishment of a church is in order.—J.J.E.

AGGRESSIVE CITY-MISSION WORK is something quite different from the pastoral care of Mennonites that happen to move to a non-Mennonite community. It is high time Mennonites stopped hiding behind the excuse that because we are essentially a rural people, we have little responsibility to the unsaved and underprivideged in the cities. Perhaps we have become discouraged in this kind of work because we have tried to combine the pastoral care of Mennonites in the cities with city-mission work. Evangelistic dynamic can originate only in a group of fully consecrated aggressively Christian people, not in a group that are in need of pastoral care. For this reason it would seem that our larger, well-established, congregations may well send groups of workers to needy areas in neighboring large cities, rather than transfer this responsibility to one family as is often the case. This would solve a problem for our churches, too, in that they are inclined to use all their talents maintaining the status quo and thus stagnate.

Voluntary Service works somewhat along these lines with the exception of drawing its workers from one center. If Voluntary Service continues to infuse into all its activities a positive Christian witness it will not only help give young people vision to give their whole life to the task of city mission work, but also help us to newer heights in the field of home missions.—J.J.E.

SEVENTY-NINE CHURCHES of the General Conference are on the 100 Per Cent Plan for subscription to our church papers. This means that these churches each make themselves responsible to make the Mennonite or Der Bote available in every home of the congregation. Forty churches, or about 60 per cent of all the churches in the Western District are on The Plan. Four, or about 14 per cent of the churches of the Eastern District are on the plan. Ten, or over 50 per cent of the churches of the Middle District have joined the plan. Eleven, or over 33 per cent of the churches of the Northern District have joined the plan. ten, or 50 per cent of the Pacific District are on the plan. Six of Canadian churches have the plan. The circulation of the Mennonite is now over 8,000. The Board of Publication and the Editors continue to request your regular prayer that the paper may be planned in such a way that it may be used to the upbuilding of the Church of Jesus Christ and to the glory of God.—JJE

Churlishness among the people of God is unthinkable. Sullenness is sin. Crabbedness in a converted person is equal to crookedness. Fits of sulking, giving black looks, scowling, pouting are unpardonable in a Christian. We ought to give up our crusty, crabbed, surly, sore as a boil, spleenish and perverse way or give up our profession of salvation. Crossgrained and cantankerous individuals need to have their conversion converted.—from bulletin Zion Church, Souderton, Pa.

Another Milestone

by L. M. Jantzen

A NEW day dawned in February, 1949 for the General Conference Mennonite churches in India. It was the first Wednesday evening of that month. The prayer bell had rung in the Jagdeeshpur church. Soon one could see people gathering for prayer. Some were coming from Jungle para (section of a village), some from Jagdeeshpur para others from Nursingpur para. The gardeners could be seen putting down their hoes to come. The school boys and girls from their boarding homes began to gather. The missionaries, too, came from their hospital work, office work, and house work. Samuel Stephen, the Headmaster of the high school and a number of the Bethel church panchayst (board of trustees) had announced the hymn, number 37 in the Hindi song book: "Now thank we all our God." Those gathered lifted high the words of praise to God for answered prayer as they sang. The church members at Jagdeeshpur had been praying for months, even years, for an Indian pastor to shepherd them. Heretofore, some missionary living on the mission compound had usually filled this position, because there was no native pastor available. Now in the person of Rev. J. Walters, their prayer was heard, and the position filled. Rev. Walters had been teaching in our Bible School at Janjgir for many years. Now he has left the school for a time, to shepherd our largest church—the Bethel church at Jagdeeshpur, with its 500 baptized members, and many children. The task which Rev. Walters has undertaken is a heavy one; and he needs your prayer support.

The Greater Significance . . .

But there is a greater significance to this event than just a pastorate being filled. February 2, 1949 is noteworthy for this reason that on that date, for the first time, all the eleven organized and active churches in our mission area had native pastors. This church has had a native pastor for a short time before, but at that time some of the other churches did not have one.

Not until this date did all the churches have a shepherd of their own nationality. It is a milestone for which we praise God.

Let Us Labor Together

It does not by any means, however, mean that the work of the Mission is finished. The pastors need and seek help from their co-workers from abroad. But as we pray and work for a strong, indigenous church, this certainly is a necessary step in its development. Let us labor together with our Indian brethren to the perfecting of the saints in Christ.

Seminary Announces Appointments

President S. F. Pannabecker announced this week that the Board of Trustees has selected Rev. Andrew R. Shelly of Kitchener, Ontario, Canada, to be the full-time field man of Mennonite Biblical Seminary starting January 1, 1950. During the past year Rev. Shelly has solicited some for the Seminary in various communities across the United States. Hence, this appointment actually raises his status from part-time to full-time.

The new field man is a native of Eastern Pennsylvania, a graduate of Bluffton College and Hartford Theological Seminary and a former student at the Philadelphia School of the Bible. He has been widely used in many churches across the United States as preacher at special meetings and at Youth Retreats. His work in Kitchener had been distinguished by the sweep and completeness of the church program, and his accomplishments in Mennonite unity in working with the Old Mennonites, the Mennonite Brethren in Christ and the Mennonite Brethren group in Ontario. He is a brother of Professor Paul Shelly of Bluffton College. In addition to his field work he is expected to teach one quarter a year in the area of Mennonite Polity, The New Testament, and Local Church Programs.

At this same time announcement was also made of the appointment of Rev. Walter Gering of the Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, as, guest lecturer on the staff for 1949-50. He will teach three courses including The Acts and the Epistles, The Rural Church, and Rural Life in America. He is a graduate of Yankton College, Biblical Seminary in New York and has attended Garrett Biblical Institute. He is well known as the pastor of one of the largest General Conference churches and as a relief worker under the MCC in Europe. He is a member of the Business Committee of the General Conference.

Following a long term plan to complete a line of structures of Woodlawn the Board of Trustees has announced the purchase of the half appartment a 4610 Woodlawn Avenue adjoining Franz Hall at 4612 With this purchase the Seminary now has an unbroken series of properties which will permit much more privacy and unity within the area in which we live. For those who own copies of the General Conference Handbook, 1948, the diagram on page 19 wil illustrate the sort of planning in regard to buildings into this new step fits. The Seminary rejoices in th wonderful way in which the Lord has blessed u during the past years and the growing life of th School manifested in many ways permitting us t develop a genuine Christian community within large American city.

Tornadoes and Floods in Oklahoma

by Herbert M. Dalke

ON May 20, while the commencement exercises were conducted at the high school at Thomas, a tornado hit and destroyed two Indian houses. It had been somewhat windy with occasional showers, but the weather did not seem to be threatening and so an effort was made to have the high School commencement. But the wind kept getting stronger and stronger until the whole meeting was interrupted and everyone began to go home. On the way home, however, most of the people took refuge in a storm cave at some neighbor's home, or wherever they were at that time. When our Indian friends came home they found their houses destroyed.

Miraculously Escaped

At the first home, the house was completely flat. One man had been in the house when the storm hit. He was thrown out with part of the building, and miraculously escaped with only a few scratches. Two of the boys of this family were graduated that evening.

At the second home the house was pushed off the foundation about five feet. The house was almost completely destroyed. The roof of the barn hit the house, breaking up the house. A daughter of this family was also graduated.

The Red Cross rendered aid to both of these families and tents have been loaned to them for temporary use. They are getting along. Nearly all the furniture, bedding, and clothes were blown away or destroyed by rain.

A Harmeless Creek Becomes a Torrent

The same fateful night that the tornadoes came, flood waters washed away bridges, washed out roads, washed out crops, and did other damage. A bridge, just south of our church was also washed away. Deer Creek that runs past the church to the west and south is normally a small harmless little creek. It seldom rises more than a few feet and even then remains approximately ten feet or more from the bridge. But this mighty current of water was too much. We are able to get to the church by going around to the north.

Special Programs Called Off

We had arranged for a special program to be presented at our church by the Ladies Mission Society of the Herold Church of Bessie, Oklahoma, May 22; but we were unable to get to the church because of the flooding. Of course we were all very much disappointed but everyone graciously accepted this disappointment.

Camping Days

May 31 to June 5 were our camping days. This year we had three days of "Young People's Camp" just preceeding the Camp Meeting. "Seventeen young people registered for camp. Every mission church was represented except Cantonement. We were well pleased with this fine group of young people and the success of the camp. The Rev. Waldo Harder of Elbing, Kansas was our guest speaker for the "Young People's Camp" and also for the "Camp Meeting."

REQUEST FOR INTERCESSION

On the evening of June 8, Dr. P. A. Penner, retired missionary to India living in Newton, fell and substained a fractured hip. He was later taken to the hospital to have the bone set by surgical nailing. His recovery is slow.

Rev. and Mrs. P. W. Penner arrived from India in Boston on Saturday, June 11 where they were met by Dr. Herbert R. Schmidt who went to Boston to take personal charge of Rev. Penner on the trip home; otherwise it would have been necessary for him to be hospitalized in Boston according to the suggestion of the ship's physican. He has since made gradual progress in his recovery and hopes to be able to see his friends soon. Mrs. Penner is staying at the Bethel Deaconess home temporarily.

Rev. and Mrs. Lester Wutrich missionaries in China, were booked to leave Hong Kong China on a freighter on June 12. Miss Aganetha Fast is also in Hong Kong, but has not been able to arrange for passage facilities.

The Christian and Suffering

Part II. The Purposes of Suffering

by Ed. G. Kaufman

WHAT are some of the objectives or purposes for which we suffer? In both the Old and the New Testament there are many examples and teachings about suffering. In the main, these fall into three classes: (1) Punitive; (2) Disciplinary; and (3) Redemptive.

Suffering As Punishment

The purpose of some suffering is punitive. The reign of mortal law is stated in terms of sowing and reaping. There is an inevitable relationship between the beginning and ending of any course of behaviour. He who travels a road must face the outcome of it. He who picks up one end of the stick also picks up the other. Some suffering is punitive.

However, the New Testament does not assume that this is an adequate explanation of all suffering. Jesus asked about the tower of Siloam which fell and killed eighteen persons, "Think ye that they were offenders above all the men that dwell in Jerusalem? I tell you nay" (Luke 13:4-5). He points out that "God maketh his sun to shine on the evil and the good, and sendeth rain on the just and the unjust" (Matthew 5:45). In his parable of the two houses, the rain descended and the floods came and the winds blew on both houses alike. To the question as to who sinned, the blind man or his parents, Jesus answered, "Neither did this man sin nor his parents." Rain and sunshine, storm and flood, falling towers and tragic personal afflictions came to all. Three crosses were on Calvary. One bore a flagrant criminal; the other a penitent thief; the third the innocent Christ. Not all suffering is punitive. Certainly Christ's suffering was not.

Suffering As Discipline

A second emphasis regarding suffering is that it serves as discipline. Even the friends of Job at first tried to interpret his disasters not as punitive but as educative. "Behold, happy is the man whom God correcteth. Therefore despise not thou the chastening of the Almighty" (Job 5:17). They recognize that somehow suffering well handled adds new dimensions to character. The noblest attributes of man are inconceivable in an untroubled life.

That some trouble is disciplinary was taken for granted by Jesus. We are told he "learned obedience by the things which he suffered" (Hebrews 5:8). The roll call of faith's martyred heroes in Hebrews ends in an exhortation to bear afflictions gladly, not as punishment but as chastisement. Far from being an occasion of shame the church's suffering were a cause of hope, since their explanation lay not behind in past sins but ahead in future good consequence. "All chastising seemeth for the present to be not joyous but grievous. Yet afterward it yieldeth peaceful fruit unto them that have been exercised thereby, even the fruit of righteousness" (Hebrews 12:11).

Suffering As Redemption

But neither the punitive nor the disciplinary idea of suffering carries us to the highest attitudes of Bible teaching on this subject. Suffering can also be redemptive. That was the great contribution of Isaiah. Instead of looking only back to the past sins as explanations of suffering, Isaiah learned also to look forward to redemptive consequences as its purpose. National disasters were not only punitive and disciplinary, but also redemptive.

In Isaiah 53 he tells how the suffering servant was despised, rejected, a man of sorrows, acquainted with grief; and as one from whom men hide their faces. 'Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes are we healed. All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and Jehovah hath laid on him the iniquity of us all" (Isaiah 53:3-6).

Suffering Itself Is Redeemed

If suffering sacrificially borne for others is redemptive, then suffering itself is redeemed. In the Old Testament pain and sorrow started in disgrace, a symptom of preceding sin, but Isaiah lifts it up and points out that it can be redemptive. No wonder then that he began his mission with the touching words, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God." He saw too that this idea was far beyond the comprehension of men. "For my thoughts are not your thoughts; neither are your ways my ways, saith Jehovah. For as much as the heavens are higher than the earth; so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts" (Isaiah 55:8-9).

The Organizing Center of the Gospel

However, the fact that suffering could be redemptive was not fully understood until Jesus came and died

Suffered was (in New Testament times) seen to be an integral part of the universe not an alien intrusion. God Himself was portrayed as the eternal sufferer. He cares, even to the point of suffering His Son to die for the redemption of mankind.

AKRON, PENNSYLVANIA. Speaking of the spiritual testimony which the MCC relief program has given, Norman Wingert writes, "The Material Aid program of the MCC has opened doors and given an entree which many a church and many an organization covets. For instance, I could promiscously go into one hundred homes in Kiel (Germany) and ninety of them would know of our work and would give us a.welcome... Our people at home can not even guess the total result of their giving. Superlatives are in order here. The joy, the love, the warmth that our gifts bring to these people is beyond reckoning. I have seen more than once a woman press a can of meat to her bosom as though it were gold. Tears of appreciation are almost daily sights. And when you consider that our program touches literally millions of people, how can it have been in vain! How often have I heard them say, 'There is still love in the world.' "

California Hospital Plans Approved

The MCC Executive Committee on June 7 approved plans for beginning the building program for the MCC mental hospital project near Reedley, California sometime during this coming fall. According to the master plan for the institution, there will eventually be three main buildings with central heating and other facilities. For the present, the building program will be limited to the one unit. Several Voluntary Service workers have been working on the hospital farm taking care of this year's crops and doing other work.

"King's View Home" has been chosen as the name for this West Coast hospital, the name referring to the nearby King's River which is well known in that area.

The MCC office in Reedley, California with Arthur Jost serving as manager, is being organized with MCC branch office status, similar to the offices in Waterloo, Ontario and Winnipeg, Manitoba. This western area office will therefore be increasingly concerned with the MCC work in Relief, Voluntary Service, Peace, Mental Health and Refugee Assistance, as these activities relate to this area.

Eighteen Summer Service Units Open

Eighteen MCC Summer Voluntary Service units were scheduled to open during the period of June 10 to 25. One other began work on May 1, and five will open in July. These twenty-four units, located in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Europe, and under the leadership of over 34 leaders, assistant leaders and matrons, will provide challenging work for the 331 Summer volunteers. Three of these units are under sponsorship of conference groups, with MCC administrative assistance. The work to be done in the units includes attendant service and recreational therapy in mental hospitals and other institutions, community welfare, work with delinquents, work among migrants, office assistance, Summer Bible School teaching, medical service, post-war reconstruction, and other duties.

In addition to this summer program, there are several year-round units in operation, utilizing workers during fall, winter and spring seasons, and for longer terms of service.

IV-E's Pass 6,000 Mark

According to the May issue of The Reporter, conscientious objectors classified IV-E (opposed to both combatant and noncombatant service) reached a total of 6439 on April 30. By states, Kansas leads with 1,050 in IV-E; Pennsylvania has 893, Ohio 843, Indiana 820, California 327, Illinois 225, Virginia 238 and Nebraska 191. These figures include registrants from various religious groups. Although inductions under the draft have been discontinued since January, local boards have continued to classify registrants.

Relief Personnel Notes

on the cross. The redemptive idea of suffering in the New Testament became the organizing center of the Gospel.

Christ crucified was a stumbling block to the Jews, foolishness to the Greeks, but was the wisdom and power of God to those that believed, and the early Christians made it their ambition to know "the fellowship of his suffering" (Philippians 3:10). Instead of using the terrible and unjust suffering and agony of the crucifixion as a reason to curse God and die as Job's wife suggested or even to become skeptical about God as the Book of Ecclesiastes suggests, this tragedy became the source of a radiant and confident faith in God.

God, the Eternal Sufferer

Suffering was clearly seen to be an integral part of the universe, not an alien intrusion. God himself was portrayed as the eternal sufferer. He cares, even to the point of suffering His Son to die for the redemption of mankind.

At the center of our Christian life is not a proposition but a person. A person who has not been saved anything that makes life seem perplexed and cruel, and yet who through and above it all lived and died victoriously. Even when the final mystery was closing in upon him he could say, "These things have I spoken unto you that my joy may be in you and that your joy may be made full. In the world you will have tribulation, but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world." Here, then, are three great purposes for suffering —retribution, discipline, redemption, but the greatest of these is redemption.

Northern District C

Report b

HENDERSON, NEBRASKA, June 11-15. Some 280 delegates and guests from areas as far as Canada, Indiana, Oregon, and Oklahoma, who gathered in this little Nebraska village of some five or six hundred people for the 56th annual session of the Northern District Conference, heard that the churches of the Northern District had broken all previous records by contributing over $450,000 to the work of the Kingdom in 1948.

Concern for Lost

A deep concern for a lost and needy world marked the feeling of the large audiences that gathered for the various sessions in Bethesda Church, Henderson, which houses the Northern District's largest congregation of some 950 members. This concern was manifest in the report of the extensive work of the Evangelization Committee (called Home Mission Committee in some districts) given by Reverend M. M. Lehman of First Church, Butterfield, Minnesota. Ministry to isolated Mennonite families and others in Arena, North Dakota; Westbrook, Minnesota; and, Frazer, Glendive, and Wolfpoint, Montana, was discussed. Laurence Goertz of the Wolfpoint work and Leonard Harder of the Glendive work gave personal reports of their opportunities. The churches of the district contributed about $6,000 to this work in the past year according to a report issued by the Evangelization Committee. Among the recommendations submitted by the Evangelization Committee and passed by the Conference was one that committed the churches of the district to continue the quarterly offerings for the work of evangelization. Another committed the pastor to take the lead and encourage the laity in the work of evangelism.

Aggressive Evangelism

The Conference adopted a resolution brought by the Resolutions Committee headed by Rev. L. R. Amstutz of Mountain Lake, which committed the Churches to a more aggressive and integrated program of evangelism. It reads as follows: "BE IT RESOLVED, We continue to stress an aggressive program of evangelism vitally related to our Peace, Voluntary Service. Relief and Educational programs and by all means to save some."

High Inspirational Level

Reverend A. E. Kreider, President of the Foreign Mission Board and Reverend Paul Roth, Canby, Oregon, President of the Pacific District provided a solid spiritual food as they dealt wth the theme, "Stewardship." Among other speakers appearing on the program were Reverend and Mrs. Harold Ratzlaff of India, who gave an interesting missionary dialogue; Reverend Orlando Waltner, also of India.

in decision by the Conference on the subject of peace. Adopting the resolutions of the Peace Committee as submitted by Reverend H. D. Epp of Henderson, the Conference went on record as accepting the conviction that peace has reference to a total way of life and not merely to such period when there is international strife. The churches also went on record as supporting Voluntary Service and implementing such support by studying the Voluntary Service Program encouraging youth to participate, and giving financial support.

Educational Committee

The Educational Committee presented Reverend Ronald von Riesen, Executive Secretary of the General Conference Board of Education who presented such matters as the new Summer Bible School materials, the Minister's Retreat, C.P.S. Educational Rehabilitation, report of the survey of General Conference students in non-conference schools, the presentation of the booklet for youth "The Master Calleth," etc.

Freeman College

Adolph Preheim of Freeman reported for Edmund Miller, President of Freeman College who was unable to attend the conference. In the 1948-49 school-year, there were 116 students in Freeman Academy of which 30 graduated this spring. In the Junior College were 56 of which 31 graduated. The first Indian graduate from Freeman (and probably from any Conference school) was among the three Indian students from our Conference mission field. There were also two foreign students at Freeman the past year. Among the faculty were sixteen full-time and one part-time teachers. Freeman College is in the process of erecting an auditorium; in this connection it was reported that the students of Freeman sold almost 4000 paper bricks at a dollar each in a recent one-day campaign in the Freeman community with the proceeds going to the new building.

The Seminary

Reverend A. E. Kreider read the report of the Seminary sent by Dr. S. F. Pannebecker. The Seminary reported 29 students for the past year. Reverend Andrew Shelly of Kitchener, Ontario, is to join the faculty next fall dividing his time between teaching and field work. Reverend Walter Gering of Moundridge will act as visiting lecturer in fall. The net worth of the Seminary has risen from $66,000 in 1947 to $125,000 as of now. The Northern District contributed over $14,000 to the Seminary in 1948.

New Officers

Reverend George G. Dick of Bloomfield, Montana, was elected President to succeed Reverend J. J. Regier of Freeman. Other officers and committee members elected were: Vice-president, Reverend Albert Ewert, Bridgewater,

THE PREREQUISITE

By Charles A. Wells

The drift in the science of politics has been such that no man can win a strong political following today without wide appeal to public self-interest. For many years now no successful leadership has been able to take hold unless it was able to be "all things to all men." While this development has brought in the age of the common man, it also has brought great danger. When the world was filled with much greater exploitation and injustice, men had to be able to complete and look out for themselves to survive. No thinking person wants to go back to the old days of unlimited wealth and unlimited poverty, but there is also great danger that man will disintegrate into being just a creature of the mass herd, without character or responsibility bleating helplessly after whatever leadership offers him the most. The principle antidote of this increasing malady can be found in the teachings of Christ with emphasis on character, personal responsibility, honesty and faith. When He becomes "all things to all men" we will be on safe ground again.

$5,000 for Religion in Congress

On June 1, five Representatives were sent by Congress (by passage of H. Res. 232) to the World Assembly of Moral Rearmament in Caux, Switzerland. At a cost of $5000, the men were to leave June 3 and return June 8. The purpose of the Assembly is "to explore plans for moral and spiritual rebirth of nations, leading to peace."

Temperance Action in 1950?

According to the Presbyterian release on current legislation, there will be hearings in January, 1950, on S 1847, the bill to prohibit transportation and advertisements in Interstate Commerce of alcholic beverages. If the public responds enough to these hearings the Congress may take further action.

"Frozen Fund" to CARE?

A bill has just been introduced into the Senate by Mr. Sparkman asking that the "frozen fund" of over $1.2 million be given to CARE, Cooperative for American Remittances to Europe, Inc. This money was earned by conscientious objectors in World War II days and deposited in the United States Treasury. The outcome of the legislation is unpredictable.

Selective Service Repeal

A bill to repeal outright the Selective Service Act of 1948 (Public Law 759) has been introduced by Mr. Marcantonio; nearby outright repeal is embodied in a Senate bill introduced by Mr. Taylor. A dilemma arises for Christian people in that both these men are Progressives, a party with probable Communist backing. If Conservative Democrats, for example, had introduced these bills they would likely receive much more favorable attention.

Selective Service Whittled to $4.5 Million

During the current year, Selective Service is costing $27.5 million. Both the Budget Bureau and Selective Service officials asked for $16.7 million for fiscal 1950. The House Appropriations Committee cut it to $4.5 million. Many groups are now, as this is written, presenting evidence to the Senate while they should cut the figure still more in their version of the appropriation bill.

Conditions Faced by the German Student

by Marjorie Yoder

Soon this summer, there will be about forty young people representing the youth of our churches coming in personal contrast with youth in Germany. Many of those they will meet will be students. They will have a common story and common experience to tell to our American representatives.

To give us an idea of the significance of this personal contact with the German youth, the following series of articles are herewith being printed. They suggest in a most graphic way the great importance of the mission of the M.C.C. in Germany. They point to the great importance of our personal contact with German youth whose life is quite utterly different from ours.

These articles have been selected from "European Relief Notes," a mimeographed bulletin issued by th M.C.C.—Ed.

Many students in Germany today cannot work at their efficiency maximum because they have such perturbed lives. Many have poor food and eat very irregularly. Potatoes and cabbage are their basic foods, with very little milk and fat. This fact in itself greatly decreases their energy output. And with this minimum energy they must expend it on several financial, mental and social problems—"Where will I get money for my room rent?"...."Today it has been four years since our house was bombed...since my parents were killed." "I wonder if I'll ever see my parents again." These situations call for an overabundant supply of energy and the students lack it so they run on their "nervous energy" which slowly eats down their physical bodies. In addition to the problem of food, is the fact that many of them live in unheated and inconvenient rooms. This also lowers their effeciency.

Post-War Germany

Out of the war has come a period of social maladjustment. They are skeptical and sensitive, afraid to try anything new or unproven for fear of the agitation it may arouse. These people have so long lived within themselves that they must continue to do so with interest centered around self rather than others. This perhaps sounds very harsh but it is relatively simple to understand their attitude. As young children all of them were in the Youth Groups, brought up under the Nazi regime, and then they went to war and they were the losers, not only of the battle itself, but they were the losers of homes, parents, brothers, and sisters, and all their material things. These facts would easily bring young unsettled students on the road to skepticism and mistrust.

The interest in America, however, is very high, and when we recently called for the names of students who wished American correspondents, the response was surprising. They are not looking to England or to France for their pattern—they look to America for help, so our continual prayer is that America will be able to answer the call of a God-hungry nation.

Students in Germany today do not have the real sense of freedom which we in America feel but which we take so much for granted that we never realize its real significance. They have never had a real feeling of freedom—they are cramped for free speech, free press, free religion. And farthest from all this, they have not come to the realization that before they can have these trivial freedoms, they must come to the basic fact that THERE IS A GOD WHO FREES ALL MEN—when men's hearts and souls are once free, these smaller freedoms will follow after in natural sequence. The skeptical youth of Germany are ready to receive a new way of life. Are we able to offer them something concrete to which they may cling with new hope and optimism? The answer should be "Yes."

What of the future? "What will become of me tomorrow or next year or in the next ten years?" These are questions in the minds of the students. What will they do when they receive their degree? This year there are some 1300 philosophy students at the University of Mainz. What does the future hold for them? The fields are so limited, with no chance for study in sociology and related fields. Then why should these students continue their studying under all these, what appear to be unsurmountable obstacles? We as Americans cannot comprehend their attitude toward education. In the still distinct "upper class" it is an absolute necessity. If one's father was a professional man, certainly his son cannot be a common laborer. And so the higher education becomes a necessity rather than a thing of choice.

Among the social problems which present themselves is what we might most correctly term the "human need to do something." The German students do not have the outlets we have in America. Extra curricular activities are practically absent and hobbies are few and far between. There is the need to develop leadership, a need to develop a spirit of usefulness, a need to become interested in life, practical things rather than in the dormant stuffy and theoretical atmosphere in which they find themselves.

The greatest problem is financial. There is only one solution to that. Work. No matter where or how, money must be obtained. This is a very difficult chore in the European educational system. Family and country pride are almost unsurmountable—the fact that students must work as ditch-diggers in their spare hours is very difficult for many of the old professional people. Perhaps this problem in itself will make the greatest single contribution toward a democratic life in Germany.

These problems are not entirely unsolved—they do have partial solutions in many cases. All students do not have all of these problems, however, I am sure that at least one or two apply to every German student today. The solution of these problems must come from within the student group itself. Outside forces may contribute but the initial step must be taken by the problem-holders themselves. The German people are a strong, ambitious lot, ready to make the best of any situation. They have gone through considerable stress and strain during the last years, but they are not down and out, they are again looking for something better. The German student has courage and a will to go on and with such an attitude he will come through the troublesome days, a victor because of his experiences.

Here Are Some Students

H. E.-is studying law, fifth semester. Born in 1917 in West Prussia. Is married and has two children 5 and 1½ years. His father is missing in the East and his mother is living under very difficult and meager circumstances in the British Zone. He is a severely disabled student.

G. K.-is studying law. Married with four children. Disabled veteran. All their possessions were destroyed by bomb attacks. For a long time the family lived in a damp cellar room, but now they have a room in a more pleasant part of the city. Due to poor food, worries, and hard work the wife has had a nervous breakdown and must now spend some months in a hospital. The children are being cared for by friends in the meantime.

E. W.-is a widow with two children, studying to be a teacher. Her father is dead and mother lives with her. They are refugees from East Prussia and were able to bring a few valuables with them in their flight. Now she sells these one by one to finance her studies and live here.

C. S.-A refugee from East Prussia. Is a disabled vetern, one leg amputated. Father is missing. Accepts whatever jobs he can to finance his studies and thus to prepare for his profession. Still wears his uniform, the only suit he has.

C. L.-A student of political science. Married and two children. Contracted TB because of undernourishment and wife is also very weak and infected. Mother is dead and father was killed on the battlefield.

W. K.-a student of psychology. Comes from Dresden and is now unable to return to his home. Knows nothing of parents or any relatives. Accepts whatever jobs he can to finance his studies and pay for his room and bard.

A young man who spent Christmas holidays with the MCC in Hamburg wrote these words:

"I have little time to talk with others and to discuss problems with them, therefore, I can only speak for myself and a small group of my colleagues. Probably many people have different opinions.

"More with their hearts than with a critical brain many of us stood for an ideal (Weltbild) which was a mixture of national socialism, German Patriotism, economic considerations, and many other things. Then most of us went to war, not to conquer the world for Hitler but because we saw the development and prosperity of Germany endangered by foreign economic and political intrests.

"At the end of the war the foreign countries declared that we had served criminals, and also at home nobody speaks words of thanks and appreciation. Fine years of our lives we gave for nothing, and many of our good comrades died for nothing, and now nobody feels the desire to remember them. Therefore, we are very suspicious when we or asked again today to believe something or to stand for ideals or programs of any kind. Who can foresee if this is not wrong again?"

"In a hallway room a young couple lives in Altona. The young man is studying law, having completed five semesters. His wife knits sweaters day after day to earn money for him. In five days she can complete one sweater and receives about 16.50 CM for it. She is an experienced clerk, and has had two offers from excellent shops to work in their establishments, but because she does not have the "Zuzugsgensheimgung" (permanent permit to live in Hamburg) she is not allowed to do any other than home work.

Goettingen University is considered to be among the best in the field of theology. Before the war Karl Barth taught there, and he is supposed to have said that the best religious thinking in post-war Germany is to be found here. For this reason the theological department is very over-crowded here. Among the 480 theological students at Goettingen more than 200 are in need of support. This is either because they are refugees with no means of material aid, disabled veterans, married students, or bombed out from the Western Zones. Of the 200, about 50 who came from either the Russian Zone or are DP's from the regions now in Polish control are determined to return to their own homes as Christian pastors and church leaders as soon as they complete their studies. In fact, some of them return to their homes during every vacation period to serve in this way because the supply of spiritual leaders is so low in the East. Many realize that every time they dare to cross the border they are in danger of being apprehended and sent to the uranium mines or into Russia.*

How the MCC Is Helping

...At HAMBURG

Here the material aid is carried on in cooperation with the Studentenwerk. A room has been placed at my disposal in which the food and clothing have been stored and from which they have been given out to the students. Although the building which houses this welfare agency of the university is badly bomb-scarred and dingy, the room itself is bright and pleasant. The students that helped were those chosen by Studentenwerk. First to be included on the list were TB cases, and to these were added others who for financial or health reasons were unable to provide sufficient food for themselves. Those included in the clothing list were largely refugee students who, because of circumstances under which they managed to reach Hamburg and of their temporary status in the city, were in great need of clothing supplements.

To 254 students six times a semester was given:

450 grams meat
200 grams fat
1000 grams flour
500 grams rolled oats
500 grams soya or 750 grams dried fruit

This method of distribution offers a far more satisfying personal contact with the students and develops in them a far more interested and responsive attitude. To know the names of the individuals as they come for their portion, to talk a bit with them about their interests and concerns, to give them an opportunity to see the names of the donors on the individual cans of meat—all this helped to achieve the friendly spirit wished for.

Twenty-two bales of clothing were allocated to the Hamburg student group. The larger share of the items were given to refugees from the East. One day a small allocation of children's clothing was given out. This was a great day for all. The Studentwerk officials had not heard childish voices or the patter of little feet in this bomb-scarred building for a long time. The parents were so grateful and the children very happy. Above all, I appreciated the joy with which the student helpers served these people. It was good to see how concerned they were to interpret the spirit of these gifts.

...At GOETTINGEN

Goettingen's location on the rim of the Harz Mountains makes it the first and natural harbor for many who flee across the border from the Russian Zone. Pastor Albertz, Stadtsmeister for refugees, told me that Goettingen has the largest number of refugee students.

At Geottingen a total of 230 students came eight times during the semester for the following:

200 grams fat
250 grams raisins
500 grams soya
1000 grams flour

The larger project at Goettingen has been the mensa soup and "Broetchen" meal given three times a week to a total of about 1000 students. This was done in cooperation with the Swedish Red Cross which served the same group on the other three evenings. Students eligible were based on financial and health conditions. Whenever I was in Goettingen on the nights of our "Mennoiten-Speisung," I would help with the distribution and attempt to find ways to talk with the individual student. Many of the students are proud and forced to accept this aid unwillingly, and the greatest blow to them is to suddenly see how poor they actually are.

As I walked into the "Studentengemeindehaus" on the day the men's clothing was distributed and saw the line of waiting students I was convinced that our desire to reach the really needy ones had been fulfilled. A cooperative and understanding student assisted me. A total of nine bales has been applied to this project and to date over 250 students have been served.

...AT HANNOVER

In this city great need is also prevalent among the students of the "Technische und Tierartzliche Hochschule" and the "Pedagogische Hochschule." A very large percentage of these students are refugees and completely independent in their attempt to prepare themselves for a life's vocation. Although the degree of aid given here is small in comparison with the other two places, the degree of friendship and interest cannot be measured on a comparative basis. Two Mennonite students have helped in the distribution of clothing as well as to make the arrangements for a special Christmas gift to a small group of homeless students. A total of five bales plus some individual items was allocated for these schools at Hannover.

...AT MAINZ

Here 450 students received food five days weekly The meal which they receive at noon consists of ¾ liter of soup and an 80 gram raisin broetchen, which amounts to approximately 600 calories daily. Preference is given to students from the Russian Zone and those in greatest financial need.

Each week we visit the university clinic and distribute food packages to the students who are ill. A number of them are chronic cases but most of them have only minor illnesses and are there only for a short time. This is one of the most gratifying experiences because it means so much to them to have someone visit them and more surprisingly still, to receive a gift.

In addition to the food program we have a small clothing distribution. We have served them over a period of several weeks, devoting a half hour to the need and something which fits well, and then too, this gives another wonderful opportunity to personally contact the students, and find out some of the problems they face each day. When it comes to clothing the greatest need of course lies with the young men, rather than with the girls. When a girl had two dresses which are not good, she can skillfully combine them and make one good dress, but when a fellow has two pair of worn out trousers, there is little he can do about it. And that is where the greatest need lies. "Long trousers, long trousers," I hear again and again. Many of the fellows still have only their army uniform trousers. One came in one day with a pair which had been made out of an old army overcoat. In one leg there were four pieces of material sewed together, and one piece had three places where it had been darned. It had cost the fellow a small fortune to have these made at the tailors and to have them dyed, but it was the only solution for him. I am anticipating a small sewing room where the girls can come to sew and repair their clothes. MCC would provide the thread the mending materials.

An Expression of Thanks

"Please do not accept this thank you as a natural form of good manners, but rather be assured that I believe I have felt something of the spirit which has made your world-wide service of love possible.

"There has hardly been a moment in recent years that has given me so much joy as the moment when I received the invitation to come for the food package from the MCC. This was due not only because of the anticipated help in a material way, but far more because it meant that people—strange people—took it upon themselves to care for the plight of another, not as a form of social welfare, or taking into consideration the professional or special interests of those in need. It had become almost unthinkable for me to believe that there were still people today who—above and beyond their own circles—found the way to help others, and even to others who lived beyond their own shores and prayed in a different language.

"And this was my greatest experience: at least to really meet people again. And these people were Christians. I turned away from the church years ago because though they preached in the name of Christ the world of appearances was given more attention than the world of actuality, and their service was merely in words and not in living deeds. There, where the boundary of one's relatives ended usually the bounds of service also ended. I did not believe that this was as it should be. And your service has shown me that this is true. It reaches far beyond self, even to me. . .You did not ask who I was, where I belong, or to which church I go. You gave to me in my need—without reservations. And the most wonderful part—you gave from your hearts.

"I sincerely thank you for this. I also want to thank you that you do this 'In the Name of Christ' and thus present an example in this example-less time in which we live. And, too, I want to thank you that with your gifts you have lightened my loads of daily cares and thus have helped to improve my health .May 'He Who is Greater' repay you for your good deeds."

Their Needs Are Not Only Material

(In this following paragraph is a summary of some requests which students themselves have expressed for this need. . .this "plus" which goes beyond material aid.)

We need personal contact—correspondence is not enough. We need warm, pleasant places where we can get away from the unpleasant surroundings in which we constantly live. It is so wonderful to be free to do as we please for a while. We don't want a "club" atmosphere. (Of course, what they hunger for is a "home atmosphere.) Is it possible to arrange for a "sprechstunde"? We need someone to go to with our religious and other problems. Often we are ashamed to turn to our pastor and afraid to approach the professors of the university. "Unterhaltung" is best. . . . from person to person, to talk about ourselves, our aspirations, problems, music, literature, etc., in a Christian atmosphere. We need to get away from thinking about ourselves, but the problems tend to make this impossible. Competition is always facing us.

To Meet This Need

In Hamburg on Wednesday evenings a group meeting has developed—ranging in attendance up to 18. . . meeting with MCC representatives for a discussion over such things as "The Church and State," "The German Church during Nazi Time," "The Meaning of the CHURCH," "Mennonite Non-Resistance." Much of the credit for the success of these evenings is due to Pastor Eisenbeiss, the former German pastor of St. Michael's House. His ability to understand the questions and concerns of the young people, his wise guidance of their discussion and the freedom which he allowed them, and above all his clear Christian witness, are things which we all miss now that he has left Hamburg. The evening discussion is followed by a devotional period.

Since Christmas an English Bible study on Sunday evenings (twice a month) has developed. Opportunities for personal conselling and witness are constantly growing, and we hope that in the coming months we shall be able to increase our efforts to serve this promising group of German youth. Above all, it is our constant prayer that in some way our service and witness will lead these young people to experience that the thing for which they are so diligently searching is found IN CHRIST.

Contact with Goshen and Bethel Colleges

Among the great needs among German students today is that for books as well as periodic publications. An appeal was made through Erna Fast to the Student Christian Movements at Goshen and Bethel to raise money for this purpose. The following are bits of correspondence which reveal the results of these drives and campaigns.

(From a letter from Erna Fast to Willard Krabill, Goshen College.)

"Your letter of December 18 with the astonishing news of the response to the Hamburg University appeal made me very happy.

". . .Over and over again we hear of the great need for books as well as periodic publications and so we are concerned that, if possible, some of this fund be applied to books. These books need to be chosen very carefully in order to serve as many as possible in this land so "poor" in the right kinds of books. For example, I know of students who are having a very difficult time to complete their requirements for a

BERLIN.—A warning against the "misuse" of church bells for political purposes has been sounded by Bishop Otto Dibelius, head of the Evangelical Church in Germany. He recalled that Soviet authorities had tried to force Lutheran churches in Saxony in the Russian occupation zone, to ring their bells for 10 minutes in honor of the communist-sponsored Congress of Partisians of Peace held recently in Paris. "Bells are the property of churches, and only church authorities have a right to order them rung," the bishop said. —Watchman Examiner.

NEW YORK—Dr. Albert Schweitzer, 74 year old missionary, musician, philosopher, and doctor is scheduled to arrive in the United States for the first time on June 28, aboard the New Amsterdam. He will be accompanied by Mme. Schweitzer.

His only public appearance will be at Aspen, Colorado, where he has been selected to deliver the principal address at the Goethe Bicentennial Convocation and Music Festival, June 27 to July 17. The gathering is being held to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the birth of the German poet and playwright, and is expected to attract over 4,000 persons.

Dr. Schweitzer will speak twice. His lecture will first be given in French on July 6. He will repeat the same lecture in German on July 8, the opening day of the second Convocation session. His lecture will be titled: "Goethe: His Personality and His Work," and will be translated into English, sentence by sentence.

Satatistician's Report

The Northern District with members in Montana, North and South Dakota, Minnesota, and Nebraska has a membership of 5,708 which represents a growth of over 2,000 since 1931. In addition these churches are responsible for 2,275 children under 14. The Sunday school membership is 5,351; this group is served by 448 Sunday school teachers. The members of the District contributed as follows: for local church support, $151,850.67 (almost nine times as much as in previous year); District work, $8,094.44; Foreign Missions, $58,622.23; Home Missions, $16,246.50; Relief $101,862.39; Peace, $2,135.94; other General Conference causes, $14,722.52; Christian Education, $14,722.52; all other causes $64,603; total $453,411.03. The Bethel Church, Wolfpoint, Montana, had the highest per capita giving with an average of $237 per member for the year.

Conference to Mountain Lake

In other matters of business the Conference accepted the invitation of the Gospel Mennonite Church of Mountain Lake to hold next year's conference at that place, voted to become incorporated, and postponed action on revision of the Constitution.

Young People's Day

Rather prominent in the Conference program were the three sessions on the last day which, with the exception of the Conference communion service led by Reverend John C. Kauffman of Freeman, South Dakota, was devoted entirely to the youth work. Reverend Esko Loewen of Topeka, Indiana, Editor of Mennonite Youth in this paper, gave the messages. Among the recommendations passed by the young people in their business session under the leadership of Carl Epp, Henderson, was the decision to raise $1200, of which 43% is to go to the General Conference Y.P.U Another 30% is to go for a special project—a furnace for the Wolfpoint and Glendive, Montana Churches—projects of the Evangelization Committee. Significant, too, was the decision to send all money to one treasury which, in turn, is to be apportioned according to the quotas previously determined by the group.

Another significant action was the setting up of a permanent Retreat Committee which has been instructed to investigate the possibility of accquiring a camp site.

Officers elected for the coming year are Grace Miller, president, and Rosemary Linscheid (three years), Bill Gering of Freeman (two years), and Harvey Harder (one year), Retreat Committee.

Women's Association

One afternoon was devoted to the work of the Women's Missionary Association. The main feature of the program fas a pageant "Mercy at the Cross" written by Mrs. George Dick of Bloomfield, Montana, and presented by the Henderson group. Mrs. A. W. Lohrentz, President of the General Conference Women's Missionary Association, presented the challenge of the Conference task. Mrs. John P. Suderman of Mountain Lake was elected president while Mrs. Ed Graber was elected secretary-treasurer.

UTTER WASTE

ONE-HALF of the total adult population spent over $10 billion for alcoholic beverages in 1948. But this is not all. This expenditure caused over $22 million to be spent by private relief and welfare agencies to care for the alcoholic's family; over $30 million to be spent for custodial care of alcoholics in public mental hospitals and general hospitals; over $25 million to be wasted in the "drunk tanks" (jails) for taking in or handling the drunks (these jails, by the way, constitute mostly the only type of hospitalization the alcoholic gets in U.S.). Added to these expenditures is the $1 billion loss to industry annually because of alcoholic absenteeism What a constructive way of spending $10 billion!!—The Spotlight.

SWITZERLAND. A well-known Roman Catholic theologian, Dr. Urs. von Balthasar, S.J., has gone on record with the statement that a unity exists "behind all the divisions of the churches through the presence of the Word of God."

The statement was made in a series of lectures at the University of Basel, Switzerland, on "Karl Barth and Catholicism," which was sponsored by the Catholic Union for Christian Culture.

"The significant thing about these lectures," states the official publication of the Reformed Church of Switzerland, is that "the witness to this unity should have been borne by a Catholic, where we otherwise feel our points of separation from the Catholics to be particularly sharp."—The Ecumenical Review.

The Reader Says

Since January 1, 1949, I am regularly getting The Mennonite paper and getting all the good things published in the paper. As I am getting the paper free of charge, I read it thoroughly till it is well entered in my mind.

I have been thinking of writing a letter to you requesting you to give me the address of the person who has subscribed for me so that I can express my thanks. I therefore request you kindly to send me the address.

I am a small businessman 39 years of age. I have worked for the G.C.M. mission for 20 years as a compounden. In 1943 I left the hospital and started my work independently witnessing for my Saviour among our Christians.

God has blessed me with 7 daughters and 3 sons. Six of them are studying in primary and high school and 4 stay at home. My family life through the Grace of God and my Saviour is quite pleasant. My children are all healthy. In the evening when we sit for devotions and sing lovely songs, all my tiredness disappears. I daily go to a village called Barna which is six miles from Jagdeeshpur. So I always thank God because my family is Christian.

Now I with my large family send our Christian greetings to all the readers of The Mennonite and request you to send me the address of my beloved unseen friend who sends it to me.

Yours in Christ,

C. Daniel & family

USSR. "A break-down of a religious feeling among the peoples, an intensified quest for a religious way to calm bewildered souls, a healing of the relations between human beings and a reshaping of the life of society," all these factors were described as contributing to the state of Christian faith in Russia, according to Archbishop Hermogene of Kaan, rector of the Academy of Theology in Moscow.

In an address published by the periodical of the Moscow Patriarchate (No. 12, 1948), on "The History of Christian Thought in the Twentieth Century," the Archbishop called on the faculty of the Theological Academy "to canalize the flow of religious feelings of the Russian people within the dogmatic, canonical river-bed of the Orthodox Church."—The Ecumenical Review.

WORKING ON THE LORD'S DAY seems to be a special temptation during harvest time. People are inclined to rationalize their disobedience to God's Sabbath law by saying that if God gives us a crop of grain it must be His will to harvest it when it can be harvested. They forget that by breaking this law of God they do infinitely more damage to life about them than could possibly come through a ruined crop. Such disobedience to God would set before young people an unfortunate example. Loving parents, surely, would rather lose a part of a crop than risk leading their children into a life that disregards God.

There is another type of Sabbath-breaking which whole churches often sanction. This happens in connection with Sunday funerals. In a land like India where because of extreme heat it becomes imperative to bury a corpse within a few hours after death, funerals on the Lord's Day are unavoidable. But in our land with our embalming laws and embalming facilities a funeral may be easily postponed a few days if necessary to keep the Lord's Day sacred. Often funerals are set for Sunday so that people will not need to take time off from work to attend. Some may think that on Sunday the attendance will be large and the funeral will take on the appearance of greater importance. The motive then is pride.

There is another consideration that should be made. Funeral directors are subject to call at all hours of the week. When the ambulance or hearse is called for they go regardless of the hour. For them a funeral is a demanding work. Should they not have opportunity to rest and quietly worship on the Lord's Day like the rest of us? The florist also needs opportunity to rest and worship. Weddings often take his time on Sundays. Shall he also be asked to serve at funerals on this day? Those who open graves are given a hard task to do on the Lord's Day when a Sunday funeral demands of them to close the grave. And let us not forget the pastor. A funeral service is often a strenuous task for him because of the emotional strains involved. His regular sermon (sometimes there are two sermons) on the Lord's Day are strain sufficient for the day one would think. If in addition there is a funeral service the Lord's Day becomes the hardest day of the week. Considering all these facts should it not become our fixed policy not to plan funerals for Sunday in our Mennonite churches. W. F. U.

THE CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY CREED

We believe in a Christ-like world. We know nothing better, we can be content with nothing less. We believe that men are made for Christ and cannot really live apart from Him. Our fathers were impressed with the honor that men should die without Christ—we share that horror; we are impressed also with the horror that men should live without Christ. Herein lies the Christian motive. We cannot live without Christ and we cannot bear to think of men living without Him. Since Christ is the motive, the end of Christian mission is nothing less than the production of Christ-like character in individuals and societies and nations through faith in and fellowship with Christ, the living Saviour, and through Corporate sharing if love in a Divine Society. Christ is our motive and Christ is our end. We can give nothing less and we can give nothing more. (Int. Missionary Conference, 1928).—Reprinted from Stirling Avenue Mennonite Church Bulletin, Kitchener, Ontario, Canada.

THERE HAS COME A REPORT that a ban on sky-writing was lifted by the Ministry of Fuel and Power for the opening of the "Mission to London," conducted by Church of England workers from May 14 to 29. Six aerial smoke crosses in different parts of Greater London marked the opening day of the mission. A procession of witness to St. Paul's Cathedral on May 14 began the enterprise. Bishop John W. C. Wand, of London, solemnly commended and commissioned the missioners at a service where it is estimated seven hundred and fifty of the clergy were present. Another service was planned to be held in St. Paul's Cathedral, at which Queen Elizabeth was scheduled to be present. Although entirely Anglican, this evangelistic mission has been praised by the Free Churches. The Christian World says: "Free churchmen everywhere, we are sure, will watch the outcome of this great Anglican effort with utmost sympathy and will not fail to remember it in their prayers. Godspeed to all taking part in this splendid adventure in evangelism." Bells of Anglican churches throughout London pealed for three hours on May 14 to signalize the opening of the evangelistic drive. Slowly the great Christian denominations are coming to see the heavy responsibility resting upon them to evangelize the people.—Watchman-Examiner

BABE RUTH'S TRIBUTE

The following testimony to the useful life of an old minister was given by "Babe" Ruth, the famous baseball player: "Most of the people who have really counted in my life were not famous. Nobody ever heard of them, except those who knew and loved them. I knew an old minister once. His hair was white; his face shone. I have written my name on thousands of baseballs in my life. The old minister wrote his name on just a few simple hearts. How I envy him! Because he was not trying to please his own immortal soul, fame never came to him. I am listed as a famous home-runner, yet beside that obscure minister, who was so good and so wise, I never got to first base."—Sunday School Times.

"The Christian church is not a society of integrated personalities, nor of philosophers, nor of mystics, nor even of good people. It is a society of broken personalities, of men and women with troubled minds, of people who know that they are not good. The Christian church is a society of sinners. It is the only society in the world, membership in which is based upon the single qualification that the candidate shall be unworthy of membership.

United Evangelistic Advance

An Introductory Statement by the Evangelism Committee

The Evangelism Committee, working under the auspices of the Home Mission Board, met in Chicago to consider the United Evangelism Advance, planned by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and other groups. We print, herewith, a brief summary of the plans for this United Evangelism Crusade, or Advance.

The following is the Call to Advance, as taken verbally from the information sent out by the Department of Evangelism. We believe every word of this call is important and could have our hearty, "Amen." Certainly, we, of the Mennonite Churches, would want to lend our hearty support to such a nation-wide effort to win people to Christ, and for that reason the Evangelism Committee wants to urge each congregation separately, or in cooperation with local church groups to work whole-heartedly for the spreading of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, in cooperation with the nation-wide effort.

THE CALL TO ADVANCE

The present situation calls for a revival of genuine Christianity on a national and world scale. The churches need to be saved from their complacency and importance and empowered and inspired to do their appointed tasks.

The whole land needs a cleansing of its unrighteousness and a resurgence of the spirit of repentance, faith and responsibility. Vast areas of our land, and of the world, have become alien to the FAITH. These must be reclaimed. Other areas have never been confronted with the claims of the Gospel. To these, the Gospel of Jesus Christ must be brought with fresh wisdom and spiritual power. Jesus Christ is Lord, and all things and all men must be brought in obedience unto Him for "there is salvation in no one else for there is no other name under heaven given among men, by which we must be saved."

America's unprecedented wealth and influence can mean the weal or the woe of the world. This nation must be dedicated to holy purposes, if it is to fulfill its mission and bless the world under God.

The time is urgent. The call to advance rests upon the seriousness of the days in which we live; upon the authority of Jesus Christ; and upon the necessity of new life for all men through faith and obedience to Him. "If any man is in Christ he is a new creature."

THE MESSAGE OF THE UNITED EVANGELISTIC ADVANCE

The Advance is based upon the firm conviction that the Gospel of Jesus Christ is the one hope of our sad and distraught world. The power of God is still available to those who will humble themselves and believe in the Gospel, repent of their sins, and live and work in obedience to the will of God. The Gospel is the good news that Jesus Christ is "word became flesh"; the gospel is the good news about the mighty acts of God in behalf of man; the atonement for sin; the death and resurrection of Christ; and the establishing of the Christian Church by the Holy Spirit. The United Evangelistic Advance proclaims the Christian Gospel which is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth. The Lord of the Church calls the whole Church to witness for Him, in worship, in word, in charity, and in fellowship. Only world movements toward Christ can offer any hope for mankind individually or socially.

THE MEANING OF THE ADVANCE

The meaning of the advance. From October 2, 1949, which is World-Wide Communion Sunday, to December 31, 1950. The different churches proposed to engage in a united witness to America. The banner under which they wish to carry on this task is "America for Christ." Every worthy method is to be used to witness and to bring the Gospel of Jesus Christ to all men, and to assist the denomination in strengthening their churches and their membership both spiritually and numerically.

THE MISSION OF THE UNITED EVANGELISTIC ADVANCE

The Advance is to achieve a five-fold objective!

1. The spiritual renewal of the ministry and membership of the churches.
2. The reaching and winning of the unchurched multitudes for Christ.
3. Careful instruction of every new member who is brought into the church.
4. The enlisting of all members who have moved to new communities.
5. The vital transformation of persons through Christ, so that Christian personalities shall be developed in the home, business, and in all other human relationships in order that these new persons may produce a more Christian society.

THE METHODS OF THE UNITED EVANGELISTIC ADVANCE

United Evangelistic Advance urges the use of all worthy and effective methods by which the Christian Gospel is brought to men for acceptance. Each local congregation should employ those methods which will bring the most fruitful and abiding results. Ministerial Association, Councils of Churches and other interdenominational groups may build their own programs of Evangelism for the fifteen months' period of the Advance, from the suggestions made in the following paragraphs. There is an urgency in the present situation that calls all the churches to attempt the seemingly impossible for Christ and His Church and for the extension of His eternal Kingdom.

The Lord Wants Us Here

by Elisabeth D. Goertz

Ch'engtu, Szechuan, China
No. 31 Tung Ma Peng Kai

"Endure Hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ," II Timothy 2:3 This was the verse proferred me by Sister Frieda at the time when I received my nurses' cap in Bethel Hospital in 1915.

Ever since then I have worn the 'uniform' of service. These 34 years my Great Commander has been my Good Shepherd, leading me forth and I am following Him. What leading! What fellowship! What glad following!

I do not know the way, but I know the Guide, and that suffices me.

"Where duty calls, or danger, be never wanting there." We all know the situation in this land is fluctuating. It is like a big ocean heaving this way and that way. Only it is not water that is moving here—it is a great multitude of people, swaying to and fro. China is an exceptional challenge right at present. Here is where two ideologies—the Communist and the Christian—are just head-on against each other and so we feel this is no time for the Church to retreat.

We have a letter from the American Consulate in Chungking. This same Consul was in our city a few weeks ago and he and his wife both stated, that come what may, they are staying on. In his letter a few days later he says in part:

"In view of the further deterioration of the situation in China American citizens including those with complelling reasons to remain are urged to consider seriously once again whether they are prepared to remain in the very likely event of serious disturbance and inconvenience. You are urged to consider whether you are prepared to remain in circumstances in which your access to food supply and source of obtaining funds might be stringently limited, utility service such as light, water, telephone and telegraph unavailable and the outside world limited or impossible.

"Review your decision in the light of the changing situation . . . . conditions serious and unpleasant, may soon obtain, and in the event of a change in government the opportunity for the Consulate to render representative or protective services may be limited or rendered impossible."

With the above possibly become a reality, even yet, the Consul and his wife expressly told us, that they expect to remain. This is true of other large cities already under the northern control. There is that hope that amicable relations will be possible in the future.

In the light of the above, I wish to go on record as a Soldier of the Cross. I have not yet received orders to clear the field from our Great Commissioner whose ambassadors (of reconciliation) we are called to be, and stationed in this city "where there is much people."

I have been teaching English classes and have made many contacts with students, and now we have opened a "Gospel Health Service Center" where we hope to serve especially the poor, the sick, and the laboring people.

As to the situation—the "curtain" is expanding. We do not know when, or if, it will reach as far as our western city. We do not know whether it will be flexible or transparaent. Whatever, in any case, on this side or on your side, please let me assure you that my confidence is still in such a saying as "If the outlook is not good (or possible) try the upward look; it is always open."

In reports from Peiping comes the news that things went quite well for a while. Then a later letter told of this friend that he is watering his garden (confined to his home and yard). At such a time there will be time for prayer and more prayer.

I am supplied with materials for writing and reading (a whole box of books), my Bibles in three languages, clothes and bedding for 5 to 6 years, food (foreign) for months and money in goodly supply. At present I live in a Chinese house with tile roof, and eat Chinese food with the nurse's family. Local food supplies are easily obtained and cheap. The climate here is like California, not cold in winter, only chilly, plenty of rain in summer, and many kinds of fresh fruit (oranges, lemons, pomeloes, cherries and others) and fresh vegetables all the year around. Good fresh eggs and cow's milk, good quality—for US $1.00 a month—a pint each day. I drink the milk, skim the cream and make my own fresh butter.

Let me tell you some more about our work here. Just before Easter we opened a new chapel outside of the West City gate. We have room for 200 people to be seated. This place used to be a rice market. It has large barn-like buildings, with open sides and large open front. Narrow board six inches wide are stood up on end to close the front when the meetings are in session. Our Mission truck needs to be driven into this yard; there is no other opening in the big walls all around, so we open up the front wall of the church building and drive the truck through the main church (assembly) building. What do you think of that? Adaptable, eh? How would you like it if in your church there was only such little space and you had to go through your main-building back into your yard? But we are willing to do the best we can. You should see the crowds every night of the week and on Sunday evenings too, besides the women's meetings on three mornings and clinic in a room in the same building every afternoon. You ask, "With so many meetings when do you rest?" Well, I so often tell folks that I expect to rest in heaven. With the doors so wide open and the time perhaps short who would not put in all that you have and pray the Lord for more? That is why I am assured and confident that the Lord wants us here yet for a while. There might be danger

Sponsorship of Protestant DP'S Lagging

With the arrival of the transport "General Howze" in New York City on July 3, the number of displaced persons who entered the United States under the "Displaced Persons Act of 1948" is approximately 38,000. The total number that may enter under the Act is 200,000. A displaced person must have assurance that housing and employment await him before the authorities arrange departure from Europe. Assurances have been flowing into the office of the Displaced Persons Commission, Washington, D. C., in ever-increasing numbers; it is estimated that by August the entire 200,000 possible admission will have assurances provided. The Protestant churches of the United States have lagged far behind the better-organized Catholic and Jewish DP agencies, and there is reason to believe that many fully qualified Protestants will remain behind because the Protestant people in America have not provided employment and housing assurances.

Church World Service is the principal Protestant agency recognized by the Displaced Persons Commission and has many more eligible DP's than housing and employment assurances. MCC is also recognized by the Commission, and thus far has brought 15 Mennonite families into this country. Another group of 18 families is ready to sail as soon as several technicalities can be cleared with the Immigration and Naturalization Service. The Mennonite families that have entered are settling nicely into the Mennonite communities that have received them and are appreciative of the "hand of love" that was extended by American Mennonites.

Many who have been close to the total DP problem have regretted that our migration and resettlement endeavors had to be confined to Mennonite DP's because there were over 13,000 and also because our financial resources did not seem adequate to help more than these Mennonites whom we consider our first responsibility. Now that over 5,000 of our Mennonites have been moved to South America and a similar number of close relatives to Canada, we have approximately 3,000 eligible DP's left in Occupied Germany. Most of these will go to Canada under the Canadian Government's kind offer to receive non-relatives. A comparatively small number will desire to enter the United States whereas the interest latent in the Mennonite constituency could provide assurances for many more.

The MCC Executive Committee approved contacting Church World Service to determine whether interested Mennonites could receive non-Mennonite Protestant DP's in the absense of sufficient Mennonite families. Mr. Roland Elliott, Director of the DP Department of Church World Service, was glad to extend Church World Service cooperation, and the Displaced Persons Commission in Washington also offered encouragement as it is generally recognized that Protestant DP immigration is much too low. A trial group of 25 non-Mennonite families will be brought to the United States to fill assurances given by Mennonite folk willing to take either Mennonites or non-Mennonites. MCC representatives abroad will make selection of the non-Mennonite families keeping in mind that:

1. The DP's selected will be Protestant;
2. They should have resettlement possibilities and should be interested in permanent settlement in the area of the sponsors; and
3. They should have a definite church interest that can be served by either non-Mennonite or Mennonite churches in their communities.

The ocean transportation for the DP's is borne by the International Refugee Organization. Sponsors must pay only for the inland rail transportation and this may be reimbursed by the immigrant family from earnings.

Churches or individuals who wish to consider offering housing and employment assurances for non-Mennonite people are invited to write the Aid Section of MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania, for forms on which their interest may be indicated. It is not necessary to furnish the usual "affidavit of support" customary in quota immigration because the DP Act requires only the "assurance" of employment and housing. Akron will try to comply with any specific reasonable requests that are made regarding the type of family desired. Those who have already provided assurances for Mennonite families may also write whether they are willing to take non-Mennonites.

One of the portions of Scripture that has become especially meaningful to us in our relief and refugee work is Matthew 25. We see the righteous asking the King, "When saw we thee a stranger and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee?" And then we see the King answering, "Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." May all who feel led to participate in this wider service to DP's feel the reward that comes from helping our fellowmen "In the Name of Christ."

Tool Program Activity

Recently another shipment of agricultural implements left Canada for Paraguay. Such shipments are being made as rapidly as the staff in South America call for additional amounts. A continuing effort is being made to distribute this material as promptly as possible, but with sufficient care that it will be given out equitably and according to the needs. The cost of shipping additional used items to Paraguay is also reviewed from time to time and compared with purchase prices of new items that may be available nearer at hand. Only recently has the Bank of Paraguay accumulated rather large stockpiles of certain implements, thereby lowering the purchase prices in Asuncion. Except in a few instances, it is advantageous to send the used gifts-in-kind from North America.

The tools that have been distributed are serving a very useful purpose and confirm the value of the program. It was decided recently by the MCC Executive

The Christian and Suffering

Part 3. How to Meet Suffering

by Ed. G. Kaufman

Now if suffering has unavoidable causes back of it and worthy objectives before it, how then can we best meet it, use it, and make the most of it?

Oh, is trouble a ton, or is trouble an ounce.
Or is trouble whatever you make it?
For it isn't the fact that you are hurt that counts,
But only, how did you take it.

Well, there are different ways of taking it. Some resent it and get bitter. Others pity themselves and pet their trouble like a kitten. Others meet it stoically, grin and bear it with a bloody but unbowed head. Then there are those who deny the reality of it. Still others seek some substitute excitement such as getting drunk. There are those who meekly resign to it, which leads from patience to resignation to stagnation. The Christian attitude is active cooperation in it with God which alone gives the sufferer the spirit of victory.

The Secret

The secret of the quality of anyone's spiritual life depends upon the way he is dealing with tribulation. Let us recall a few examples. Here is a scientist like Pasteur who did so much for modern medicine. He had a paralytic stroke at forty and suffered for the rest of his life. Here is Henry M. Stanley who went after Livingston, was acclaimed by the whole world and was buried in Westminister Abbey; he too had his troubles. He was an illegitimate child. brought up in a poor-house and Stanley was not his real name at all. John Bunyon had to choose between his principles and prison and he took twelve years of prison. Here is Beethoven writing music, although deaf; Milton writing poetry, although blind.

Here is a person who in youth had all the natural ambitions for success, but who now recognizes that he never will arrive as he had hoped. He will never write the poetry, or compose the music, or preach the sermon or hold the business position that he had expected. Again and again he has stepped on the gas but the speed is not in him. Nature did not equip him with eight cylinders or with six, or even with four; only with two and those none too good. It is a crucial hour in that man's life when he stands open eyed before that fact.

Here is a man who was highly endowed and whose promising youth at graduation from college awakened in his friends great expectations, but like a beast from ambush an accident leaped. Now he must work, crippled and handicapped. Again and again he has tried to throw on the old power in the old way, but it only burns out the fuse. Somehow or other he must face and live with his tribulation.

Joseph did not want to be sent to Egypt, to be betrayed by his brothers and sold into slavery, lied about by his master's wife, and be put into prison. But he used these tribulations to build character.

Paul had his thorn in the flesh. "A messenger from Satan to buffet me. I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me and he said unto me, my grace is sufficient for thee, for my power is made perfect in weakness." Isn't it interesting that nobody knows what Paul's thorn in the flesh was? Oh, there have been some guesses—eye trouble or epilepsy—but nobody knows. If Paul had been like some of us, writing all those letters—the Ephesians, Colossians, Thessalonians, Corinthians, Romans—all would have been informed about the details of that thorn. However, we know nothing about Paul's trouble except that behind the scenes it was there and he prayed to escape it, but could not and had to settle down and somehow live with it. No doubt there were qualities in Paul's life and there is deep and moving music in some of the great passages of his letters that never would have been there except for the thorn in his flesh.

When Paul and Silas were in jail, they sang. No one can really sing under such circumstances unless he has learned the song of the lamb—the song that is learned through suffering, through taking the cross to one's bosom, putting strings on it and making it into a harp.

Not Merely Submission, but Action

Jesus accepted his tragic suffering not only in a way of passive resignation, but in the spirit of active cooperation with God. His emphasis was not merely submission, but action. After wrestling in Gethsemane, He came to the sleepy disciples with the flaming word, "Arise, let us be going!" Let us be going to the humiliation, the agony, the death, the cross—and the glory! Even before the suffering there was already the spirit of victory.

Expect it!

No one, least of all the Christian, is to be spared suffering. Three things he can do about it: (1) to expect it; (2) to accept it; and (3) to use it. By expecting it we do not mean that one is to seek it. Naturally, one would want to avoid needless suffering. But in such a world as ours no one can hope to avoid it all. Jesus warned, "In the world ye shall have

If one whose powers are crippled by disease asks, "Why should the usefulness of a good person be curtailed by suffering?" the cross answers, "Was the influence of Jesus diminished by his suffering?"

tribulations." So the first thing is to expect it and not be surprised when it comes.

Accept It!

The second approach is to accept it. Paul writes to young Timothy to accept his share of hardship as a good soldier—not in self pity, not growing harsh, bitter, and resentful about it. That is not accepting it; that is only submitting to it. Accept suffering because it is an opportunity for greatness. As creatures rise in the scale of being, their capacity for pain increases. We are told that one crab can make his dinner on a lesser crab, while a larger one is making his dinner devouring the middle-sized one. Yet they are so low in the scale that there is too little pain for them to know what is going on. We dread pain, but we would hardly care to buy exemption from it by becoming a crab. Great suffering is possible only to a great creature. Great suffering may be a great trust. Accept your suffering then as a badge of honor, in that you are called to serve a difficult post. That is what the early Christians did. That is what Peter writes, "For this is thankworthy; if a man for conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully. For what glory is it, if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? But if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God. For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps" (I Peter 2:19-21).

Use It!

Thirdly, one can use suffering. Pain in itself may be evil, but it is always possible to use it for good. God did not seek our comfort above everything else or he would have made this a less painful world. What God is after in us is character, not comfort; hence, he made the world in such a way that it is possible for us to have a very hard time. Those who have suffered most are usually the strongest and the most tender, provided they have allowed their suffering to bring them close to God.

In Ralph Conor's book, The Sky Pilot, he tells the story of a willful creature with an inflamable temper. One day this girl was riding her horse. The horse stepped into a hole and fell. In the accident the girl was hurt to the degree that she could never walk or ride again. She rebelled. For weeks she lay in her father's cabin raging in bitter agony. Then one day the sky pilot visited her. During the visit he asked her, "Did it hurt when they put the plaster cast on you?" "Cer-

There is Still a Challenge

by Mrs. H. A. Toews

During our first term in Congo I often wondered just what would happen if suddenly wages went up for the Africans, if school teachers would have to receive high salaries, and if prices of commodities would suddenly go up. The work in Congo was carried on on such a large scale that such a change would bring hardship to missionaries and Africans. Mission children were being fed and clothed for a small sum of money, school buildings and dwellings were built for comparative low sums of money. Outstation evangelistic posts could be kept up with very little cost. Workmen could be employed at very low wages.

Must We Retract?

Some changes are taking place right before our eyes, and more are to follow. Can our mission still be carried on such a large scale or must we retract? Will our constituency at the home-end back us up so that we can continue to go forward? The challenge is before us today. Many Mission Boards are lengthening the cords; will our constituency also strengthen the stakes so that we can also lengthen the cords? A 36% budget giving for Africa hardly answers the question in the affirmative. No doubt there are many who have long wished that the General Conference had work in Africa. Now is our opportunity to show our interest in intercessory prayer and in giving.

Intercession Needed

We need prayer intercessors in the homeland. A missionary needs much tact and divine wisdom in dealing with the African of to-day. He is no longer the trustful obedient child, but a questioning adolescent. He realizes that he is a person in whom even the Belgian Government is interested. He needs guidance and advice in making his choices. He needs instruction in the Word of God.

No Time for Retreat.

This is no time to retrace our steps. When there are 145 Africans coming to the Station for instruction in catechism, preparatory to baptism, and hundreds of other believers in the villages, from one Station alone, how can we retreat?

Christ's command, "Go Ye," is still for us today. His exhortation "Give Ye Them to Eat," is still our privilege today. "Pray Ye the Lord of the Harvest," is still our challenge TODAY.

tainly it hurt," she said, "it was awful." "It's too bad your father was not here," he replied. "He would not have allowed the doctors to hurt you like that." "Oh," she answered, "he was here; he wanted them to do it. You see they put the plaster cast on to help me sit up and maybe I can even walk someday." "Oh," said the pilot, "then they did not hurt you just for the fun of it." "Certainly not," she said. Then the pilot told her the story of the canyon, how the Lord of the prairie one day walked out over it, enjoyed its beauty, but missed the flowers which he loved so much. So he sent the winds and the birds to sow the seeds of the flowers, but as soon as the flowers sprouted they withered. So the lord of the prairie sent a thunder bolt that cleft and ripped the prairie to its heart, so that it groaned from its black wound. Soon a brook sprang up in that cleft in the depths of the canyon and the flowers began to grow and bloom. That canyon became the place which the lord of the prairie loved the best. And then the pilot continued, "You see the fruits of the spirit are love and joy and peace, and some of these flowers grow at their best only in a canyon like that."

A Part of Christian Witness

Christianity, far from becoming a means of escaping trouble, becomes a sure means of getting into trouble. It is an intergral part of the Christian witness. Jesus deliberately called his disciples to courses of action that involved suffering. "Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves" (Matthew 10:16). "Blessed are ye when men shall reproach you and persecute you and say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake" (Matthew 5:11). "Then shall they deliver you up unto tribulation, and shall kill you, and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake" (Matthew 24:9). "They shall put you out of the synagogue; yea the hour cometh that whosoever killeth you shall think that offereth service unto God" (John 16:2). "Then said Jesus unto his disciples, if any man come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me" (Matthew 16:24).

Discipleship, therefore, while it saves men from lower orders of suffering such as penalty for sin, calls them to the higher order of suffering in self sacrifice. Self sacrifice suffering is not a curse, it is essential—an integral part of Christian living.

Early Christians were familiar with excommunications, and martyrdoms. Their faith was not like a candle flame, easily blown out by a high wind, but like a great fire fanned into more powerful conflagration by the wind. That is how Christianity won the day in its early history. Christians outlived, outworked, out-thought, and out-suffered their enemies. There is no other way today.

Conclusion

In conclusion, then, there are causes of suffering, there are objectives for suffering, and in between there is a victorious way for Christians to suffer. Tribulation is easier borne if one takes the suffering of Jesus into consideration. The full implications of troubles appear only as we see them in the light of Calvary. The crucifixion of Christ has a place in the philosophy of suffering. If we ask, "Why

To New Home

The Canadian Mennonite Bible College has purchased a new home in Winnipeg, Manitoba. It is located at 515 Wellington Crescent on the beautiful banks of the Assiniboine River.

At the present time the college has been temporarily housed in the Bethel Mission Church at 103 Furby Street. These quarters no longer are adequate for future growth and expansion. For some time the College administration has been looking for a large building and campus. As an answer to prayer God has shown us this new location and has led in the purchase of it.

The new property is a large three-story dwelling with seventeen rooms, most of which are large enough for classroom purposes. It has a three hundred foot frontage with room for expansion toward the river front. It is situated among tall oaks with a beautiful view looking out upon the river.

A rich experience came to members of the College Board who dealt with the former owner. Her late husband had been a member of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange and was largely responsible for the building of Elim Chapel in Winnipeg. When the final transaction for the building was made she and her sons immediately set the price at a fraction of its cost and worth. Though many fond memories surround their former home they felt that its future use as a Bible College warranted a generous offer on their part.

Facing the Atlantic Pact

In Washington these days, the debate is on in regard to the Atlantic Pact which if passed, charts the course of our relations with other nations for an indefinite time. If past experience indicates anything, it sugggests the greater possibility for war with the passage of such a pact.

We are printing, first, an analysis of the pact's meaning so far as American people are concerned. Then, we are printing a statement made by a group of seminary students and Christian youth of Illinois who are seeking signatures to their statement to be sent in to governmental officials giving expression to their Christian concern on this matter.

Some express themselves to the effect that it is not our Christian duty to run to government expressing ourselves on these matters. Yet, these same folk, when the result of such a pact is war, are willing and anxious to man the instruments of war seeming to justify that as Christian duty. Rather, it would seem the reverse would be nearer the mind of Christ. Our testimony needs to be constantly expressd to leaders of state wherever an issue comes up which has implications regarding Christian behavior and morality. Our testimony needs to be expressed there just as it needs to be expressed to individual hearts the eternal message of the Gospel for their own souls.

When the conscription bill came a year and more ago and all through the war, men in government knew our stand. Now, when pacts are made implicating each one of us, government again needs to know our stand. It is in the light of this Christian concern that these articles are presented.

An Open Letter to Government

As theological students and young people of Christian faith, we must live for the redemption of the world by God, and therefore we work for a more just and lasting peace than the Atlantic Pact can promote.

The Pact substitutes military alliance for peaceful reasoning in international relations. In essence it rejects the Christian principle of human brotherhood. In the place of one world at peace, it commits us to a fatal policy of two armed camps.

This Pact diverts into endless and extravagant military expenditures the physical and human resources which the American people vitally need for social advances such as housing, health, education and full employment. Its advocates would have us embrace this Pact on the erroneous supposition that its large-scale production of destructive weapons of war can bring our country real and permanent prosperity. Our Christian principles and understanding compel us to reject these false prophets. Likewise our generation, in accord with the traditional policy of American youth, cannot accept the Pact's long-term perspective of universal military training and compulsory conscription.

By violating Congress' constitutional authority to declare war, this international military regime undermines the American institution of government of responsible to the people. By violating the spirit and letter (Article 52 and 53) of the United Nations Charter, this Pact undermines the prestige and authority of this indispensable organ for lasting peace. By imposing an overwhelming burden of arms and military regulations, this Pact impoverishes all peoples, and particularly impedes the economic recovery of the people of Western Europe. By pledging our support for questionable regimes in various parts of the world and by inviting interference in the internal affairs of other nations, this Pact is endangering America's reservoir of good will among the millions of their liberty-loving citizens.

Because, above all, the series of events let loose by the Atlantic Pact is in grave danger of climaxing in a global war of extinction, we call upon the President, the Congress and the people to reject this Pact. Furthermore, we urge the following program of peace as a substitute for the Atlantic Pact:

1. Negotaiton of differences by the highest officials of the concerned nations, in such meetings as the current Paris Foreign Ministers' conference.
2. World disarmament and international law through the United Nations.

Will the Atlantic Pact Lead to War or Peace?

A. Stauffer Curry

The Atlantic Pact is one of the truly momentous documents of our history, according to most observers. Very many think that, instead of preserving the peace, it will lead to war. Fortunately it will not be ratified at once, thus allowing time for discussion by citizens. Christians should probe several probelms.

1. What is the fundamental nature of the treaty? The heart of the Atlantic Pact lies in Article 5. In it each party agrees to assist any other party which is attacked, by any means it decides necessary. In framing the treaty, the European delegates insisted that Article 5 must guarantee actual military assistance. But our delegates knew that Congress alone may declare yar; to "get around" Congress the pact was phrased to read that each country shall take "such actions as it deems necessary, including the use of armed force." Underlying all releases and utterances by State Department officials is the bald assumption that this is a military alliance. The European countries would have had little interest in the treaty if it were not a military alliance.

2. What is the history of military alliance? A major factor in World War I was a series of military alliances. Likewise in War II, and in nineteenth-century wars. For us this variety of military alliance is new. Yet we know that it is the type which always led to wars in the past.

3. Does the philosophy underlying the pact agree with the teachings of our church? Christ's Sermon on the Mount is against the use of force. From Alexander Mack's day to the present our church has been opposed to the use of force. Any arrangement which commits our country to possible use of its resources in armed warfare is contrary to our historic position. No dialectic is needed to discover that the pact and our church doctrines hold nothing in common.

4. What will be the reaction of the Soviet Union to the pact? It is agreed and so stated that this pact is aimed directly against Russia. But even Mr. Dulles, at the Cleveland World Order Conference, warned that our country must be very careful lest the Soviet Union interpret this treaty to be an offensive measure. To show what could happen, look at the Chinese situation. I heard high officials admit in person that our sending arms to China after War II actually stimulated the Chinese Communists to atack. There is a tremendous possibility but that pact may actually stimulate the USSR to attack rather than to deter it.

5. What effect will the pact have upon the United Nations? One of the premises underlying the pact is the assumed failure of the United Nations. The pact increases the extent of this failure. The pact sets up a North Atlantic Council. This council would cease its work following an attack only when the United Nations would take steps to restore peace. But the Atlantic Council would have power to decide when the United Nations had taken these steps. Thus the Atlantic Council would sit in judgment upon the United Nations. In other words the United Nations would be subservient to the Atlantic Council. The United Nations is the one bridge over the "iron curtain" and may not be destroyed or impaired.

6. Will our country be expected to send arms to other nations if the treaty is ratified? It is now clear that the pact involves a tremendous program of military aid by the United States to other signers. Secretary Acheson has just informed Congress that the initial cost of a military assistance program under the pact be $1,300,000,000. To keep it going after the initial stages will cost up to $25 billion per year according to many observes.

7. What will the pact do to our national life and thought? Most observers agree that the pact will necessitate universal military training or some other type of draft. As twenty-two nationally known ministers said in a Lenten statement, "The adoption of the Atlantic Pact means continued stockpiling of atomic and biological weapons, continuance of peacetime conscription, increase of the already colossal arms budget, building a new world spy network, of military bases around the world, no relaxation in military influence of education, science, industry and commerce."

8. From a purely military point of view can the treaty be successful? James Warburg, an eminent New Yorker and international financier, opposes the pact because of the "military dilemma" into which it would lead. Even with our military help, he says, Western European countries could not withstand a Russian attack. The only real way to guarantee effective military help to Western Europe would be to send our troops there. But this act in itself would provoke Russian attack before all our troops had even landed, thus defeating at once the purpose of the pact. Furthermore, it is generally agreed that in the initial stages of War III the Soviet Union would overrun all of Europe. In this way she would capture all the equipment we would have shipped to Western Europe, thus strengthening her own power. Then, too, one fourth of France is now Communist; there may be mass desertions in the French and other armies in case of war with Russia. There is no assurance at all that the North Atlantic countries could win a war with the Soviet Union.

9. Are there alternatives peaceful means of meeting the threat of communism? The answer to this question is definitely in the affirmative, on several counts. First, the best way to stop the spread of communism is to help countries to rehabilitate themselves. Hungry, unclothed, unemployed, impoverished people always are the first to fall prey to communism. We have begun a program of economic aid to many countries. If we deflect both our own efforts and those of other nations into military preparations, the economic rehabilitation of Western Europe will be retarded. In terms of both the church and nation as a whole, to continue our relief efforts is a most effective means of preventing the spread of communism.

Second, further diplomatic efforts should be exerted to repair the rift between the United States and the Soviet Union. The regular meetings of foreign

by Grace Moyer

The C. E. Young People's Union of the Eastern District Conference have four outstanding events in a year.

Rally

The annual C. E. Rally was held at the Richfield Church at 3:00 p. m. on October 24, 1949. Special music was rendered by the Richfield, Napier and West Swamp Societies. The speaker of the afternoon was Rev. Geo. Greger of Napier and his theme was entitled "Abiding in Christ." He stressed the fact that we must live close to Christ day by day and need to be humble to abide. He also stated no obedience, no blessing and by giving our all, we abide in Christ.

Banquet

On February 26, 1949, the annual banquet was held at Trainers Restaurant, Quakertown, Pa. The toastmaster was Rev. A. H. Schultz and the Song leader was Rev. Walter Dick. Special music was rendered as follows: Brass quartet, Perkasie Society; Girl's trio, Bally Society; Girl's Trio, Schwenksville Society. The Speaker for the evening was Mr. Caroll Parks, a Junior High School teacher, from Allentown. He gave a challenge to young people to early in life give their all to the Lord Jesus Christ. He emphasized the fact that we need more young people to live for Christ in the High Schools and live for Him day by day.

Convention

The 54th annual C. E. Convention was held at our Retreat grounds, Men-O-Lan, May 30, 1949, The theme of the convention was "Living for Jesus, using the text of Matthew 7:21. At the morning session the theme was discussed as follows: "Requirements for Christian Living," by Rev J. J. Plenert and "Manifestation of Christian Living," by Rev. Walter J. Dick. In the afternoon the speaker was Rev. H. H. Scanvlin, from Allentown who also spoke on the theme. Many stayed for supper and in the evening, all gathered around the campfire to sing hymns and choruses and some gave testimonies as to what Retreat meant to them in the past.

Retreat

Many of our young people look forward to our annual retreats held at Men-O-Lan. Here is where many new acquaintances are made and is a time when we separate ourselves from the world and truly meditate upon the Word of God and worship Him in Spirit and in Truth. Many find Christ as their Personal Saviour and decide for full-time service in the Master's work.

ministers were discontinued many months ago; for the heads of state have not met for years. These and other similar methods, while not a guarantee of success by any means, should not be discarded as a means toward world peace.

Third, we should work to strengthen the United Nations.

Plan Washington Retreat

by Alice Loewen

The Washington Retreat will be held August 25th through the 28th at Hall Lake, ,which is located near Seattle, Washington. The age group for which this retreat is being planned is usually from about 15 years to 30 years of age.

Plan Ninth Annual Retreat in Idaho

By Harold Isaak

The Aberdeen Young People's Retreat will be held at the Presbyterian camp grounds, several miles from Sun Valley, Idaho. The date is July 28-August 1. Our theme will be. "The Master Calleth for Thee" John 11:28.

Our faculty this year includes: Reverend P. D. Unruh, pastor of the First Mennonite Church of Colfax, Washington, speaking on the main theme; Rev. H. N. Harder, our local pastor, in charge of Bible study and Paul Bauschman speaking on missions and also music director.

The age includes all young people from the Freshman class and up. This year we are inviting the young people of our nearest Mennonite churches. These include: First Church at Caldwell, Idaho; First Church at Colfax, Washington; First Church at Newport. Washington; and the Church at Lind, Washington. This is the first year we have invited other young people of our denomination to our retreat. Because of the great distance between us and the nearest Mennonite church, we have had our retreats just with our own young people.

should the innocent have to suffer?" the cross answers, "Jesus was innocent." If we in the throws or despair exclaim, "Why does God permit the waste of suffering?" the cross answers, "Was the crucifixion of Jesus a waste?" If one whose powers are crippled by disease asks, "Why should the usefulness of a good persons be curtailed by suffering?" the cross answers, "Was the influence of Jesus diminished by his suffering?"

There is deep insight in the stanza,

And all through life I see a cross,
Where sons of God yield up their breath.
There is no gain except by loss;
There is no life except by death;
Nor glory but in very shame;
Nor justice but in taking blame;
And Christ's Eternal Passion sayeth,
Be emptied of glory, right and name.

Seniors of 1949, if you would live greatly, if you would be useful, if you would make a worthwhile contribution, if you would really get joy and satisfaction out of life and be a worthy disciple of Jesus Christ, then be not afraid of tribulation and suffering—expect it, accept it, use it, yes more—find your cross, voluntarily take it upon yourself and follow your Saviour and Lord Jesus Christ. May God bless you all.

NEVER TOO OLD

. . . . . But!

That is the way it is with some Hymnaries.

If your Hymnaries don't quite match the new ones which you got (or which you so badly need) why not send your old ones on to a church that really needs them but cannot afford to buy new ones like your church can.

Take For Instance

Ward W. Shelly, of the Bethel-Saucon-Springfield Community out in Pennsylvania . . . . We were able to send him recently a few used copies of the Hymnary which had been turned in to this office and my! How happy he was. He writes: "I am very well pleased with the shipment of used Hymnaries . . . . That is not a sufficient quantity to use in any of my churches (he serves three churches) so I will be happy if you can contact some church that might be disposing of their old ones. Can still use up to 150 to 175 copies."

And there are other churches like that.

So, while we are sending our worn clothing to Europe, how about sending some worn Hymnaries to some of our needy churches?

Get the "new look" with some new Hymnaries.

THE LORD WANTS US HERE

ahead, but what soldier retreats because there is danger? I have said "Yes" to the Lord for all of my life-time.

The opening of the chapel was a great event. We had the good help of a fellow-missionary, Reverend Day, who brought his loud speaker. There were many hundreds of people inside and outside within hearing distance of the Great Gospel. I look at the crowds and I say to them, "I hope and expect that many of you will become Christians this year." This afternoon we had an English service and we had a nice line up of English speaking students and business men. It was my turn to give the message and my theme was "Jesus, our Perfect Saviour for life and eternity." My divisions were: Light, Life, Love, Peace, and Hope we have in Jesus. He gives it freely and we must receive it freely and be rich!

I wish you could see us work in our clinic. We were taking care of a mother the other day and how good it felt to have such fine supplies from America, those I had brought along. You can know how grateful we are for everything we have here for this time. And all the time to think that the time might be short! Keep praying.

THE EDITOR'S PLEA

The editor sat in his uneasy chair—
His thoughts ran on apace.
"How can I crowd a yard of repart into a foot of space?"

'Tis three to one, you surely see
The thing cannot be done.
Therefore the editorial "We"
Will have to cut 'er down.

And now my dear contributors,
That nothing may go wrong,
Please send ideas one yard deep
But only one foot long.

Currency Exchange Rate Clarified

Efforts were recently made to obtain a better rate of currency exchange from the Bank of Paraguay since the unofficial market rate is considerably higher than the legal bank rate at which U. S. dollars can be converted to Guanaries, the currency of Paraguay. Heretofore the rate received for dollars was 3.678. However the Bank of Paraguay has consented to grant to the MCC a premium for the exchange of U. S. dollars resulting in 5 Guaranies per dollar. This rate is still lower than the illegal market rate, but represents the highest rate the Paraguay Government is giving through regular legal channels.

The MCC makes available to the Cooperatives of the Mennonite colonies U. S. dollars at this same rate of exchange to be used in importing goods for colony use. This makes it possible for them to purchase certain essential items from North America or other world markets at a price which they can afford.

MCC Warehouse Addresses in Kansas

While the MCC Food warehouse is located at 314 Main Street, Newton, the MCC Clothing Center is at North Newton. Parcels should be addressed to one of these places according to the nature of the contents.

Personnel Notes

Vernon Neuschwander of Lebanon, Oregon left on June 20 for Paraguay, where he will serve for a second term assisting in the refugee resettlement program. Clifford Kanagy returned from Europe on June 21, having spent nearly all of his term in Poland. Evelyn Sensenig of East Petersburg, Pa. left on June 24 for Europe.

The Nature of Relief Work

Often relief work consists of ordinary tasks. In Puerto Rico the laundry performs an essential function. For the hospital alone, the total dry weight of laundry during a 30 day period was 7500 pounds. The work provides employment for a number of Puerto Rican persons, in addition to the MCC personnel.

Beyond Our Own

INTERNATIONAL News Service reports that for the first time in two thousand years the silver shekel of the Old Testament will shortly be in circulation in new Israel. It will be the first issue of Jewish money since 144 B.C.—Gospel Herald.

CHICAGO—Through the cooperation of American churches in the Christian Rural Overseas program (CROP), farmers in 26 states contributed for overseas relief 75,668,581 pounds of farm commodities in the year ending June 1, 1949. This total, announced this week by John D. Metzler, national CROP chairman, represents 2,392 railroad carloads of gifts in kind, with a value of $6,596,674.

CHURCH World Service has announced that the number of DP job and home assurances received from American Protestant and Orthodox churches has nearly doubled in recent weeks. The agency said that 600 assurances were received between April 18 and May 18, as compared with a previous monthly average of 330. Church World Service said it would stress the need for a continued increase in assurances during its DP Action Month campaign, which began on June 1. The drive seeks to have each church sponsor at least one DP family.—Watchman-Examiner.

A 306-YEAR tradition of Presbyterianism remained unbroken when the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. voted to retain the Westminster Confession of Faith. A proposal to substitute a "Brief Statement of the Reformed Faith" was turned down after a short debate.—Watchman Examiner.

JAPAN. General MacArthur has asked the Pocket Testament League for ten million Gospels to aid in the Christianization of Japan. Not in 500 years has any nation afforded an opportunity such as Japan now offers for the presentation of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. General MacArthur claimed, and added that the direct distribution of the Scriptures is the surest and quickest achievement of this goal. With the General's approval, the Testament League will sponsor the printing of the Testaments in Japan, but, until the arrangements are completed, the League reports that over 30,000 have been shipped from America in Japanese and English. Missionaries in Japan have pledged their cooperation as channels of distribution.—The Ecumenical Courier.

STIRLING AVENUE MENNONITE CHURCH
Kitchener, Ontario, Canada
June 8, 1949
Mennonite Publication Office
722 Main Street
Newton, Kansas

A few minutes ago I got my mail out of our church mailbox, and noticed Sunday school literature from two publishing houses in the package compartment. I decided to put this letter on "top priority" and write to you, which I have been planning to do for quite a long time.

The subject of this letter can be stated very briefly—our complete satisfaction in the way your office is handling our complete order for our complete Sunday school needs. (I guess that makes a "complete" statement!)

During the past several years we have been thinking through our Sunday school needs. We discovered that to secure the materials we require necessitates dealing with five publishing houses in addition to your office in Newton. We used to deal direct with these companies. I believe it was early last year that we decided to "streamline" this and began the process of getting all our materials through your office. Instead of six invoices we now receive one. And, no matter what changes we wish to make in our order we write to one address—722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas. Further, through your summary check sheets, which I admit required a little time to understand fully, we can visualize the whole picture at once.

Now, the wonderfully amazing thing to me is that this service which is so very advantageous to us is also very desirable for you; for I understand you actually make money, through trade discounts, in providing this service for us. As I travel about and have occasion to discuss these areas of the work of the church, I discover there are many churches which have not yet discovered the possibilities of this relationship. You may be sure I boost it wherever I can.

There is one more thing I want to state. Our Sunday school leadership decided that the normal thing is to use all literature produced by our Conference. I believe I am correct when I state that we are now using every item published by our Conference for Sunday school work. We cooperate with our Old Mennonite Church here in the Summer Bible School and thus use the recommended materials for the area of work.

I can state without hesitation that we find the materials satisfactory. This does not mean that I feel every detail of emphasis is exactly as I think it should be. It would indeed be amazing if a corps of writers could produce a mass of material and in every particular emphasize precisely what I think should be emphasized in exactly the way I think it should be done. BUT, I do mean that I know of no other set of materials in the fields covered that could possibly meet our needs better—and would even approach them.

Now, again the "wonderully amazing thing" is that our conclusion that we should use our materials is not only advantageous to us, but naturally to you too; for unless materials are used, there is little point in publishing.

I suspect that you make the occasional mistake in your office, and perhaps someone whose nerves are edged through stomach disorders points these out to you in emphatic terms. I thought you might appreciate reading a letter pointing out strictly from the point of view of the church out in the field how many of us feel about the efficient service your office is giving.

Thanking you, and best wishes,
Very sincerely yours,
/s/ Andrew R. Shelly

P.S. When I read an "unsolicited statement" I sometimes question the truth of the statement. However, I am sure we can both affirm that this letter is strictly "unsolicited." This is strictly a letter from one person to another person on a particular subject, but no word in it is copyrighted, and if you wish to use any of it in any way you are at full liberty to do it.—A. R. S.

Incidentally, you will also appreciate knowing that the proper committee of our church has voted to meet the Publication Board budget apportionment in full—as that of other Boards of General Conference.

L. H. stands for Lester Hostetler, Associate Editor of the Mennonite. Pastor of the Bethel College Church, and author of the recently published HANDBOOK TO THE MENNONITE HYMNARY; he resides at North Newton, Kansas. Ed.

Dear Editor:—Your editorial comment on race amalgamation, was read with a good deal of interest and approval. I think your commentator, 'LH,' did a fine job in presenting the Christian viewpoint on this live issue. The thought that people of other races are not primarily concerned about intermarriage with the white people so long as their other social rights are safeguarded, eases the situation somewhat. They apparently have their superiority complexes. However I cannot quite accept the answer to question three —namely, that it is not likely that romance between people of different races developes, even when all other circumstances which usually get consideration, are normal or favorable. I think the possibility is not at all as remote as your commentator seems to think. The fact that mixed marriages do occur in defiance of widespread race- and class-consciousness indicates that cupid tries to be colorblind as well as blind to many other facts that candidates for marriage ought to consider.

Very cordially yours,
Edw. J. B. Waltner

"WHEN A MAN has such a rich opportunity to help others, he has not denied himself a thing." These are the words with which Albert Schweitzer, medical missionary, theologian, scholar, and musician from Africa arriving in this country for the first time in his seventy-four years, answered a girl reporter who asked him, "Why did you give up a brilliant and promising career as a musician and theologian in Europe to become a missionary in Africa?" Here is something for those to ponder who think that a missionary is one who gives up the joys of life. There is a basic urge planted into the heart of a Christian that makes him restless unless he can directly and personally help people in their physical and spiritual needs. Regardless of how much else in earthly goods or position an individual may have, if this fundamental urge to help others does not find expression he is miserable. Regardless of how little of goods and position one may have, if he has and takes the opportunity to help others personally—that man is to be envied. In our churches we have much to learn here from this. There is entirely too little opportunity provided for people to help others directly through visitation, witnessing, and personal work in both physical and spiritual needs. There is too much indirect service in which individuals may live possibly weeks and months at a time without doing more for others than contributing now and then to the support of someone else who helps others. This may be one reason why the Church of Jesus Christ is so impotent in our time. The healthy soul and the healthy church is one that finds ways of helping people directly and personally as well as in a more remote way through the church enterprises.—JJE

DOCTRINAL PREACHING does not have to be dry and boring. There is some preaching which seeks to pass for doctrinal preaching but does violence to the word. Doctrinal preaching is setting forth the laws of God as revealed to or experienced by the people of biblical times in such a way that their relevance to the needs of our time are so clearly seen that men and women will be stirred to a wholesouled response. Doctrinal preaching which lacks a thoroughgoing application to the spiritual needs of the present will drive people away from churches as much as a doctor, who speaks to his patients about the glorious discoveries of medicine when they want help applied to their disease, will soon be without patients. Similarly preaching which is not rooted in the past revelations and the experiences of the people of God is bound to lack the ring of authority needed to speak to our time. Here again, for example, patients have little confidence in a physician who, disregarding precedent, is always experimenting. Yet in the field of religion that is precisely what happens when preachers move off the foundation of the laws of God as revealed in the Written Word and the Living Word—Our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.—JJE

A MENNONITE MINISTER had made a change to a new locality. He was looking for a house or an apartment into which his family might move. He had apparently "closed the deal" with an individual who had a home to rent when the landlord suddenly asked if he had children. On finding that there were children in the family that was going to move into the home, the owner "called off" the deal. This had already happened a number of times in the course of the young minister's search for a home for his family. It appears that another godless form of discrimination has arisen. From the standpoint of people who have homes to rent, the childless couple (dogs and cats probably rate!), other things being equal, are the choice. This is another point at which the dollar speaks louder than the laws of God. Those who have houses to rent are also stewards of God. By welcoming families into their homes they are obeying the express command of Jesus, "Suffer the children to come to me." To shun children is to defy and contribute to the worlds ills. To be concerned about children is to work with God in healing the ills of the world.—JJE

HALF THE YEAR is gone and a third of our Conference obligations have been met. Calls for help come from many quarters. Churches are being built or re-built. Mission fields are more ripe than ever to the harvest. More and more young people are seeking training in our schools. America itself is ripe for an extensive program of evangelism that will not only save the soul for eternity but for the here and now as well. This is not the time to retract in our giving anywhere along the line. We must keep the whole line—home and abroad—intact. If cutting there must be, let it be in those areas of our lives that need simplifying anyway. If each of us would make an honest inventory of our spendings, it is quite possible that we would find considerable amounts used on nonproductive or selfish ends. The time has come that we see very clearly how our Conference obligations to spread the Gospel through word and deed are not optional. When we unite with the Church we accept such obligations. Uniting with the Church is the point where we have a choice. There is no choice as to whether we will accept the obligations thereafter other than openly breaking our relation to the Church. All that our local churches, district conferences, and General Conference have outlined can be done if we are sincere and forthright in the acceptance of this obligation.—JJE

Colombian Excerpts

From a Missionary Diary

by Harriet Rutschman

IS THIS the priest's house?" questioned a little Colombian neighbor boy as he followed my husband up on the porch. As I opened the door, my husband responded, "Yes, this is the casa curial, but (pointing to me) I have a wife!" With no fanatical opposition to our living in their town, some of the people curiously enough have affixed the name meaning priest's house to our home.

Villages the world over have much in common—their small stores where people gather to visit, their garden and dairy produce brought into town to sell, their neighborliness, and interest in one another, and their strong or indifferent attachment to some religious faith.

So . . . in Cachipay

So it is in Cachipay, the small Colombian mountain town in which we live. Their stores—almost every house has one room converted into some kind of a store—are not what you'd picture in the States for usually they give one the impression of being ill-kept and dirty. Consequently, it takes one a little time to adjust himself to the idea of buying bread and other food from these stores for with cockroaches and flies having free access, would you want to buy.

> In the receptive and pliable hearts and lives of youth we find encouragement.

Our milk, which we have to boil for twenty minutes for safety, is brought to our door by Reuben, a ten or twelve-year-old boy. They say he's an orphan; nobody seems to know anything about his parents. In this respect he is like thousands of other children here. He is kept by a family to help do chores and milking the cows once a day, as is the custom, is one of his jobs. A good cow may give as much as a gallon a day.

Of Foreigners—Two or Three Prices

Eggs, garden produce, and fruit are often brought to the door, too, and as much as it's the custom to take for granted the price asked in the States, so here it is expected that one question the price. In fact, it sems that the women enjoy greatly the "bargaining process." As North Americans we, too, soon learned to "bargain" as it is apparently customary to ask two or three prices to foreigners.

For New Parents—All Sorts of Advice

When we first came to live in the village of Cachipay, we were just new parents, so of course, neighbors and friends often offered all sorts of advice. Practically from the first David refused to stay in a lying position when in our arms—he insisted on being held up. "Beware, beware," said our Colombian friends, "never hold him up till he's at least six or seven months old—his cheeks will fall!" And when at nine months we found it necessary to cut Davy's hair to keep him from looking like a little shaggy dog, some friends were astonished. Many believe that if a child's hair is cut before he is able to talk, he'll never be capable of speaking well.

A New Word at a Little Extra Expense

In the ever continual process of learning the language we often learn a new word at a little extra expense. One day my husband came home with a different cut of meat than usual and said the man had told him it was extra specially fine meat—a white meat not unlike chicken—which people considered a delicacy. When questioned further about the part of the animal from which it was taken the butcher seemed to think that an unnecessary question. "Why it's the 'ubre' " appeared sufficient answer to him. On arriving home my husband hastened to the Spanish-English dictionary and discovered to our chagrin that the special cut of meat was the cow's udder. With an interested recipient in mind our baby and I watched from the porch as people passed by and when the garbage man came along my husband brought out the "ubre." Needless to say, he received the meat very gratefully.

On Such an Occasion—Almost Too Rapidly

Spanish patios—the open space in one's house where one can have plants, flowers, and lawn chairs—are very enjoyable for one can have the outdoor sun and fresh air in privacy. However, our patio has not turned out as ideally for our house is built lower than the neighboring house and curious children and adults, too, are often seen peering down into our patio. This was not so bad, but when our baby's life was endangered, it was serious. One day while playing in his play-pen out in the patio to get the sunshine, a two or three pound rock came over the patio wall and landed just inches from the play-pen and David. He let out a scream of fright and I wasted no time in grabbing him up and going over to the neighbors to find out the cause of such action. It seemed a little girl—not knowing any better—had thrown the stone over. Though no more rocks have been thrown, needless to say, David is no longer kept out in the patio—he must get his sun from the front porch now. How slow Spanish seems to come at times, yet on an occasion such as this it came almost too rapidly.

One Memorable Day

Thankfully enough few days have brought danger, Others have brought interesting and amusing experiences. What Catholic priest would be asked to take a picture of a young Protestant after his baptism, communion, or such? Among our acquaintances is a young mother who used to help us occasionally

From "Home" to "Home"

by Mathilde Penner

WE ARE the folks who came from "home" to "home." Leaving home in India was very, very hard on the 27th of April our own field, then on the 12th of May Calcutta. Oh, what glory it will be when once the loved ones of both countries, India and America, will join together with us in the third and heavenly home for ever and ever. To the Lamb be glory! There also we are promised that our tears shall be wiped away. Oh, the unspeakable riches of Christ who gave us strength and peace when parting from our beloved Indian brothers and sisters seemed impossible.

She Would Sell Herself

It would fill a book to tell you all of the sayings and good wishes of our people from pastor to the poorest widow. How they begged, please, let us have a collection and build up a little mud house; one widow always said I want to sell myself and make you a little jobri (hut). At our farewells, more than 150 garlands were thrown around our necks as the last token of love. It is hard to write about it—our tears are always flowing. If God will grant us once more health and a little home here among you, we shall share with you the many poems, songs, farewell addresses, etc. Should the Lord grant us a little home place, we shall be glad to have you come and hear our testimonies "what the Lord has done in beloved India" the last 40 years among the many redeemed from Satan's snares, the terrible darkness, and misery in body and soul. Let us organize more prayer circles and pray the millions of souls into the Lord's Kingdom for there is no greater Power. But without gifts, we can not send the messengers of good tidings "Jesus saves"; therefore, let us store up treasures of souls in heaven.

The Lord Was Near

And now a little about ourselves. As our 40 years were about full, the Lord permitted my dear husband to have a stroke. His recovery was fairly good, and after three weeks we could go into the District again and celebrate the Lord's Supper at our out-stations. There were thanksgivings and farewells. The Lord was very near as the small groups of His saints gathered for these occasions. Christmas time was a very blessed time, and soon after New Year, we again went into the villages. For the last time we had the privilege of inviting them to come to the Saviour.

On February 12, my husband's birthday, 73 years, we had an "at home" all day for our Champa Christian community. Four-hundred-fifty little bowls made from leaves were filled with Indian sweets and a cup of tea. Our request was that as much as possible our friends should come in whole families, and this they did. A very thrilling, never-to-be-forgotten experience. Many songs and prayers by the different families were rendered. A string was tied up and the almost uncountable garlands strung thereon.

". . . . Und Gott Lenkt"

Monday, February 21, we had already packed bedding clothes, and food to leave at 4 a.m. to catch a train for 10 miles, then go by bullock cart 9 miles to our Christian groups in the Janjgir district where we had worked for 30 years. But "der Mensch denkt und Gott lenkt," within a half hour of going Rev. Penner got very very sick with high blood pressure and great pain in his chest. Doctor Bauman had to be called and worked hard to give him relief. Anxious weeks were ahead of us, and with the wonderful service of Doctor Bauman, our nurses Ann Penner and one memorable day for her seven year old Jorge she brought him here dressed up in a new brown suit, carrying a bouquet of a kind of white lily. He had just taken his first communion in the Catholic Church here and his mother wondered if we would do her the great favor of taking his picture. So it was that Protestant missionaries were asked to take this young Catholic's picture after his first communion. We took it.

On another occasion when we were still having Sunday School in the garage right beside the main street, a campesino (man from the country) coming into town with produce for the big Sunday market, entered the garage during the Sunday School lesson. Taking off his hat and making the sign of the cross, he knelt down beside the wooden bench and would have remained there had not one old faithful believer motioned him to sit down. He did and stayed throughout the service.

Disadvantages Too

Living in a politically liberal town in a Catholic country has its advantages—the people are relatively friendly and are not fanatically against us. But it has its disadvantages, too—the people are indifferent to spiritual things. Even though we have friends, most of them are not interested in the message. At our Sunday School on Sunday afternoons only a few are interested or faithful. The most faithful are two young sisters—Cecilia, about fourteen years old and Isabel, about eight. They have a lively and eager interest in everything and though they have never gone to school, we are slowly teaching them to read and write. With all the discouragements of working in an indifferent pueblo, it is a thrill and a challenge to hear Cecilia and Isabel sing in their young, Spanish voices, "Cristo Me Ama" ("Jesus Loves Me") and hear them recite proudly verses of Scripture. In the receptive and pliable hearts and lives of youth we find encouragement.

M.C.C. Begins

Prison Ministry "In The Name Of Christ"

AKRON, PENNSYLVANIA. In Washington, D. C. at the National Training School for Boys, three one-year volunteers and one Summer Service member are helping the imprisoned boys "in the Name of Christ." The 350 prisoners are boys averaging 16 years of age. The "school" consists of half-day vocational shop and half-day academic classes. Harvey Wall conducts tests with the incoming boys and assists the recreational director. George Bohrer is assisting in an experiment of vocational counselling for the boys. Gerald Hershberger assists one of the vocational school instructors in the cabinet shop. Burton Yost helps in recreation and education with a special group who are isolated because of misconduct.

This is the first unit of such volunteers to be used by the Federal Bureau of Prisons. The superintendent indicates that he is more than pleased with the first month of work. It is hoped that the lives of these workers may give a Christian testimony to the boys at the school.

Spanish Speaking Worker Needed

Our Mexico V. S. unit serves Mexicans as well as Mennonites. The doors are open for a fuller service with the Mexicans. There is immediate need for a worker with Spanish and with ability to teach English, or music or recreation. For more information write to Voluntary Service, Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Penna.

Workers in China Safe

Word was received recently from the M.C.C. Unit in Shanghai, indicating that all of the workers in Communist occupied areas are safe. Both in Shanghai and in Chinkiang where the workers are located in Communist territory, the travel of foreigners is restricted and foreign mail service is also suspended. Cable and telephone channels are, however, open. The workers in Formosa and at Henguang are still in Nationalist territory and therefore are in closer contact with the homeland. The workers in Communist areas are not able to communicate with those in Nationalist territory.

Summer Peace Teams Begin Work

Again this summer the MCC Peace Section is sponsoring Peace Teams which will serve during the months of July and August. One of these teams, composed of David Wiens of Kitchener, Ont., John Ropp of Kalona, Iowa, and Robert Millar of Kitchener, Ont., will serve among MCC constituent churches in California and other western states. The second team, composed of Harris Waltner of Marion, South Dakota, Nathan Hege of Marion, Penna., and Edward Stoltzfus of Hudson, Ohio, will work in the North Central States area, particularly in the Freeman, S. D. and Mt. Lake, Minn. communities. In both areas the teams will go from church to church according to an itinerary planned by local leaders in cooperation with the MCC Peace Section. The men will participate in programs and discussions dealing directly or indirectly with Biblical nonresistance, and endeavor to promote a more thorough study of this doctrine and its applications and implications. Peace literature will also be distributed.

To open this period of Peace Team work, a training institute sponsored by the M.C.C. Peace Section was held at Goshen, Indiana, from June 27 to July 1 for the benefit of the team members. In addition to the two M.C.C. teams, three other teams under individual conference sponsorship participated. During this time, consideration was given to the meaning and implications of Biblical nonresistance, the historical background, present day problems, and also methods of effective teaching.

and Eva Pauls, the prayers of our people, who as much as three times a day had prayer circles here and there—the Lord lifted him up and we could leave weak but fairly well on April 27 for Calcutta.

On shipboard the first two weeks, we got along quite well, though at nights his breath would get very troublesome. From there on, half the journey was a very anxious time. Day and night he had to sit up. Three times I thought he was leaving me for the Home above. Sometimes in all this anxiety in that little cabin, I felt so lifted up that everything on earth grew dim, as John, on Patmos' lonely isle, beholding Him.

The Answer Came

When still three days on the Atlantic, I sent a wire (or Marconi) to the Mission Board, asking them to send Doctor Schmidt. After much prayer, the Lord made me do this. Our Father in heaven careth for us indeed. Before we landed we had the answer coming. We were welcomed by Dr. Schmidt and Rev. J. Plenert. They at once took care of us. What relief! No words of thankfulness are found in our vocabulary to our Mission Board, the doctors, all our friends for their prayers, and the Bethel Deaconess Hospital. It was hard to come from the train direct to the hospital, but we only praise our Heavenly Father who permitted us to reach this wonderful haven of rest. All the love is enough to make you well. It is just one week since we are here, and already my dear husband can once more stretch out to sleep. He is much better by this time but very weak. We do thank every one for all your love, prayers, well wishes, cards, and flowers. May the Lord reward you, is our request. (Rev. and Mrs. P. W. Penner have since been able to go to Hillsboro where they will make their home. Ed.)

State Department Holds Meetings

The State Department regularly calls together representatives of various organizations interested in world relations. A recent meeting revealed that about nine issues summarize the problems facing the State Department in foreign relations during the next decade or two.

National Versus International Authority

What shall be the allocation of authority in the world between national and international bodies such as the UN? A very practical problem is this: How much money and resources shall be given to support decisions made by international groups other than the United States government?

How Shall Security Be Organized?

In terms of military security, there are three types of organizations which have emerged as possibilities: (a) national, (b) regional, and (c) international. Which type, if any, should be followed? A corollary of this problem is how to organize world security so as ultimately to do away with world armaments.

Can Two Divergent Political Philosophies Exist Side By Side?

Stated simply the problem is: can Capitalism and Communism exist side by side, and peacefully so, in the same world?

Can Japan and Germany Be Re-Instated Into the Family of Nations?

Can defeated nations be allowed to enter the United Nations, rebuild their economy, and at the same time not become a threat to the peace of the world?

Economic Relations Across National Boundaries

Shall we work on the theory that all parties receive advantages through trade? Should there be a high or low tariff, trade agreements, an International Trade Organization and the like?

What About New Nations?

In the next ten to twenty years, two dozen new nations will likely emerge in the world. How will these be taken into the family of nations?

Raising Standards of Living

Will the work of the World Health Organization, Food and Agriculture Organization, and other international agencies to raise living standards around the world be accepted?

Will Atomic Energy Destroy or Serve Men?

Of course a major problem is how to handle the discovery of atomic power so as to serve constructively rather than destroy men.

How to Stabilize the International Structure

The United Nations and subsidiary organizations are new. Can these be stabilized and made permanent and effective?

Problem for Christians

Many thinkers may choose to state these problems differently, or to lift up a different set of problems. In any event, the Christian faith must be applied and interpreted so as to find the Christian answer in order to have world peace.

Seminary Takes Over Keys

On July 7 the keys were turned over to us for the building at 4610 Woodlawn Avenue. This is a 12 room, brick and stone house adjoining the Franz Home previously purchased. The Seminary now has a unit of six buildings which with the renting of the church building forms a little Mennonite village within the city. Two other buildings owned by the Seminary are in close proximity. Our hope and prayer is that this group of buildings may not just be a home for Mennonite people but that it may become a great lighthouse in the dark and needy world. We consider these buildings a gift of God. "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." Will we use this gift selfishly and remain an isolated and quiet group or shall we become on fire with the message of Jesus Christ? We are more convinced than ever that the only hope for the world is in the message of Christ as interpreted by the Mennonite Church.

Mr. Lytell Barrett, a negro living at the YMCA Hotel, who is connected with psychiatric work among children in Chicago, addressed the M.C.C. Christian-in-Industry Unit and others of the Seminary community on the subject of minority groups, here on Thursday evening, July 7.

Daily Vacation Bible School enrollment at the Seminary now stands at thirty-three. Three of these are youngsters from Seminary families, the others being children from families in the immediate neighborhood. The enrollment at the Mennonite Bible Mission numbers forty and the Happy Hour Sunday School group, thus far, is seventeen.

MENNONITE MEN FOR CHRIST

The EAST SWAMP Church, near Quakertown, Penna. has an active Laymen's organization.

The interesting program for the year is arranged and printed on pocket sized folders and outlines the subjects for discussion and the names of program chairmen for the monthly meetings. These programs are supplemented with a number of Service activities and projects both local and as members of the Eastern District Conference Brotherhood. Meetings are held at the Church on the first Wednesday evening of each month.

Programs and topics listed are: August, "The Commission Christ Gave To The Church" with A. Paul Barndt, leader; September, "A Sketch of Menno Simons" with A. H. Schultz, the leader; October, "Helps On Soul Winning" with Benjamin Simmons; November, "I Am Thankful For . . . . ." with Samuel Bleam; December, "How Can God Become Real To Me?" Howard Landis, Jr.; January, "Putting First Things First," John Auckland, Jr.

An outdoor Fellowship was held at Camp Men-O-Lan in June, and a joint meeting with the Ladies' Missionary Society earlier in the season.

a new project was opened at Sweet Home, Oregon. The Sweet Home project, like the initial work at Los Angeles, is in the interest of non-Mennonite folks. In addition to the support given to these new projects, the congregations of the Pacific District have also cooperated in lending assistance to some of the needy churches within its own bounds.

Education Also

The Conference has also taken an active interest in education. As early as 1906 they discussed the possibility of starting an Academy. The late P. R. Aeschlimann expressed himself as follows:

> The location for such a school would be one of the difficult problems. Shasta Springs, California would be about the center, but then the five or six nearest churches would still have from five to six hundred miles and the others from seven hundred to a thousand miles. Too far for the pessimist, but the optimist will some day solve the problem, why not?

In 1922 the Conference elected a representative to the Bethel College Board of Directors. This policy is still being practiced today. The representative is elected for a term of six years and presents an annual report to the Conference body.

Distances Put Work on Sectional Basis

The Pacific District is the smallest (in membership) of the six districts of the General Conference in the States, but extends over the largest territory. It includes the area between Canada and Mexico, and the Rocky Mountains and the Pacific Ocean. "The great distances between church groups has been a serious handicap when it comes to frequent fraternal gatherings of the various auxiliary organizations." It has, therefore, been necessary for them to carry on various phases of Conference activity on a sectional basis. The Young People's gatherings are of this nature. Each State conducts its own Youth Retreats. The California churches conduct an annual Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention. In 1947 the Oregon churches organized themselves into an Oregon Fellowship.

These Auxiliaries

The Young People of the Conference meet annually in conjunction with the Pacific District Conference. Another auxiliary of the Conference is the Ladies Missionary Society. This organization cooperates with the General Conference Women's organization and supports projects suggested to them by the Home and Foreign Mission Board of General Conference. Since 1908, the Women's organization has had charge of one service at the annual Conference session.

The 'Infant'

In 1948 the laymen of the Conference were organized into a Men's Brotherhood. P. C. Jantz of Odessa, Washington was elected as president, Waldo Friesen of American Falls, Idaho as Secretary and Henry Ediger of Dallas, Oregon as treasurer. The Conference will expect great things from this infant organization.

The Pacific District Conference, which was organized by three small congregations and a Sunday School has now grown into an organization of twenty churches with a total membership of 3408. Five of these are located in Oregon, six in Washington, seven in California, and two in Idaho. Almost without exception, the churches came into existence as a result of Mennonite migrations from the Middle West. Being of German ancestry, they used the German language in their religious services. Today, the German has been replaced by the English. Only a few congregations retain a German Sunday School class for the older members.

Another type of growth is evident from the statement made by the late P.R. Aeschlimann: "Since we do not have very much business to transact the greater part of the time is devoted to reading and discussing papers written on important topics." Today, the Conference is pressed for extra time to complete its pressing business.

In conclusion I want to call your attention to a few significant facts.

DID YOU KNOW?

In Training at Akron for Voluntary Service

This summer we will hear a lot from young people participating in summer service. At the same time, there are those who are doing long term voluntary service for a year at a time. Those who enter this longer term first spend a month at Akron, Penna. at the M. C. C. headquarters in training and preparation for their year. The following material describes some of their experiences. Ed.

Lancaster Church Renovated

The Lancaster A. M. E. (colored) church was the recipient of voluntary labor in interior painting and refinishing; its location in the poorer area of the city undoubtedly accounted for its dilapidated condition.

After one complete afternoon of wall and ceiling scraping, plus some plastering, the four members on this project began the task of applying the two coats of paint to the unimpressive-looking sanctuary. Seventeen gallons of paint were used during the three weeks which were spent in service to the people of the congregation.

One of the interests of the men serving there was the daily visit of a few of the colored children returning from school; however, no knowledge or fellowship was gained from the Negro members of the church, who found no time to assist us in our tasks. Rev. Dennis, the pastor, almost daily paid us a brief visit through which we gained much knowledge of the tenets of their faith.

In culmination to our work there, the entire Voluntary Service group plus a large part of the M. C. C. family attended the church's service of appreciation Sunday evening, May 8. Negro spirituals sung by various groups in the church plus a number in song rendered by the Voluntary Service male quintet constituted the service.

Acknowledgement should be given here to Mr. Burkholder, the commercial painter, who willingly donated his equipment and advice to us.

Shoe and Stocking Drive Assisted

Approximately March 1 an appeal was sent to the Mennonite churches in the States and Canada asking for shoes and stockings needed by European children; the result has been gratifying. With the closing of the drive on April 15, it was estimated that American contributions totaled nearly 10,000 pairs of shoes and twice that amount of stockings.

As of May 10, 7,769 pairs of shoes were packed and ready for shipment. Of these, 5,625 pairs, or 72 per cent, were new.

In the packing process these shoes are sorted by Voluntary Service personnel into four different groupings: namely, shoes to fit a child aged two to six (new), aged two to six (used), aged eight to twelve (new), and aged eight to twelve (used).

After the shoes are tied in pairs and each shoe stamped with an M. C. C. label, "In the Name of Christ," they are packed into crates. The contents of each crate totals approximately ninety pounds. The value per pound of new shoes has been set at $1.25, while used shoes are worth only 65c per pound. Each crate is lined with paper, and cloth is placed between each layer of shoes. As another precautionary measure a small amount of moth crystals are sprinkled into the box. When filled each crate is numbered, weighed, tagged, and banded for security while enroute to its destination.

Class Discussions

Life in the Kingdom

Glenn Esh, pastor of the Monterey Mennonite Church and assistant director of MCC relief, directed the class. This course was one of two offered the first two weeks in this period of schooling. Basically a Bible study course, the studies followed material contained in Volume VI of the Mennonite Heritage Series published by the MCC. In the first week of the course basic concepts and spiritual realities concerning man's relationship to God were discussed. Before God can assist anyone, we learned that man must admit defeat and renounce his independence. The last week dealt with the application of the foundation principles laid in the previous week.

Individual and Group Problems

Harold Martin (M. A., Social Science University of Pennsylvania) of Elizabethtown, Penn., was our able instructor in this study. During CPS days he served as director of two units in the South, the work being of such nature as to bring him in direct contact with various problems of society. Several introductory lectures were given by Elmer Ediger. Major areas of social need were presented with a view toward helping us maintain proper attitudes. The individual in relation to social problems was the focus of the first part of the course. In the latter half we concentrate upon social maladjustments arising out of actual situations in connection with areas around our present units. Some of these problems were related to race, crime, poverty, health, and war.

Living the Peace Testimony

Philemon Frey, deacon of the Center Church, Archbold, Ohio, discussed with us the basic teachings of Christ as found in the Sermon on the Mount, Matthew 5-7. He rendered some real service to the men in CPS during the past war in addition to the responsibilities relating to a deacon of a congregation of 750 members. This practical study of the Olivet Discourse helped to clarify the true meaning of love, showing how it applies to the multitudinous words and acts which make up the sum of every common day as well as to the larger issues of life.

Problem Solving

Problems which arose during the course of previous classes were readily presented. In unit discussions, led by the Orientation Director, consideration was given to these in pertaining to practical aspects of life in nonresistance, social standards, individual discipline and questions concerning Voluntary Service in general. This course was characterized by its freedom in participation, sincere seeking, and practical conclusions.

The Story of Our Church

The instructor, Wilmer Shelly, pastor of the General Conference Church, Bally, Pa., had previous experience of a similar nature in stimulating the minds of men in southern camps during the past war.

Field trips to a Catholic Mass and the Cloisters pictured certain tendencies of post-Apostolic days. The main body of the course revolved around the founding and genius of the Mennonite Church. Mennonitism was traced from its origin in 1525 through its various stages and on up to present time.

Discussion Reiterated

Thought stimulating discussions were in prevalence during the course of the four weeks spent in school, with many presentable answers being given. As a rule, the object of the associations of our lives to practicalities of the world about us was one of being basically a Christian, then, secondly, a Mennonite. Several times questions arose pertaining to the "Jesus Way of Life" as it refers to nonresistance.

Why can't I as a Christian partake in war in any way? How does the Old Testament correspond to the New? Can I as a Mennonite Christian be a policeman? To what extent must I obey my government if it should ever run contrary to my Christian convictions? Interrogations such as these were common sources for discussion; answers to the first one listed were quite easily found while the next two provided more opportunity for thought; but the last one in the series aroused more thought when all aspects of the ordeal were considered.

Material wealth in regard to a Christian's sincerity found room for thought in our minds, but probably the greatest Biblical thought—provoking discussion centered around the age-old doctrines of predestina-

2. Each day the unit meets for a number of casses in which they discuss non-resistance, the story of the church, a Bible study called "Life in the Kingdom," social problems unit members would face, and solving problems of personal relationships.

Western District Developing Camp Site

The Western District Camp at Murdock, Kansas is being developed into a church camp. This summer Voluntary Service is helping in its development with Melvin Flickinger, Pretty Prairie, Kansas in charge.

The District will have two retreats at the grounds this summer even though it will be far from built up. These campers will definitely be camping! Their outing will be of the tenting type, for there will be no cabins at Murdock this summer.

In preparation for the camps, certain equipment is being borrowed which suggests the style of camping that will be done and the fun that campers should have. Equipment being requested consists of the following:

1. Oil (kerosene) stoves.
2. Out-door kettles used for butchering and soap making.
3. Ice boxes (not refrigerators).
4. Saw horses—both tall and short for temporary tables and benches.
5. Pick-up truck—for camp errands such as getting ice, milk, groceries.
6. Tents—a large one for the dining hall—small ones for sleeping quarters.

It will be camping at Murdock!

tion and eternal security, tenets of certain faiths in existence today.

Then in thinking over the two weeks the class spent in social problem solving, prejudices of various degrees were included in our disputations; everything from social, economic, physical to the most important, racial, was taken into consideration. Evidences of racial prejudices were found to exist in many areas of service, such as Gulfport, Mississippi. erstoa Ethical behavior in general involved several questions which could not be answered with a Scripture passage, but depend upon generally agreed-upon Christian judgment. "What's wrong with smoking? Why not play pool in a pool hall? Is theft justifiable when life depends upon it (starvation)? Is lying permissible if by so doing a life is saved?" In instances such as these, extreme care was taken not to pass hurried judgments.

1949 Goodwill Christmas Bundles

Leaflets have recently been sent to each congregation in the United States and Canada calling attention to the need for Christmas Bundles again this year. Our workers testify that these bundles are one of the most useful items in the relief program. Children's groups, Sunday School classes, and others are therefore encouraged to prepare bundles and send them in by the final date, which is August 13. Detailed instructions found on the special leaflet should be carefully noted Additional copies of this may be secured from Children's Project, MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Out of the Mouth

by Kenneth Morse

Many of the sayings of Jesus were hard to accept. One of the most difficult was his assertion that not what goes into a man's mouth but what comes out of it defiles a man. The Pharisees were offended. The people did not understand. The disciples asked for an interpretation. So Jesus explained that the words which come from the mouth proceed from the heart and it is the source of the evil thoughts and purposes which defile a man.

Maybe Jesus was thinking, among other examples, of those persons whose minds seemed to be filled only with different varieties of dirt. You know the acquaintances you have who insist on sharing every off-color story they hear. You would like to think well of them but you wonder if their minds are continually exposed to filth. Whether the stories are crudely vicious or whether they are dressed in the smart garb of sophisticated patter, you can easily tell the source.

But no matter who's to blame for originating the flow of dirty stories, they pose a real problem for you if you are frequently exposed to them. If you are really concerned there are a few things you can do.

1. You can find some courteous way to indicate that you are an unwilling listener.

2. You can refrain from laughing for laughter is the mark of approval that is sought. It isn't easy to refrain, especially when the stories have elements of real humor, but you can train yourself to think of persons—even those in a story—as children of God and not objects of ridicule. You can't earn the friendship of a good man or help a bad one by using him as a foil for your cleverness.

3. You can turn the conversation in more constructive channels. This is an art that requires practice and may demand that you develop a reserve supply of good clean stories.

4. You can help your acquaintances find other outlets for their interest in people and delight in talking. Encourage them to discuss some of their deeper interests. One friend of mine whose table conversation was often questionable became a different person when we talked about music, his consuming interests.

5. You can guide your own heart and your influence on others by remembering that we become like the things we think about. That fact is most beautifully stated by Paul, "Whatever is true . . . honorable . . . just . . . pure . . . lovely . . . gracious . . . think about these things."—Horizons

A PROJECT!

The Firestore Store in Newton is willing to turn over to the M.C.C. twenty-five water-repellant coats usually listing at $9 to $10 at the greatly reduced price of $3.00. Anyone or group interested may send contributions to the M.C.C. Clothing Center, North Newton, Kansas.

Central and Middle Districts Plan to Purchase Camp Site

The Central and Middle District Conferences have begun the process of purchasing and developing their own camp for retreat purposes. The Committee appointed to seek such a site, after investigating numerous possibilities for over a period of a couple years, finally located a desirable camp site near Niles, Michigan. This site lies on two lakes and includes in the property about 70 acres of timber land. The site where the camp would be located consists of wooded pasture land, well-shaped yet open and with many locations for a chapel, the cabins, the administration building and other camp buildings. The location has 3,000 feet of lake frontage.

The Camp Committee, responsible for locating and purchasing a suitable site, has obtained unanimous approval of this Niles location from officers of both Districts, leaders who have visited the site, and young people representing the churches who have seen this location. In the light of this unanimous approval, the committee has proceeded with plans to purchase and is in the process of raising money necessary to make the purchase. It is hoped that by August, the purchase will have been made. The committee needs $10,000.

Members of the Camp Committee responsible for this project are: Rev. Robert Hartzler, Goshen, Indiana, chairman; Rev. Esko Loewen, Topeka, Indiana, secretary-treasurer; O. J. Sommer, Pekin, Illinois; Gordon Liechty, Berne, Indiana; Rev. John Neufeld, Chicago, Illinois; Rev. William Stauffer, Sugarcreek, Ohio.

At a meeting, June 2, the site was visited by representatives of the Central and Middle District Conferences. The site met with the approval of the officers at this meeting. Those present from the Middle District were: Rev. Ernest Bohn, Pandora, Ohio; Rev. Irvin Richert, Dalton, Ohio; Mr. N. Soldner, Pandora, Ohio; Rev. William Stauffer, Sugarcreek, Ohio; Mr. Gordon Liechty, Berne, Indiana, Mr. Carl Lehman, Bluffton, Ohio. Those from the Central District were: Rev. Lotus Troyer, Carlock, Illinois; Rev. R. L. Hartzler, Bloomington, Illinois; Rev. Robert Hartzler, Goshen, Indiana; Rev. L. Metzker, Bloomington, Illinois; Rev. Esko Loewen, Topeka, Indiana.

On June 24, representatives from the church youth who were at Camp Mack for the week went to see the site. Those from Middle District churches making this trip were: Mary Rose Sommer, Salem Church, Dalton, Ohio; Dorothy Kilmer, First Church, Wadsworth, Ohio; Wayne Schrock, Don Hostetler, Keith Miller, First Church, Sugarcreek, Ohio; John Bauman, First Church, Bluffton, Ohio; Oliver Lugibihl, Grace Church, Pandora, Ohio; Emma Jane Nussbaum, First Mennonite, Berne, Indiana. Central District representatives were: Beverly Rupp, North Danvers, Ill.; Allen Ropp, Normal church, Normal, Illinois; Kenneth Dovel, Carlock Church, Carlock, Ill.; Ruth Mitchell, Meadows Church, Meadows, Ill.; Orlyn Zehr, Flanagan Church, Flanagan, Illinois; Luke Restetter, Calvary Church, Washington, Illinois.

By inquiring of any of these eye witnesses, information regarding the site may be obtained.

Beyond Our Own

MISSIONARY organizations report that 65,000,000 Chinese children have become orphans in the last few years. This is almost half the people living in the United States. The untold misery, hunger, and suffering that afflicts these children of China will bear heavily on the history of tomorrow's world. — Between the Lines.

ANDERSON, Ind.—(RNS) — Ten thousand persons jammed their way into the auditorium here to take part in World Service Day ceremonies opening the annual conention and camp meeting of the Church of God.

A report said delegates from 2,000 churches brought over $100,000 in cash and $500,000 in pledges to be used in world service by the denomination. The pledges are to be redeemed by June 30.

A budget of $800,000 was adopted for the coming year.—United Evangelical Action

GERMANY—Three rubble churches were dedicated in Germany during April and another is nearing completion, the reconstruction department of the World Council of Churches announced recently. These churches are built largely by the local congregations, using as far as possible bricks, stone, cement and other debris from the ruins of German cities. Funds from churches in the United States and elsewhere supplement locally raised funds.—Gospel Messenger

CHICAGO—Organization now has been completed in 25 states for this year's nationwide drive for farm gifts in kind to feed the needy overseas through the Christian Rural Overseas program (CROP), it was announced this week by John D. Metzler, national CROP chairman.

Plans for organizing the other parts of the nation for the harvest season appeal are progressing speedily, Mr. Metzler said at the conclusion of a conference here of state CROP directors and field representatives.

The Conference Stewardship Thermometer

MID-YEAR TOTALS BRING BUT ONE-THIRD OF BUDGET

WE give thanks to God who, by His Spirit, has been our guide in all the work of our Conference. We thank all those who have personally, or through their church and its organizations, contributed toward the support of the activities of each of our conference boards and committees.

With half of the year gone, let us take a look at information which will help us to evaluate our stewardship in relation to the blessings which have come to us. Below is data which will give the reader a brief picture of the amount of contributions received in the Conference Headquarters Office during the first six months of this year in comparison with the needs as estimated by the conference boards and committees.

Board or Committee	Budget	Receipts to 6-30-49	Per cent of Budget Received
Emergency Relief Board	$293,250	$ 65,348	22
Foreign Mission Board	260,000	102,739	40
Home Mission Board	60,800	23,416	39
Biblical Seminary	56,000	26,825	48
Peace Committee	35,000	2,261	6
Board of Education	17,250	7,840	45
Board of Publication	10,666	2,837	27
General Treasury	10,350*	1,622	16
Young People's Union	4,000	2,137	53
Women's Missionary Association	2,825	1,236	44
Mutual Aid Board	1,125	556	49
Laymen's Bible Fund	1,000	4
Doctrine and Conduct Committee	500	452	90
	$752,760	$237,273	32

We can say, as the prophet Samuel, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." But nearly all the boards have been continuing to operate because they could draw on funds carried over from last year. The Foreign Mission Board, for instance, has $50,000 less cash on hand now than it had six months ago, and its unrestricted funds have been exhausted. The Home Mission Board has about $11,000 cash on hand now than six months ago. The Relief Board cash had decreased about $5,000, but the board needed about $65,000 more than it got in order to carry out its estimated needs.

Our conference work can continue only as members of our constituency will continue to support it financially and uphold it in prayer. Please pray that we may all respond promptly to support all the activities of our conference as we work together to do the will of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

By your votes at Conference time the work of our Conference is entrusted to the various members of the boards and committees who have outlined the work and prepared the estimated budgets. Will you go before our God and Father in prayer and present to Him your petition that He may guide the future of our boards and committees?

Respectfully submitted,
A. Theodore Mueller, Office, Manager

*Includes $6,000 for the Ministers Aid Fund; the balance is for expenses of the General Conference Executive Committee, the Historical Committee, The Pension and Ministers Aid Committee, the Church Unity Committee, and the Ministers Placement Committee.

The Reader Says

Dear Editor:

I am very much interested in the "Washington Scene" written by Paul Goering in The Mennonite. I think it is very important that people write to senators and representatives, especially on such an important issue as the Atlantic Pact. The enclosed clipping brings the importance of writing letters to our attention too. Some days ago I was talking to a teacher and she said of one senator who had made this remark that at the time of the Marshal Plan, he had so much wanted to know what the people thought about it, but he received only three letters, but when the Rent-Control Bill was up then he received 47,000 letters!

I think that a number of people might be inspired to write but they are not quite sure to whom to write and how to write. I think the enclosed pamphlet ("Register Christian Opinion," published by Commission on World Peace, Methodist Church, 740 Rush Street, Chicago, Illinois and giving information on how to write and whom to write) would be very helpful along that line. Perhaps Paul Goering could also give suggestive letterso that people would know how they might make their ideas known.

Editorials

AS A MEMBER of the General Conference who lives "south of the border" and who has had opportunity for the first time to see and hear reports of the Canadian District Conference in action (at Sardis, British Columbia, July 2-6), I can say with wholehearted enthusiasm that I am glad that I am a part of them and that they are a part of us. More than I, and perhaps more than most United States Mennonites have ever realized, God is working mightily among our number in Canada. A majority of our Canadian brethren having just come out of a period of readjustment to a new country in the last thirty years; there is felt a spiritual vigor as they roll up their sleeves and under God take hold of the problems around them in a way that needs to be paralleled much oftener in the States. If there ever was, there certainly is not now any room for a patronizing attitude on the part of those "south of the border." Such an attitude can be slipped into quite easily given the temptation to material and political comparisons between the two countries. The broad uniform attention given to every phase of the ministry of the Church from the saving of the body in relief work to the saving of the mind in the educational work and to the saving of the soul for eternity through evangelism among the brethren in Canada should be inspiration and motivation for us (U.S.!). —J.J.E.

"I DON'T USE THE WORD because I am afraid that I'll be misunderstood" is what has often been said by ministers regarding a very common word in the Bible—the word blood. Because this word is so basic in the word of God it would seem that one should hazard the possibility of being misunderstood rather than avoid the use of the word and in the process run the risk of missing the dynamic universal reality that stands back of this word as used in the Scriptures. "Without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin." Sin is covenant-breaking peace-breaking, soul-wrecking, and world-wrecking. Sin separates men from God and drives wedges between them and their fellowmen. The elimination of so deep a barrier involves a solution as deep as the barrier; it is demanded by the very nature of things. If sin rocks life at its very foundations and has reverberations in our relation to God and others, then the answer to the problem must be just as far-reaching. The biblical answer in the sacrifices of the Old Testament and the death of Christ in the New Testament is one and the same, the latter being foreshadowed in the former and both emphasizing that the abuse of life can only be redeemed at the cost of life—the shedding of blood. If something so basic as sin is to be overcome (and this is the real problem of progress) there is made necessary an adjustment on the same level as the area disrupted by sin—namely, at the point of the very essence of life. If sin in reality takes away life ("In the day that ye eat thereof ye shall surely die") then man not only needs outside help to have that life replaced but he needs help of precisely the nature that will restore life. For God to restore His image as first placed in man and marred by sin necessitates God's becoming what he never was—a human being in Christ, with the willingness to pour out His blood in death in the process of identification of Himself with the very mankind that was crucifying Him—the only way to deal on a level with the deep seriousness of the problem of sin. Thus as man opens his life to the Lord Jesus Christ there is an inflow of new life made possible by the willing sacrifice of the God-man who in the shedding of His blood gave his life for the salvation of mankind. —J.J.E.

IN THIS TRUTH IS implicit a basic insight as to meeting the world problems of our day. It is the message of the "blood of Christ"—His willingness to pour out his very life in the conviction that voluntary suffering and if necessary, death, for that which is forever true in the face of that which is forever false can alone be turned to the redemption of men and the overcoming of evil and sin. We have a God who redeems us and overcomes our evil through love. Let the Church, then, sound forth the message of the redemptive love of God which in Jesus Christ poured itself out for the salvation of the world.—J.J.E.

For Church Board Members

MUCH MORE THAN A preacher's vacation is the General Conference Ministers' Retreat. Spiritually speaking it can have as much significance for the work of God as a General Conference Session and possibly more. General Conference programs are usually so heavily loaded with meetings large and small that there is often little time to have the kind of intimate fellowship that makes for understanding, fellowship and growth. Undoubtedly many ministers who have attended retreats will testify how being on the same horse-shoe team or baseball team or bunking with an unfamiliar or even misunderstood minister friend, was a means of coming to a deeper appreciation for and greater confidence in that minister. Furthermore, when the whole experience is bathed in prayer, worship, and study of the Word of God under the guidance of the Holy Spirit—what potential has such a meeting! Church Board members, have you done all in your power to make it possible for your minister to be there?—J.J.E.

An Editorial Report

Canadian District Moves Forward

Rev. John G. Rempel, in charge of the Canadian District's Publication Work, until this spring the principal of the Rostern Bible Academy, and Member of the Board of Publication of the General Conference, serves as Pastor of the Rosenort Church, Rosthern, Saskatchewan.

SARDIS, BRITISH COLUMBIA, JULY 2-6, 1949. With the unanimous support of its 144 delegates representing 56 churches and almost 14,000 members in the five provinces, the Canadian District Conference climaxed its annual session here by officially authorizing the purchase of the new home of the Canadian Mennonite Bible College at Winnipeg, Manitoba, at a cost of $25,000. The gratitude for this building was expressed in the inspiring choral presentation of the 95th Psalm by the Bible College Octet.

These Significant Steps

Other significant actions taken at this Conference marked by enthusiasm, deep concern, for the souls of men and a hard-hitting approach to every phase of the task of the Church—was the setting up of a Foreign Missions treasury to support work among Indians in Canada, the decision to back with determination the publication work, the enlistment of Rev. A. J. Neufeld, of Margaret, Sasketchewan to act as Conference evangelist in the churches six months out of the year, and the decision to authorize the Education Committee to seek a working relationship on common problems with the Education Committee of the Mennonite Brethren Conference of Canada.

Conference Draws Thousands

Meeting in this Mennonite settlement nestled in the Frazer River Valley with mountains rising sharply all around the Conference in its great Mission Festival on Sunday drew upwards of 2,200 people. In addition to the large auditorium of the church people were found in the basement as well as a tent which had been set up near by.

The efficiency with which the Conference was entertained in this community which less than a year ago was inundated by a severe flood which kept them from their homes from July until September, was quite remarkable. Groups from such neighboring churches as Yarrow, Mission, Chilliwack and Abbotsford helped with the preparation and serving of the meals as well as the highly inspirational choral numbers. Meals featured such Russian Mennonite delicacies as borscht and klops together with the local staple raspberries and strawberries.

Uniformly Forward-Looking

Spurred by the heart-searching messages on the general theme, "The Church Awaits Her Lord" and skillfully led by J. J. Thiessen, Saskatoon, president of the Conference, the sessions were marked by a uniformly forward-looking program.

Million-Dollar Operation

Reporting for the Canadian Mennonite Board of Colonization, Rev. J. J. Thiessen of Saskatoon pointed out that in the past two years 4,926 Mennonites had been brought to Canada from Europe. This was by no means a small undertaking since it involved an expenditure of one million dollars. The incoming Mennonites had been distributed in the various provinces as follows: Ontario, 698; Manitoba, 1577; Saskatchewan, 794; Alberta, 587; British Columbia, 1260; and 10 to other Canadian provinces.

In this connection it was interesting to note that the newly-arrived Mennonites were already taking a part in this Conference in the person of one Mr. Reimer, who led the choir from Yarrow, British Columbia, a neighboring community.

Concern: Christian Education

On Wednesday, the last day of the Conference the important step was taken in the promotion of Christian Education. The resolution authorizing the executive committee to purchase a large property on the banks of the Assinaboine the use of the Canadian Mennonite Bible College was unanimously passed by the Conference. For the past two years the College had been operating in the rooms of the Bethel Mennonite Mission Church of Winnipeg. It was felt that the Conference is to be congratulated on their securing of this building and land whose location is so well

. . . At Sardis . . .

Four widely known Conference leaders addressed these great gatherings. Rev. J. M. Regier, Hillsboro, Kansas, Chairman of the General Conference Home Mission Board, explained that basic to the far-flung ministry to Mennonites in widely scattered areas in Canada as expressed in city missions, girls' homes, building of churches, work among the young men in camps, and more recently among the Mennonites of South America—basic to all these is the concern to keep Mennonites true to their faith.

Rev. Peter Dyck, widely known in connection with the recent movements of Mennonites to South America, traced the development of interest in missions in the Mennonite Church from the time of the migration of our fathers to Russia to the present and observed that the promise not to do mission work among the Russians given by the Mennonites when they first entered the land had had disastrous results. The neglect of exerting such a spiritual influence upon their environment might have been responsible, in part, for the suited for use as a Bible College. The new property will be suitable for present needs and give room for future expansion.

For the Schools—Unity

Christian Education was also the concern as the Conference gave careful consideration to the reports of its five Bible Schools given by A. B. Koop, Didsbury, Alberta. In the discussion it was pointed out that such factors as the language question, increased opportunities for young people in other churches and contact with other Bible Schools through summer camps are factors that draw the youth to non-Mennonite schools.

D. A. Paettkau, Rosthern, Saskatchewan, reported for the three Academies at Rosthern Gretna, Manitoba, and Leamington, Ontario. The Rosthern Academy reported an affiliation with the University of Saskatchewan which would make it possible to offer junior college work.

Resolutions submitted by the Education Committee included the following: that churches should encourage the idea of better-trained Sunday school teachers; that the teaching of religion in German language be resumed as much as possible after having been dropped during the war; that there be efforts made toward the unification of the curricula offered by the various Conference schools and that this might be considered at the Canadian Teachers' Conference to be held this year at the Mennonite Mission Camp near Springstein, Manitoba, August 17, 18; and, that efforts be made to work with the Education Committee of the Mennonite Brethren Conference of Canada, especially on common problems.

For the Sunday Schools and Publication—Undergirding

"Forward Is the Watchword" was also the spirit in which the report of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Committee was received as given by P. A. Rempel, Altona, Manitoba. Since a large share of the responsibility of this committee has to do with the preparation of materials for publication it was closely associated with the report of the Publication Work which up to this time is apparently entrusted to one man—John G. Rempel, Pastor of the large Rosenort Church of Rosthern, Saskatchewan. Extensive materials in the German language have been prepared by the two Rempels to meet the need of the Sunday Schools. Assurance of support for the publication of these materials was given by the Conference.

Among the resolutions that had to do with the Publication work were; that a section of the best-loved Evangeliums Lieder (Gospel Hymns) be added to the Gesangbuch mit Noten; that John G. Rempel be authorized to prepare a handbook to the Gesangbuch comparable to the HANDBOOK TO THE MENNONITE HYMNARY; that a brief selection of hymns from the Gesangbuch be published for use in larger gatherings; and that churches support the work of the General Conference Publication Board.

Rev. J. J. Thiessen, President of the Canadian District Conference, Member of the Mennonite Central Committee, and Member of the Board of Foreign Missions of the General Conference, serves as Pastor of the First Mennonite Church of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan.

Through Home Missions—Revival

Variety of ministry characterized the report of the Home Mission Committee as they told of work among the Alt-Colonie Mennonites, among the girls working in such cities as Kitchener, Kingston, and Winnipeg, city-missions, traveling preachers among the scattered Mennonites, etc. Recommendations by the Committee accepted by the Conference included: that an expression of thanks be extended to the General Conference Home Mission Board which has helped in many of the tasks in Canada and that the churches collect substantial offerings for the General Conference Board; that the churches have a systematic plan of raising at least. 75c per member for the cause of Home Missions in Canada; that provinces employ travelling preachers and that such preachers keep in touch with the Committee; that churches in all provinces have Erweckungs Versammlungen (spiritual awakening meetings); that A. J. Neufeld, Margaret, Saskatchewan, be employed as Conference Evangelist six months out of the year; that special attention be given to the matter of distribution of tracts with privations and sufferings that came upon them in later years in Russia. An evangelized environment, he asserted, would have reacted differently. Now, however, Mennonites are scattered in all parts of the world in order to fulfil their Christ-given task as lights in the world.

A General Conference Missionary to India for 28 years, Rev. John Thiessen traced the work of the Conference in India since its beginning in 1900 pointing out that our missionaries had given an average of 23 years of service as compared with the average of missionaries in all denominations of just seven years. At present there are 3,584 baptized Christians being ministered to in 13 churches, each with its own Indian elder. Although most of the preaching is being done by native Christians some 39 full-time workers from North America are engaging in the important task of supervision. In conclusion, an urgent appeal was made for 14 young couples for the Indian field—couples who are thoroughly trained for such service.

The United Evangelistic Advance

Power and Method

by the Evangelism Committee

The Introductory Statement concerning this nation-wide Evangelistic Advance was published in the July 12 issue of THE MENNONITE. Ed.

"It is not within the power of men alone to create a new evangelistic movement. The Holy Spirit is He who empowers, directs and works. In the past, He has from time to time quickened the Church with power from on high. Without His power, Christians are powerless. Without this Divine Presence in our hearts, we are inadequate and insufficient to undertake this blessed work of the evangelization of our nation. God does not wait for us to be perfect. He is willing and ready to use very imperfect instruments. What matters most is that the instruments should be available for His use. The results of our efforts are not in our hands but in His. But He has given us the assurance that, 'it is required in stewards that a man be found faithful,' and that where that faithfulness is found, He is able 'to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think.'" The Amsterdam Report

The following are some of the methods that may be used.

1. United prayer. If America is to experience a genuine revival of religion, that is, the true religion of Jesus Christ, then there must be first a revival of prayer and a revival of power. Special prayer services should be held, many shut-ins and aged Christians may be enlisted by the pastor for special prayer in behalf of a revival. Special observance of the United Week of Prayer, January 1-8. The World Day of Prayer on Friday, February 24, should also be observed, and will provide opportunity for united prayer in behalf of our prodigal world. The United Council of Church Women, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y. will be glad to send material regarding the World Day of Prayer.

Protestant ministers of America are requested to pray for each other every Saturday evening at 8 o'clock or any time between eight and nine during the entire fifteen months of the Advance.

2. A community religious census may be conducted either by one congregation or by a group of churches in a community. Many people have moved during the last war and since, and some communities have changed entirely. Some have increased in population and others have decreased. A census, when done well gives churches the facts about their own community and on the basis of these facts, they can build their evangelistic programs intelligently. If properly organized such a community census can be made on one Sunday afternoon or during evenings.

World communion day is to be observed on the first Sunday of October. Special effort should be made on this Sunday which is to constitute the beginning of the great Evangelistic Advance and to secure the presence of every member at the Communion table. Those who are ill or infirm should have communion served to them in their homes or in the hospital. This day could be made a great day of spiritual strength of the members of the church.

Church attendance crusade. In order to make a good beginning on the Crusade it is suggested that a special effort be made to have all members attend church in the month of October beginning with the Communion Sunday and continuing.

Special season of ingathering. During the fifteen months of the Advance six special seasons of ingathering or special evangelistic efforts could be observed in the local congregation either separately or together with other churches. These are:

World Communion Day	1949
Christmas Season	1949
Easter Season	1950
Pentecost Season	1950
World Communion Day	1950
Christmas Season	1950

Visitation Evangelism

Every local congregation should plan several visitation evangelism campaigns during this year. Sometimes this visitation campaign will be planned in cooperation with other churches. The minister or some suited person should first of all conduct a class in visitation evangelism in which the lay members are instructed as to the methods of doing this special evangelistic work. In most cases teams of two are sent out and given names of families that are to be visited. This is the method that Jesus used when he sent out his disciples two by two.

Preaching Missions in Local Churches

A Preaching Mission or Revival Meeting should be held at least once in every local church during this coming year. The missions should be held for at least one week—Sunday to Sunday. A splendid combination would be to follow a week of visitation evangelism with a preaching mission of at least one week.

Simultaneous Preaching Missions

Some localities will arrange for preaching missions to be held simultaneously in each local church. Such a united effort, if preceded by special prayer and supplication and by united publicity will bring great results.

Special Missions

The Advance also calls for special missions, to high schools, universities and colleges, to prisons, and other institutions. It is hoped that our Churches will cooperate in these efforts to their utmost ability.

Only those who have struck the deepest note of penitence can reach the highest note of praise. —C. M. Messenger

Momentous German Conference

M.C.C. Assists N.A.E.

GERMANY. A notable conference on nonresistance was held June 17 and 18 in Thomashof, Germany, with Harold Bender, Erland Waltner, C. J. Rempel and other American and European leaders participating. Samuel Geiser from Switzerland declared that it may go down in the history of the Mennonites in Europe as one of the great, historic meetings. It was a moving experience to observe what unity of purpose there was among the German brethren in seeking to rediscover the great Biblical truths of the Early Church. There is an awakening of interest in Biblical nonresistance, not simply because it is a traditional principle of our fathers, but because it confronts us right in the heart of the Scriptures. One felt that the Spirit of the Lord was in the presence of that fellowship gathering at Thomashof last Friday and Saturday.—Robert Kreider

EUROPE: M.C.C. Work with N.A.E.

Several families of Displaced Persons have been able to enter the United States through the assistance given by the MCC to the National Association of Evangelicals. This is a non-denominational Protestant group which among other interests is concerned in helping to alleviate the suffering of the homeless. Our assistance consists chiefly in contacts made by Marie Brunk and Magdalen Friesen in Europe, the NAE locating its own sponsors here in the United States.

The assistance given by the M.C.C. to this group is in accord with the policy of giving help wherever possible without restrictions because of race, creed or political affiliation. The M.C.C. has been impressed with the high quality of the DPs processed by the N.A.E. and is happy to help in making their work possible.

NEW YORK: Migrant Unit Serves Young and Old

Nine young people have organized a program for migrant harvest laborers in five or six camps near Clinton, New York. The children's program includes playing games, story hour, crafts, Sunday and Bible School. Contacts with young people and adults are through religious meetings on Sunday and in a mid-week service, and also in various leisure-time activities which the unit members have organized and promoted.

JAPAN: Site Chosen for M.C.C. Unit

One of the poorest sections of Osaka is the location chosen for the MCC Relief Unit headquarters in Japan. A pre-fabricated barrack-type building is being erected to provide housing for the workers and also for facilities necessary for the work. Our workers are convinced that a much-needed relief service can be given in Osaka by making available to the people some sewing, shoe repair and other "self-help" facilities.

Further Plans

Immigration Anniversary Celebration

Churches and cultural groups, such as Mennonites coming from Poland, Prussia, Russia or South Germany should be encouraged to plan their own celebration in their communities on or before Oct. 9, it is being suggested by the program committee for the commemoration of the 75th anniversary of the coming and settlement of Mennonites in the prairie states and provinces. The committee consists of Rev. A. J. Dyck, Inman, Rev. Henry Hege, Corn, Dr. E. G. Kaufman and Dr. C. Krahn, North Newton, Rev. P. A. Wedel, Goessel, and Rev. Walter H. Dyck, Newton.

Conditions in their respective countries which caused the immigration to America might be one of the points to be discussed at the celebration, the committee suggests. Other interesting items would be the experiences on the journey and upon arrival on this continent, as well as the early pioneering years, and an evaluation of present conditions and the outlook for the future.

Mennonites from South Germany, now living at Halstead, West Zion and other places might join in one common celebration, it has been suggested. Those coming from Russia, and now living in the Alexanderwohl, Goessel and Tabor Communities, might find a common background for their program. Mennonites coming from Poland and now living in the Friedenstal, Meno and Pawnee Rock communities, or those living in the Gnadenberg and Johannestal communities, might wish to pool their interests. Prussian Mennonites coming to America in the 1870's and now residing in the Whitewater, Elbing and Newton area, may find it convenient to join together for their purpose. The Swiss Mennonites at Moundridge, Kingman, Pretty Prairie and elsewhere, have also a common background.

The central celebration, which is to be held all day on Oct. 12, in Memorial Hall, North Newton, is to bring together representatives of various branches of Mennonites as well as different regions, for a praise and testimonial meeting. The morning service is to begin with a praise service.

Pioneer days and the establishment of Mennonite communities would be the subject in the afternoon, with speakers from Manitoba and the upper and lower prairie states and from various conferences. The evening program would be devoted to the memory of David Goerz and other early pioneer leaders.

AKRON: Publication gives Voluntary Service News

The paper "Be Ye Doers," published monthly by the M.C.C., gives current information on Voluntary Service Activities. The present issue gives the addresses of all the Summer Units, including those under M.C.C. direction, and also those under direction of Mennonite conference groups. This paper may be secured without charge from Voluntary Service, M.C.C. Akron, Pennsylvania.

We and the Refugees

A Mutual Need Met

TWENTY-ONE European refugees from World War II have come to the Mountain Lake Community. There are sponsors for several more families and individuals that are yet to come.

Bewildered but Thankful

The reactions of the refugees on arrival is always about the same: they are bewildered at our land of plenty, at our extravagance, but the uppermost thought is thankfulness for a place of freedom and opportunity for a home. Quite typical of the average is the 68-year-old widow who arrived here at midnight, was given a little lunch by the sponsor and then given a night gown, and taken up to her room. On arriving in her room she humbly clasped her hands, reached toward heaven and sincerely praised God for having this to come to pass.

Impressions and Prejudices

The impressions that the refugees make on the public varies with the extent that we permit ourselves to become acquainted with these people and with the prejudices that we have. The unfortunate impressions made by a few families of the many Russian Mennonites coming to North America in the early twenties who were used to having slaves work for them and expected that here, often made us very critical and prejudiced our judgment of all refugees. One heard people say when the present refugees arrived that they had fancy clothing, ear rings, wrist watches and liked to be waited on. It may well be that we find some of the refugees wearing some luxury. Let us think how we might hold on to a watch that we got as a present "back in the good old days" if everything should be taken from us! There may be some with fancy clothes but they are sure to be no plainer or fancier then the ones we gave for relief. As they get adjusted to life here we are bound to see some extravagant reactions, but this is usually a reflection of our liberal idea of the Christian way of living.

. . . And Acquaintance

We sincerely feel that closer acquaintance will reveal to anyone concerned that these people on the whole are humble, sincere, hard-working people, striving to follow the Christian way of life. From the experience that our Paraguayan friends have had and to some extent what we have seen here, we conclude that the refugee young people have been influenced by the cheating, lying, and ruthlessness that has been rampant in Europe for the last decade.

Lessons in Appreciation

This brings us to the reality of suffering that these refugees experienced. We have all had the opportunity to read much concerning the suffering of our Christian brethren and have heard other people talk about it but here we have people who can sit around our table and tell us what to appreciate in our home, in our church, and in our everyday life. The explanation of their feelings during starvation and their appreciation of the simple things in life are impressive as they are personal. The coming of the refugees brings the reality of the European suffering into the community for those people who have interest in this and it makes us appreciate our many blessings and opportunities.

One Hesitant . . . Now Critical

The experience we have had with the refugees and their sponsors makes us

by Dr. and Mrs. John R. Schmidt realize more fully what responsibility not only the sponsors have to the refugees but also the responsibilities of the public to both refugees and sponsors. Last fall when we made inquiry for sponsors for refugees the response was hesitant from various areas. There were however many people who committed themselves as willing to take responsibility for a family, pay for part of their fare and promise to see that employment and housing was furnished. Many of the people who were hesitant about committing themselves to the sponsorship of refugees are now very critical of the sponsors that have families. They fear that the refugees will be used as slaves. We are aware of the fact that this can happen. On the other hand let us realize that the sponsors were sincere and openhearted when they committed themselves to the support of people in need they knew nothing about, and therefore we should be more patient with critical thoughts.

Of Inter-Mennonite Significance

The work with the refugees of this community has been a combined effort of the various Mennonite groups, General Conference (Old) Mennonites, Evangelical Mennonite Brethren, and General Conference Mennonites. We have had the plan to continue to have a German service in one of the various churches one Sunday afternoon of each month. Besides the aid given the refugees, this combined effort is promoting fellowship and better understanding between the various groups as we work together in a Christian cause.

In Alberta

Seventy-Five-Year Jubilee

R. J. Shellenberg

On Tuesday, May 24, 1949, the members of the Bergthal Mennonite congregation of Didsbury, and the Church of God (Mennonite) of Linden, Alberta celebrated a Thanksgiving to God for His gracious guidance and protection of our people during the past seventy-five years particularly. It was in 1873 that God first led our forefathers to leave the steppes of Russia for this land of freedom.

Messages in German, Low German and English included the following:

Early Hardships

J. C. Penner recalled the communal life of the early immigrants with its advantages of mutual assistance which lightened the tasks of building and farming. Difficulties included hauling logs and harvesting with scythes. Grasshoppers, drought and storms during the first years forced the immigrants to borrow money from the government and Ontario Mennonites.

Reasons for Immigration

Rev. I. Toews emphasized that the Mennonites had come to Russia in the years 1788-1840 upon invitation on condition that they would be exempt from military service, and that when this condition was not met our forefathers were forced to consider emigration.

Deputation

Aaron Toews told of the faithfulness of his grandfather, C. Toews, one of the delegates to Canada, who had returned to Russia with a handful of gold buttons, given to him as souvenirs of Canada, and refused to call them his own but asked the church at home to decide if he should keep them for himself. The church decided the whole congregation was entitled to them and he gave them up. Such faithfulness to a charge is rare today.

The Hand of God

J. W. Toews drew our attention to the fact that it was God's hand that directed the affairs of the world so that it occurred during the peaceful reign of Queen Victoria that our forefathers were privileged to enter this country. We are grateful that God favorably placed government officials who were so friendly towards us as a people.

H. L. Toews maintained that although education has generally improved, the social sciences and religion are not being given as prominent a place on the school curriculum as formerly. Our people seem less concerned about their children's education than were our forefathers.

The Welcome

Rev. I. Toews read the address of welcome which Lord Dufferin, then Lieutenant Governor of Manitoba, gave to the first Mennonite immigrant settlers at Gruenfeld in 1877. The first Mennonites had been invited by the British and Canadian governments.

Rev. A. Martens used Psalm 119:59 and Isaiah 55:8, 9 for his talk. God's way is higher than man's way. God, and not man, directed the Mennonite emigration from Russia. The success of the first immigration made it possible to bring over twenty thousand more Mennonites during the years 1923 to 1930. God wishes us to be on His highway. The name "Mennonite" will not take us there. Faith in Jesus alone can take us along the ways that God wants us to go.

Spiritual Development

Rev. C. G. Neufeld used I Sam. 7:12. The emphasis of the early settlers was on faithfulness. Although the organizations of higher schools, such as the Gretna M.C.I., for instance, caused congregational schisms, they have proven their worth. In their wake have followed Sunday schools, choirs, youth societies, and Bible schools. But if these institutions are to be of any service to God's Kingdom they must be maintained on the foundation of Jesus Christ.

Rev. F. F. Hiebert pointed out that spiritual development must continue from where it began. Our pioneering forefathers were content to trudge alongside a yoke of oxen for fourteen miles, expounding the Scriptures, then attend church service and trudge home again. Such zeal to know the word and will of God is rare today. Shall we forget the sacrifices these pioneers made for us. The testimony of the first Mennonite settlers made it possible to get credit to bring over the twenty thousand immigrants in 1923 to 1930. Are we allowing God, who gave His son, to move us to give? Are we using what we have to glorify Him and help others to know Jesus as Saviour?

Simplicity

P. W. Isaac showed us an old Bible, printed in 1730, which had gone along from Prussia to Russia and from there to Canada. He called it a sign-post. As such it can be trusted because it contains the truth and the truth shall make us free. Menno Simon, whose name we bear, simply built upon foundations that had already been laid. We are in debt to maintain the simple humble life.

Rev. John Loewen said the Mennonites were slow to respond to the mission call, particularly home missions. However, since 1850 our mission work has expanded in different areas as Java, India, China, Africa, Colombia and North American Indians.

It was interesting to note that there were many in attendance who could not understand the German language and also some who could not understand the English language. Therefore some of the speakers were obliging enough to give us very colorful reports in the Low German dialect.

Smucker, our President. Mrs. Lohrenz, President of the Women's Missionary Organization, spoke during the C. E. hour. Dr. S. F. Pannabecker, president of our Seminary, gave the evening message. Mrs. Smucker and Mrs. Pannabecker were also with us. These services were a definite blessing to us. At present the Young People are busy planning for their Retreat which will be held at Ketchum, Idaho. Rev. P. D. Unruh of Colfax, Washington will be their main speaker. On July the 17th, our Sunday School will have its annual picnic at Ross Park in Pocatello. The Sunday School period and the worship service will be shortened so as to have these and still have time for the picnic. Our church services are blest with a large number of visitors most every Sunday and we are always happy for the visitors that worship with us.—Corr.

—Nappanee Indiana: James Buss and Arlene Nelson of Elkhart were united in marriage July 10. A proposed camp site for our retreats and other purposes has been selected unanimously and with enthusiasm by the Camp Site Committee and the executive officers of the Central and Middle District Conferences. The site is located near Niles, Michigan, and consists of about 90 acres and fronts on two lakes, Big Smith and Little Smith lakes. 70 acres is timber land and it is estimated that there is about 3,000 feet of Lake frontage. To become enthusiastic about this site one needs only to visit it. What Shall I Do with My Life

2. My Calling Is the Ministry

Lamont A. Woelk

SEVERAL summers ago, I worked for a farmer in Western Kansas who was good-natured and liked to joke quite a bit. I was rather small, so some of the heavier work was rather difficult for me to do. Consequently, that gave him something to joke about. Time and again he told me, jokingly of course, "You're no good for anything else, so the only thing left for you is to be a preacher."

At that time, I took it in the joking way that he put it, but it set me to thinking about the ministry. However, I always told myself that a minister should be called by God and I had never received, or expected to receive, such a calling.

In 1947, I had an opportunity to attend the General Conference that was to be held at Berne, Indiana; but it looked as if I would not be able to get the time off from my job, for that was a busy season of the year. However, just four weeks before the conference, I had an emergency operation for appendicitis which left me unable to work. Nevertheless, I was able to make the trip, for God was leading me to the conference.

It was while I was at the conference that I felt the call of God. The theme of the conference, GO QUICKLY AND TELL, was printed on a banner that hung across the front of the church. Throughout the entire conference, emphasis was placed on the need of workers in God's kingdom; the need of consecrated men and women to go tell the whole world about Jesus. By the time the conference was half over, I knew that God needed me and I decided right there to prepare myself for His service. That conference experience was my Mountain Top Experience.

I still feel that a person should not enter the ministry unless he has received a call from God. But by all means, don't let yourself get out of calling distance. Don't look for a calling like that of Paul's conversion experience, for too often God calls in the still small voice. Listen for that voice and make sure that you don't miss the call.

Service in God's field requires just as much preparation as any other profession. The world we live in today is very complex; everything about us is advancing at an extremely fast rate of speed. Along with this, the people have become educated to a greater degree. In order to meet the challenge that is presented by the world, God's laborers must be well educated also. By this I don't mean a Bible School education, but a well rounded Christian education at a Christian college. As for myself, I intend to finish college and then go on to seminary for three years. During the war, the army would not send a soldier into battle unless he was properly and extensively trained. So it must be on God's battle field—His shoulders must be trained just as extensively.

As for the future, I am looking forward to a life of hard work, self-sacrifice, and privation. Life in God's harvest field is not easy but it is joyful, for there is the satisfaction of knowing that you are carrying out Christ's mission of saving men's souls. And what's more, the suffering that you endure here on earth will but add to your glory in heaven.

So I say to you young people, as you look about for a life work, consider the ministry above all else. Consider it prayerfully, not lightly as if it were something to be decided on in a moment's time. Get down on your knees and talk it over with God and then listen, for he may be calling you.

Every Life a Vocation From God

God is continuing his creative work in the world.
God endows each life with realizable significance:

Significance which will bless the world,
Significance which will heal the wounds of the world,
Significance which will enrich the world's life,
Significance which will redeem the world.

God's love is embodied in each life—
God's power is embodied in each life—
God's wisdom is embodied in each life—
God's goodness is embodied in each life—
Man is to release God's gifts into the total of the world.

As each star has its own light to give—so has each life;
As each musical instrument has its own tone quality—so has each life;
As each flower has its own distinctive beauty—so has each life;
As each thread in a tapestry contributes to the total pattern—so does each life in the life of all;
As the oak is wrapped in the acorn—
As the rose is enfolded in the bud—so is God's purpose bound up in the bundle of each life.
This is the mystery and wonder of God's creative work.

O Matchless Wisdom, make us to be wise unto thee—fortify the human will to work with thine—in the faithful realization of life's meaning and end. Amen

At Sardis With Canadian Youth

Young people representing the various provinces, after listening to a stirring report on Voluntary Service by David Schroeder (this was one of the two reports in the English language with the rest of the young peoples' meeting as well as the Conference as a whole being entirely in the German) told of their highly varied activities. In British Columbia they sponsored song festivals, Sunday school conventions, summer Bible schools, radio ministry, and tract work. In Alberta they had also done summer Bible school work and were considering mission work among the Doukhabors, In Saskatchewan they had sponsored a worker in the mission in Saskatoon as well as among the Indians, they had reached some 1,000 children with summer Bible school; other work included the children's Home, a radio mission, and the work at the Youth Farm.

Manitoba youth gave students help in the form of scholarships at the Canadian Mennonite Bible College, and had also sponsored song festivals. The youth of Ontario had specialized in collecting clothing for M. C. C. and Bibles for refugees among other things.

The Young People's Messenger is the official organ of this organization.

Some thirty-nine delegates representing 44 churches took part in this meeting presided over by Henry H. Epp, young pastor of the Waterloo-Kitchener Church.

Summer Peace Teams Begin Work

Again this summer the MCC Peace Section is sponsoring Peace Teams which will serve during the months of July and August. One of these teams, composed of David Wiens of Kitchener, Ont., John Ropp of Kalona, Iowa, and Robert Millar of Kitchener, Ont., will serve among MCC constituent churches in California and other western states. The second team, composed of Harris Waltner of Marion, South Dakota, Nathan Hege of Marion, Penn., and Edward Stoltzfus of Hudson, Ohio, will work in the North Central states area, particularly in the Freeman, S. D. and Mt. Lake, Minn. communities. In both areas the teams will go from church to church according to an itinerary planned by local leaders in cooperation with the MCC Peace Section. The men will participate in programs and discussions dealing directly or indirectly with Biblical nonresistance, and endeavor to promote a more thorough study of this doctrine and its applications and implications. Peace literature will also be distributed.

To open this period of Peace Team work, a training institute sponsored by the MCC Peace Section was held at Goshen, Indiana, from June 27 to July 1 for the benefit of the team members. In addition to the two MCC teams, three other teams under individual conference sponsorship participated. During this time, consideration was given to the meaning and implications of Biblical nonresistance, the historical background, present-day problems, and also methods of effective teaching.

Voluntary Service Among Cheyenne Indians

Every morning at 8:00 Mr. Wenger hurried off in the car to "collect" children for Bible School. He went 8 miles one way and five the other way, and came back with the car filled to capacity. Other children walked from their houses in the Busby camp.

At nine o'clock Bible School started with about 40 in attendance each day. After a devotional period, the little tots followed Mrs. Wenger to the house where they sat in a circle on the floor and enjoyed their lessons together. Miss Sprunger's class remained in the church, while Miss Dyck's and Mr. Wenger's classes moved to the log house for study.

Recess at 10:30 was a welcome time for all when the children played volley ball, Three Deep, or London Bridge and the teachers served Kool-Aid.

At 12 o'clock Mr. Wenger and one group left for home and at about 12:20 the last group waved goodby with enthusiastic promises of coming back the next day.

It was the aim of each teacher to instill in the heart of each child the Bible truths learned through memorization and Bible stories and to bring them to a desire to accept the Lord Jesus as their personal Saviour.

The program given to parents and friends on Friday morning was a witness through singing, Scripture verses, stories and Scripture reading in both Cheyenne and English.

We pray that the Bible School may have been a blessing in both the children and parents.

KIRBY BIBLE SCHOOL

A little one-roomed hut about twelve miles up the Rosebud river west of Busby was the scene of the first Bible School taught here this spring. Mr. Wenger and Miss Dyck drove there each morning from Busby to teach. To Miss Dyck who had just arrived in Montana on the evening before, the first day of school, this was a new but interesting experience. Each day Mr. Wenger drove to the various homes scattered among the hills to gather children for Bible School. Then at noon he took them all back. The teachers had morning devotions with all the children together every morning, then the older children met around a table in one corner of the room with Mr. Wenger as teacher and Miss Dyck gathered the little ones around another table in the opposite corner. Eight days were thus spent in teaching the children songs, Bible stories, Scripture verses and precious truths from God's Word. On the Sunday following the last day, the children gave a closing program. May the lessons taught prove a lasting blessing to the hearts of the children and to the homes from which they come.

TEACH US TO PRAY

One child at Busby remarked to her teacher, "I wanted to pray last night." When the teacher asked, "Did you?" she answered, "No, I don't know how." Another child stayed after school one day and when the teacher inquired what she wanted, she said, "I want to pray." Thus the Bible School teachers have a wonderful opportunity to teach the children to pray. We are reminded of the words of the disciples when they said. "Lord, teach us to pray."

How We Got Our Bible

IV Three Men and the King James Version

by Jacob I. Friesen

The English Bible read and memorized most widely today is over 300 years old. The story of how it came into being can be centered around the lives of three men; John Wyclif, William Tyndale, and James I. These lived at different times, but each made a distinctive contribution to the English Bible as we have it today.

John Wyclif was a man who dared to stand against wrong. He loved the common people who slaved in poverty. John decided that the best way to teach people the Christian life would be to let them read the Bible for themselves. Since the Bible was not in the language of the people, he sent out preachers who would explain the Latin Bible in everyday English. These men were known as Lollards or "poor priests."

While the "poor priest" spread all over England explaining the Bible to the common people John Wyclif, a graduate of Oxford University, began the difficult task of translating the Latin Vulgate into the English vernacular. Parts of the Bible had been translated before but there was no complete work. The church of that day opposed the work of Wyclif but the people liked to hear his translation read. Since all these Bibles had to be hand-written, they were very expensive and few could buy their own copy. But the Lollards equipped with this translation brought about a religious revival that spread across the country. After John Wyclif's death an enemy of this movement remarked that if you met any two men, one of them was sure to be a Lollard.

All this happened one hundred years before Luther and the Protestant Reformation. For this reason John Wyclif has been called the "Morning Star of the Reformation." The spirit of inquiry and freedom of thought defended by this man have left their mark on the political as well as the religious life of England and prepared the way for giving the Bible to the common man.

About the time that Columbus discovered America a man named William Tyndale was born. He became a scholar, mastering seven languages; Hebrew, Greek, Latin, Italian, Spanish, English, and French. Each appeared to others as his native tongue when he used it. Distressed by the ignorance and dullness of many of the clergy, he was determined that the common people should read the Word for themselves. Tyndale is reported to have said to one of the leaders of the church, "If God spare my life, ere many years I will cause a boy that driveth a plow to know more of the Scriptures than thou dost.'"

William Tyndale was a master of the English language and his translation fixed the English language for time to come. Eight per cent of the Old Testament and Ninety per cent of the New Testament found in our common King James version is directly from Tyndale's translation. His dream of translating the entire Bible was interrupted when a supposed friend betrayed him to his enemies, who threw him into prison, strangled him and burned his body.

"Lord, open the King of England's eyes." was the dying prayer of William Tyndale. This prayer was answered speedily. When James I came to the throne, England had become a first-rate nation but its religious life was at a low ebb. The established church was in conflict with the Puritans. James called a conference to iron out difficulties.

Different translations of the Bible were in use. Some preferred by the Established Church and others by the Puritans. The matter of a single version for both groups came up almost by accident on the last day of the conference. King James took matters into his hands and authorized the translation of the Bible by the best scholars of the day. These were to work unhurried. The final printing should have only the Scripture text. No comments or footnotes.

Fifty-four men worked for four years. The result was the King James Version of 1611 A. D. The new version was gradually accepted. For 270 years no revision was even proposed.

Thus the lives of three men. John Wyclif, William Tyndale, and King James I supply the facts of the story which gave birth to the most universally read translation of our Bible, The King James Version.

Service with Federal Bureau of Prisons

In Washington, D. C., at the National Training School for Boys, three one-year volunteers and one summer service member are helping the imprisoned boys "in the Name of Christ." The 350 prisoners are boys averaging 16 years of age. The "school" consists of half-day vocational shop and half-day academic classes. Harvey Wall conducts tests with the incoming boys and assists the recreational director George Bohrer is assisting in an experiment of vocational counselling for the boys. Gerald Hershberger assists one of the vocational school instructors in the cabinet shop. Burton Yost helps in recreation and education with a special group who are isolated because of misconduct.

This is the first unit of such volunteers to be used by the Federal Bureau of Prisons. The superintendent indicates that he is more than pleased with the first month of work. It is hoped that the lives of these workers may give a Christian testimony to the boys at the school.

Do You Feel Sorry for Yourself?

By D. J. Clark

If you give way to self-pity, then

1. You are admitting that you are weak and beaten.
2. You are retreating inside yourself and closing the door to help.
3. You are laying down your grit and courage.
4. You are pushing everyone away from you.
5. You are being a big baby!

When you refuse to be sorry for yourself—

1. You are strengthening your spirit.
2. You are opening the door to God's help.
3. You are growing a backbone.
4. You are admired by others.
5. You are truly grown up.

And things will come your way!

Keep this to read the next time that you get downhearted.

CANADIAN CONFERENCE . . .

Marie J Regier
4614 Woodlawn Avenue
Chicago 15 Illinois

C-68

PLEASE mention both OLD and NEW address when WRITING the help of the Young People's Organization; that $250 be allowed for the purchase of a lot for the Church in Saskatoon (the building to be moved in has been given by the Langham group); that financial help be extended to refugee-ministers; and, that the Conference keep in close touch with the needs of the brethren in South America. The Treasurer of the Home Mission Committee reported over $6,000 in contributions from the churches in the past year.

Through Foreign Missions—Outreach

Quite new in this organizational set-up of the Canadian District is the Foreign Missions Committee; it is but two years old. Thus far its task had been to promote Foreign Missions, enlist workers, and investigate possible fields for labor. The work carried on thus far has been among the Indians of Canada. The Conference endorsed the setting up of a treasury for this Committee with $500 to be solicited by the Committee for work the first year. This will be used partially for the support of the workers among the Indians. The Committee has also been given the responsibility of arranging the itinerary of General Conference Missionaries visiting churches in the Provinces.

Through Relief—Lifting Up

The Relief Committee reported that there was still a great need for help and especially in South America. The lot of the 13,000 Mennonites in Paraguay at the present is not an easy one. Crop failures, poor transportation, poor government, almost no local industries and broken families due to war conditions, are making their struggle for existence a hard one. It was, therefore, felt that our future responsibility was to our brethren in South America more than Europe from where most of our people had now migrated. At present only 2,000 of the original 12,000 Russian Mennonite refugees are still left in Europe.

Through Peace—A Pure Witness

One of the questions discussed at the Minister's Conference which convened on the Saturday preceding the Conference was the form of alternative service which ministers of the church would be able to recommend to their youth in the event of another war. It was admitted that a lack of agreement on this issue among Canadian Mennonites had made it difficult to represent our desires before the Canadian Government during the last war. As the result of the meeting service in Government parks and in hospitals was recommended. However whatever form such alternative service might take, it should not involve the donning of a military uniform, since this would indicate subjugation to military authorities and a close integration with the war machine. The Conference in its sessions later on accepted a recommendation that the churches take their stand unitedly on this decision.

Four congregations were welcomed into the fellowship of the Conference — Chiliwack, Kelowna, British Columbia, and Blainsville and Swamp Lake, Saskatchewan.

Women Help in Paraguay

Almost 200 women—16 from Saskatchewan, 10 from Manitoba, 10 from Alberta, and about 150 from British Columbia—gathered on one afternoon and decided on the following tasks: that 130 one-year subscriptions to "Unser Missionsblatt" be sent to the women in Paraguay as action of last year's meeting in Manitoba be completed with an offering at that meeting. The Ontario mission societies sent a letter indicating that they had decided on the support of a Paraguay hospital at Vollendam and asking whether the other provinces would be willing to help the remaining hospitals—at Menno, Friesland, and Vollendam. It was decided that each province either by itself or jointly with another province, elect to support one of these hospitals. The British Columbia mission societies agreed to support the hospital at Fernheim. Mrs. Meta Bahnman of Vancouver, British Columbia presided.

These Significant Statistics

Significant statistics referring to the Canadian Conference had been gathered and were presented by the aged Statistician of the Conference, Rev. Benjamin Ewert, Winnipeg. According to latest reports, the Conference now has 13,869 baptized adult members. Added by baptism during 1948 were 665. The total membership is now being served by 260 ministers working in 98 rural and 44 city or town churches. The total amounts contributed by these churches for all purposes in 1948 was $362,885. This includes outlay for building of churches operating expenses, missions, schools, land settlement projects, and charities of various kinds.

These Responsibilities

J. J. Thiessen, Saskatoon, President, Jacob Gerbrandt, Saskatoon, and H. T. Klassen, Laird, Saskatchewan, Secretary-Treasurer were re-elected to their respective offices. G. G. Epp, Rosthern, Saskatchewan, and Johann Wichert, Vineland, Ontario were re-elected to the Home Mission Committee. J. J. Wiens, Morden, Manitoba, I. I. Friesen, Winnepeg, Manitoba, and C. J. Warkentin, Herschel, Saskatchewan, were elected to the Foreign Missions Committee. Reelected to the Bible College Committee were P. W. Dyck, Rosemary, Alberta; William Enns, Springstein, Manitoba; P. A. Rempel, Altona, Manitoba; and J. J. Thiessen, Saskatoon.

Further elections included that of J. D. Adrian, Yarrow, British Columbia to the Education Committee and P. A. Rempel, Altona, Manitoba to the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Committee.

Dear Sirs,

I received Das Yahrbuch for 1949 which you sent me and I have read it with great interest.

It is touching to note how the little group of Mennonite people had to suffer so greatly in the great storms of the last decades, and now through mutual assistance over continents and oceans has achieved a unity the like of which the world has not seen in all its history.

The glory be to God alone!

With heartiest thanks to you for sending me the book.

"COLONIA MENNONITA" is the title under which an article appeared in Mennonite Life, having to do with the newly established settlements in Uruguay. It is interesting to note that the term "Mennonite" is finding its way into the common usage of more and more languages. Now names in Scripture, and more than we often realize, in life as a whole, stand for character. As has often been emphasized the name Mennonite originally stood for the great conviction expressed in I Corinthians 3:11: "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ." The emphasis on peace, which today is probably the most common factor associated with the Mennonites, as well as the convictions about the simple life, non-swearing of oaths, non-conformity to the world, and others were simply outgrowths of the fundamental conviction that when a person is converted and his life is completely surrendered to Jesus Christ he will seek to be like Christ in every phase of life. There are of course those who tend to limit the interpretation of the "foundation" to the conversion experience, but who ever heard of laying a foundation without having some idea of the precise nature, shape, and size that the superstructure would take? These secondary questions aside, the main question remains: is the fundamental significance of the word "Mennonite" as indicated above being kept pure as the word finds its way especially into the Spanish tongue? After all the Spanish peoples represent a group that have hardly so much as been touched by the vital Gospel of New Testament Christianity. Here is an opportunity in many areas of South America to bring Spanish peoples into direct contact with the Gospel of the grace of God as it is to manifest itself in conversion and complete surrender in every area of life. God is using the circumstances of our time to bring our brethren into direct contact with the Spanish people in South America. Part of our Home Mission task among them is to help them get on their feet as quickly as possible that they may let their light shine. If the process is dragged out too long and they use all their energies just to eke out a living there can only be the result of a number of self-centered communities that hide their light under a bushel by the very force of circumstances. This issue of the Mennonite is devoted to the interests of our brethren, some who as much as thirty years ago and some who only in recent months have begun settling down in these areas.—J.J.E.

THE ALMOST DOGGED DETERMINATION with which our leaders of state are encouraging an arms-for-Europe program is clear evidence of the moral insanity of our age. The way in which Britain is egging on this program is indication of the universality of this spirit. All of this makes it a bit more clear why a number of individuals in this country are putting themselves in awkward positions by refusing to pay income tax, the larger portion of which inevitably goes for war—past, present, and future. It raises the question anew as to the exact nature of a Christian's relation to the state. It is true that the Scriptures emphasize the fact that government is ordained of God; but we are not to deduce from this that some of the wicked forms of government we have seen in history were established because of the direct working of God. That would make God two-faced and certainly out of harmony with what we have seen in Jesus Christ, the Son of God. We are to be in subjection to those in authority; but this subjection must take different forms depending on the nature of the authority. It would seem that what is really ordained of God is order. When governments tend to produce chaos rather than order—the kind of order as revealed in our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ and in His teachings—then our subjection as Christians will be one of obeying God rather than man and human governments and accepting the suffering that may come as the result of our higher obedience. Just how this higher obedience is to express itself raises a number of questions. In many of our circles non-registration and non-payment of war taxes is questioned as an effective method. It would seem quite obvious that if enough people used this method this wickedness of war would be seriously hindered. It would seem however that something much more fundamental is needed. We need fearless Christians, fearless ministers, who in spite of public criticism to the effect that, "they should get souls saved and stay out of politics" lift their voice against the evil which is driving the very souls to hell even before they have a chance to get the Gospel to them and to get them saved. How can we say that the main business of the Church is to save souls and at the same time by our silence on other crucial issues let conditions exist in the world that will make it all but impossible for the next generation of souls to have minds open to the Gospel?—J.J.E.

Sins do not become virtues by being widely practiced. Right is still right if nobody is right, and wrong is wrong if everybody is wrong. Some have contended that sex aberrations are as common as the common cold, but nobody has so far asked us to consider the cold normal and desirable.—F. J. Sheen, as reprinted from the Salem Church Bulletin, Freeman, South Dakota.

In Uruguay

In a Mennonite Immigrant Camp

by Bruno Ewert

OUR immigrant camp, in Arapey about 75 kilometers north of Salto in Uruguay to which about 450 persons came the latter part of October, of whom about 300 were still there, received a pleasant surprize on June 14, 1949, when welcome guests arrived from the United States. They were Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary of the Home Mission Board of the General Conference, of Quakertown, Pennsylvania, and Rev. John Kaufman and wife and son. For two years the Kaufmans were in charge of the work among the Mennonites in Brazil. They wanted to visit and speak with us refugees from East Germany, from the old Mennonite settlements near Danzig, Lemberg and Warsaw. They arrived at about tea-time; so we immediately invited our guests to share coffee bread and honey with us. They continued taking their meals with us which gave us an opportunity to discuss many of our experiences in war and during our flight. For the night we lodged our guests in the temporarily arranged hospital which is under the direction of our physician, Dr. Klugkist, and his wife who is a trained nurse.

Through the Whole Camp

Before nightfall we had time to visit our camp kitchen where our women prepare simple yet nourishing meals for the whole camp. On the next two days I went through the whole camp with our guests, visited every family and thus gave our visitors an insight into the fate which has befallen so many of our families. This sympathetic interest in their joys and sorrows caused much gratitude in their hearts.

For Songbooks and Catechisms—Thank You!

On June 15, we ministerial brethren discussed with Rev. Neuenschwander and Rev. Kaufman spiritual matters concerning the Mennonites in Uruguay. This gave me an opportunity to say "Thank you" in the name of our Mennonites here for the 300 songbooks, the catechisms for instruction, and for the children's songbooks, which are to be used in Sunday School. We were pleased to be informed by Brother Neuenschwander that the General Conference will send us more Mennonite literature.

. . . And for This Visitation

At four o'clock we went out into the open for evening worship. The sun was still shining gloriously and so our guests first of all took some pictures of our group. Then after congregational singing I spoke a few words of introduction. Then Brother Kaufman spoke about his experiences in the service of the Lord, about the grace of Jesus Christ, that seeks all of us and is eager to transform us into children of God and actually does so wherever His word is proclaimed and is taken to heart. Then Rev. Neuenschwander spoke about the love of God in Christ, who was sacrificed for our sins and resurrected for the sake of our righteousness. To recognize and acknowledge this is the task of all of us who wish some day to become heirs of his glory in the Eternal Home. We must actually experience Good Friday and Easter in order to be willing followers of Jesus. Both brethren spoke sincerely and touched the hearts. Both testified to their obligation to the exalted Lord and Savior. Thank you for this service. I spoke a few words in conclusion then we prayed and sang together, "So nimm denn meine Haende und fuehre mich. . . "

The Farewell

After our guests had convinced themselves of the comforts of our warm springs in Arapey (a health spring which is supposed to be good for rheumatism and rises from a depth of 1395 meters at a temperature of 37.5 Celsius) they departed again on June 16. Many of our brethren in the Faith accompanied them to the nearby railroad station, our choir sang in farewell, the harmonious song "God be with you till we meet again. . ."

Accept my thanks you friends, you beloved brethren, all of you who support the great unique Mennonite Relief cause with prayer and sacrificial giving; may God repay you for all your love towards the "Brethren in distress." To him alone be the glory.

From Brazil

A Tribute to M.C.C. Personnel

by Peter Klassen

IT was two years ago, that two MCC workers arrived in Brazil with their wives, in order to carry on Bible work amongst the settlements and especially the young people. It is my duty today to offer a word of farewell to brother and sister Kaufman from Moundridge, Kansas. When they arrived in Curitiba two years ago, it was our pleasure to receive them in our house for 14 days and to be able to help them to find their way in a world so strange to them, and now, today, they are saying goodbye to Witmarsum, the colony in the Brazilian jungle, and it is our privilege to have them with us for another fortnight and to be able to hear of the many experiences that they have had in their work here in Brazil, during these 2 years. Therefore, I think I have the right to say a few words about the work of these good brethren in the service of the MCC.

Sufficient to Lose Courage

Right at the beginning I can say that if, today, among the many Mennonites of Brazil, there is a good comprehension of the work of the MCC, and a deeper insight into the Mennonite world at large, it is in part owing to the Rev. and Mrs. Kaufman, for, when they came here, they had to face all kinds of prejudice against the work of the Americans, as well as other difficulties. Sometimes it was sufficient to make them lose courage and they did not everywhere succeed in doing what they wanted to, namely, to make known the real spirit of the M.C.C. and to overcome all the obstacles existing among the settlers.

Put Themselves into the Center of the Need

When the Rev. Kaufman and his wife sailed from the USA with their son Kenneth, they did so with the thought that their field would be the metropolis of Sao Paulo, among the dispersed Mennonites there. However, when they arrived here, they found that for the time being they would have to work in the interior until some arrangement was made for them to go to Sao Paulo. So, these good people came for a long period to Witmarsum. They put themselves into the very center of the need of a jungle colony trying to understand all and everything. They even became members of our Agricultural Co-operative Society, in order to be in the middle of everything. Yet, much remained strange to them and not everywhere did they meet the right understanding. Where, however, the sympathy for the simple way of holiness and uprightness of these M. C. C. workers was roused an unforgettable impression was made by their words and work. Not only among the Mennonites but also among the Catholics and Lutherans in the neighborhood did they enjoy great respect and affection. The young people have especially much to be thankful for. They learned to recognize in them every liberty which frees from pettiness and worldliness, binding them closer to Christ.

With Great Difficulty

So the Kaufmans worked here for almost one year, but when, in December, 1947, the secretary of the M. C. C. Orie Miller, was here, the plan for Sao Paulo was discussed and in February, 1948 the Rev. Kaufman and his family went to Sao Paulo. With great difficulty the Mennonites united and arranged a center so that finally, after four changes of dwelling, four weeks ago the permanent Mennonite Center was inaugurated. About this ceremony certainly special report will follow. In January of this year, Orie Miller, Cornelius Dyck and Ezra Bender were traveling through Sao Paulo. Through them the Mennonite Center as well as the Rev. Kaufman, received further directions. The Kaufmans were begged to prolong their two years' stay—at least until May of this year—to which they agreed. Furthermore, they were asked to visit the faithful at Witmarsum and Curitiba for four weeks.

Spread Much Love

And now, we have had them with us here in Witmarsum for nearly three weeks—for the last time, as far as we can tell. They have spread much love and have been received, in the houses and in the communities belonging to the General Conference, with much affection and were bestowed with moving gratitude especially on the Sunday of their farewell.

This farewell will never be forgotten. At the afternoon service, brother Kaufman preached. He spoke about the meaning of the great reformation in the sixteenth century and about the special mission that we have as Mennonites. Our young people should be very enthusiastic about the high aims of the community in which they live. In the break for lunch after this careful sermon, we sat down at long tables and enjoyed our meal. Many useful words were exchanged.

"Once the Lord Will Reveal"

After the meal the real farewell celebration began. The writer spoke about the words out of the Book of Judges 18.6: "Go in peace, for the path ye go is right before the Lord." After this the Kaufmans were given time to address their farewell to us. Their words will remain with us a long time. We were greatly impressed by their simplicity and the sincerity of their great love for Jesus. That was to be felt in the following short greetings. Once during the address of preacher Abraham Dyck about the words in Psalm 121 and 1. Corinthians 15:58, he said, among other things: "Ye have oft believed that your work was in vain, but it is not so. We testify to you today that your work was not in vain and if all is not made known to you here, once the Lord will reveal how you have served us in faith and abnegation." Then a brother expressed his thanks from the bottom of his heart. It was brother Kornelius Giesbrecht who, in moving words opened his soul for all the other brethren. Furthermore the wife of Dyck spoke, expressing what all the women were feeling in this hour of separation. How much the women have to thank dear sister Kaufman for!

On Sunday evening some 40 young people came to our house to say good-bye to those who had shown them the way of real joy and the way to Jesus with

by Peter Klassen

ON January 30 of this year, the cornerstone had been laid in a solemn service. And now, four months later, on Pentecost, we could already celebrate the dedication of the building. In the basement and in a few other spots there was still a little left to be finished. But since Rev. Neuenschwander and Rev. J. E. Kaufman could spend only Pentecost with us, we rushed the work of building toward the end and temporarily interrupted our work for the celebration.

All Lent a Hand

It really turned out to be a beautiful House of God with basement rooms, which is an innovation for Brazil, two towers, a bell and an organ. We were able to build so beautifully because the Home Mission Board through the American congregations, as well as individual friends granted active support. Then too, many members of both the Conference congregations and also many friends who belong to no church but cooperate with us very closely, revealed a great willingness to sacrifice. We cannot yet report just how much material and how many work hours were contributed by our people. I personally assisted in the construction work in addition to my activity in the Bible School. I regard it as a great gift from the Lord that I was permitted to be among this brave, happy group. While we worked the following quotation from a man of God ran through my mind, "Mutual work binds more firmly than paragraphs and statutes." Young and old, men and women, boys and girls, all lent a hand in accordance with their strength, to the best of their ability.

We Humbly Remember . . . .

Now we all say, "This is our house." And yet we do not say it with arrogance. How could we be arrogant, when we built it for Him who created the world, who regulated it, and will some day re-order it. We humbly remember that human temples will fall into decay but that God builds an eternal home. But we may still rejoice when a beautiful church has been built. That the building was constructed so beautifully, so solidly, so quickly we owe in no small degree to the chairman of our building committee, Rev. David Nikkel, who presided wisely and firmly for 12 years over the Witmarsum settlement, an office from which he resigned about six months ago. This left him free for the work with the church.

Truckloads of Singers

Pentecost drew near. It had been hot and dry for many long weeks. In all the months of building the masons had lost only one day of work due to rain. It was beautiful weather for building. We feared that it might rain on Pentecost. And that is what happened. On Saturday before Pentecost, toward evening, it began to rain. Even if it did not rain hard during the two holidays, yet it made the country roads very difficult. Many friends in the surrounding country could not come. Two truckloads of singers and other friends from Curitiba as well as a bus from Blumenau arrived in time.

In Front of the Locked Church

On the morning of the first day of Pentecost, a large crowd of expectant attendants gathered in front of the locked church. Brother D. Nikkel made a short report on the construction period and, deeply moved, expressed his gratitude towards God and all of his loyal co-workers. After silent prayer and the singing of "Grosser Gott wir loben dich," the church was unlocked. All were seated to the music of the organ. The three choirs from Curitiba, from the M. B. church at Krauel, and from the local General Conference churches, raised their voices in beautiful song. Reverend Abr. Dyck opened the service with greetings, Scripture and prayer. "This is the Day that the Lord hath made" . . . God makes every day. But there are also special days. As God made the first Pentecost, so he has also made this one for us. The writer gave the sermon of the day. He read from Nehemiah, several words from Chapters 8 and 12, for this book had often given guidance and encouragement during the whole construction period. The text, from the story of Pentecost, was "We do hear them speak in our own tongue of the wonderful works of God." We did not build our church in the spirit in which the tower of Babel was erected, (Gen. 11), "to make us a name"; nor in the spirit in which Nebuchadnezzar later rebuilt Babel, "for the honor of my majesty" (Daniel 4); but we have built for Him who after thousands of seemingly useless efforts permitted Christmas, Easter and Pentecost to come and who will some day make everything new, who is the Master Builder of the first and second creation, the Saviour of our era. All honor to Him!

The three elders, A. J. Neuenschwander, John Kaufman and David Koop performed act of dedication. Brother Kaufman led in prayer.

Then Brother Heinrich Martins took the floor and expressed his joy for the day, John 7:37,38, "That great day of the feast." Next it was Brother Neuenschwander's turn to speak and he brought greetings and congratulations from the North. In warm words, that came from the heart into the hearts, he was able to direct our thoughts and feelings toward the central point of this day. As representative of the church in Curitiba, Brother Koop added some remarks. Appropriate poems were recited and repeatedly the choirs rendered lovely songs in honor of our Lord and Saviour.

The noon meal was served in the basement. How grateful we are for these practical rooms in the basement!

Harvest Festival at Pentecost

In the afternoon festivities continued with a Harvest festival. Rev. Johann Boldt in deepest gratitude set the tone for this celebration. Rev. Franz Kroeker spoke many a word of love and of warning. Many a one meditated and asked himself whether he were truly loyal to the Lord. Then Elder G. Rosenfeld, leader of

In the Chaco

Pentecost in Fall

by A. W. Friesen

AS IS custom in many of our churches in the home land to have baptismal services on Pentecost, so it is out here too. Catechetical instructions were given in various villages for several months. Due to the distance from one end of the settlement to the other of about 35 miles it was decided to divide the class into two sections. A group of 43 was baptized on Sunday June 5 in Friedensheim, and the other group of 25 was baptized in Schoenhorst on Tuesday the 7th.

All Night on Way

All night before the appointed day one could see people with horse and ox wagons winding their way to Friedensheim and Schoenhorst. No school house was large enough to hold all the guests that took part in these services. A canvas addition was built to both schools so most people could be under cover. A light rain had set in on Friday already—enough to at least settle the dust—making it very pleasant. Most of both days clouds were floating in the sky, and on Tuesday at Schoenhorst it started to drizzle several times during the day. Friedensheim had the largest crowd due to the fact that it is closer to the old settlement from where many had come.

One Exciting Thing

One exciting thing seemed to be the large truck load of people that came from Philadelphia; too, the M. C. C. jeep was on the scene. At 9:30 the services were opened by the leader Peter Klassen. The choir under the direction of Hans Rempel sang several appropriate songs. The writer then performed the baptism. In the afternoon Holy Communion was observed. About the same schedule was followed at Schoenhorst on Tuesday. Schoenhorst is at the extreme west end of the new settlement so not so many people were there. An estimation of about 400 were at Friedensheim and about 200 at Schoenhorst. We spent 13 hours on the way going and coming from these services. At home it would have been a matter of an hour or two.

Weather and Crops

The season is cooler now then a few months ago. They say it is the fall of the year, but one hardly notices much difference between the seasons. Rain would be very welcome again in most villages. The report is that it has rained in the Old Settlement at places. We have tried to raise a small vegetable garden with seed sent from United States but to date we have had a few radishes and one helping of lettuce. We carry our water about two blocks, so you can imagine that watering a garden is a task in itself. The climate is very extreme here in comparison to what we have in the northern countries.

Courage and Endurance

The people have courage and endurance and do get by with so little. Many a family's entire crop for the year would not fill an ordinary wagon box, and still they talk of their crop. Flour and sugar are very high in price compared to what they get for their cotton, which is their only cash income. Kaffir corn would too be a cash income but this year as well as in most years there is not enough to sell. The average farm or "wirtschaft" consists of from 30 to 40 acres, so you can readily see that very close figuring must be done to make ends meet.

Implements Have Arrived

Driving through the various villages and looking at the crops from the road is very deceiving. You read of some one reporting that it had rained when he had been there and everything looked splendid. A few days after that the situation often is just the contrary. These people need encouragement and financial as well as spiritual help; and will need it in years to come. The implements have arrived and the MCC workers are busy getting them ready for distribution. It will mean a lot to them to have machines to put in their crops instead of by hand. Wishing you all God's blessing, and do not grow weary in the support of our brethren and sisters in South America.

the M. B. church had an opportunity to direct our thoughts toward Him who gives us everything, who bestows harvests, Acts 14, and using several solemn illustrations from the Bible he closed with the warning that harvest might also become a curse. May we so use each harvest that it may bring us not only material but also spiritual profit.

The day had come to a close. In the evening Rev. Neuenschwander spoke to young and old about youth activities and about the call of God to young people, "The Master Calleth for Thee."

Seven Baptized

Te second day (zweit-feiertag) of Pentecost brought to the Mennonite congregation another joyful occasion. Seven young people, 4 boys and 3 girls, were baptized on their confession of faith. This morning Brother David Nikkel greeted us simply and effectively in the words of the 23rd Psalm. It reminded me of the words of a teacher of mine, 'The best sermon is one that makes a familiar Scripture quotation come alive again."

Brother Neuenschwander preached the baptismal sermon. Neither congregation nor baptismal candidates will probably ever forget these fine words of joy and admonition. Brother Kaufman performed the baptism and reception into church membership. Then the congregation partook of the Lord's Supper which was introduced by Brother Koop with an explanation of the significance of the sacrament particularly for the newly baptized.

We then spent several hours in the nearby meeting house of the M. B. church where a song festival was being held. The choirs sang tirelessly. The "Great Hallelujah" and many another song will long go with us and refresh our hearts.

For Brazilian Mennonites

Problems and Blessings

by Heinrich Martins

As many of you may already know, a Bible School class was begun in Witmarsum early this year, under the direction of the Reverend Peter Klassen. Through the gracious support of the Home Mission Board of the General Conference it was possible to carry out this instruction. Brother Klassen devoted to this task all his thorough knowledge of Scripture as well as his rich experience in evangelization. There was keen interest, especially among the young people and many a kernel was strewn in youthful hearts to bring forth eternal fruit later on. At Pentecost, this work which is so significant for the whole settlement was concluded. It would be desirable for these Bible School classes to be repeated frequently for they are a great blessing to the young people, the families, and to the congregations.

Non Resistance Under Test

In one of my first reports from Brazil which I wrote from Rio de Janeiro, when the first transport reached the Brazilian coast on January 4, 1930, I referred to a short conversation I had with a Brazilian newspaper reporter who inquired about our attitude toward military matters. I replied about as follows, "We are above all, grateful that Brazil is accepting us. It shall be our endeavor to become and to remain good citizens of this country. And if we have proved worthy we may expect understanding and co-operation from the Brazilian government in this matter also."

Two young men of Witmarsum, Heinrich Boschmann and Peter Enns had to report for military service because they, having been born here, are regarded as Brazilians. This matter stirred deeply the hearts of the Executive Committee and the churches of the settlement. Everything was done before the proper authorities to obtain for these first two Mennonite youths freedom from compulsory military service. These young brethren were well-grounded in Scripture and firm in their convictions as they fearlessly replied to the cross-questioning to which they were subjected at their examination. The military authorities were convinced of the sincerity of their convictions and after months of anxious waiting the decision of the War Department was: exempt from active service on the basis of Article 141, paragraph 8 of the Constitution of 1946.

This incident was of the greatest significance for the Brazilian Mennonites. For us as well as for all other Mennonites in the world, it corroborates that God is still the same God and that He reveals himself to His own over and over again in a remarkable fashion if one only entrusts everything to Him with a humble heart and reecives from His hand the solution to all ones problems. This incident ought to encourage all of us to become more faithful followers of Jesus.

Building a Church in Four Months!

As I mentioned in one of my last year's reports, the efforts to unite in building a church jointly were in vain. After the Mennonite Brethren built a church for their own use, the General Conference congregations were compelled to think of building a church for themselves. Upon the completion of all the necessary preliminaries, the corner stone could be laid on January 30 of this year. With support from many friends and wellwishers, especially the Home Mission Board, construction was begun and completed largely through donated labor and free delivery of the necessary material, and this not only on the part of the congregations concerned but also of many young families who had until then not yet joined any church. Members of other denominations also helped with the construction. Thus the large, beautiful church could be completed in the record time of four months. Young farmer H. S. personally blasted the 23 cubic meters of rock needed for the fence, cut them into blocks, dragged them to the building site, set them up, and paid from his own pocket 700 cruzeiros ($35) for an assistant, and when another, J. E., donated to the church a piece of land from his farm, 90 meters square, in addition to donating labor in building—these two were examples for many other men, women and young people of both sexes, who unselfishly devoted themselves to the completion of the church in such a short time.

Dedication on Pentecost

The dedication of the new church in Witmarsum was planned for Pentecost. The weather was rainy, the roads got too slippery for autos, and so many guests who would like to have attended the celebration stayed away. Many Catholics and Lutherans, among others, from the vicinity attended.

About nine in the morning a large crowd gathered in front of the locked church. The celebration began with introductory words by the building superintendent Reverend David Nikkel who was formerly for many years the leader of the settlement. He spoke in the following vein:

"It is a great joy to me that so many guests have appeared in order to dedicate this house to the Lord. Even if it could not be completed in every detail, this will not in any way hinder our celebration. I am deeply moved in my heart to think that this fairly beautiful church was completed within four months. The cornerstone laying was held on January 30, and work began the 31st. On June 4 it was completed. In between we had an interruption of three months to put in crops. I am made happy by a two-fold circumstance; on the occasion of the cornerstone laying a double motto was presented, on the basis of Nehemiah, 2 and 3: a) to put themselves and the construction into God's hands; and b) to work whole-heartedly at the the construction in accord with the passage, 'And the people had a mind to work.' What makes me so utterly happy is that both aims were realized. The whole construction period seemed to stand under the favor of God. There were plenty of difficulties and embarrassments, but God always found a way out, and in time. For this we are particularly grateful. And it also came to pass that the people had a mind to work. During the whole time there was never a lack of volunteer workers. Frequently it happened that when four or five reported, 10 or 14 would show up the next day for work. We want to emphasize today not the accomplishments of individuals nor the material aspect of the church building but the inward harmony and unity in the work. Actually, it must be stated that all groups even Lutherans and Catholics participated in some way or other. Above all the North American brethren made the task possible through their financial assistance. We are grateful to all! And also to our members who made many sacrifices. As the inscription on the front of the church puts it, this building does not belong to any specific group of Mennonites but simply to the Mennonites. (Igreja Mennonita). When we now deliver the keys to the church boards in order to dedicate the church for its purpose, may the spirit of Pentecost fill them to the blessing of all of us!"

Then we all sang one stanza of the familiar song, "Grosser Gott wir loben dich." Then followed a season of silent prayer. When the entrance door was unlocked the assembly thronged into the lovely church and was seated. The visiting singers from Curitiba and the neighboring congregations in Witmarsum took their places on the platform. The local singers took their places in the Choir between the towers. After the bells had been rung, the first song was rendered by the Witmarsum choir. To the accompaniment of the organ, the festal gathering sang several stanzas from the song, "Vollkomm'ne Heilge Majestaet." Reverend Abram Dueck, leader of the local Protestant congregation spoke a few words of welcome. Greetings from the United States to the brethren were read here. A few more remarks in conclusion, then the closing prayer, and benediction. The great day of celebration, of special significance not only for the churches in Witmarsum but for all Mennonite churches in Brazil, was drawing to a close.

Offerings were taken both forenoon and afternoon. A missionary auction for which industrious women's hands had well prepared, was attended with great interest. Proceeds of collections and auction were designated for the deficit in the building fund.

The same evening Brother Neuenschwander held a short meeting with the young people.

Second Holiday—Baptism

On the second day of Pentecost there took place the first baptism, for seven young people had decided to become followers of Jesus. The three elders who were present, A. J. Neuenschwander, John Kaufman and David Koop functioned. The actual act of baptism was performed by Brother John Kaufman who also received them into membership in the church. At this service the brethren remained to partake again of the Lord's Supper in order thereby to strengthen their inner fellowship with our Lord and Savior, and to renew the strength of their mutual fraternal affection. Here too, the three elders functioned.

And thus the richly blessed festal days came to a close. God had drawn very near to the souls through His Word and His Spirit. We pray that everything may have served to strengthen weary souls on their pilgrimage of faith, to awaken indifferent hearts, and to encourage the irresolute to follow Christ in earnest.

O Jesus may your name remain
On my heart, imprint it deeply!
May your loyal Jesus-love be deeply
Engraved in heart and mind.
In work and word, in all I do, may only
Jesus and naught else be legible.

so much understanding. At the more intimate meeting before the departure, the Kaufmans received many words of appreciation, first from the head of the Mennonite community of Witmarsum and then from Peter Dyck, the latter emphasized especially how much the Kaufmans had helped us spiritually, so that we have again found the way to the great worldwide Mennonite family. Their whole behaviour and their holiness have shown us much light. Let us be thankful for what has been done!

In Lands "South of the Sun"

by A. J. Neuenschwander

Genesis 37:16 is a fitting verse for our purpose in South America.

ON Saturday, May 21 I arrived at the M. C. C. home in Sao Paulo, Brazil. Rev. and Mrs. John E. Kaufman were directors of this Mennonite Home. About a week was spent in this city. About 50 worshippers from the large city came to the Sunday afternoon worship hour. In connection with the Service a word of welcome was extended to the undersigned and farewell words were spoken to the Kaufman family.

The following week Rev. Kaufman and I went on to Curitiba and took part in Sunday Services, Mrs. Kaufman and son Kenneth came a few days later. Early in June we traveled to Witmarsum, Santa Catarina, for the dedication of the newly built Mennonite Church. Local friends will send in a report of this inspiring event.

Progress in Craul Settlement

The Craul settlement, as this community is known, has made considerable progress in bringing in various types of industry such as saw mills, creamery, sassafrass oil distillery and a starch factory. Farmers are busy most of the year with various crops and their cows. Farming land is not very level and hence much of the work has to be done by hand.

Since there is interest in a new settlement on more level land where farming can be done by machinery, Rev. Kaufman and I in company with Abram Enns went to the southern end of Brazil to look at some farming land.

Uruguay Next

Our next destination was Uruguay, where nearly 750 Mennonites landed from Europe October 28, 1948. We landed in Montevideo Saturday, June 11. In the M.C.C. home, at Vilardebo No. 964, Rev. and Mrs. B. W. Vogt and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jahnke made us feel at home. Worship with the Mennonites was held in the M. C. C. home and 48 attended from the city and vicinity. We were surprised to find that in such a short time so many had already found work of one kind or another in this large city.

The Mennonites in Uruguay were cared for in two camps that had formerly been army camps. Not being used for that purpose what better use could be made for the time being, than to give a home for Mennonite refugees. One camp is located in the city of Colonia approximately 80 miles west from Montevideo, and the other group is situated in Compamento Militar No. 5, Arapey slightly over 200 miles to the North of the Capitol. Worship services were held with both groups.

In Colonia at a Waldensian Church

In Arapey the service was held in the open air. The day was pleasant and they do not have a convenient inside room anyway. Rev. Bruno Ewert presided and Brother Kaufman and I spoke. In Colonia we met for worship in the Waldensian Church. Rev. Ernst Regehr directed the service and we all had a truly blessed worship service together. The church was not very large. The local worshippers knew this and for that reason many brought their own "home made" seats. Every available seat was occupied. The organist remained on his bench because there was no other place available.

During the week we made it our program to see every tract of land that our Mennonite brethren expect to occupy in the not too distant future. We saw four such land tracts.

Evening Devotion at EL PINAR

On Wednesday, June 22, in the afternoon, Rev. and Mrs. W. B. Vogt took the truck and took us all out to a farm of about 500 acres, approximately 20 miles to the east of Montevideo. This farm is owned by a well-to-do doctor of the city, who has built it up in a modern way with model chicken ranch, registered Holland cattle imported from the United States, and two large cistern-like silos. There are several orange and tangerine groves and a fine garden. He has modern machinery to work the ranch.

Five families, a total of 24 persons young and old, are at present hired to operate this farm. In October, they will take it over on rent and will pay the owner a certain per cent in grain etc. They will also have the opportunity to purchase the entire farm if they so desire later on. At present the families also get the vegetables, eggs, milk and meat for their use. Parents told us that to this time, after three month occupancy, the children still express surprise and delight that finally they can eat to their heart's content at the table and have food left over! Mr. G. W. Dyck, the foreman of the ranch, showed us around the farm and buildings.

Immediately after our arrival it was agreed that evening devotions would be held at 6:00 p.m. News of this event was soon transmitted from one home to the other. Promptly at 6:00 p.m. the 24 Mennonites and the six of us gathered in the large Dyck kitchen for the service. Mr. Dyck not only serves the group as ranch foreman, but he also served as leader for the devotional hour. With whole-hearted devotion everyone joined in when the German hymn: "Grosser Gott Wir Loben Dich" was chosen as opening song. The hymn book used was Gesangbuch der Mennoniten copies of which had been provided by the Board of Home Missions. Rev. B. W. Vogt was asked to present the Kaufmans and the writer, to the group. The choir, composed of 18 out of the 24 persons rendered in a splendid manner the hymn, "Lobe den Herrn den Maechtigen Koenig," a young woman directing the singers.

Rev. Kaufman's text was Psalm 149: using as theme: "Sing unto the Lord a new song," and I used Psalm 119:1-9 as the basis for my remarks on the value and worth of reading and studying the Word of God faithfully. Rev. Vogt offered the closing prayer and in closing we all sang, "So Nimm Den Meine Haende." Thus a service came to a close when the presence of the Lord with His Spirit was felt by all.

The trip back to Montevideo seemed shorter in

Jottings

—First Mennonite Church, Paso Robles, California: Dedication Services were held for the new addition to our church and new interior of the main church auditorium. Rev. P. A. Kliewer, Albany, Oregon, held a series of meetings during April 24-May 1st. The Young People's Choir from Reedley, California, under the direction of H. H. Harder gave a concert which was enjoyed by all. The Reedley Male Chorus under the direction of Mr. C. F. Mueller, also gave us a concert. We all enjoyed the octet of young men and boys from the Freeman College and Academy of Freeman, South Dakota. The group was sadly disappointed in California till they arrived in Paso Robles, it had been so hot in the Valley, so they made up for lost sleep and did not even feel the earth quake that was "dished up for their benefit." Miss Teatzke van der Zypp, gave a very interesting report and was enjoyed by all. In the afternoon she was taken to Morro Bay for a dip in the Pacific Ocean. Quite a few of our members were fortunate to be able to attend the Jubilee District Conference at Upland and the reports have been very good.—S. Janzen, Corr.

—A modern five-room apartment on the second floor of the building of 941 Massachusetts Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C., is vacant and for rent. A Brethren, Mennonite or Quaker family in the city of Washington is preferred. The first floor of the building is occupied by the offices of the National Service Board for Religious Objectors. Interested parties should apply at once to NSBRO, 941 Massachusetts Avenue, N. W., Washington 1 D. C.

—Walton Mennonite Church, Walton, Kansas: An appreciative audience was blessed by a sacred concert given by the Lorraine Avenue Mennonite Church Choir of Wichita, the evening of June 26. The annual Sunday School picnic was held in Parkhurst Grove, July 3rd. Rev. Friesen based his message on John 3:16. Rev. Waldo E. Harder of Berean Academy, brought the message on July 10, speaking on "A Life of Faith." Graveside services for the still-born infant of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Foth, were held on Sunday afternoon, June 26.—Ella Voth, Corr.

—Bethel Church, Hydro, Oklahoma: The Oklahoma Retreat will begin July 25, at the Retreat grounds in Hydro. We hope young people from all over the state can attend, get acquainted with fellow Christians, and enjoy the messages that these able speakers have in store for us.—Wilfred Ewy, Corr.

—Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, Pennsylvania Our basement auditorum was filled to capacity for the annual Mother-Daughter banquet. About 200 ladies were present. The speaker was Pearl S. Buck, noted novelist and lecturer who spoke on "The Place of Women in the World Today." She not only encouraged the Mennonite Church on its peace emphasis, but strongly urged women to take a firm stand against Universal Military Training and encroaching militarism. Her message was all the more meaningful to us since one of our deacons. Mr. Lloyd Yoder, and his family are in charge of Welcome House, a home for homeless children of various nationalities, of which Pearl S. Buck is an active sponsor.—Corr.

—Lorraine Ave. Mennonite Church, Wichita, Kansas: J. H. Langenwalter and Mrs. Langenwalter have returned from a three weeks rest in Colorado. During their absence, Harley Stucky, H. A. Fast, and Ervin Goering all of North Newton, brought the morning messages. Our choir, directed by Mrs. Dale Stucky, recently gave a sacred concert in the Walton Mennonite Church. This year our Vacation Bible School is being conducted each Saturday afternoon with thirty-six children attending. Mr. H. J. Andres spoke to us July 14, about his recent trip to Paraguay.—Mrs. W. W. Leisy, Corr.

—Bethel Mission, Winnipeg, Manitoba: Vacation Bible school was held in the church during the first week of July. Sessions were held in both the morning and afternoon to permit the boys and girls to attend the first Manitoba Sunday School Camp the following week. The closing program on July 8th was well attended by the parents and friends. Mrs. W. C. Voth spoke in the church following the Bible school program. She is also to be a guest speaker for three days at the second Sunday school camp. Due to the great interest shown in this new venture the number of applicants so exceeded the expectation of the Committee, that it was necessary to have two camps. May these undertakings be a blessing to all.—Corr.

—Bethesda Mennonite Church, Marion, South Dakota: The M.C.C. Peace Team composed of Harris Waltner, Nathan Hege, and Edward Stoltzfus was in our church July 11. The church choir presented a sacred musical program July 10.—Amelia Becker, Corr.

—Zoar Mennonite Church, Goltry, Oklahoma: Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Sukau were in our church July 17th, in the interests of their work of tract distribution in cabins. They showed two impressive sound films entitled "The Dying Thief" and "The Rapture." Rev. Bergen is taking a group of young people to the Oklahoma Youth Retreat at Hydro, Oklahoma, July 25-30. Rev. Harold Burkholder, now of Omaha, Nebraska, is to conduct a series of meetings in our church, July 31-August 7.—Corr.

EUROPE: U. S. Assistance to Expellees

There has been a growing feeling among leaders in America that the Expellees problem in Germany must be alleviated in order that recovery may take place. The International Refugee Organization has assisted in the resettlement of Displaced Persons—those of non-German ancestry and citizenship who were forced during the war to flee from their homes into Germany or western European countries. The Expellees or Refugees are people of German descent who have been forced from surrounding countries such as Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Estonia and Czechoslovakia, into defeated Germany. For these the IRO does not give assistance. Many of these are fully as needy as those whose ancestry and citizenship make them eligible for assistance.

We as Mennonites are interested in this development in a special way, because of the Danzig and East Prussian Mennonites who are classified in this general category. Thus far, assistance given to these Mennonites has been made possible through MCC resources without outside assistance.

Missions in Indonesia

by William H. Yoder, MCC relief worker

The term "melting pot" could well have been applied to the island of Java centuries before America existed. Java is a curious admixture of races and religions and has served as a well-equipped laboratory for the student of comparative religion and anthropology. Long before man was recording the story of his accomplishments and failures, Java was inhabited and the people were searching for God in their primitive way. They looked for God in the things which they feared and in those which they needed. This animistic worship went through various transitions, and today on the islands of Indonesia approximately two per cent of the people are still animistic in their worship. As the centuries unfolded, various religious waves swept over the islands impregnating themselves successively upon the religions which had gone before. Animism was followed by Buddhism, Brahmanism, and Mohammedanism. Fascinating monuments and remains including the gigantic Buddhist shrine, Boroboerdoer, stand as milestones recording the history of a people's search for God. The migrations of greatest volume flowed from India to the Indies bringing with them a new culture which itself was no longer purely Indian, but had been strongly influenced by the Greeks and Persians. The religious literature of the Vedas and the Puranas of India show a strong similarity to the Homeric poems as do the ancient Indian epics, the Mahabharata and the Ramayana. In turn the religious literature and the epics of the Indies reveal the marked influence of the literature of India. So we see that the culture of Java was influenced by Europe long before the advent of the Portuguese, English, and Dutch.

Advent of Mohammedanism

The advent of Mohammedanism differed widely from the incursions of Buddhism and Brahmanism. The latter were not strongly evangelical and the spread of their philosophy was a gradual and assimilating process. The spread of Mohammedanism was quite otherwise. Mohammedanism entered via two channels. The Arabian traders brought it directly from the land of Mohammed and the Mohammedanized Indians brought it with them. The Mohammedan invaders were fanatical in their belief and intensely evangelical and this, for the most part, was the first contact of the heathen with an organized religion. The religions which had gone before had made inroads only in small areas of Java and north Sumatra. The people were rapidly won for the prophet. In some areas resistance was met, but in these cases the zealous followers of Islam took to the sword and soon the last vestige of Hinduism on Java was taken and the Hindus had either been converted or had fled to the small island of Bali just east of Java. Today on Bali and Lombok, the only places in the Indies, the people are still worshipping the Hindu idols. Ninety per cent of the population of modern Indonesia is Mohammedan; the remaining ten per cent being animists, Hindus, Buddhists, or Christians.

Early Christian Missions

With the coming of the European came the priest and missionary. Christianity found the shell of Mohammedanism to be a hard wall. In three and one-half centuries of intensive work little progress has been made as can be seen from the above percentages. Exceptions were the areas of North Celebes, some of the islands of Muluccas, Timor and Toba-Batakland on the west coast of Sumatra. These areas were largely heathen when they were contacted by Christianity. Toba-Batakland has probably the strongest Christian church in the Indies today. These people less than one hundred years ago were cannibalistic savages. Among the first missionaries to enter this area were two Americans, Lyman and Munson. They were killed and eaten. Today over their grave a stone bears the following inscription in the Batak language, "The Blood of Martyrs is the Seed of the Church."

How many of us who have centuries behind our Christian heritage would have the strength to stand before such a test?

At the turn of the eighteenth century there was an increasing feeling among the Mennonites in Holland that they should shoulder their responsibility in bringing Christ to the far-off islands of the East Indies. In 1847 they formed an organization dedicated to the spread of the Gospel in the Dutch overseas possessions. The area chosen was the district of Japara-Rembang on the north coast of Java, and Pieter Jansz began work there in 1851. This area is the center of one of the most fanatical cults of Mohammedans in the Indies. Hospitals, clinics, and schools were built to help meet the needs of the people, but here, too, progress was very slow for the people were afraid to be associated with the Christians. Often the home of a convert would be burned or his family killed.

SELL THE HANDBOOK TO THE HYMNARY

Local young people's societies have realized by July 13, 1949, $103.05 as their share of the sales of the Handbook while the Young People's Union has received $68.70 as its share. By selling the Handbook in your church, you can do two good things at once. Raise funds for your society and get a valuable book into the hands of your people deepening the appreciation and love for good music.

Todays Revolution

When the Japanese invaded Java in 1942, several of the missionaries lost their lives at the hands of the Indonesians and many of the buildings and institutions were destroyed. During the twentieth century there has been an increasing sentiment among the Indonesians for independence. This sentiment was made manifest only in a few instances prior to the war, however, among the intellectuals and students a strong feeling smoldered and the Dutch Government felt it necessary to banish these Nationalist leaders to prison islands. This underlying sentiment furnished the cultivated ground into which the Japanese sowed their propaganda. As the nationalistic sentiment became stronger, the feeling of suspicion and distrust on the part of the rest of the Indonesian population increased against the Christians. The Christians had been especially close in their relationship with the Dutch and their very religion had come from Holland, so there was a tendency on the part of the Nationalists to believe that the Indonesian Christians would be pro-Dutch in their political sympathies. In order to combat this feeling the Indonesian Christians were extremely careful and took the facade of being very anti-Dutch. I had several experiences in the Republic when the Indonesian Christians refused to receive material aid from Holland churches when at the same time the Ministry of Social Affairs of the Republic would have gladly accepted it. In actuality the Christians had little to fear from the Republican leaders and the pure Nationalists. The cause for fear lay with a few fanatical Mohammedan leaders who used the Nationalist issue as a cover to arouse their followers against the Christians. From these people the Christians suffered terribly. There are many instances of Christian families being burned alive in their homes. I have talked with many native Christians who had been confronted in the dark of the night by wild-eyed Mohammedans with drawn swords and told to deny their faith or die. The weak denied their faith; the strong either died or are carrying the deep scars of sword upon their bodies now. An outstanding example is that of my friend, Adnan Rangkutz, who carries a scar across the front of his face through his nose half way to the ears. He refused to deny his faith. How many of us who have centuries behind our Christian heritage would have the strength to stand before such a test?

Uncertainty But Hope

Since the recent police action, the position of the Christian in the more remote areas has been made more tense. Many of them feel that they dare not attend church now for fear that they might be misunderstood. They live in constant terror that the guerillas will sweep down out of the hills, take the lives of their loved ones and burn their houses. The Christian community forms a very, very tiny island in a huge sea of Mohammedanism. Those who have stood the test and remained faithful are today much stronger than they were before. They have learned to live calmly in the face of danger, and they have learned to rely upon God for their every need.

It is most encouraging for us to note that during this time of severe test and trial, the number of members in the Mennonite Mission Field has increased. The increase has not been large, but it is very important, for those who have held to the faith and those who have accepted the faith during this time can truly be numbered among the faithful.

It may soon be possible for the M.C.C. to open a relief project in the area of the Dutch Mennonite Mission Field. This would be a wonderful opportunity to help our Indonesian brethren to realize more fully the meaning of brotherhood and the love of Christ and to help their Mohammedan neighbors to have a better understanding of Christianity and the philosophy of love.

We believe that no work done in the name of Christ is done in vain. The worker sows the seed and God brings forth the harvest in due time. Mission work in the Indies has been most discouraging. Down through several centuries able men have given their lives to the mission with small results in the terms of converts. However, we have no scale on which we can measure the intangible influences which have affected the thoughts and actions of people as a result of their contact with Christianity.

Voluntary Service

Life in Harlem

by Joanna Bowen, East Harlem Parish, New York City

(The following presentation of the people in Harlem's slums comes from private letters written by Joanna Bowen as she works with children of the slums in East Harlem Parish, a Protestant mission in the most crowded section of New York's slums. Ed.)

"Getting used to the dirt and filth of New York is a part of our adjustment,—learning to know what a struggle these people have. It is primarily an economic handicap—and what a tortuous squirrel cage it is, this lack of money—no soap, no room to breathe, no decent homes, no nutritional food, therefore no mental ability, inability to hold jobs—what desperation—to know you aren't good enough to hold the most menial job, to see your children run wild in the streets—no other place for them! They are everywhere underfoot playing hop-scotch or gangster—all this—and topped with an apathy which grips them completely in its dangerous hold.

"They've found that nothing ever was of any good to them, so what's the use of trying! I'll never think of New York again as I used to in terms of glamor and cultural heights—now I see little Rosita and Sissy and Rudy and Al—dirty, black skinned, big, dark-eyed, adorable children of the slums. Last night I spent an hour playing and singing with them and the beam in their black eyes was worth all the dirt I was carrying around on my tired feet and my clothes.

In a vacant lot outside the store front church they were showing free movies as one way of getting the children's attention and interest in a church program, and someone threw bricks and water down on them from the roof of the apartment house next door. One little girl was hit right on the forehead. I picked her up. What these people need more than anything else is to know that somebody cares. Their most usual contact with adults is to be beaten.

"Strange, but I no longer fear this section as I did before I came. Instead of seeing potential thieves and pickpockets, I see people who are ill, unhappy, incomplete, uneducated, who need understanding and love.

"The parish here is trying to develop a community spirit, a miraculous endeavor, but seemingly hopeless. These people are too ill, too diseased, too hungry, too despairing to care about others in their neighborhood. They are too crushed down by their environment and inability to surmount their obstacles to care whether the children have a play lot. They are too used to the dirt to care anymore whether or not the children eat it, and wear it and sleep in it.

"It's a rare family where they all sit down together to eat or where any affection is displayed between members. It's dog eat dog—survival of the fittest—for what? To be crushed down by their parents, made into dope fiends or mental cases—.

"This is our problem, not theirs alone. I can't think of leaving them and not being here to help. Already I feel it has meant more to me than a whole year of college. The work is wonderful. I'm completely sold on it. I've had the thrill of a life-time hearing these children sing in the street some of the songs I taught them.

Among Hopi Indians in Arizona

by Dora Reimer, Hopi Mission, Arizona

"This is the work of God that ye believe on Him whom He hath sent." John 6:29.

In Hopiland the work of the missionaries is to bring the message of Salvation to the Indian that he might understand and believe on Him whom He hath sent." During this summer there have been five girls from different states helping teach Bible School and Sunday school among the Hopis of Arizona. We have tried to fulfill the Lord's command, "Feed my lambs," Jno. 21:15b, by trying to plant the words of Christ deep into the Hopis' hearts. Some have responded and told us they would like to become Christians. They find it very difficult to give up their heathen dances and "pow-wows" which is Satan's way of keeping them in darkness and sin lest they come and be converted.

We have become acquainted with our missionaries here by enjoying their hospitality, living in their homes and working with them in giving out the Gospel. They have also taken us to see many scenic and interesting places.

One evening we saw a beautiful sunset from an Indian mesa called "Walpi." Here the Hopi lives in rock houses high on a rock mesa from which we look thousands of feet down into a deep canyon. At one place a lamb had been butchered that day and was hanging to be skinned near the Indian's door. We noticed pieces of meat hanging on lines by the houses to dry. The Hopi seemed more heathen here than at other villages. Rev. Wiebe took us to see this village.

While teaching D.V.B.S. at Hotevilla one day Mrs. Goosen took us into the home of a Hopi mother to deliver a baby bundle. We found this lady living with her grandmother and two little children all in one large room. She said her husband was working in California. The joy and smile on her face was reward enough for the bundle. She listened very attentively as we read to her from God's Word. We saw the Kochena dolls adorning her walls which represent different gods to the Hopi. We told her of the one and only God our Father who would be her Father too if she accepted Christ His Son as her Saviour. She had no Bible in her home. The missionaries would like to place the Bible in such homes. Would you like to share in this blessed work for Christ by sending Bibles to the missionaries so they will have them to give?

At present I am spending two days with the Kliewers at Moencopi. Wish you could see the lovely scenery. The canyon cliffs are red and glow in the evening sunset. They have gardens down in the wash and since there is flowing water things are growing green and tall.

The Mormons have started a Church which is hindering our Mennonite missionaries' work here. There is one couple and their children who claim to be Christians and often attend Church services. At the Wednesday night service which I was priviledged to attend there were a number of women with babies and quite a group of children present. They took part and seemed to be glad to hear the Word.

Next week the Albert Jantzens are coming to work with the Kliewers, and Miss Baerg in conducting a Bible camp for Hopi girls to be held in the foothills near Flagstaff. We expect about 50 girls from the different villages to attend. The Voluntary Service Workers who are to help as cabin leaders are: Miss Ruby Enns of Meade, Kansas; Miss Aganetha Penner of Mountain Lake; and Miss Dora Reimer of Reedley, California. We hope to have a wonderful spiritual time with these Indian girls and hope there will be definite decisions for Christ. While we are at Camp, Janice Welty and Ruth Haenny of Bluffton will be busy with the Wiebes teaching their last week of Bible School at Old Oraibi.

I am glad that the M.C.C. has given me the opportunity to serve here among the Hopi. It has been a grand experience. I hope you'll all remember to pray for the Hopi people and the missionaries who try to win them to Christ.

In Christ, Dora Reimer

Youth Team, Comins, Mich.

This year the youth team is unusually composed. No—we don't consider ourselves unusual. We are:

Bertha M. Millar (leader) Kitchener, Ont.
Jane Cressman, Kitchener, Ont.
Helen Critchison, Kitchener, Ont.
Ruth Eby, Kitchener, Ont.

That's right—you've guessed what is unusual. We're all from the same place and from the same church, Stirling Mennonite.

These first two weeks we are spending in Fairview, Michigan, working at Comins and McKinley. These places are villages with populations of about one hundred. The white pine cabins, the many surrounding lakes and rivers, and the daring deer attract tourists and lovers of rugged country.

On Sunday two of us helped in the Sunday School at Comins and two of us helped at McKinley. Our trio with Helen as accompanist, Ruth and Jane as our piano team, were used as a joyful noise feature throughout the week.

This Sunday the Comins church members brought their lunch and enjoyed a pot-luck dinner together. The members and friends engaged in a time of fellowship, after which the afternoon program was presented by the Youth Team.

A survey of Fairview and Comins and surrounding area is being made to determine whether or not the residents have any church affiliation. It will give the minister, Joe Atherton, helpful information regarding his field of service.

Week after next we will be in Topeka, Indiana. You'll be hearing from us then.

Meeting The Seven Chicago Workers

by Elmer Neufeld, Chicago, Illinois

It was with a lot of eagerness and a bit of anxiety that LaVera (my wife) and I left Inman for Chicago on June 22, three days before most of the other unit members were to arrive. Going with us by car was Mary Ann Kaufman of McPherson, one of the five Kansans now in our group. Seemingly almost by chance we located the Mennonite Mission on South Rockwell without any trouble. LaVera and I are living in two rooms above the Mission, and just go downstairs for D.V.B.S. Thanks to Erna Friesen, Mary Ann and the other girls found a home (and usually a meal) waiting for them at the Seminary.

Arriving Sunday were Vivian Brockmueller and Cleva Mae Schrag who have been enlightening us Kansans with their "Freeman" culture.

The first week of our stay in Chicago was largely orientation to the greatness and to the "wickedness" of the Windy City. We were impressed by this contrast after an evening's drive along Lake Michigan to the beautiful Buckingham Fountains, followed by a drive along Madison St., the "skid row" of Chicago—one of Hell's main streets.

We were fortunate in being asked to take part in the Young People's Retreat of the Central Conference, which met at the Seminary during the 4th of July weekend. With them we went sightseeing and also enjoyed discussions on "Immortality—Medals and Scars" was the climax of the retreat; we will not be judged by the medals and the honors we receive here on earth, but by the scars received in Christian service.

Irene Zerger, a recent graduate of Bethel and at home in Moundridge, joined us on Saturday, the 2nd, just in time for Bible School opening. Irene and Barbara Miller, who arrived on July 9, were both detained by summer work at Bethel. (Verna Voth, a member of the Student in Industries group, has been helping in Barbara's place.) Barbara, our 5th Kansan, hails from Hesston.

Five of our members have spent a year or more as public school teachers, and the other two are prospective pedagogues, giving them valuable experience and training for their work in D.V.B.S.

spite of the rain, because our hearts were warmed and we rejoiced that we could share the good things of the Lord with these souls.

On Our Way

Since then we have visited the Mennonites in Buenos Aires, Argentina and had the joy of holding a worship service with the 65 or 70 Mennonites who attended. A Committee was selected by the group which is to gather all the names and correct addresses and plans are to be made for more regular services in the future.

Mennonites in South America are handicapped by not having their own house of worship; in Buenos Aires we were permitted to use a Baptist Church. We went about 85 miles out into the country to visit the Bragado Bible School, conducted by the American Mennonites.

Yesterday, June 29th, we arrived in Asuncion, Paraguay. We expect to spend a month in this country, visiting the different Colonies and attending the Mennonite Ministers Conference in the Chaco July 14-17.

We have been told that many friends remember us in their prayers. For this we are truly grateful. Remember the work here.

NEW YORK CITY.—Forty-two new foreign missionaries and 13 new home missionaries and deaconesses were commissioned by the Methodist Board of Missions and Church Extension. CHINA. All eight Christian colleges in communist-occupied areas in China are continuing their regular work with no essential changes in curriculum or personnel, according to information received by the United Board for Christian Colleges in China. The report says that these institutions "are coming through the turnover relatively unscathed, and there is as yet no evidence that they will not be permitted to continue." Requests have been received from two universities for new teachers to be sent to the field in time for the beginnig of the fall semester. These requests indicate that American teachers are not unwelcome in communist territory, and that administrators believe such personnel will be permitted to enter the country.

OCEAN CITY, NEW JERSEY.—The Church of the Brethren in its recent annual meeting asked individuals and congregations throughout its brotherhood to "welcome people of all races into the membership of all organizations of the church." It further urged them to make "fellowship in pews and in meals fully available to all."

ANNOUNCEMENT

PETER AND ELFRIEDA DYCK will speak and show pictures of the Mennonite refugee movement at the Souderton, Pennsylvania High School Sunday, August 14, 7:30, E.D.T.

Editorials

"YOUNG PEOPLE WHO GAVE THEIR LIFE TO CHRIST at the retreat are encouraged to enlist in the class to prepare for church membership." This is the gist of an announcement found in a General Conference church bulletin as stated by one of our pastors for his congregation. This announcement reveals two very encouraging signs. First, we are seeing to it that our retreats are more than just another 4-H or Boys Scout camp (though there are some values even in these secular camps). But a church camp ought to be much more. In the church camp the churches have a most unusual opportunity of concentrating a wealth of experience in worship, study of God's Word, recreation, fellowship, and focusing the whole experience upon Jesus Christ, bringing young people face to face with Him who is the source of salvation and the power for service. Surely when secularism and communism are making aggressive appeals to win the loyalties of our young people, the Church has no business to hold back for fear it is imposing something upon others. It is our obligation that Jesus Christ be presented in such a way that people will see that the very knowledge of Him presents to them an inescapble choice. Second, there is obvious from the above announcement that our churches do not have such a rigid schedule of Christian Education that a youngster who makes a decision in a retreat in June has to wait until the following fall or spring to have that decision followed up with further instruction and baptism. It is good that we are coming to make the retreat an integral part of the total Christian Education program of the church, thus building around it. That youngster that grows up in the church without attending a retreat is missing a vital phase of his whole Christian training.—J.J.E.

THE MOST TREASURED possessions of life are among the most intangible. When the foreign students at Bethel College made the trip to Bluffton for the foreign student conference there last spring they were heard to deplore the fact that there is so little singing in the United States. In Europe there is apparently much more of this activity. When the writer had occasion to attend the Canadian District Conference at Sardis some weeks ago, he heard an announcement made to the effect that the singing was poor and that it should be revitalized, an announcement which came almost at the moment that this observer from the United States was in the process of overcoming the impact of the thrill of hearing such inspiring music! They were dissatisfied with a type of music that thrilled an outsider. Then, in the course of reading the accounts of what a tremendous place the great Chorales have in the life of our brethren who are in the process of building up communities in South America, one has the feeling that in the United States we have all but lost a true sense of the eternal value of song. In the book of Revelation, which to a large extent reflects the life of danger of the first century Christians there is interspersed song after song for the spiritual nourishment of people who have had material things swept away from them. Can it be that we in America have succumbed so far to the materialism, secularism, and the passion for things and positions that we are in danger of losing something that is the very "life and blood" of our spiritual natures?—J.J.E.

BEING FED CONSISTENTLY WITH A DIET of "hate-the-Russians" it is happening again that our foreign relations and our national foreign policy is causing people to be unchristian. Of course, we dare not condone the evils of the Russian system or any other system as far as that is concerned. However, the news we are reading and the impressions that the present foreign policy is making on the country as a whole is causing us to hate people—people that are precious in God's sight if we still believe in the infinite value of even one human soul. The Christian, by virtue of Calvary itself, dare not go on the assumption that there is nothing left to do but to arm to the teeth.

Our immediate reaction to an article like the one in this issue entitled "From Behind the Iron Curtain" may be a revelation as to how far, in our own thinking, we have gone in swallowing the hate-philosophy again. Had anything favorable been written about the Russians seven or eight years ago we would have probably taken it in stride; but now many readers will probably be horrified to see this in print. The writer of this article is not blind to the godless nature of Communism nor to the possibilities that may yet develop in China. Furthermore the article was written about three months ago—all of which needs to be taken into account.

But this message ought to speak to the Church in two ways. First, the Church must see that her hesitancy in devoting all resources possible to the missionary enterprise, her luke-warmness in presenting the absolute claims of Christ upon people is leaving a vacuum that Communism is successfully appealing to in many areas with a gospel, false though it be, yet demanding the kind of absolute loyalty that should be given to Christ. Second, it will do the Church and Christians no good to fall in with the hate-policy which is being engendered. There is no basic spiritual progress in trying to overcome one shortcoming by action which itself is sin. The important business of the Church in our time and of any nation that calls itself Christian is to love the enemies of Christ into the Kingdom even at the cost of dying in the process. That is Calvary's only way!—J.J.E.

The Touch of the Master's Hand

by Irene Tanaka

IT was just an old rock lying on the mountainside, stumbled over by travelers who passed that way; but one day all Europe was thrilled by the magnificent statue of Moses, a work of art wrought by Michelangelo, the great painter and sculptor. The touch of the master hand had transformed the old rock into an object of matchless beauty and grandeur.

Just a Small Chap

He was just a small chap, unwanted and abused at home, made to do the work for the family; but when Marcos began attending the services at the Mission in Anolaima his little heart, starved for love and tempered by suffering, eagerly drank in the glorious message of God's infinite love. Gladly he accepted Christ as his personal Saviour; and it was a happy Marcos who enrolled in the Mission school. Four months of study and progress flew swiftly by. Then one day, in a fit of rage, the father took the boy out of school because, in a scuffle with another boy in school, Marcos had torn his only good suit. The other boy's apology and the mending of the suit would not appease the wrath of the father. Bitter as the experience was to Marcos, he won the victory anl came to the Wednesday evening service with a beaming face and chose the seat beside the boy with whom he had scuffled. The transforming power of the Master's Hand is evident in that life, bringing joy out of sadness, victory in tribulation, moulding him for the skies.

Paulina—A Hard Time Deciding

Should she sacrifice personal pride and continue in school, or should she quit school and have some very necessary dental work done? Paulina had a hard time deciding. Seventeen years old, she had solicited a business course at the Mission early in the school year; but the missionary in charge, Miss Alice Bachert, had tactfully pointed out the value of finishing her elementary education before trying to specialize. Paulina decided to follow her advice and enrolled in the mission school. Although several years older than the rest, she buckled down to her studies. However, when the opportunity presented itself to have her dental work done, Paulina, a rather attractive looking girl, found it hard to make her decision; but she was happy when wisdom won over vanity. Humbly she returned to her studies.

It was not often that Paulina could attend the services, for her father, a brutal, ignorant man, insisted on the family being at home of evenings when he was not away on business. However, one night at Easter time when a message was given on "the Broad and Narrow Way," she made her decision to follow her Lord in the "Narrow Way." Soon after, her parents took her out of school because her help was needed in the home. Nevertheless, the Master's touch had already been felt in her life; and by His grace and as God's people pray for her, one day she will be like Him, for she will see Him as He is.

Tht First Time He Had Heard

Alvaro listened wide-eyed to the story of God's wondrous love for man and His sacrifice for them that they might be saved. This was the first time he had heard the Gospel story in its simplicity and truth. Alvaro had been placed in the mission school by his grandfather, a prosperous man from one of the best families in the pueblo. Fun-loving and intelligent, Alvaro was impressed with the message. Later, in the service in the young people's society, he publicly made a decision for Christ.

An Unsolicited Public Defense

"Senorita, they're going to make a speech in the plaza to defend the school!" Two excited children were telling Miss Bachert of the public defense, unsolicited, that would be made for the Mission by one of the political leaders of the town in answer to the many slanders and threats issued from the Romanist pulpit against the missionary work. Alvaro and his sister, Mariela, were elated over this friendly gesture of the political party, and soon after she, too, was matriculated in the school.

The One Command of the Virgin Mary

A clever, sensible girl, Mariela went straight to the head of her class, and also assumed leadership in school activities. Very devoted to the Virgin Mary, she listened seriously to the explanation given that the Virgin Mary had left only one command to follow: "Whatsoever He saith unto you, do it" (John 2:5) and that Jesus' invitation was to love and serve Him. Later on, Mariela also made a public profession of faith. Both she and her brother had felt the touch of the Master's hand, and had opened their heart's door to Him.

Will You Pray?

Will you pray for these young folk that the transforming touch of God might continue unhampered in their lives until they "are changed into the same image (of the Lord) from glory to glory even as by the Spirit of the Lord." Of the twenty-one children enrolled in school, sixteen are saved having made a decision for Christ either before or since school opened.

Through the AMERICAN FRIENDS SERVICE COMMITTEE

Yenching University
Peiping, China
May 9, 1949

(In a covering note to this letter, the writer emphasized the fact that this is merely the attempt of a middle-aged foreigner to set down personal impressions after six months in Communist-controlled North China. The writer realizes Yenching is in a peculiarly favorable position for cooperation with the best elements in the new regime and writes only of what the writer has seen.)

DEAR Friends:

It is much harder to give any accurate account of the reactions here to the new regime for we are still in the midst of such rapid change it is difficult to form objective judgments or to predict future developments with any certainty. I can write only of the impressions made upon us by our personal experiences during the last five months.

The first almost startling impression has been the real sense of liberation which has come to the student world. This is a young people's revolution and the skill which the Communists have shown in enlisting not only the sympathy of the students but their active support in work for the new order has given our young folk the opportunities so long denied them under the old regime of taking a responsible share in social reconstruction. For the first six weeks of our liberation, the students of Yenching and Tsing Hua were busy in all their spare time and more in preparing to help with the taking over of Peiping. When the siege at last ended they spent a week in the city working hard and apparently very efficiently to help the city people understand the friendliness and new social attitudes of the People's Army of Liberation. (Of this we ourselves have had most encouraging first-hand experience. Never in all our long and intimate experience of troop movements have we known such personal discipline, such real friendliness, and consideration for the village people as these liberators have shown.)

Stern Personal Discipline

Strict, even stern, personal discipline is another striking characteristic of the new regime and its effects are shown by the promptness with which at the end of the week's assignment in the city, the students returned to the University to take their postponed winter exams.

You may be surprised that a Christian missionary can write so enthusiastically about the Communists but I have done so quite deliberately because I want you to feel something of the joyous sense of freedom and new opportunities for service which their coming has brought to so many young people in North China. It has been experience which I had not in the least expected and it must be included in the picture alongside the darker shadows which are so much better known. For there are shadows, of course, and some of the mature students are becoming aware of them.

There is no doubt that they have been increasingly successful in the rural areas with their programs of land reform, especially since they have abandoned the violence of their earlier methods, but they say themselves they have had little experience of city life and are frankly alarmed at the prospect of having to take over so many densely populated areas in so short a time. One of their greatest problems is the provision of highly skilled workers for the administration of large cities and industrial undertakings. Their great strength so far has been in the stern discipline and high standards of their central group, like the early Mohammedans. Can they maintain that discipline when they have to take over large numbers of industrialists and officials accustomed to the ways of the old regime?

What About the Christians?

Some of the more fundamental issues are illustrated by the developments in the Christian Fellowship. So far we have had no restrictions put on our general Christian practice. Sunday Services and morning chapels continue as usual and we celebrated Easter with eagerness and a special sense of joy and thanksgiving. Four students were received into Church membership here or in city Churches on Easter day and others are being prepared for baptism at Whitsuntide. The difficulties we are facing do not lie in the realm of organization at all but much deeper changes of attitude in the people around us.

Prevailing political fashions have swept a considerable number of vaguely well-intentioned young people away from the Christian Fellowship into Communist groups and we are left with a much smaller, more earnestly concerned group of thoughful Christians and inquirers who are now beginning to realize much more clearly than before the seriousness of Christian commitment. That process in itself is no cause for serious concern, rather the reverse, but a serious question arises as to where new inquirers are coming from in the future, especially as political eagerness in classmates brings a good deal of pressure against association with Christian work. Much more serious than this is the really powerful appeal of Communist action. They are admirably organized, skilled in group work and students are not given to being critical of party line material, but this sense of new freedom, challenge to personal discipline and especially the new opportunities for service are an attraction far more positive than merely skilful indoctrination.

Repentance on Our Part

Some of our Christian friends who have been working with them now for many months come back to us saying, "Here in this Communist work with

When a Cleansed Leper Returns

by Eva Pauls

Dear Friends:

GREETINGS with Phil. 3:10, "That I might know him and the power of His resurrection." As we learn to know the Lord more and more and forget ourselves He is able to use us to His honour and glory.

Where Should They Go?

The medical staff of the Leprosy Hospital is constantly changing. Some drop out because of misconduct, others are discharged as arrested cases so new ones have to be trained. Several months ago a number of women patients from the leprosy home were discharged as arrested cases. Among them were three of my nurses. It was not only a day of rejoicing but also a day of weeping. A number of them did not care to go home. They knew what they might have to face. When they became afflicted with leprosy they left home perhaps never to return. They gave their husbands permission to take other wives. Now where should they go? Others were happy to return to their families. It will not be easy for them to live a Christian life. They will have opposition and perhaps persecutions. In some villages they will be the only Christians. So pray for them.

Vacation Bible Schools in India

During the hot season a daily vacation Bible school was held for the children. A number of them were from the leprosy home and others were from the healthy boardings. The attendance was around 70. Three teachers were in charge. They studied the Gospel of John, learned songs and Bible verses. The children enjoyed it a great deal and we trust that lasting blessings will have been received.

The Sewing Class

We also started a sewing class. The majority of the 200 women cannot sew. Many of course are physically unable. The purpose of the sewing class is not only to teach sewing but to tell them Bible stories, teach Scripture verses and some songs. The girls take a great interest in learning to sew and cut. At present they are piecing a quilt and making some dresses. The other women do not care a great deal. Some days we have around 50 women but we hope that the interest will grow and the numbers increase.

The general health in the home has been quite good. The hospital was rather empty during the hot season. At present we have 6 patients suffering from tuberculosis besides having leprosy.

At present I am enjoying a' vacation up here among the Nilgiri hills in Kodaikanal. The 50-mile trip up the mountain by bus was beautiful. The breeze got cooler and cooler as we went up and up 7000 feet. The hillsides are covered with green shrubbery, flowers and trees. It appears to be a quiet and peaceful place and we look forward to enjoying the rest and the many outdoor walks that we can take around the hill sides. May it strengthen us again for the tasks ahead.

Prayerfully yours,

the villagers we have found a far deeper experience of the life of loving service than we ever did in Christian circles." The comments on that are perhaps obvious—the need for repentance on our part that our practice of personal dedication and service in the past has been so lukewarm and, more positively, that in meeting tests of long endurance Christianity brings resources of strength which have never failed—but in between these two positions stands the stark fact that many young men and women are being helped by the Communists from self-centredness to a richly rewarding life of service.

How are we who are Christians going to meet this challenge? Surely neither by wholesale condemnation nor by unquestioning identification of ourselves with this program. Personally I have never felt more strongly the challenge of the Christian Pacifist position to go forward looking earnestly and expectantly for "that of God in every man" and willing to take the risks of day-to-day actions based on comradeship in the search for ways of life in which "evil is weakened in us and the good raised up." But it is much easier to quote these well-known phrases than it is to make the constant adjustments to the revolutionary changes which affect almost everything in life except the superficial surface of things which remains quite surprisingly normal, a visitor from the west could quite easily spend several hours on this campus without realizing that anything has changed in the last two years and even for us who are living here all the time, that superficial normality can be very deceptive. All of us who are living in China now, Christians, Communists, and many bewildered, often frightened, people in between, need your prayers more than ever before. It is a great privilege and great responsibility to be set in the midst of a revolution and for us westerners especially so, as we find ourselves in the very unusual position of watching and even to some extent sharing in the great stirrings of new life about which it is so difficult to get information "outside the curtain."—Published by permission of the International Centers American Friends Service Committee 20 South 12th Street Philadelphia 7, Pennsylvania.

At Weatherford, Oklahoma

An Interracial Retreat

by Waldo E. Harder

DURING the first week of June it was our privilege to be present at the Oklahoma Indian and Missionaries Camp Meeting, held in the church yard of the Longdale church. Learning to know the three missionary families, the Alfred Wiebe's of Canton, the Arthur Friesen's of Clinton, and the Herbert Dalke's of Weatherford, and becoming acquainted with a number of Cheyenne and Arapahoe church leaders and young people, provided an insight into Christian work in this field that was a rich blessing to our lives.

First—Prayer

The opening service, a prayer meeting of missionaries and local Christians, set the tone of the camp program with humble searching of heart and invoking the Lord's blessing during the week to come.

The plan of the camp, an enlargement of last year's program, included three days of young people's camp followed by three days of all age-groups. The spiritual program planned for these days as similar to that of many Bible camps and retreats throughout the country, but it was unique in that it provided a period for the Mennonite missionaries and Indians to gather for fellowship and Bible study. The mornings were spent in classes, opening with a devotional period led by a native Christian and continuing with Christian life studies, Chapel, life of Christ, and character studies. Afternoons were given over to handwork and recreation with an evangelistic service each evening. During the latter part of the week afternoon meetings of church leaders and missionaries were held for discussing church problems leadership, and Christian witnessing in home, community, and church.

Tents Were Pitched

Arriving by truck on the first morning of camp, a group of some fifteen young people, covered with dust from the sixty-mile ride, alighted to begin a rich week of experiences. Cots, suitcases, bedding, and tents were unloaded and the tents set up. The efficient manner in which Guy Heap-of-Bird supervised the process could well be a lesson to any man. Tent Pins or trees, which ever was nearest, were used to securely fasten down the temporary dwellings.

Made Things Itchy

Meals were served with the same proficiency except the one occasion when stragglers did not come in until sometime after the bell had rung. After the prayer a line formed for soup, bread, fruit, etc. There were variations of the diet, but only when the missionaries insisted on fixing meals "white man's style." Meals eaten and a brief session of Kangaroo Court held with a complaint against a missionary for "keeping the meat fork after helping herself," each camper washed his own dishes in readiness for the next meal. The missionary families had their own tents on the church yard, enjoying the outdoor life with the others, though the chiggers and mosquitoes did their share to make things somewhat itchy.

The afternoon handwork period was helpful with weaving, simple woodwork, glass and textile painting being some of the activities provided. Beautifully made belts, towels, and pictures were souvenirs taken home.

In Sports—Equal Proficiency

The sports specialty seems to be softball, with a proficiency in the game among both boys and girls seldom found in most communities. An introduction of ping pong was an interesting innovation to many.

To Fail in This!

But the above-described program is a mere outer shell which would have been totally ineffective apart from a centeredness in the Lord Jesus Christ, His death on the Cross, and His resultant claim upon human lives. The fruit of a Christian camp should always find its expression in a testimony such as "I received Christ in the meeting the other evening," or in the evident working of the Holy Spirit in conviction of sin, in a vow of consecration of self, ambitions, and desires, and in a walk with the Lord Jesus Christ that bears unmistakable proof of an experience of His saving grace. To fail in this is to render the whole program worthless, nay worse than that, it has become a curse.

. . . . Just Once?

After one brief week, one is deeply impressed with the need for earnest and faithful prayer on the part of Christians in the home churches who can and do pray. These Christian Indians are our brothers and sisters in Christ, but are surrounded with customs and temptations quite foreign to most of us. The tendency to follow the path of least resistance, the love for sensual pleasures, the rapid taking on of "white man's vices," and the Peoti religion and Mormonism creeping in, plus the cares of this world that prove problems to all of us, make this matter of living an "out and out" Christian life most difficult. God has given a command, "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ"; this is not optional. Have you prayed just once this year for these missionaries, for these Christians struggling to live a consistent life, for their unsaved brothers and relatives yet in the life of sin? "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."

International Council of Christian Churches

by Harold S. Bender

IN addition to the meeting of the World Council of Churches in Amsterdam last August, another international meeting of churches was held in the same city a few days earlier (Aug. 11-19). This meeting likewise organized a world council of churches, though on a somewhat different basis than the World Council bearing the name given in the title above. In fact, in the announcements by the group itself on the purpose of the meeting, it was made clear that the date and place of meeting were chosen with the intention of furnishing a counter-movement against the World Council of Churches which was to be organized a few days later. This seems to have been the main purpose of the gathering.

From the extensive report of the meeting prepared by J. D. Unruh, M.C.C. director for Holland, who was asked to attend the meeting in the interest of securing reliable information concerning the character of the new movement for the benefit of the M.C.C. constituency, it is clear that the meeting was small, with some forty delegates, and approximately one hundred persons in attendance during the regular day business sessions, and largely an enterprise of certain smaller American fundamentalist denominations. It was sponsored by the American Council of Christian Churches. No Dutch delegates were in attendance. The president elected by the new organization was the Reverend Carl McIntire, a militant American fundamentalist leader from New Jersey.

The sincere purpose of the sponsors of the meeting was to strengthen the cause of orthodox evangelical Protestantism, and to work against the influence of modern religious liberalism which they believed, and no doubt rightly so, has considerable influence in the World Council of Churches, although the World Council admits only those churches who profess faith in Christ as God. As a consequence the meeting had a strong polemical character, and vigorous attacks were made both against the World Council and theological modernism in general, not only in the addresses and discussions but also in the resolutions.

The Mennonites of America are also interested in a strong orthodox evangelical witness, but they will probably prefer to follow a different method in their witnessing than that of international inter-denominational organization and polemics. They also, as Bible believing churches, desire to preach and practice the whole Gospel and declare the whole councel of God in full obedience to His inspired and authoritative Word, including the "all things" commanded by Jesus. They would be happy to see such organizations as the International Council of Christian Churches take a clean Christian position on the Sermon on the Mount and the other peace and non-resistant teachings of the New Testament, which Mennonites believe are a part of the "whole Gospel."

The new International Council of Christian Churches is to have no authority over its member churches, but will serve as a channel of fellowship and help to evangelical churches, particularly in the fight against modernism. It also encourages its members to promote on every continent a truly Christian and safe educational system, advocates the Christian mode of life in society at large, and wishes to facilitate the missionary work of its member bodies.

Seminary Executive Committee Meets

THE summer meeting of the Executive Committee of the Seminary Board was held on July 19th. Dr. Pannabecker reported on the status of staff members for the coming year and the prospects for student enrollment. Staff members will continue as last year with the addition of Rev. Andrew Shelly as Field Secretary and part-time instructor, and Rev. Walter Gering as special lecturer, for the autumn quarter in rural church work and New Testament. As to students the number of new applicants seems about equal to the losses due to the large graduating class and other changes in enrollment. It is anticipated that the student enrollment will continue for next year at thirty to thirty-five.

Report was made by the business manager, Rev. John T. Neufeld, summarizing the progress in housing and finances. The auditor's recently completed report as of May 31st shows a net worth of the Seminary at $120,000 as compared with $92,000 one year ago. Further indications of the developing Mennonite center at Woodlawn was found in the agreement reached with the Congo Inland Mission whereby the Seminary will provide office space for their use and if possible living quarters for the Executive Secretary.

Plans were made for the fall meeting of the full Seminary Board on the 4th and 5th of October.

What Others Say About the HANDBOOK

William E. Garrison says this, "One of the best hymnbooks of recent years is the one published by the Mennonites, a grand collection of the solid hymns of the church with a good, but not disproprotionate, representation of hymns and chorales of German origin. The present handbook gives data about both the words and the music of each number in this book, facts about authors and composers and helpful suggestions concerning interpretation and use, all very concisely stated and with no sentimental gush. The German originals are given, and in at least one case a Greek original, of translated hymns. Since a great part of the material in the Mennonite Hymnary is common to all standard collections, the handbook will be of value to those who use other hymnbooks."—The Christian Century, June 29, 1949.

When you sell the Handbook to the Mennonite Hymnary, you might get in touch with others than Mennonites in your community who love great church music. This Handbook has a wide range of usefulness.

M. C. C. Notes

Government Official Confirms Relief Need

AKRON, PENNSYLVANIA. A government official connected with the military occupation of Germany, recently wrote to the Council of Relief Agencies Licensed for Operation in Germany, of which the M.C.C. is a member, expressing appreciation for the relief work carried on by the voluntary relief agencies, and confirming the fact that needs continue to exist.

"Considerable progress has been made during the past three years toward re-establishing the German economy on a self-sustaining basis. It must be emphasized that though there has been progress, much remains to be accomplished before a self-sustaining economy is attained. It is with concern therefore, that I note . . . that some constituents of your agencies may feel that the progress in German recovery is such that their continued assistance is not required. I cannot too strongly emphasize that such an impression is incorrect. There is real and urgent need for continuation of the effective relief and welfare services of the CRALOG agencies, particularly for the German refugees and others requiring special assistance."

U. S. Immigration News

The United States Army transport, General Stuart Heintzelman, docked in Boston on July 22, bringing to the U. S. the fifty-thousandth DP to come under the DP Act of 1948. All of the voluntary agencies working on the DP problem were invited by Dean Acheson of the State Department, to attend a special meeting to observe this occasion.

Eligibility Problem Continues

A basic requirement of the International Refugee Organization for persons who desire assistance in migration and resettlement is that they are not "persons of German ethnic origin, whether German nationals or members of German minorities in other countries." The Russian Mennonite refugees have been approved for assistance by the I.R.O., since their ancestry goes back to the Mennonite settlements in Holland, although they did in later years absorb certain aspects of German culture, such as the language. Some of them at one time also accepted naturalization under threat of persecution.

From time to time it has been necessary to explain and interpret this unique background of the Mennonite refugees. Occasionally officials are not familiar with these people and have questioned their eligibility. Recently again this question has been raised by the immigration officials at the Camp Grohn in Germany, and therefore the processing of Mennonites is held up until this is cleared. The movement of Mennonites to both the U. S. and Canada is affected by this development.

Concerning Request Letters

There still are real relief needs among certain classes of people in Central Europe, such as old people, widows with children, the sick and others who are unable to buy the necessities of life, although conditions have improved for many people.

Letters from Europe appealing for aid are still being received in considerable number. It is urged that such letters of request be referred to the M.C.C. office to be forwarded to our European workers for investigation. It is unfortunate that frequently such appeals come from individuals who are not of the most needy. In fact, as high as fifty to seventy-five per cent of the requests thus received and investigated are not from those most deserving. For instance, the M.C.C. Relief Office has received an estimated twenty-five to thirty request letters of similar content which had been sent by a certain Iwan de Lilienfeld of the United States Zone of Germany, addressed to different ministers and other individuals in the United States. Only by investigations on the field is it possible to evaluate such letters which are received from strangers.

Christmas Bundle Deadline Hour

The first of the 1949 Goodwill Christmas Bundles are reaching the warehouse, where they will be packed for overseas shipment. The date by which all Bundles should be sent in is August 13. This is important in order that Bundles may be packed and shipped to reach their destination for distribution at Christmas.

Relief workers have repeatedly emphasized the usefulness of these Bundles for children, and have given recent assurances that this year again there will be genuine need among many families for relief assistance in this form. In preparing bundles it is important to follow instructions as listed on the special folder which was distributed to each congregation. Additional copies of this folder are available.

First Relief Flour Received

A contribution of 900 bags of flour from Kansas was the first such gift for this year. The M.C.C. in its relief program is prepared to handle all the gifts-in-kind that the constituency may be able to give this year, and to carry these through to distribution on the field by our own personnel, and to the most needy.

According to most recent reports, the priority of need in Europe this year is for meats, fats and milk, with other commodities also serving a useful purpose.

The J. D. Unruhs Return

William and Ruth Dick and John and Amelia Unruh and son John Jr. returned on July 22 from Germany and Holland respectively.

A Junior Choir School

by Helen Hiebert Mueller

"SING ye praises with understanding" is what thirty children from the Bethel College Church have been learning to do. That they have learned this well was demonstrated at the sacred musicale presented in the church on the afternoon of June 26.

Music lovers heard and marvelled when these children sang from memory fourteen anthems, hymns, and sacred songs by Gounod, Bach, Schubert, Sullivan and other composers. The musicale as such was an important event in that it brought joy to many who appreciate good music. But of greater value was the fact that it brought to light what has actually been done for these children during the past nine months.

The Junior Choir School of the Bethel College Church originated in October, 1948, when Joan Veston Enz was enlisted to instruct children from eight to fourteen years of age. The choir school meets twice each week, each time for an hour. One session is given to sight singing, ear training, and giving general basic instruction in music, as well as teaching music appreciation. The second period is devoted to actually learning songs, hymns and anthems. The children are also

What Shall I Do With My Life?

II. How About Teaching?

by Erwin C. Goering

THIS was the day. With much anticipation and no little anxiety Jim had looked forward to this morning. It was his first attempt at teaching school. He had spent a few days the week before arranging and classifying library books, rearranging desks, repairing the wall maps, and putting up a few pictures to add more of a cherry atmosphere to what seemed a rather drab interior. But all that was preliminary motion. The real test of his skill, ability and success as a teacher he knew would come as he dealt, worked, and played with these children whom parents were entrusting to him.

As he waited for the first arrivals he looked upon his own past in retrospect. He recalled carefree high school-days. He brought back to memory the years he attended school at the one-room Red Star School. How much he had enjoyed the recess and noon periods! Those ball games were really something! The spacious school ground provided many an opportunity to romp and play. But how he used to dread hearing the ringing bell. It seemed that there was only confinement associated with the ringing of the bell.

But there was one year, he recalled, when school periods and recesses were equally interesting. And the reason was obvious; it was during that year that he had had a teacher who, somehow, just put new life and meaning into all activity. He could play ball and perspire just like the others on the playground. He was an example of fairness and understanding, always. He remained calm when others became ruffled; he did not always know all the answers but he knew how to admit a shortcoming; he knew where to direct one for needed information. This teacher had been a regular fellow, plus. He would open the school day with a brief but effective devotional period. Somehow he knew just how to draw the right meaning from a portion of Scripture. And those lesson took root.

But what had prompted Jim to go to college? On the day of his high school graduation he happily and jovially declared that his formal education had been terminated. After all, it took money, genuine cash, to go to college, and where was there any possibility of earning enough during a depression to think of going to college!

Jim recalled how he had struggled that year with a deepseated inner urge of "oughtness" which never really permitted him to be at ease. An inner power urged him on. He borrowed money; he earned as he learned; he counselled with advisers in college; he took aptitude tests; he meditated daily in devotional prayer; he had friends who gave encouragement; somehow a deluge of important experiences crowded in upon him.

And here he sat at his untried desk before an untried task. He uttered a prayer for strength, for guidance and insight.

The first day passed. Weeks and months passed by. Jim found himself with more work daily than could be completed. He soon learned that a teacher's

One of the questions every young person asks himself is in regard to his choice of vocation. What shall I do with my life? The decision required must be made by the individual and he alone can make it. To honestly measure, evaluate, decide calls for careful and prayerful thought. The articles with these titles are intended to suggest means of deciding this question. It may be worth an evening's young people's program.

The most positive and hopeful development in youth church life in the past decade has been voluntary service. The opportunity youth has to taste of the Church's work and program in its many fields is now directly possible to young people. Work in missions, invalid homes, children's homes, retreats, areas of need all are now at hand. Such work is available to youth desiring to serve. The greatness of this program cannot be underestimated. To see each summer as well as during the year a host of young people doing the work of the church is a keen thrill. To carry on this work the Peace Committee needs much more vigorous support. Only 6% of its budget was met at mid-year. Keep it in mind for the sake of this new vigorous youth program.

Lydia and Francisco Santos are two students who have been under sponsorship of the Y. P. U. Missionary Education Fund. They came to the states and to Bethel College in order to prepare themselves to return to their people and serve them. After three years of study, they are returning to their island homeland. It is our hope that their studies have helped to prepare them for service to their people. It is our hope, also, that we shall hear from them in the future as to their work and their life.

The Meaning of Etiquette

by Catherine Regier, Newton, Kansas

IT'S a funny thing, but you can"t always judge a girl by the length of her dress or stereotype a fellow by the amount of jingle in his pocket. You can't select your friends by the size of a house, the ruffles on a skirt, or the amount of wool in a suit. The smoothest girl is not always adorned with jewels, nor does the best fellow always come wrapped in a blue convertable. More important than the right lables in your clothes are your manners.

Many people think of etiquette as somthing impractical, superficial, and unnecessary—something that is of use to no one except diplomats, millionaires, and maybe brides. It might be well to discard the words "etiquette" and manners" and substitute "common sense" and "kindness" instead. Etiquette does not imply precise obedience to every rule; it means, rather, the continuous practice of kind impulses and common-sense actions.

Rules of etiquette have not been imposed on society by Emily Post or any other authority on manners. Actually, these "rules" are not rules at all but the results of long experience handed down for practical use. If a so-called rule of etiquette serves no essential purpose, it is probably not worth further consideration. But if the rule in some way makes life more pleasant, if it makes society operate more smoothly, if it is essential to ethics and morals, or if it adds to beauty, then it is a rule to be cherished.

Etiquette, like speech and language, is gradually but constantly changing, Many age-old customs have disappeared with changes in our ways of living. When new conditions no longer make it sensible or apppropriate to follow an old custom, the rule may be discarded.

The practice of a man taking the position nearest the curb when walking with a woman is in the process of change at the present time. This custom had its origin in Europe long before the sixteenth century when the only means of garbage disposal was the street gutter. In those days the man served as a protection to the lady. In horse-and-buggy-days, too, this custom served a purpose. But today—well, some adherers still maintain that on a rainy day a taxicab swerving into a water-filled gutter will cause as disastrous results as did the horse and carriage—but aside from this possible exception, the custom probably has little practical value.

In our day men no longer end letters to their sweethearts with: "I beg, Madame, to remain your humble and faithful servant." Neither are invitations any longer delivered by hand. Today, a boy simply signs his letters, "Love, Jim," and it is only common sense to make invitations by either mail or telephone.

Customs not only vary with time, but they also vary with cultures. Among some Moslem peoples, a woman does not appear in public without veiling a part of her face. In our society, a man takes off his hat in the house. In any culture, one who does not observe the customs of the community suffers in some way.

Just as clothing is essential to one's proper appearance, so a knowledge of etiquette is essential to one's proper behavior. Mere mechanical obedience to the rules of etiquette, however, has little real value. True etiquette is concerned with every phase of ethical behavior and begins when the rules become so thoroughly ingrained that their observance is a matter of natural considerateness rather than of conscious duty.

SERVICE FOR PEACE Off the Press

A unique addition to Mennonite literature is SERVICE FOR PEACE, written by Melvin Gingerich and published by the Mennonite Central Committee. This is the first comprehensive history and evaluation of the C.P.S. Program as experienced by the Mennonite Church. Readers will find this book a valuable source of information on this significant experience of the Church in helping to administer an alternative service program.

As the title suggests, SERVICE FOR PEACE presents a positive picture. It illustrates love in action during a difficult period. It tells the story of heroes of peace. It is a story of service and sacrifice for conscience sake. It challenges the church also by facing squarely some of the weaknesses of the C.P.S. Program.

Every ex-C.P.S. man will want a personal copy. Every church worker will find it helpful in peace education work. For every young man and woman of the church it contains counsel in forming a clear attitude toward possible future compulsory government service. Every home should have a copy, for the CPS program did affect every Mennonite home in direct or indirect ways. This book is a basic source for peace education among our brotherhood.

SERVICE FOR PEACE is available beginning in the early part of August, and can be secured from your Conference bookstores—Berne, Newton, Rosthern. The price is $3.00 per copy. All former CPS men shall order their personal copies directly from the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania, to secure the special rate which applies to C.P.S. men.

Voluntary Service at Rosthern Youth Farm

WE WERE welcomed at the station by our director, Henry Friesen, who gave us a royal ride on that famous car—his ancient 'Chevy.' Needless to say we reached the Farm in good shape and were welcomed by a delicious dinner where introductions of the staff members were made.

At the farm we saw many red barns and a few houses, the largest of which we found to be the Invalid Home where we now work. The place is well supplied with various trees and shrubs adding to its beauty. The many roads leading here and there confused us at first. Often we would follow one which brought us to a surprise ending. Soon, however they made sense. The deep blue sky partly decked with fleecy white clouds and the beautiful sunsets with colors of every hue hallow the Farm making it a fine place to spend the summer months in service.

The unit consists of Helen Block and Susie Goerzen both of Alberta, Canada, Sarah Penner and Justina Pauls come from Kansas, and Elaine Waltner, unit-leader, comes from South Datota.

The work we do consists of working with patients. Three of us work on the second floor. Fortunately we must walk or run a distance in the fresh reviving air before we reach the place where we work each day. Therefore, we have a chance to wake up at the early hour of 5:30 at which time our work begins. Patients are bathed, dressed, and prepared for breakfast. During the day we attempt to keep the rooms looking bright and clean and attend to the needs of the patients. We enjoy seeing the beautiful crochet work some of the patients have finished. One makes lovely bouquets of flowers. Another entertains us with choice bits of poetry.

Kitchen work is another job. There are six girls working in the kitchen. Baking is done almost every day. A large garden provides vegetables for the kitchen and someone is in charge of it. The kitchen staff is kept busy providing for the whole staff on the farm and the members of the Invalid's Home and the Children's Home.

Each day begins with a period of morning devotions. The staff and workers take turns in charge. On Monday nights the staff and workers meet at one of the homes for a prayer meeting. On Wednesday night a prayer meeting is held in the Invalid Home for the invalids plus the staff and workers. On Tuesdays the staff and workers sing for the patients of the Invalid Home after breakfast time. And three times a week, the staff and workers read scripture and have prayer with one or more patients. On Sunday morning the patients that are able gather in the halls for church services.

On the morning of June 22 we took a trip to North Battleford to visit the mental hospital unit there. After breakfast we had plenty of time to enjoy nature's scenery round about us as we rumbled along. At the hospital we met the ten members of the unit. After becoming acquainted and singing a few songs together, we had a refreshing lunch. We were shown the hospital with its beautiful grounds and the clean, well-kept rooms in which the patients stay. Men and women in nice-looking uniforms care for the patients.

On June 29 the ninth annual Young People's Retreat began at the farm. The theme of the camp was "For me to live is Christ." Rev. P. P. Tschetter of Omaha, Nebraska gave a number of messages based on the words, "In Christ Jesus." These messages were followed by missionaries speaking on foreign missions. Mrs. W. C. Voth spoke about work in China. Different ones gave reports on Saskatchewan Mission Fields. Rev. H. Wall from Winnipeg told us of our Mennonite history and showed us some pictures. Rev. A. T. Friesen led the evangelistic meetings which were held every evening. Kenneth Bauman gave us some very inspiring messages from God's Word. A challenging message was given by Mr. John Thomas, from India. His text was based on the verse: "Cast thy bread upon the waters: for thou shalt find it after many days." Mr. Thomas said that we had cast white bread upon the waters and it had returned unto us in a brown loaf. Another statement he made was as follows: "The Hindus need soup, soap, and salvation."

During the Young People's Retreat, as well as during the Children's Retreat music was furnished by the Gospel Clarionaires from Grace Bible Institute, Omaha, Nebraska. Their instrumental music, vocal duets, and solos, and their testimonies were greatly appreciated and enjoyed by the retreaters.

The Retreat came to a close on Sunday. A consecration service was held in the afternoon. Sunday evening a song festival was given by the Retreat choir, directed by Isaac Thiessen, and small vocal groups also participated. Kenneth Bauman gave the closing message telling us of the tool chest of God, who uses the weak, the humble, and the despised in his tool chest.

The four days of the retreat were days of spiritual growth. We were made aware of the suffering and dying world in need of a Saviour.

The Rosthern Youth Farm

The Rosthern Youth Farm, which formerly was a Government experimental station, was purchased by the General Conference Mennonite young people of Saskatchewan about five years ago.

The Farm consisting of one section of land, is divided into three units—the Farm, the Invalid Home, and the Children's Home. The Farm owns sheep, cattle, pigs, and chickens. The dairy sells milk to Rosthern residents. They're installing a pasteurizing plant soon. Various crops are raised. The addition to the Invalid Home has been completed and in all the home accommodates forty-five patients. Plans are being made for a sunporch which is greatly needed. The Children's Home, though large enough for twelve children, now has eight, three of whom are refugees.

task is never completed. It rests at the end of the day to be taken up again on the morrow. But in spite of all the press for work, Jim became tremendously attached to these twenty youngsters whom he taught daily. He saw each as an individual, with tremendous potential. He saw in each a parent's dream, a little life given into his care for guidance for encouragement, for moulding of character. Yes, the teacher also frequently becomes the hero for the youngster. That too is a real opportunity. Jim remembered his own experience with that outstanding school teacher in his life and the indelible influence the life of that teacher was in his own life. Was he providing for his pupils such an influence and courageous exemplary life which would point them ever onward and upward? How about the occasion when he disciplined Johnny rather severely; did not his parents resent having their son singled out in that fashion? Jim knew that there are risks involved in dealing with children, as well as adults. But with a Christian concern for the individual's best interest always, he felt confident to work on.

Jim's experience can be duplicated over and over again and added unto. The vocation of the Christian teacher can be one of the most enriching of life's experiences, from the primary level to that of college and university. A skillful instructor aptly helps that student weave a fabric for life out of the primary threads which come out of the experiences of the home, the church, personal experiences and life facts. A teacher who interprets knowledge and facts from the Christian frame of reference has a tremendously significant service to preform to the youth. If you are willing to lose your life for Christ's sake and the Kingdom, you shall gain it, and with you many others.

Farewell by Puerto Rican Students

After being at Bethel College for three years we are going back to Puerto Rico. It surely has been a great privilege for us to have stayed here with you for three years. Our experiences here have been an education in itself. We almost feel like we are a part of Bethel College but we still feel that we should go back and help our people.

Since we cannot thank you all individually for the help with which you have supported us in our education, for your friendship, we have decided to do so through this paper. We hope you will remember us in your prayers as we go back home.

We started our trip on July 7, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Martens took us to New York from where we flew to Puerto Rico. We left New York on July 15 in a Pan-American airlines plane, and arrived in Puerto Rico the next day. At San Jaun Lydia and I will separate. She will go to Bayamon and I will go to La Plata. I am sure our folks are eagerly waiting for us.

HIS LAMPS

His lamps are we,
To shine where he may say;
And lamps are not for sunny rooms,
Nor for the light of day,
But for the dark places of the earth,
Where shame and wrong and crime have birth,
Or for the murky twilight gray
Where the light of earth grows dim,
And souls are groping after him.
And as sometimes a glean we find,
__Clear shining through the night
So bright we do not see the lamp,
__But only see the light,
So may we shine—God's light the flame—
That men may glorify his name.

given individual instruction according to their needs and merits. Since December, this children's choir has participated regularly once each month in the Sunday morning worship service.

It is with gratitude, that parents and others look upon this Junior Choir School and what it is doing for the children of the church and community (among the members are also several negro children). These youngsters learn more than music. They learn what it means to worship, and the significance of worshiping together. They learn how to be reverent in the House of God. But more than that, they learn the need for self-discipline if they are to serve God acceptably, whether that be in the Sunday worship service or in other work in His Kingdom.

A HINT TO OUR PASTORS

Want to help along the Conference publications just a little?

Here's one thing that you can do that would help a lot? If your church uses a regular Sunday morning bulletin—either printed or mimeographed—how would it be to insert a line each Sunday, something like this: "Concerning the story back of the hymns used in this morning's service, consult your HANDBOOK TO THE MENNONITE HYMNARY."

This type of indirect "planting of the seed" goes a long way in making people conscious of our Conference publications.

Beyond Our Own

Church membership in the United States, it was reported, has now passed 80,000,000 and constitutes 49.9 per cent of the total population. Church membership showed a gain of 3.1 per cent during 1948, compared with 2.3 per cent for 1947. Total Protestant membership is almost 50,000,000. Roman Catholics report over 26,000,000. Jewish congregations and smaller groups make the total membership of 80,246,124. An incomplete report shows over 25,000,000 enrolled in Sunday school or parochial schools. There are over 265,000 congregations in the United States.—The Gospel Herald

Dr. Henry Smith Leiper, of the World Council of Churches, says that there are aproximately 90,000,000 Christians in Russia, according to Between the Lines. If he is right, then almost half of Russia's 200,000,000 people maintain some kind of religious affiliation. When it is remembered that the Communist party numbers about 4½ million, one can see the sin of those who "hate the Russians" because of what Stalin and his helpers are doing in the world.—The Gospel Herald

GERMANY. Latest official figures disclose that the 27 member churches of the Evangelical Church in Germany (EKID) have a combined membership of 39,833,434. A breakdown shows 17,407,211 members (43.7%) in Soviet occupation zone, and 22,426,223 (56.3%) in the 3 Western zones.

WASHINGTON, D. C. A Senate-passed bill providing for a long-range program of rehabilitation for the Navajo and Hopi Indian tribes passed the House of Representatives on July 14. Because it was passed with amendments, it must be returned to the Senate for consideration.—Watchman Examiner

ENGLAND. A British Baptist leader, Dr. M. E. Aubrey, has told the Central Committee of the World Council of Churches that Catholic domination of Protestants in Spanish-speaking countries is worse than communist oppression of churches in Eastern Europe. "The sin in Spain and South America is greater than oppression of the state," Dr. Aubrey said, "because the offense is against the greater life." C. HENRY SMITH'S STORY OF THE MENNONITES REVISED EDITION TO BE OFF THE PRESS SOON

NEARLY a year ago, on the very day before Dr. C. Henry Smith passed away, he wrote a letter to the Mennonite Publication Office in which he made arrangements for a revised edition of his STORY OF THE MENNONITES by appointing Cornelius Krahn as the editor.

The STORY OF THE MENNONITES constituted the life work of the pioneer Mennonite scholar C. Henry Smith. In 1920, his book THE MENNONITES appeared. In 1941 after this book had been out of print for a long time, it appeared entirely revised and enlarged under the title THE STORY OF THE MENNONITES and was reprinted in 1945. The popularity of this book is evidenced by the fact that it is out of print again.

Meanwhile Cornelius Krahn and a staff of co-workers have been busy preparing the text for the new and revised edition. The main concern of the editor is to bring the story up to date, check some data and correct misprintings in the text. Since the book was completed before World War II new chapters had to be written in various areas. What has not happened to Mennonites in countries like Russia, Prussia, and Poland! Unfortunately for these countries the "final chapters" had to be written. But even in countries like the United States much has transpired in areas like relief activities, missions, conference work, education, Civilian Public Service and other activities.

It took 400 years of Mennonite history and the lifetime of an outstanding scholar and writer to produce the STORY. There has not been and is no other book on the market on this subject in any country that equals Smith's STORY: It is based on painstaking scholarly research; it is all-inclusive, and written in readable style. It may take generations before this book is superseded by another. All the editor attempted to do was to perfect it in certain areas and bring it up to date. When the book comes off the press the following will be noted:

1. The Story will have been brought up to date.
2. The text will have been freed from some errors and misprints.
3. A bibliography will have been added.
4. An entensive index will be found in the book.
5. Illustrations will have been added.

APPROACHING HOLY COMMUNION

"Alas for the blindness and hardness of the human heart, that it doth not more consider so unspeakable a Gift; but rather through the daily use thereof sinketh even into disregard of it! For if this most holy Sacrament were celebrated in one place only, and were consecrated by one only priest in the world; with how great desire dost thou think would men be affected to that place and toward such a priest of God, that they might commemorate dis death? But now many are made priests, and in many places the Sacrament is celebrated; that the grace and love of God to man may appear so much the greater, the more widely this sacred Communion is spread over the world."—Thomas A. Kempis

Why I Hate The Traffic

"I don't believe I have ever mentioned this to anyone before, and I know I have never mentioned it in public but the reason for my fierce hatred for this abomination, this curse, is that my own family was struck by it. It struck my own father. Our family lost everything. My father having fallen a hopeless victim to the habit finally stopped at nothing to satisfy his awful appetite. He sold our furniture, even our chairs and beds. He was a terrible victim. He and his wife and his children suffered unspeakably. Now, you see why I hate it and why I'll fight it with every breath until I die."—Dr. E. Stanley Jones, World-famous Missionary.

Interracial Church

South Congregational Church, located on the edge of a Negro district in Chicago, Illinois, has become an interracial church. Five years ago, the congregation was white. When Nisei were settled in the neighborhood, many were welcomed into membership, and many Negroes followed. Church leaders, teachers, and choir have now become mixed, as have the youth and men's organizations. No quota system for distribution of offices is used, nor is it an "interracial project." It is, says the church, just a fellowship of Christians.—Worldover Press.

God's requirements are just as rigid under grace as they were under law.

Unity Through Reading Habits

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE must have deeper understanding in the years ahead if it is to be more than a loose confederation of rather disunited Mennonites. One contribution to this end is a deliberate attempt to attain balance among the books and magazines read in the study or by the family as a whole. Without particularly wanting to do so families may limit their reading to the usual Mennonite papers plus supplementary Christian literature from only one part of the larger life of the church as a whole. What shall we do to counteract this trend?

First of all, this is not an issue of orthodoxy. Probably the most effective apologist of conservative Protestantism is Wilbur Smith, formerly of Moody and now of Fuller seminary. His reading is amazingly broad, covering "friend and foe" in books, pamphlets and magazines. In fact, no one has ever defended Biblical Christianity by ignoring its enemies or ignoring those who also consider themselves its friends.

In the second place, it will help to separate church news from doctrinal writings. By church news I mean reports of conferences, conventions, mission developments, pronouncements, resolutions, new projects, programs of expansion and so on. It is beyond debate that any well informed person would want to know this about all the churches. Without such information a Mennonite, for example, would do all his thinking and planning in a vacuum. Here, more than any other place, it is not a matter of theological agreement but reliable knowledge of religious trends. Only by a combination of journals can the reader get the whole story; and none will be wholly without bias. Liberals often caricature fundamentalists and visa versa.

For a starter we would make the following suggestions: "News of the Christian World" in The Christian Century; "News Significant to Christians" in Christian Life; the news of religion in Time magazine.* These three sources will provide a rather wide range of news from varying viewpoints hardly likely to omit any really important church news from any part of the world.

After one has started the regularly read church news covering Pentecostals to Presbyterians and from Quakers to Catholics then the question of a larger range of reading in books may be raised. This will be dealt with in another editorial. But suffice it to say that the starting point is the reading of the book reviews in magazines like those mentioned above. All this will help to lay the ground for deeper understanding among the various schools of thought in our own conference. Meanwhile the 12th chapter of First Corinthians will suggest how to have real unity amid diversity.—D.E.S.

Only Four Per Cent Higher

Last month this office presented a report which showed the receipts for the first six months of this year for each board or committee of the General Conference in comparison with the budget of each board or committee. Every reader should have noticed that at the end of the six months (50 per cent) of the year, we had met only 32 per cent of our budgets.

Another month, July, has passed. We have raised this percentage only about four per cent. Not quite 36 per cent of our estimated budget needs have been received. The Foreign Mission Board and the Emergency Relief Board are in great need of funds.

Our Conference has so many urgent calls to take food to the hungry, clothing to the naked, and the Gospel to those who live and perish in sin. Pray that God's call may open our hearts to hear His voice calling us to share in this great work of our Conference. A prompt response is necessary if some of our work shall not be handicapped by a lack of funds.

Respectfully submitted,
A. Theodore Mueller, Office Manager

A Lawyer Can Be Christian

by Elvin R. Souder

THE question is not infrequently asked whether a Christian, particularly a Mennonite, can engage in the practice of law. Or is there something in the nature of legal practice inconsistent with Christ's teaching of "Overcome evil with good," and with second-mile religion? How can a lawyer justify defending a criminal or a bad cause? Can the lawyer, as a Christian, use legal process in enforcing a client's rights? Is there a distinction in Christian principle between instituting a lawsuit and defending one? These and similar questions are commonly asked of those who enter the practice of law and attempt to follow a practical and consistent Christian ethical course in the business world.

Business World Not an Alternative to Life of Religion

These questions deserve frank answers. After all, though in a sense we are citizens of two worlds, there should be no strict line of demarcation between our secular and religious lives. They are both lived in the same world; and the economic activities of men are not alternatives to the life of religion so that people must make the choice between them, nor need they be hindrances to the cause of religion. Rather these same economic activities may be essential ways of doing God's will and cooperating in his creative purpose. There is a seven-day a week religion, and there is a one-day-a-week religion which talks of service on Sundays and only of profits on the other six days of the week. Something is lacking in the stock story of many a respected business man which frequently dwells on the fact that he is a regular communicant of the church and on what he does for the community by sitting on the school board, or a civic organization, or by giving to its philanthropies. This is solely an account of his activities outside the business. To be sure, these are important but the main question is: What does he do in his business? So we turn first to the question, what does the lawyer do in his business?

Practice of the Law—Its Nature

It is unfortunate that there is such a widespread misconception of the everyday routine work of a lawyer since in the past much of the judgment aimed at the profession has been based upon the role the lawyer has played in litigation and lawsuits. By far the largest part of the lawyer's day-by-day existence is spent in planning and drafting—letters, contracts, wills, deeds, leases, partnership agreements, articles of incorporation, trusts, tax returns, inventories, appraisements, accounts of decedents' estates, charters for nonprofit corporations, and other papers—so as to avoid or minimize the possibility of conflict. A few concrete examples will illustrate the common day-by-day situations with which a lawyer is constantly confronted. Can the building contractor reduce his income tax liability by making his sons partners with him in the business? Do the provisions of the Housing and Rent Act of 1949 apply to a farm which the owner wishes to rent out? Does the local zoning ordinance permit the Joneses to convert their house into a two-family dwelling? What are the adoption laws and procedure which will affect this childless couple seeking to adopt a child? Must this client register the name of his business if he does not trade under his own name? What steps must be taken to have a guardian appointed for a weak-minded person who has been committed to a mental institution? And all of these, you will note, are situations faced by Christians at one time or another. There would seem to be no reason why a lawyer cannot be just as Christian in working out these matters as can the farmer in raising corn or pigs or operating a dairy farm.

Can the Christian Lawyer Participate in Litigation—Lawsuits?

The situations outlined in the last paragraph are, for the most part, free of conflict and adverse claims. But what answer will the lawyer give when he is asked to represent a client who seeks to enforce a legal right against another, and perhaps institute suit. This raises the rather basic question of the use of legal process becoming inconsistent with the way of love in human relationships. The Christian emphasis is not primarily on rights and duties of men towards one another, but rather on creating Christian fellowship and the love relationship between individuals. Perhaps the test should be the spirit which the legal step or procedure produces in the adverse party. If bitterness and ill-will are inevitable, then the lawyer may conclude that the Christian course lies in the direction of some compromise settlement instead of litigation. Each case, it seems, must rest upon its own particular circumstances, the basic question being, what result will this step have on the relationship of the parties involved.

When it comes to defending a person against whom suit has been brought, the Christian course may depend on several further considerations. Paul made defense before the Roman courts and other of the apostles relied on their civil rights on occasion. Suppose a suit for damages is brought against me to collect an unjust claim to recover damages for injuries sustained in an automobile accident for which I was in no wise at fault? I think most Mennonites would agree that a person in such circumstances should make a defense. Generally speaking, Mennonites charged with violation of the Selective Service Act (draft law) have availed themselves of legal counsel and representation before the courts.

Can a Christian Lawyer Defend a Criminal or a Bad Cause?

This question, frequently asked, is somewhat misleading. As asked, the answer is obviously No. The Christian can no more defend a bad cause than he can take part or be an active participant in the bad cause itself. But there is a vast difference be-

Intercessory Prayer--Duty and Privilege

by Harold D. Burkholder

INTERCESSORY prayer involves prayer for others. Dr. Buttrick points out that "since life is not merely individual but also social and mutual, it is but natural that we pray for others."

The problem of intercessory prayer centers around the question: How can the prayer of one avail for another? Perhaps the selfishness of man's nature also makes it difficult to intercede for others. These problems can only be met fairly as we study the subject of intercession in the Scriptures, and in Christian experience.

One is astonished by the many Scripture passages in which God directs His people to intercede for one another. Paul writes to Timothy, "I exhort therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men; for kings, and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty. For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour; who will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth." (I Tim. 2:1-4.) This word of the great apostle is truly a direction for Christian worship in every generation. The Christian life is not only individualistic, for in the midst of the warfare of life we are to "bear one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ." (Gal. 6:2.) We can never properly obey this command without intercessory prayer.

Intercession of Words and Action

It is surprising how many times the Apostle Paul asks people to pray for him. The following request from Romans 15:30 is very strong: "Now I beseech you, brethren, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake, and for the love of the Spirit, that ye strive together with me in your prayers to God for me." From this Scripture we gather that God has planned to bless us through the prayers of others. The Word of the Lord to Abimelech is very strange, but full of meaning. He was commanded in Genesis 20:7 to make restitution, "for he (Abraham) is a prophet, and he shall pray for thee, and shalt live." Perhaps the most striking case of intercession recorded in the Scriptures in that of the palsied man brought to Jesus, let down through the roof by four others. The intercession of these four was not that of words, but of action. We read, in Mark 2:5, "When Jesus saw their faith, he said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, thy sins be forgiven thee." (Mark 2:5) The evident plan of our Heavenly Father to bless us through the prayers of others is very wonderful; but it intensifies the problem under discussion, namely, How can it be?

The Sin of Failure to Intercede

It is both profitable and interesting to study the great examples of intercession. Study Abraham's prayer for Abimelech in Genesis 20:7, 17, 18); Abraham praying for Sodom (Genesis 18:23-32); Judah, for Benjamin (Genesis 44:33); Daniel for Israel (Daniel 9:3-23); Samuel, for Israel (I Samuel 12:23). It was Samuel who said: "God forbid that I should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray for you."

The intercession of Christ was predicted in the Old Testament (See Isaiah 53:12). During His earthly ministry He prayed definitely for His disciples. The statement in Luke 22:31, 32, "I have prayed for thee"—meaning Peter, should give courage to every Christian. In His high-priestly prayer in John 17 we find the words: "I pray for them—which thou has given me; for they are thine—neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word."

The historical intercession of our Lord comes to its great climax in His words on the cross, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." The intercessory work of Christ is still continuing as suggested by Rom. 8:33, 34; I John 2:1, 2; and Heb. 7:25.

The Conditions

The conditions of prayer in general are applicable to that of intercessory prayer. It must be in the name of Christ (John 14:13, 14); according to His will (I John 5:14, 15); instructed by His Word (John 15:17); out of a cleansed heart (Psalm 66:18); in faith (Mark 9:23); in agreement with others (Matt. 18:19); and with importunity (Luke 18:1-8). Prayer instructed by the Word of God must be given special emphasis in the study of intercession. For example, prayer for healing needs to be considered in the light of Hebrews 9:27, "It is appointed unto man

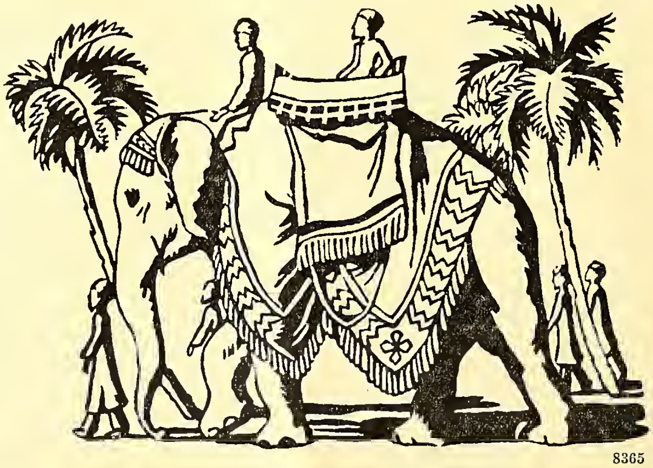
The Word Goes Forth

by Elenore Schmidt

"I WONDER who will buy a book today?" This is the thought that comes to me every morning as I watch the faces of those gathered for the service. Some seem eager and prove they are listening by answering questions intelligently. Others for the sake of being polite give assent to every word the evangelist is saying, but will never know what he really said. There are old men, who show by their manner that they are bhagt (devotees). There are young men dressed in western clothes who have come to see what sort of thing is going on. There are little children who, on hearing the singing have run to see, and hear. There are women old and young, who according to custom either sit far back or to the side. They seem much more interested in the nurse's dress and the doctor's shoes than in the words of the speaker. But as he tells them the sweetest story ever told many are compelled to listen that at first seemed indifferent. But who of these will buy a Gospel portion, a book of hymns or even a Bible or New Testament?



I would like to tell of some of those who have bought books at Sewa Bhawan (Hospital). When the Word of God goes into the hands of these patients whom we may never see again or who might never have the opportunity of hearing the word again we rejoice that this Word is all powerful.

Forest Ranger of Sona Khand

Sona Khand is a hilly region near Jagdeeshpur where in former years missionaries took short weekend vacations. The forest ranger of this jungle area came to us with a debiliating fever. He was in the hospital for many weeks, and when he became strong enough he came to our daily morning service. He spoke English well, and so conversation with him was no trial. From his name we knew he was high caste and from his cultured manner we knew he came from a home of refinement. Even though he had been coming to the services we did not feel that he was especially interested. But as he was about to leave he made a request that thrilled us all. He said, "I have an English Bible which I have read and treasure greatly, but please send me a Hindi Bible so that I may be sure of the real meaning and that my family members can also read."

Where God's Word Is Not Heard

Even though most places in India are open to the gospel there are small areas which are closed to the preaching of the Word. One such area a small native state called Sarangar, borders our field. The raja of this state is friendly to missionaries, but nevertheless his law forbids evangelistic efforts in his small domain. We frequently have patients from this area, and to me it is always a challenge to present the Word of Life to them. A wealthy shopkeeper brought his wife and daughter-in-law for treatment. This caste of shop keepers is usually rather indifferent to any preaching so we were surprised and happy when the old gentleman came to our morning services day after day. He listened attentively and often asked questions about the message that had been given. When this family was about to leave with their entire retinue of servants and household paraphenalia, the old man came to the head compounder and gave him fifty rupees to be used for charitable purposes in the hospital. This is not uncommon, so the compounder thanked him and assured him that it would be put to good use. But by the look on the man's face he knew that there was something else he wanted to say. He wanted a "Big Book"—God's Holy Word. And so the precious Word goes into Sarangar.

For the Sorrowing—Comfort and Hope

A woman of the tobacco seller caste had been brought in the day before. The midwives in the village had wrought their havoc and she was beyond help. But since we serve and love a God who works miracles we began to do what we could for her, praying that this little bit might be the means of saving her. After a night of severe suffering she died in the early hours of the dawn after giving birth to pre-mature twin boys.

I knew before I ever came to the hospital in the morning that she had died, for I could hear the hopeless lament of the relatives. It was terrible to hear, that cry without hope! They were not open to any word of testimony or comfort at that time. It was a time of double sorrow, for twins are considered a double blessing. It was time for our morning service I hardly knew whether to proceed or not, for these bereaved ones were lamenting very near the

by Mrs. Henry A. Toews

IN MANY African villages, life goes on as it did in early Bible times. It is true that near the larger centers and missionary stations there are evidences of civilization, but back "in the bush" the African reflects very much the time of Genesis and Exodus. He lives in small portable bamboo huts. In many places mud and stick houses are encouraged by the State. The African is satisfied with his loin cloth attire. If it ever became severely cold he would have to do something about more clothes, but his proximity to the Equator, discourages any worries about clothes. Christian Africans can be distinguished often by their clothing.

The African spends his days in hunting and fishing. Instead of being a vacation pasttime as in civilization, hunting and fishing are everyday occurrences. His bow and arrow are ready weapons and help to give him his meat supply.

Taxed According to Wives

Polygamy is very prevalent among un-christianized Africans. A man's wealth consists of his wives and children. Of course the State discourages polygamy by taxing Africans according to the number of wives that a man has, but as yet there are no laws against it. Christian missions of course discourage polygamy, but the African village has been little affected by this teaching.

In Genesis and Exodus we already find records of writing. Among these Africans there was no written language until missionaries reduced the language to writing. Missionaries came into the villages and by signs and objects found out what the Africans called certain objects. Stick, mutshi, leaf, diji, woman, muketu, man, yala, etc. The missionaries recorded what they heard and spelled the words according to the sounds, therefore the language is more or less phonetic. Words are spelled as they sounded to the missionary. The American alphabet was used; that helps the missionary to learn the various dialects more easily.

Yet these primitive Africans, who can count only as far as their fingers and toes go, have a full brain capacity. There is no miniature brain size as is often pictured in the "cave man." His brain has the capacity to learn, but he never learned until someone else came to teach him. There is certainly nothing to encourage the idea that man improved gradually. He had the idea of a higher but he certainly knew nothing of God and of Jesus Christ until missionaries came to tell him about it.

It Doesn't Sink In

When one talks to older Africans who have grown old in their superstitions and fetish worship, one gets the impression that it doesn't sink in. Their brains have never been exercised to think or comprehend. It is very difficult for them to understand the message of Salvation, though some are very eager to accept it especially if it is given with a little salt. Older men who go to school struggle with the figures, one and one are two, or two and two are four, etc. However their children after being in school a few years show a marked aptitude toward learning. Their children readily accept Christ. Our baptismal groups of 50 to 100 consist largely of these student Africans.

Seeking the Lost Plus Teaching

One great discouraging fact remains. Many who profess to accept Christ find it extremely difficult to live up to the standards of the Bible. In their minds they still think with their heathen background. They interpret right and wrong in the light of their degraded thinking. Adultry is not frowned upon as very serious. Lying and stealing are resorted to as a means to gain their desired end. In the light of such conditions the missionary must give himself not only to seeking the lost which of coures is his great mission, but he must give himself unreservedly to teaching and instructing those who have made a profession of Christianity, that the Africans may become rooted and grounded in the Word.

place where we usually gather for this time of witness in story and song. I prayed for guidance, that nothing might be done that would offend and yet I felt that the message we had to give to these people in such a time would be of eternal value. The evangelist chose an appropriate song—a native song with tune and words they could understand and appreciate. It contained a marvelous testimony of the love of Christ and His power to save. As we began to sing, those that were weeping suddenly became quiet and listened. I imagined I saw a little peace come over those grief-stricken faces. I had feared that because of the presence of a dead body in the near vicinity many of the patients from the wards would not come. To my relief and joy not only the low-caste patients came, but a number of high-caste also came and showed no repulsion at this scene of death and sorrow. Rather there was an atmosphere of awe and reverence that thrilled me. Immediately after the service an old man of high caste cried out, "It is that song I want—please give me the book with the song of the Giver of Life Eternal." This started the sale, and with prayer and thanksgiving we sold not only a "Book of the Songs," but Gospel portions as well.

I could tell you many more stories, for each day brings new and different incidents. It is not in figures that we measure the work we do, but as these portions of God's Word and Christian literature go out into the villages we send our prayers to the Author that His Holy Spirit might convict and teach men to accept Him as Lord and Saviour.

Open Center In Heart of Berlin

Kruezburg Community Center project in Berlin was officially opened on August 3. Located in a central part of the city, where 40 per cent of the buildings were destroyed during the war, this promises to be one of the more significant projects in Germany. The objectives are to give some material aid to especially needy cases, to provide facilities where people may help themselves in meeting certain needs, to enable people to know and help each other, and to provide opportunities for giving a definite Christian witness. It is hoped that the Center will become a "home" in which people of the area will feel free to share and learn, and that participants in the activities will gain a sense of belonging and of being loved, which they have not experienced under their present circumstances. The Center will not attempt to start with a large-scale program, but will begin by serving a small group of interested persons, who can be taught to appreciate the ideals and spirit of the home and who will help in conveying these deep concerns to others who can be reached.

The specific services that the Center will provide include a sewing room where women may come to mend and sew for themselves and others, with certain materials and supervision provided; a mother's club to promote the exchange of helpful information on homemaking; youth group activities such as singing, Bible study, recreation, reading and other classes; supervision of service projects in the neighborhood; a day nursery where children may be kept for mothers who are not able to pay the regular rate for this service; available rooms for religious and educational meetings of various kinds; and other services. Harold and Anne Buller are directing this work.

Churches to Hear Refugee Story

Peter and Elfrieda Dyck, who have been visiting many Mennonite churches in the Mid-West and Western states and Canada during the past few months to speak on the present Mennonite refugee migration and resettlement program, are spending several weeks during August bringing this message to churches of the Eastern states. The itinerary has been and is as follows: August 11, Harrisonburg, Virginia; August 12, Washington, D. C.; August 13, Morgantown, Pennsylvania; August 14-15, Eastern Pennsylvania; August 17, Scottdale, Pennsylvania, August 18-19, Eastern Ohio; August 20-21, Central Illinois; August 23, Minnesota.

Having served for a number of years in the relief and refugee work of the M.C.C. Brother and Sister Dyck speak from personal experience and observation on the needs of these people and the help which has been given to them by the North American brotherhood. Where desired, the message is also illustrated by films.

Voluntary Service in Paraguay

Robert Snyder of LaJunta, Colorado, and Darrell Albright of Pretty Prairie, Kansas, left on August 3 to enter a new type of Voluntary Service unit in Paraguay. They will be working for a co-operative organization of the United States and Paraguay government, commonly called STICA. STICA is, from the American point of view, a part of the Institute of Inter-American Affairs program devoted to the purpose of building up undeveloped parts of Central and South America. They operate in twenty-two countries in the fields of agriculture, health and education. This is an experiment on the part or this organization as well as ourselves in the use of our volunteers who will serve in various capacities. It is hoped particularly that they will help to bridge the gap between the few technicians and the many people who are there to be taught. STICA will pay the equivalent of their board, room and transportation. The men will be assigned to the agricultural phase of the program, helping in one of the experimental stations.

M. C. C. Notes

Magdalene Friesen Returns

Miriam Bowers returned on August 2 and Magdalen Friesen on August 4, both from Germany. Daniel and Rosalie Stoltzfus of Jackson, Minnesota, left on August 4 for a second term in Puerto Rico.

Service to Children

The Industrial Home School Annex in Washington, D. C., is a temporary home and school for 120 children, ages 8 weeks to 13 years. The institution is interracial throughout. Its children come from broken homes, families financially unable to provide for them or because of irresponsible parents. The children are accommodated at the Annex until it is advisable for them to return to their homes, a foster home, or a children's home.

The seven volunteers assist regular counsellors—seeing the children are adequately clothed and fed, giving them much needed affection, supervising play and work, teaching Bible School, and helping them in many other ways.

Significance of Voluntary Service

Recently Irvin Horst, former director of M.C.C. relief work in Holland, spent a week visiting a number of Voluntary Service units in the eastern area, including Industrial Home School Annex (for underprivileged children), National Training School (for delinquent boys), Delaware State Hospital, Vineland Training School (for mentally deficient), and Camp Bennett (for underprivileged children). The following is taken from his evaluation of the work done in these various institutional units:

"After having had the opportunity to visit and share in some of the experiences of our VS units, I have the decided feeling that our units are islands of Christian stability and character in the midst of criminal and insane instability and dissolution; islands of sympathy and concern often in the midst of time-serving, once to die." Our Lord's petition for Himself can suggest something to us relative to intercession. For when He prayed in the garden He concluded by saying, "Nevertheless, not my will, but thine be done." (Luke 22:42.) The one who believes that God has a will for his or her life as well as for others, will always desire that God's will be done. Furthermore, according to John 15:7, prayer according to God's Word is to be governed by the abiding of His Word in us. The abiding place of His Word must be in the center of our heart's affections, the center of our ambitions and interests. If we "abide in Him and His Word abides in us" we shall be praying in His name and shall be subject to His will.

In praying for those who are going through great trials we need to remember the words in Acts 14:22 (R.V.), "that through many tribulations we must enter into the kingdom of God."

Personal Sacrifice and Intercession

A further prerequisite for intercessory prayer is willingness to sacrifice for the end in view. First of all we must be clear that it is God who answers prayer. We do not answer our own prayers. We do not mean by this that as we pray for the poor that we are not to give leaving it all to God.

Moses' intercession for Israel is a striking example of self-sacrificing intercession: "Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sins—and if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book which thou hast written." (Ex. 32:31, 32.) Also see Romans 9:1-3 for a similar thought relative to Paul. "We cannot be the Son of God, dying for the world, but we must represent the Son of God who died for the world."

It seems very clear that it is God's plan to bless us through the prayers of others. Furthermore, the intercessory work of Christ is the basis of our intercessory prayer. The conditions to be met imply that we must have the mind of Christ in willingness to sacrifice. When we understand that intercessory prayer is our priestly function, based upon the work of Christ, and that we do not change the freedom of others, but that they are responsible for the blessing they receive, we are able in a measure to answer the question as to how the prayer of one can change the life and circumstances of another.

Each Holds a Key

Intercession is a privilege as well as a duty. Each of us, in the privilege of intercessory prayer, holds a key to a blessing for others. Someone has said, "God has so arranged the world of human affairs that, if we fail to intercede, we are made responsible for the lack of blessings which others suffer."

A child was once carried away by the outgoing current of the tide. A strong swimmer threw out a life-preserver, cast down the rope attached to it on the wharf charging the by-standers to hold it fast, plunged into the current, seized the child with one hand and the life-preserver with the other, only to find that the by-standers had stupidly failed to hold the rope. A statue was erected in memory of the lost swimmer and the child; but their failure to hold the rope of a life preserver is a thing which the by-standers will never forget.

There are missionaries on the foreign field and pastors and Christian workers on the home field looking to us for intercessory prayer. We are responsible for them and to God. Will we be found faithful?

Seminary In Summer

Two members of our college faculties are making their home at the Seminary for the month of August. Walter H. Hohmann, Bethel College, and Howard Raid of the faculty of Bluffton College, are attending the workshop put on at the University of Chicago. Problems in college administration are selected for study during the period. Prof. and Mrs. R. A. Lantz of the Bluffton faculty have also been present for a few days visit.

Elmer Ediger and family spent a day here recently visiting the Seminary and selecting an apartment for next year. A few days later the M.C.C. truck from Akron arrived with the Ediger baggage and furniture. Elmer will be one of our students next year.

Word has been received here that David and LaVeta Habegger who graduated from the Seminary this spring and have been serving during the summer at the Mental Hospital at Morristown, N. J., have been accepted by the Foreign Mission Board for service on the Montana mission field. They expect to go to the field early in the fall.

Summer is the time for painting, repairing and making modifications. Returning students will find that the old iron fence which separated our home from the former neighbor's place has been torn down. Since all of the property in this half block now belongs to the Seminary it is being surrounded by a single fence while new walks help give a sense of unity.

There has been such a demand on the part of children in the neighborhood to use our lovely lawn as a playground that it has been decided to permit playing from 9:00 to 10:00 a.m. and 7:00 to 8:00 p.m. each day. Jacob and Beth Goering take responsibility for giving permission and maintaining order. One of the great needs of this area is supervised play. Children are responsive to interest but little has been done for them and most of them live in apartment houses with little or no play area except the streets.

Rev. Marvin Dirks, formerly of the China Mission and now with the Seminary, is serving the Bethel Church at Mountain Lake for the summer. Having been previously ordained as a missionary, the Bethel Church is arranging for his ordination to the full ministry. The service is announced for August 21 and Dr. Pannabecker is to officiate. The Dirks family plan to be back again this fall to continue his teaching in the music department.

Jottings

—First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California: Reverend and Mrs. P. K. Regier are now vacationing in the Midwest, spending some time with their daughter Gladys and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. John Vaughan, in Wisconsin. During Reverend Regier's absence our summer intern pastor, Rudolph Martens, a Mennonite Biblical Seminary student, is assuming the pastoral duties. The enlarging of our church auditorium and basement begun in April is gradually advancing, with a good part of the work being done by volunteer labor. —Corr.

—The Swiss-Mennonite Group that immigrated into Kansas from Volhynia, Russia, in 1874, is arranging for a Seventy-fifth Anniversary Celebration to be held at the Hopefield Mennonite Church west of Moundridge, Kansas on September 5, 1949. A large tent is to be set up on the spot where the Immigrant House stood, with the forenoon and the afternoon sessions being held in this tent. An evening session will be held in the Eden Mennonite Church.

This group consists of the greater part of the membership of the following churches, Hopefield and Eden of Moundridge, First Mennonite at Pretty Prairie, Bethany and Zion in Kingman County, and the First Mennonite of Christian at Moundridge. Quite a number of other churches in Kansas have some members that come from this Swiss-Mennonite Group.

—Bethany Church, Quakertown, Pennsylvania: We received a letter from Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander relating some of his experiences among the Mennonites of South America. He is on his way back but will have a few stop-overs on the way. We expect him to be home about August 10. We will be so happy to have him back again. Among our guest speakers were Mr. Walter Temple, deacon of the Germantown church; Rev. Malcolm Wenger, missionary among the Cheyenne Indians, Busby, Montana; Rev. Wolfe, Pastor of the Germantown church; Mr. Claude Boyer, a student at Bluffton College and Rev. A. S. Rosenberger who spoke to us twice. We thank God for all these rich messages.—Mrs.Ed. K. Stoneback, Corr.

—First Mennonite Church, Fredonia, Kansas: The first week of July, Rev. B. H. Jantzen of the Western District Conference, was a guest in our homes. —Mennonite Country Church, Monroe, Washington: On July 17, Oscar Barnhart was visiting our church and brought us a heart-searching message based on Hebrew 10:14. "For by an offering He hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified." August 2, the quartet from Los Angeles gave a song and testimonial program which was enjoyed and appreciated by everyone. Rev. Unruh has started an instruction class and quite a number are taking part.—Mrs. Gus Zerger, Corr.

—First Church, Pretty Prairie, Kansas: We were privileged to have Rev. Orlando Waltner of India, in charge of the Sunday morning Services, August 7. While in our midst, Missionary Waltner received word that his passport has been received to return to India, August 26. Rev. and Mrs. Lester Wuthrich, who have just returned from China, will be with us for our services, August 21. We were glad for the many friends who participated in the C. E. Convention. The theme "Forward With Christ," truly is a challenge for us all. Rev. David C. Wedel was the evening speaker—Ralph Krehbiel, Corr.

The Krefeld Work Camp

This Spring, the M.C.C. sponsored a Voluntary Service project at Krefeld, Germany. At Osterath there is a refugee Evangelische congregation. This congregation had no house of worship. The work camp undertook to construct a barracks church for them. There were 20 young people who came from five countries to participate in this work camp. The following is a report on the unique Christian endeavor—a work camp.

WE WEREN'T Germans or Americans in this camp; we were just people" . . . . "In my circle of acquaintances everyone had become mercenary and selfish. I thought that there were hardly any people left who do good without expecting something in return" . . . "What I like about this camp is that we say less about religion, but do more about it" . . . "I have just had some sad experiences and no longer cared to live. Now my whole life has been changed" . . . "You don't know how hard it is for us to believe. We must see and feel again and again the demonstration of the simple, vital faith that we experienced here" . . . "The time I spent in the camp enriched my inner life and brought me near to God" "I gained an insight into a joyful, unselfish service for the Lord."

A common and worthy task bring people together and unites them in fellowship. A work camp has that quality.

"Son of man, can these dry bones live?" This question posed by God to Ezekiel on the valley of dry bones might well be asked regarding much of Europe's christendom today. Can the skeleton of lifeless faith in hazy, impotent creedal concepts be reinfused with a new, living and acting belief in a living Christ? According to these few random testimonials from participants in several of our voluntary service camps, one can say, "Yes, these dry bones can live."

To attribute this much effectiveness to voluntary service is not to claim that a whole continent can be transformed by a few small camps, but these statements do indicate that there is a response to a Christianity that is genuinely realistic and tangible. Voluntary Service is a demonstration in Christian living and community, and in certain respects, a logical sequence of the relief program. In relief there was a demonstration—Christian love ministering to human need, with the demonstration incidental to the ministry. But in a sense this demonstration was only an exhibition, because it was viewed from without by the beneficiary. It did not imply his participation. The automobile was in the show window where it could be seen at will, but voluntary service can say, "Come in and drive it yourself."

At a certain point this illustration breaks down because faith is not acquired as one acquires an automobile. On the other hand, Voluntary Service actually goes much further. Here people of all types are welcomed, regardless of nationality or politics. There is a balanced program of camp life where every aspect — physical, social, cultural, recreational, spiritual—is held in its proper proportion. But the basic pattern and atmosphere, the major premise, of the camp life is Christian. Here is the world in miniature in a little circle of 15 or 30 young people, where all the problems of man's relationship to God and to his fellowman arise. There is work to be done, decisions to be made, opinions of others must be respected. In other words, a harmonious community must be achieved. The camp leadership rests on a core of Christians who seek to fulfill the principles of the gospel in every respect—in worship, work, and fellowship. In this atmosphere the agnostic finds the veneer on his unbelief grows thin, the sincere doubter and seeker may take his first step of faith, the inexperienced Christian finds joy and growth in service, the lonely finds friendship, the embittered soul from

Voluntary Service Builds -- a Barrack

(During the month of April Voluntary Service sponsored a special work project in Krefeld, Germany.)

A HALF hour's drive by Volkswagon from the heart of Krefeld, a half hour's drive from the Sportsplatz by M.C.C. bus, on the road to Münchengladbach, there is a plot of ground in that section which is known as Osterath." If you had not been told of the significance of this spot, not seen a strange looking grey bus sitting to the side of the road in front of it . . . or had you not seen a group of young people dressed in old work clothes and hard at work, you might have driven by or thought this an ordinary looking place except for the high wire fence around it. But like countless others you too might have become a victim of curiosity and stopped—a part of a strange gathering of on-lookers — a farmer on a bicycle, two women with market baskets over their arms, children on their way to school and a car or two.

Why the importance of this place, this small plot of ground? Why all this activity? And what of this sign —a cross, clasped hands, a dove, the words "Im Namen Christi" and "Mennonite Central Committee?"

They all worked together to build the barracks church for a refugee Evangelische congregation.

Here in Osterath are some 5,000 refugees. There has always been a congregation of Evangelisch people here. But since the war and due to the heavy influx of refugees this small congregation has multiplied until now there is a thriving body of believers. Ministering to this congregation is no small task. The first and major obstacle was the lack of a church house. For the past period the group had been meeting in a room of a textile factory. The place of worship was small and inadequate for their needs. Through Dr. Cattapoel, the Mennonite minister in Krefeld, M.C.C. heard of this Gemeinde, or congregation. To M.C.C. this sounded like a good work project for voluntary service and also an opportunity to help where it was needed.

After negotiations with military government, and under the name of the Mennonite Central Committee 20 young people from five different nations gathered. Girls worked right alongside the boys, mixing cement, shovelling sand and dirt, laying bricks. Here two German students and an American girl helping put up beams. Here a German girl laying bricks with the spirit of a professional. Wielding another trowel—a young German student. A Swiss, French, and German sifting sand and carrying cement. After several days of real "groundwork" the barracks arrived. It was a real thrill to see the pieces being lifted one by one from the truck and piled beside the foundation. When the first beams were in place the entire barracks seemed to fit together with the magic of a jig saw puzzle.

Every day the group had visitors —from the press, from MCC, from the Gemeinde. Cameras clicked constantly. Over and over again the Pfarrer of the congregation as well as some of the laymen came to express their gratitude.

Day by day, along with the building of the foundation, the laying of the bricks, there developed a group spirit, a unity. Here and there one could see a small group working and discussing last night's lecture. Here came the spontaneous questions of "Why do Mennonites believe . . ." "What do you think of nonresistance?" Simply, but well said by a German boy, and expressing the feeling of the group, "We're not Germans, Americans, Dutch, French . . . we're just people!"

whom the war has taken everything again can feel something of the goodness of God, the skeptic who had been alienated from the church by her inconsistencies sees that there can be and is a genuine Christianity, and the militaristic see the Christian way of peace.

Voluntary Service? Yes, We need to continue and increase it.

"It is difficult to conceive of a point where a person has the opportunity of a more powerful projection of his beliefs than at this point where he meets the government in the person of the tax collector, and say 'No!' "

Voluntary Service Builds -- A Christian Experience

THE KREFELD service unit sought to promote within itself that same feeling of Christian fellowship and worship which is found in any well-ordered Christian family. Group discussions sometimes turned to spiritual subjects and midnight oil often burned as these young people discussed problems of right and wrong.

A more formal part of each day's program were the short devotional periods before breakfast and the longer devotions held each evening. All of the students took part in these devotional periods before breakfast and the longer devotions held each evening.

The group was fortunate in being able to have speakers come in for Sunday morning services. Dr. Dirk Cattepoel of the Krefeld Mennonite Church spoke one Sunday; Peter Dyck preached the Easter sermon and also gave an afternoon message on the relationship of the individual to the State.

After a hard day's work, to relax is good. Better, to hear inspiring speakers and discuss deep questions, makes work camp all the richer.

Another religious feature of camp life was the Good Friday service held in front of the barracks in cooperation with refugee members of the Evangelische Church for whom the barrack was being built. Testimonies were given by members of the camp following a message by the Evangelische pastor.

One evening after a lively discussion a student exclaimed, "Your religion must mean an awfully lot to you Mennonites—why it must be the most important part of your life!" It is our hope that through this brief camp experience the spiritual things of life may have come to mean more to every student who participated in the unit, and that the Word of God might become a daily feature with each of them.

Appreciation - - -

For 30 years there has been an Evangelisch gemeinde (congregation) in Osterath. It began, however, with only one family moving into this area. After the last war 1000 refugees came into this area, of which 650-700 were Evangelisch church members. For a while the group met in a very small chapel, later moved to a room in a textile factory. Both were unsatisfactory; the latter because each time a service was held, the room had to be arranged and then put back in order for the next day. This was a large task. We hoped very much to build a church some day.

Dr. Cattapoel, the minister of the Mennonite congregation in Krefeld, asked us if we would like to have the help of a Voluntary Service unit. With thankfulness and joy we say Yes to this plan. Then came our friends, the students, during their vacation time, to work voluntarily under the M.C.C. With much diligence they laid the foundation and erected the barracks. With much interest our congregation saw these people take part in this activity through a love of God and their neighbor. We have seen through it some of the world-wide brotherly love and help. May God be praised and thanked.

On Good Friday afternoon we gathered with our friends who had erected the barracks. In front of the plain wooden house we had a Dankfeierstunde or a thank service. Through this service we found our common foundation, that of our Lord, Jesus Christ. In this same foundation a house is built that is greater and finer than the simple unadorned emergency church; it is His Church, the Church of faith, namely the fellowship of believers throughout the world.

After the Dankfeierstunde our congregation gathered for our Good Friday service in the room of the textile factory. We had 180 members partaking of the Lord's Supper. In our prayers we remembered the friendly help which had come to us through the goodness of God and the Mennonite Central Committee and the churches which made this possible.

At present we do not know by what means our church house will be finished and furnished. But we have entrusted our needs to God. Our wish is that this simple church will be a blessing for the many without homes and that they will find a home in it.

To the various churches and congregations who have given of their gifts we send greetings in sincere thankfulness.

The Campers Say

It was a happy and good time, our three weeks in Krefeld! I would never have believed that in such a short time we would have such a good fellowship. We felt as though we had known each other for many years. Here we could see genuine democratic living which we miss very much in the political life, for military government and democracy are a contradiction. For me it was a deep experience to see the way the Mennonites live what they believe. Their endeavor to live the words, "Give unto Ceasar what is Caesar and unto God what is God's" I felt was consistent, natural and closely related part of their lives. —j.r.—Hamburg University

For me it was new for young people of different lands to come together. We learned much in those three weeks. We in the camp were soon united through our work which we did in the Name of Christ. This work which was done in His name bound all of us together whether we were Mennonite or Evangelisch, American or German. This strong feeling of belonging together impressed me the most and was that which I liked best. —e.z.—Pirmasens

If a young man has an opportunity to be in a Voluntary Service camp he has chosen the better way. Here he comes into a new atmosphere. Here he sees people who believe and who set a good example. He sees people who give and do not expect to receive. He sees clear convictions, honesty, and he says there are still good people. He says people—and means God. He doesn't realize at first how quickly the good in him responds. He thinks further and finds himself; he believes, and finds God.

—k.a.—Frankfurt University

I like most to think of our fellowship. I personally consider one of the first and greatest tasks was fulfilled by forming a real Christian community out of a number of people who had not met before. We have our Father to thank for His blessing.

—h.w.—Kaiserslautern

I liked the democratic spirit which made us live in an atmosphere of freedom and agreement with each other, so that the mind of the youngest fellow was as important as that of the oldest one. In my opinion the idea of a "working camp" is very good. Sometimes we had to work rather hard, it's true, but that's just what brings people closer together than any discussion group or something else. It's a way to get real fellowship.

—h.w.—Kaiserslautern

We gained new appreciations and learned to understand each other. The high point of the camp was the Easter service. —w.m.—Basel, Switzerland tween concealing important vital information which would reveal the truth of a matter, and representing a man involved in a bad cause so as to bring about his rehabilitation and even conversion.

The Second Mile in the Legal Practice

In the final analysis, I suppose the answers which the lawyer will give to the problems confronting him in the legal practice will depend largely on what ends he wishes to make the legal practice serve. If he sees the practice of law as merely providing the tools for the enforcement of legal rights and to keep persons technically within the law, then I fear this task will lack a Christian framework. If, on the other hand, he attempts to relate each legal problem, each legal situation as it presents itself from day to day, to its Christian implications, and recognizes the interrelation of legal questions with moral, ethical, and religious questions, then he will be on the road to making the legal practice serve a Christian purpose.

A DIARY OF PRIVATE PRAYER by John Baillie, Scribner's; 135 pp, $1.75. This booklet contains prayers for the mornings and evenings of one month. At the end are two prayers to be added or substituted on Sundays. Mr. Baillie, professor of divinity in the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, has intended the prayers for private use, not for public worship, yet he has used a literary form which reminds one of the liturgy; the abundant use of repetitions makes the prayers at once poetic and emphatic. The book is intended as an aid to worship and for that reason there is a blank page to the left of each printed page on which one may jot down personal petitions and intercessions. In the prayers themselves there are places where blanks have been left, for instance when committing ones loved ones by name to the love and care of the Lord. The booklet is decidedly different from the ordinary run of devotional aids and the one word which best describes it is "stimulating."

Beyond Our Own

A "Christian Crusade" in which participants agree to give a tract to someone each day, and to pray for the recipients of the tracts, is launched by the American Tract Society. Purpose of the crusade, which seeks to enlist 100,000 tract distributors, is to stimulate interest in leaflet evangelism and to improve methods of using tracts. If the goal of the crusade is reached, more than 36 million tracts will be distributed annually. Participants need not use ATS tracts, although the Society will supply them with leaflets free of charge, if they so request. Henry S. Perry, the Society's executive secretary, will present the crusade and enlist active workers in it at leading Bible conferences this summer.—Watchman Examiner

NEW ORLEANS—The Rev. Carl Schutten, representing the National Catholic Bishop's Re-Settlement Program, recently reported that 150 displaced persons resettled on Louisiana sugar cane plantations were so ill-paid their children were "crying for food and milk." He conceded that the DP's weren't any worse off than native Americans who worked in the sugar cane fields of Louisiana. Men work for $2.90 for a 9-hour day,—women get $2.80 for an 8-hour day. And there's no pay for rainy days. He estimated that cane field workers averaged about 4 full days per week—thus making less than $12 a week. Father Schutten said housing for the cane field workers was not bad but that they had to buy furnishings, pay electric and gas bills, food and clothes, and that the only place for the DP's to cash their checks was the plantation commissionary where prices for staples are higher than in New Orleans. Thus the DP never quite makes ends meet, gets in debt to the plantation store and can never get ahead enough to pay his debts and leave. Conditions were described as "semi-servitude." The Displaced Persons Commission has ordered an investigation of DP conditions in Louisiana.—Between the Lines

ISRAELI. In a decision of far-reaching significance, the Israeli District Court in Jerusalem annulled a marriage between a non-Jew and a Jewish woman on the ground that mixed marriages are invalid under Jewish law. The marriage in question took place at a registry office in Paris. It is the first time an Israeli civil court has ruled that Jewish religoius law is supreme in matters affecting the personnel status of Israeli citizens. The court decision means that even if the non-Jewish partner to a marriage becomes a Jew, the marriage is still void and the couple must remarry with Jewish religious rites.—Gospel Herald

Publish "Service for Peace"

SERVICE FOR PEACE, the 500-page history of Mennonite Civilian Public Service to be released in early August, was authorized by the Mennonite Central Committee in its December, 1945, annual meeting. At that time the MCC agreed upon the size of the book, the number to be printed, and the contents. Melvin Gingerich, who had obtained a doctor's degree in history and who had previously done considerable historical writing, was selected by the MCC Executive Committee to write the book.

The first part of the work consisted of the collection of camp papers, records, diaries, and journals pertaining to CPS, and the campers' evaluations of their own experiences. During the latter months of the camp program, a number of assignees were placed at Akron to work as research assistants under the direction of Brother Gingerich. The author in the meantime continued his visitation of C.P.S. camps as much as his teaching duties permitted in order to obtain a first-hand acquaintance with all types of camps.

After all of the preliminary work had been done, Brother Gingerich went to the Akron M.C.C. headquarters where he spent six months in further study of these records and of the official correspondence and minutes of the M.C.C. He also made several trips to Washington where he examined the records of the National Service Board for Religious Objectors and certain records of the Selective Service System and interviewed government officials.

When each chapter was completed, it was sent to all members of the MCC Executive Committee for their critical reading as well as to a number of other men informed concerning the history of CPS. In addition, individual chapters were submitted to a number of men who had had particular experience in the areas discussed. The entire book, therefore, was critically read and evaluated by ten men and individual chapters by a dozen others before the manuscript was sent to the printers.

SERVICE FOR PEACE is being published and financed by the Mennonite Central Committee. Former campers will order their personal copies directly from the M.C.C. in order to get the C.P.S. reduction. Others may secure the book for $3 from the Conference book stores at Newton, Kansas, Berne, Indiana or Rosthern, Saskatchewan.

perfunctory, insensitive staff members and officials. Our workers are this way, often unconsciously, because of their background of Christian homes, schools, communities. If they have any fault it is more often on the side of being too quiet and passive rather than too bold. Our unit members as a whole, possibly, might take more initiative and be more aggressive—not in a "preachy" sort of way, but in experimenting with techniques of friendliness and in registering in a positive way a protest against the indifference, carelessness, and ethical indifference which exists on the part of many staff members in institutions."

A MEDITATION

STRENGTH COMES INTO OUR LIVES when our assurance of Christ's forgiveness grows into a life surrendered to the divine way. It is then that the power of God becomes ours and we live in his strength. For just as the hand of Jesus touched the paralytic and made him whole again, and the eyes of the blind man and caused him to see, and the body of the dead and made it start into life again, so, once we feel the vitalizing power of his truth and his touch, our lives will rise in majesty through victories which seem almost superhuman, and no sufferings can defeat us. The trouble with too many of us as Christians is that there has been no surrender to the will of God, no merging of our interests with the divine truth. We have never known the gripping power of the Saviour. That is why we break under suffering. That is why we become desperate under pain. That is why we do not experience the secret of strength. Our lives are not surrendered enough to lay hold of his power.—George Taylor in Watchman Examiner.

AN ATTITUDE WE WOULD NOT TOLERATE in any other sphere of our lives we quietly put up with and on occasion even nourish in the sphere of Christian education. As the Christian Education Emphasis Period rolls around again, many of us will be tempted to say, "We got along excellently without it fifty years ago. Our grandfathers and grandmothers didn't need all this attention to Christian education. All these special emphases periods are a waste of money and the people's time who prepare the promotional material." But wait a moment! We don't live in the world of our grandfathers and grandmothers. We have streamlined automobiles that help to raise our cost of living considerably; we would not go back to the horse and buggy, the horse and wagon, or the horse and a hand-plow; we simply could not keep pace with our time. We admit we are living in a different world and we adjust accordingly. So it could be said of many other areas of our lives such as household conveniences, medical help, and education in general. But for some reason we ignore the fact that we live in a streamlined age spiritually speaking. Sin is being more and more streamlined to make it look decent! How can people become convinced and convicted of sin and thus converted unless all the propaganda, false advertising, and filthy literature that men are confronted with many times a day is offset by a conscious systematic program that holds before people in just as sustained a way the viciousness of sin, injustice, greed, and falsehood as well as the glorious deliverance and redemption that is in Jesus Christ. To remind us of this important task the Board of Education of the General Conference has sent to each of the pastors in the entire General Conference an attractive poster to be placed on the church's bulletin board. There are also included materials that suggest ways of emphasizing the need for Christian education in the program of the Church. Then there have been made available church bulletins in two colors with the design found on the cover of this week's issue of THE MENNONITE. These may be used for the Sunday that is especially set aside for Christian education in the period from August 28 to September 25. Then let us remember that the value of such a special day is directly in proportion to the careful planning for opportunity to put this concern into daily action after Christian Education Sunday.—JJE

A WHOLE NEW VOCABULARY has broken in upon us with the advent of Voluntary Service. So new is it that many are extremely fearful of the whole program. If the program is used by some individuals to satisfy a craving that is in reality calling them to the mission field or the ministry, then obviously, the result is tragic. If the program is used by individuals to silence with deeds of service, an inner voice that is calling for a deeper decision for God, the result is likewise tragic. However, this is certainly the exception rather than the rule. Here is an opportunity opened to young people who have no feeling of a particular "call" but who want to devote at least a part of their life in service to God and others. Far from being a detraction from bringing people into what we have termed "full-time service" it is actually drawing people to it. The Church desperately needs this program in order to provide a channel of service for those who, otherwise, because they are aware of no particular "call" may be caught immediately in the "make-all-the-money-you-can-complex" and thus be lost entirely to the Church Far from taking the place of any missionary effort of the church, it is in reality giving the Church another missionary "arm." In the past young people had few alternatives for service in the Church. If they had no call, they more or less took it for granted that the only thing left for them to do was to get out into the business world where there seldom is a direct carryover from Sunday's experience into the week. Voluntary Service offers opportunities broad enough to give any Christian regardless of specific talent an opportunity to express his testimony to faith in Christ through that talent. Let us pray for and support Voluntary Service.—J.J.E.

A LOCAL UNIT of one of the country's largest veterans organizations gave to ten churches of the immediate area (somewhere in Nebraska) a $100 gift shortly before Easter. According to reports, no strings were attached but one of the local citizens, not a member of the organization, said, "This gift will shut the churches up for another year." At least one of the ten churches returned the gift with a letter from the official board of the church. Among the reasons for returning the money was an objection to the operation of the club run by the organization. Said they, "We have long regarded this institution as carrying on a practice in violation of both moral and civil law." They went on to say, "any church is in danger of losing its distinctive identity . . . when it gladly receives . . . funds which may serve to blind it to evils of an organization like the . . . club." Mennonite churches will not be in any immediate danger of receiving gifts from veterans organizations, but one wonders in how many of our churches and how many of us in positions of responsibility let ourselves become blind to the terror of sin in influential people.—J.J.E.

The Ideal of a Teacher

THE SWISS have erected two statues in honor of the great teacher, Pestalozzi. The first represents the teacher with two children by his side—a boy and a girl. The face of the teacher is turned down toward the faces of his pupils. The children's faces turn upward toward their beloved teacher, their eyes fixed intently upon him. Years later the Swiss people felt

Christian Education - - Is It Important?

by Elva Schrock

A CLASS of intermediates was discussing the place and purpose of the Christian church. They reached the conclusion that the Church had an importance that man-made institutions did not. "Do you really think," asked the teacher, "that the Church is more important than the public school, than clubs, or sports?" They quickly assented, but when the teacher put the question, "Supposing there is an important basket ball game scheduled; the same evening there is a meeting at the church, prayer meeting, or even a special service, such as a visiting missionary speaker—to which will you go?" There was silence for they saw at once that to say in words that the Church was important was often much easier than to affirm its importance by our loyalties.

Conviction?

As we face a new educational year in the Church, as we outline our program of teaching and learning with the maximum of Christian growth as our objective, let us mature Christians honestly examine our attitudes. Do they stand the test as they are translated into action? What importance do we place on Christian education? To be convinced of its importance we have only to examine the teaching ministry of Jesus. He preached to the multitudes, but He prepared the responsive few by intensive teaching; on those few He depended for the building of His Kingdom. Theoretically we are convinced of the importance of Christian teaching; but are our attitudes such that our program of Christian education and our responses to it will stand the test?

How does our program of Christian education compare with our secular program of education? Compare (perhaps "contrast" would be the better term) our equipment, our materials for teaching, and our techniques and methods. At once we hear the cry that we haven't the necessary money in our churches. True, but doesn't the fact that we so easily excuse ourselves condemn us? Convinced of its value, we are ready to pay the bills for public education.

Facilities?

In how many of our churches do we have adequate classroom facilities? In some of our churches we are forced to use the church kitchen and the cloak halls as classrooms. Good teaching can be done even under these conditions by a consecrated, alert teacher; but no church should be satisfied with them. Do we have a blackboard and bulletin board available to each class? Are we building up and using a church library? Are we building up the equipment for visual education? A beginning can be made in these fields with very little outlay of money. Are we doing all we should to meet the need for social development in a Christian atmosphere? Are we giving our children and young people opportunity to work in missionary and service projects? All these things require adult leadership; many people must give of themselves in sacrificial service if the church is to carry on a well-rounded program of Christian Education.

Responsibility?

What is our attitude if we do accept the responsibility of teaching a class? Are we loyal to the task, or do we find it easy to absent ourselves from the class if there is a family reunion, or when a picnic, or a trip to the city, is on our schedule? Do we give adequate time to preparation or is it a matter of a hurried hour late on Saturday night? Are we interested enough in the members of our class to have through-the-week contacts with them? Our answers to these questions indicate our attitudes; they register the degree of importance we place on our task of Christian teaching.

Response? And How?

If you are among those who do not feel themselves qualified to serve as teachers, have you ever asked yourself whether you might not have a place in the church's educational program? A church feels that a vacation Bible school offers a real opportunity and decides to organize one for its children. Then comes the difficulty of securing teachers; anyone who consents to teach does so at a sacrifice of themselves, for it requires much more than the two and one-half hours or more that the school is in session. Often busy mothers, well-qualified to teach, would feel they could do so without neglect of their families if someone would offer to do the family laundry during those weeks, or to assist in seasonal tasks such as canning, or to care for small children. There are women who do not like to teach who enjoy entertaining or who have a knack for handwork; they could help guide the social life of the church's young people or assist them with service projects. There are men who have hobbies

Christian Education and Evangelism

by Paul Shelly

BEFORE Jesus Christ left this world He gave a final commission to His disciples: "Go therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all that I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, to the close of the age" (Matthew 28:19-20—R.S.V.).

I

Jesus Christ Envisions a Total Task

As one examines the commission of Jesus Christ, he is immediately aware of the fact that He did not divide up His task for the disciples into separate and component parts. There was but one task! It makes very little difference what one calls it. The all-inclusive term, Christian education, probably covers it better than any other one term.

Let us examine this total commission. It includes evangelism. The followers of Jesus Christ were told to make disciples of all nations. The program of the church must always be concerned with evangelism, with the introducing of people to Jesus Christ. Thus, the local church is to make disciples of all the children of the members in its constituency and also to reach out to those people in the community who have no church home. The Christian college and high school must also have this phase of the commission as one of its major objectives and each one realize that its first function with each student is to make certain of their relationship with Jesus Christ. This is also the dominating motive of our mission program.

The commission also embraces the work of the local church, for we are instructed to baptize these disciples. When a person voluntarily chooses to accept Jesus Christ into his life, he then receives baptism as an outward symbol of that inner experience, and, if he has sincerely repented, becomes a part of the true Church of which Jesus Christ Himself is the head. He also unites with a local church through which he now actively works in the service of His new master. We dare not neglect this phase of our task.

The commission also involves the teaching of Christian ethics, for we are commanded to teach the disciples to observe all that Christ Himself taught. Much of our work is in this area: One of the amazing facts of the New Testament is the time and energy which Paul spent in fulfilling this aspect of the commission. There is a tendency to forget the years he spent in Corinth and in Ephesus not only in the work of evangelization but also in teaching the new converts how to live in accordance with the teachings of Jesus Christ. We are also inclined to forget the practical injunctions in all of his epistles in which he urges these "babes in Christ" to live as Christians. Certainly in an age when so many Christians are patterning their lives after the standards of the world instead of the standards of the living Christ we dare not minimize this part of our program.

There is a final part of this commission. It is the promise of Christ's continued presence. We need not perform our tasks in our own strength. This phase of the commission also needs to be emphasized. We must constantly remind ourselves that Christ's presence and power are available for us at all times and that it is only as we rely on these resources that we can be effective servants for Him. As we apply this aspect of the commission to others we must also be reminded of the fact that to teach people to follow the teachings of Jesus Christ without introducing them to Him is of no avail.

The Church Today Tends to Conceive of Evangelism and Christian Education As Two Separate Tasks

One of the sad facts in regard to Protestant churches today is that we tend to differentiate between these two tasks. Some claim that they believe in evangelism, feeling that this is the primary and almost only function of the church. The second and third aspects of the commission, that of the work of the local church and that of teaching people to live in keeping with the total teachings of Jesus Christ, are almost entirely neglected.

There are others who would teach us that Christian education, conceived in a narrow sense, is the total work of the Church pointing out that if we teach certain truths well enough that people in their own power can practice the teachings of Jesus Christ. They sadly neglect the first and fourth parts of the commission. They forget that before people can fulfill the teachings of Jesus Christ they must become new creatures, must become His disciples, and that we can only live in accordance with His will if we constantly depend on Him for power and guidance.

The Challenge to Recapture the Total Commission

Possibly the Number One need in Protestantism today is to recapture the total vision of Jesus Christ. The

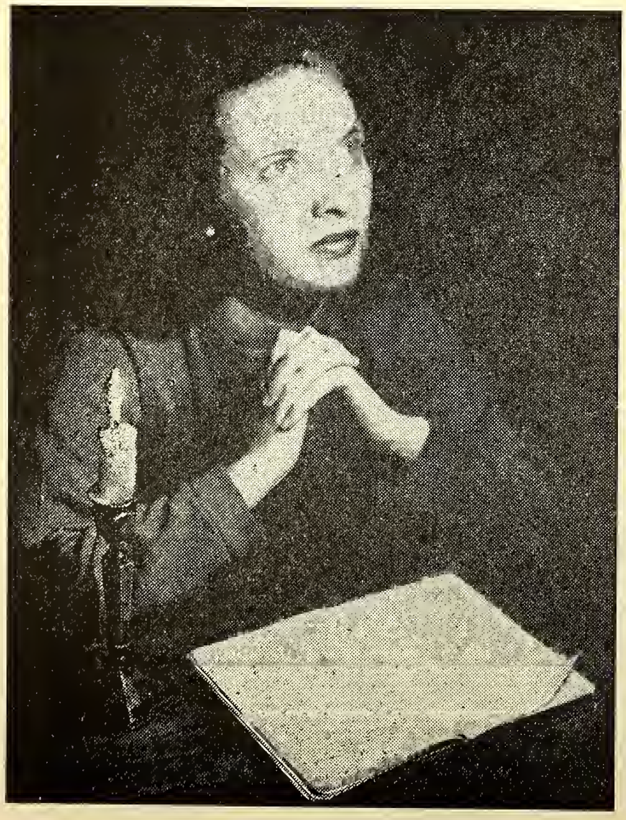
by Orlando Goering

SPIRITUAL resources for the teacher are not greatly different from the spiritual resources available to any other vocation or profession, for teachers are merely human beings discharging a particular phase of the human effort.

The Bible

Any and every list of spiritual resources invariably includes the Scriptures, and rightly so. While there is unanimity of opinion about the importance of the Bible, there are many uses made of the Scriptures, some of which can hardly be regarded as a spiritual resource.

At times the Scriptures is regarded as a "keepsake," like a linen handkerchief which a girl receives for serving at her friend's wedding—it is carefully encased and preserved, constantly to be admired, but never to be examined long or critically lest its purity be marred—and to put it to practical use in daily life is unthinkable. At times the Bible is treated as a primitive fetish, the magic charm to remedy "our often infirmities," personal and social. So stories are told of how it stops bullets from reaching a soldier's heart in battle; how by a chance-opening of the Bible men find salvation, vocational guidance, etc., upon the accidental page before them; ad infinitum. In subtler forms this fetish-conception expresses itself when random verses are quoted to a searching soul's quest for spiritual insight or again in reply to those who ridicule one's beliefs. While the response has no relation to the question, yet somehow, because it is the Scripture, it is regarded as efficacious; thus used religion becomes scarcely differentiated from primitive magic.



Despite these misuses the Bible is a great spiritual resource. It doesn't need our feeble arguments and wobbly theories to protect and defend it. It can stand on its own feet. It has a right to speak for itself. By its own declaration it needs no protection, but its message will stand though heaven and earth pass away (Matt. 24:35). The faithful can lay down the burden of looking after it as a delicate liability and begin letting the Bible look after them. It will be a spiritual resource as we let it lead us to Abraham to see that God is a faithful and dependable guide for our spiritual pilgrimage. It will introduce us to the prophets, those creative pioneers who boldly declared the will of God in the face of engulfing paganism, materialism, and nationalism, enunciating the eternal principles, the spiritual framework, upon which a solution of our modern political, economic, social dilemnas must proceed. Lonely saints they were, who demonstrated for us the sustaining revelation that "one man and God are a majority." Gracious priests it will give us, who lead men more deeply into God's presence, there to speak healing and forgiveness to troubled hearts. In the Scriptures we will meet concerned lawmakers who create a healthy public opinion and bring the fruit of ethical sensitivity within the reach of all, till "the sun of righteousness shall rise with healing in its wings; pert wise men pointing out the patterns of conduct making up the good life; thoughtful historians who link men's lives to history and give them a sense of destiny; and psalmists voicing our inmost feelings before God. The Gospels introduce us to Jesus, the Lord of the Scriptures, the supreme revelation of God, who fired the Church with a missionary zeal that sent them to the ends of the earth; who transformed eleven ordinary men into apostles whose very shadow cast waves of healing over the sick and faint (Acts 5:15); whose martyrs turn our attention from the temporal, teaching us to see things in the perspective of eternity. In the face of failure and bereavement they give us the confident realization that the ultimate meaning and fulfillment of God's will and human destiny lies beyond history.

The Bible is no museum-piece to charm our antiquarian fancies, nor is it the magic wand to circumvent the evil and tragedy of the world. It is the life-giving guide for those who courageously face reality.

Prayer

As commonly mentioned as the Scriptures, and equally as neglected as a spiritual resource, is prayer. Testimonies of answered prayer soon make it obvious that much of our praying has remained on an infantile level, a level at which the pray-er by requesting, pleading, cajoling seeks to weedle out another favor from the Power that will grant it if He is caught in the right mood and manipulated properly. To twentieth century

The Bible and Christian Education

by Arnold Regier

WHEN a young man packs his grips preparing for his first year of college, many thoughtful concerns enter into his mind. "What are some of the things which I will need in college? — books, pictures, bedding, typewriter, musical instruments, yes, and a Bible." He is rather concerned about this last article, for he has been taught to read his Bible at home and wonders just what place the Bible will have in his college life. He feels that this experience will probably be a testing as to his position toward God and His Holy Word.

A Concern of Parents

This concern, no doubt, lies uppermost in the parents' mind when they send their boy or girl to college for the first time. They are aware of many temptations which beset college youth today. So many of the schools of our day take such a hostile attitude toward indoctrination and Bible study that one is fearful that this trend may be felt in our own colleges. Though the home and the churches seek to instill a love and appreciation for God's Word in the hearts of their youth, one is concerned as to whether it is strong enough to withstand the storms of life, especially when students are aways from home for long periods of time.

A Concern of the College

This is one of the chief concerns of our colleges also. One of the most acute questions which stands before every college administration is, what place does the Bible have in Christian education? How does it fit in our college program? What shall the requirements be in Bible study relative to the other courses in the college curriculum? Such questions bring about constant appraisal and evaluation on the part of the college staffs.

In our Mennonite schools we are fully aware that the Bible must be the central point around which all other courses must be planned and toward which all studies must focus. It is the key to our Mennonite heritage. If the authority and the teachings of the Bible are lost, we have but little to hold on to. The freedom of life which we enjoy in America and the democratic form of church government makes the emphasis on the authority of the Scriptures all the more imperative.

Secondly, we find in the Bible an adequate source of instruction for our day. It is on this point that we shall direct our thoughts relative to the Bible and Christian Education.

I. The Bible As an Historical Source

The Bible gives an historical background of God's dealings with man. The greater part of the Scriptures are not exhaustive but sufficient to give its readers an insight as to the developments relative to God's plan of Salvation. It is an interesting study, and with the aid of archeological findings one can draw many practical lessons for our own day.

In studying the historical phase of the Scriptures, especially the Old Testament, it might be helpful if the student learns to shift his inquiry from a modern occidental "how" to an oriental emphasis "why." The historical writers of the earlier periods were not interested so much as to how an event took place but why it was brought about. When we read the account of Israel's Exodus from Egypt, we may not be able to comprehend fully the manner in which God brought them forth to the promised land, but we can fully appreciate with the writer the significance of God's leadings and the meaning which these experiences had for Israel in their later history.

The Bible also gives an objective religious interpretation of the history of man. This is of great significance for our day. Though modern history emphasizes an objective study it is most often influenced from naturalistic and materialistic viewpoints. The writers of Scripture through the inspiration of the Holy Spirit viewed history from God's standpoint. It is a lesson which we must learn to do in all of our studies.

II. Bible Deals with Man's Inner Conflicts

The Bible gives an historical account of the development of social institutions such as the family, the State, and the Church, and gives much valuable information concerning these institutions. The most significant study in the Scriptures, however, deals with the inner conflicts of man himself. Most of the social ills of mankind are traceable to these tensions within man himself. The Bible gives us much light on the problems even in our day.

God's Word tells us that sin is the cause of all evil. Satan and his forces are rampant in the world about us. Man has turned against God and the only hope for man is to return to God and accept God's plan of salvation through Jesus Christ our Lord and Savior.

Christian Education today is placing a great emphasis upon the nature of man, his problems, and the sources of power which will help him overcome the trials of life. Psychology has advanced far within the last decade in giving man a picture of himself and his inner struggles. What psychology fails to do is to give the necessary resources to cope with these problems. The Bible here comes to our aid in depicting the greatest Physician of all times who in Himself is the Way and the Truth and the Life. It is the best source for the study of psychology that we can ever find.

In conclusion may I state that the Bible is of significance in the spread of the gospel in all parts of the world. We read of its power in all lands of this world. It is equally important as the central textbook in Christian education. It is the chief source for study in our schools, and it is being regarded more highly than ever as the fountain of strength in our Christian faith and our daily walk in life.

A Sermon for Christian Sunday

Prepared by Rev. Harry Yoder, Bluffton, Ohio

Christian Education Sunday is one of the greatest in the entire year. It is a day when we especially consider the first part of Christ's great commission to His followers given in Matthew 28:19,20:

> "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations . . .
> teaching them to observe all things whatsoever
> I have commanded you."

We of the Mennonite church would do well to ask ourselves if we have accepted our full responsibility in this command of our Lord. We have been quite willing to baptize and receive members into the church, as well as to send missionaries to baptize, but have we emphasized the teaching program of our church to the full extent of Christ's command? Jesus said definitely, "Teach all nations." Perhaps the weakness of our church today lies in the fact that we have not impressed deeply in the minds of our people the great doctrines and principles of the Christian religion. What a person understands and believes does make a difference in his life.

Webster says, "Education is the growth and development of our natural powers. It is discipline, training." Christian education is the plus in the educational system of our church. We are not only interested in developing our natural powers but in giving the spiritual emphasis to the use of our developed talents.

Sometime ago I attended a three-ring circus where a pig performed by jumping over a small stile. Each time it jumped over the stile the one in charge induced it to do so by giving it a drink of milk from a bottle. Likewise, the seal was trained to walk up a step ladder and balance a rubber ball on the tip of its nose. Following each performance the animal was given a piece of meat to eat. These beasts were called educated animals. They worked because of the reward and the enjoyment they themselves received.

Christian education takes one beyond the animal stage in the course of development and growth. Wherever our capacities are increased in the light of the Christian religion and whenever the soul responds to the bidding of God's Spirit it means that life will be Christ-centered. Then the primary purpose of education will be to prepare one for a life of love, service, and enjoyment. Christian Education means that lives have been consecrated and dedicated to Christ's cause.

Certainly, one of the supreme needs of our generation is strong, clear Christian thinking. Thousands of Christians are timid—other thousands are cowardly—other thousands are sloppy-minded. We have converted the mind into a rag bag into which we cram all the odds and ends of others' thoughts and all kinds of entertainments but do no real Christian thinking of our own. In one of his great sermons Isaiah cried out saying, "The ox knows his owner, the ass his master's crib, but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider." The Church is impotent and the State is rotten because Christians do not use their minds. How far have we advanced from the days of Isaiah? Have we developed our natural powers of mind in the light of Christian thinking? Paul says, "Study to show thyself approved unto God." We must allow God to meet us in our thinking.

Today millions of people are looking for a better world in which to live. There is only one place where that better world will be found. That is in the hearts of men. This world will never be better until the hearts of men have been changed. Too often we have taken man's way instead of God's way. It is only natural for man to do as Samuel did when he was looking for a leader for Israel. He first looked at the big man who had the appearance of a king—a leader. But God said, "Look not on his countenance or on the height of his stature, because I have refused him: for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh upon the heart." That is simply to say that the better world will come not by how man looks but by what he is. Tinker with the Constitution, sign treaties, alter here and there, but the heart and will of men are really the strategic points. Christian education has the great task of correcting the heart and mind of men.

As we come to Christian Education Sunday, perhaps there is little or no disagreement as to what needs to be done, but the big question is how and who.

In the first place let us remember that Christianity is basically very personal. In the 21st chapter of John, when Peter was concerned about what Jesus would have an approaching fellow-disciple do, the Master's answer to Peter was, "What is that to thee? Follow thou me." If the work of Christian education is ever to be accomplished, it will be through the fact that millions of individuals take the responsibility. In every church and every community there must be many individuals who will make it their own personal way of life.

A second important point through which to sponsor this great movement is the home. At election time a familiar phrase is "As goes Maine so goes the Nation." In the area of Christian education we can well say, "As goes the home so goes the Church." Unless young parents will take the responsibility of building strong Christian family units, we may have little hope of the whole Christian movement lasting more than a generation or two. Ideals, principles, and habits are carried on from one generation to another through the home.

Needless to say, our local church school units need to sit in conference, with all teachers and officers present, to consider their grave responsibility in teaching the word of God. Often it is simply neglect and indifference that our teaching mission fails. If we would not be guilty in this, a thorough and efficient organization must be set up.

Finally, let us all remember that we have a great responsibility in the area of intercessory prayer for Christian Education. As thousands of our boys and girls enter another school year, whether near home or at a distance, how many of them realize definitely that the earnest prayers of interested fellow Christians follow them? It would be well for every Sunday school or church organization to have a special service for these young people at the opening of the school year that this statue did not truly represent their great teacher. A second statue was therefore erected in Zurish, Switzerland. Beside Pestalozzi in this statue stands a single boy. As in the first case, the face of the teacher is turned down toward the face of his pupil. He appears to be pouring out his very life for the enlightment of his pupil. The eyes of the boy are fixed, not upon the teacher, but beyond.

Every sincere Sunday-school teacher should endeavor to point his pupils to the "Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." He is, after all, the great divine Teacher of us all.—The Trumpet.

they could share; they could do much for boys by directing their energies into constructive channels. There are endless opportunities to work with the children and young people of our churches outside of classroom teaching; many ways to help them grow in Christian living. There are few people who cannot find some place of service in the educational program of the church.

Assuming that the church has an efficient, well-rounded program of Christian education, what are our individual responses to it? What attitude is displayed by the family that is very punctual for business and social engagements, the children are never late for public school, but they habitually arrive at the services of the church ten, fifteen, or twenty minutes late? Or what of the family that attends church when convenient, but allows other interests to come first and crowd out church attendance? Or the mother who doesn't register her children for Bible school, letting them go if they want to go, but not actively encouraging them? Will the children of these families grow up feeling that the church is of prime importance? Will they be trained to give their first loyalties to the things that are eternal?

The best program of Christian education will be ineffective in reaching those who do not respond by active participation. A Sunday school teacher may be able and conscientious; carefully and prayerfully she has spent much time in outlining the lessons of a quarter. She has interesting, attractive materials ready. How discouraging to come to the end of a unit and realize that several of her pupils were present only a few times. They were interested when present, and responsive; but, one Sunday the family had guests, another they went fishing, on another they had a picnic, or visited the zoo. If parents regard the Church as of real importance they will show it by their attitude; and only if parents regard it of importance will most children feel it of enough worth to enter with enthusiasm into its program.

Our Answer!

As a Church, planning our over-all educational program for another year, let us ask ourselves again whether we are really convinced of its importance. Are we conscious enough of the opportunities to nurture Christian growth to make the sacrifices required? Do we consider it of enough worth to provide the money for the necessary facilities? Also, we might ask ourselves whether we are taking full advantage of the program the church is providing for ourselves and our children? Do we say by our attitudes, by our loyalties, "This is of supreme importance, the Church and its work shall have our first allegiance?"

Church, in an attempt to carry out the total task of Jesus Christ, has divided the work into a number of categories. Some are called to be evangelists and have the making of disciples as their major objective. Others are led to be pastors, and have as their dominant interest the introducing of these disciples into the total church of Jesus Christ through a local church situation. Still others have as their chief task that of teaching and emphasize the fact that as disciples of the living Christ who are members of His Church we are commanded to live in keeping with all that He taught. There is a final group who stress the more mystical element, the fact of Christ's continued presence, and make their contribution through devotional messages and through devotional literature.

Thus Paul writes: "And his gifts were that some should be apostles, some prophets, some evangelists, some pastors and teachers, for the equipment of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for building up of the body of Christ, until we all attain to the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, to mature manhood, to the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ" (Ephesians 4:11-13—R.S.V.).

There are three concluding statements that I would like to make. The first is that the Church of Jesus Christ needs to keep in mind that all of these tasks are a part of the commission which Jesus Christ gave and that all are needed for the building up of the body of Christ. The second is that those who are called upon to do one part of the total task need to realize constantly that others who may be equally called of God are supplementing the work they are doing. This will eliminate many of the problems in the Church today. The final and probably the most important conclusion is that many Christian leaders should come to the conviction that they are called upon to do a total piece of work which includes all four aspects of the commission. Certainly the missionary, the pastor, the Christian educator, are each called upon not to specialize in one phase of the commission but to be faithful to the total task.

man this once again smacks of primitive magic; and never having learned to pray a mature prayer, he gives up praying altogether and seeks to gain his ends by his own devices. But the sad fact remains, as Georgia Harkness has stated at the opening of her latest book, "Of all the things the world now desparately needs, none is more needed than an upsurge of vital, God-centered, intelligently grounded prayer.

As a healthy corrective for our arrested development in praying examine the model prayer, Matt. 6:9-13, and the Lord's prayer in Luke 23:43. Here the spirit is that of the soul seeking to bring its purposes and desires into harmony with the will of God. This kind of praying is not easy. It requires discipline and thought.

M. C. C. Notes

Leaders Confer on Immigration

The Immigration Commissioner at Grohn, a refugee processing camp in Germany, has recently refused approval of further Mennonite refugee migration, largely because certain Mennonites who during the war had been located in a camp in the Warthegau region of Western Poland were virtually forced to accept German citizenship. This problem in the migration program was the reason for the return of C. F. Klassen from Europe to help in presenting the matter to government officials in Washington and Ottawa. Brother Klassen was accompanied in Washington by William T. Snyder, and in Ottawa by Brethren Snyder and J. J. Thiessen. Apparently no new facts have led to the negative policy being followed in Germany, but officials unfamiliar with the Mennonite people have interpreted the immigration laws to exclude them from eligibility. It is hoped that the present difficulty may be cleared so that migration of the Mennonites to the United States and Canada may again be resumed. Approximately 2,000 remaining Russian Mennonite refugees desire to go to Canada, the United States, or possibly South America.

Refunds of Travel Debt Payments

Canadian and United States relatives of Paraguay immigrants have in many cases paid the travel debt of their relatives. The first Volendam group's travel debt was $237.50 per adult and $118.75 for children between two years and twelve years. With the coming of three other transports to South America and with International Refugee Organization assistance toward ocean transportation, it was possible to lower the per-person debt to $86 and $43 by "equalizing" the amount.

Refund of excess amounts paid by Canadian and United States relatives is now being made. Persons in the United States will receive their checks from Akron, and Canadians will receive theirs through the Canadian Mennonite Board of Colonization.

China Conditions Continue Unsettled

One of the recent developments in the MCC work in China is the moving of the Hengyang orphanage to a place outside the city, for protective reasons, and the evacuation of the American workers who had been serving there. The orphanage work continues under the direction of three Chinese Mennonite workers who had been helping with this project since its opening. Except for possible looting the orphanage has sufficient resources for six months' operation. The American workers have joined other MCC personnel in work on the island of Formosa. Thus far this island has not been threatened by the military forces and communications to and from there have been normal. Although the contact with several workers located in occupied Shanghai is limited, the last word indicated that they were safe.

Ruth and Rhoda Ressler, of Scottdale, Pennsylvania, who left recently for service at the Hengyang orphanage in China, have been diverted to go instead to the new MCC unit in Japan where their services will be particularly helpful.

Personnel Notes

Elmer Ediger, who formerly served at the Akron office as Director of CPS and more recently as Director of Voluntary Service and Mental Health, has secured a leave of absence and will direct the Voluntary Service and Mental Health work on a part-time basis, with Ray Horst, of Ephrata, Pennsylvania, and Delmar Stahly, of Carlock, Illinois, serving full-time at the office in these two fields respectively.

Additional nurses are needed in the Mexico unit for hospital and clinic work, serving both Mennonites and Mexicans. Applicants should have Low German language, and preferably some knowledge of Spanish. One nurse is needed now and another in January. Write to Voluntary Service, MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Personnel for the MCC Mental Health program is also needed, including nurses with interest in psychiatric nursing, who may be available for work at Brook Lane Farm or preparatory training in other institutions. A number of voluntary construction workers will also be needed during the winter in connection with the contemplated building program at King's View Farms, the Mental Hospital project in California.

Service Unit in Kansas Opens

Topeka Kansas State Hospital for the mentally ill has been selected as the location for a year-around MCC Service Unit. The hospital administration has made an urgent request for at least twenty Mennonite service unit members. Since the state is making some revolutionary improvements there is a special shortage of attendants. To a great extent this request for help is based upon their deep appreciation for the Christian service rendered by the present MCC Summer Service Unit.

Nine one-year volunteers will begin their service at Topeka by September 7. Ralph Lehman will serve as unit leader.

As the above indicates there is need for additional workers. A special invitation is, therefore, being given to those young Christians who wish to help in this pioneering work and witness at Topeka. Six months is the preferred minimum period of service. Terms could begin September 7, October 15, and later dates. Information about the hospital, the work, has been prepared by members serving there at present. If interested, write to Voluntary Service, MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania.

giving emphasis to divine guidance for them. It will mean much to the future of the church program when prayer binds us together.

Intercessory prayer for all of our Conference schools and institutions is of prime importance. The institutions can never do their best, nor will we support them with students and finances properly until our prayer life is right. By imploring God's help and strength we will find ourselves bound together and made strong in His Work. In order to do an effective and efficient job of teaching in our total church program, we should lend more effort and support to establish strong educational centers for the purpose of training our leaders—layleaders as well as ministers and missionaries. Is Christ's Great Commission vital in our church today? "Go ye therefore and teach."

—Brudertal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: A welcome festival for Rev. and Mrs. P. W. Penner was held in our church, Sunday, August 7. The congregation had gathered on the church lawn and as the missionaries arrived, they were greeted with the singing of "Holy God, We Praise Thy Name." The program consisted of the Scripture lesson read responsively, a quartet singing a German song, a sermon of welcome by the pastor, Music by the girls' choir, responses by Rev and Mrs. Penner, singing by the congregation, and prayer by Rev. Funk. A fellowship meal at noon, gave opportunity for friends to meet and visit with the Penners, this day also being the 47th wedding anniversary of Rev. and Mrs. Penner. In the afternoon of August 16, Mrs. P. W. Penner spoke to the Mission Societies of our Church, relating their experience of joy and sorrow in India. They served forty years as missionaries to India. Rev. and Mrs. Funk are attending the Minister's Retreat at Colorado. Rev. Abr. Albrecht brought us the Sunday morning message The Sunday School classes, juniors, and Sewing Societies have again taken part in making Christmas bundles. Harold Wiens and Mary Ann Bartell were married June 26, and are making their home in Marion, Kansas. —Corr.

—Menno Church, Lind, Washington: The mixed Octet of the Canadian Mennonite Bible College presented a program of sacred music on July 17, Hanoro Klassen of Heidleberg, Germang, gave the morning message, July 24. Rev. W. Wiebe has been asked to serve at the Retreat in California, August 20 to 27. The wheat harvesting has come to a close. Mennonite men who came to assist in our fields came from Canada, Germany, Italy, Ohio, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Kansas and Washington.—Mrs. C. C. Classen, Corr.

Thinking is never easy, especially not "in the consciously felt presence of God." To reach this God-centered level in prayer and life we too will have to pass through a wilderness meditation where we extricate from our goals and purposes the arch-temptations of wealth, fame, and powers (Mt. 4:1-11).

Dr. Ferre has given us this excellent summary of the nature of mature Christian prayer:

> "True and deep prayer is today almost a lost art. Christian prayer is fellowship with God, whether in meditation, thanksgiving, or petition, where we behold the greatness of God and become partakers of that greatness; where we see the patience of God and become partakers of that patience; where we understand the purpose of God and make ourselves servants of that purpose; where we discover the creative joy and power of God and become endowed with His creative joy and power; where we feel the love of God for the world and begin to taste something of the concern which lifts us out of our smallness and narrowness, out of our self-concern and indifference, into a broadening and deepening compassion for men as individuals and as society."

When prayer reaches such dimensions, to "pray without ceasing" will not be an impossible burden but the characteristic reaction of the sincere soul seeking refreshment at this inexhaustible resource.

Study

Rheinhold Niebuhr has suggested that he who would have a message for his day must be at home also in another day. The depth of focus and stability of judgment which historic perspective affords is achieved only by patient study. It requires a type of study which is often impossible in our present institutions. Our curricula are cluttered with courses that are immediately practical but which contribute no abiding insight into the basic human problems. Moreover, our students are under pressure to "beat deadlines," earn diplomas and degrees, till these institutional objectives hamper real study. A Methodist bishop always inquired about prospective ministers, "Will they continue to study after they're out of school?" The resourcefulness of self-motivated study was to this bishop a basic requirement for an effective ministry. It is no less important for the teacher, and what is true in general is true in specific of spiritual resourcefulness. By studying the devotional classics and making his acquaintance with the great saints of all ages one shall, quite unwittingly, become known by the company he has kept.

Creative Leisure

One hesitates to suggest hobbies and recreation as spiritual resources for the reactions it may elicit from those who have never enjoyed the recuperative powers of leisure time creatively used. Recreation as found among all tribes and cultures. It is a fundamental human need, not an evil desire. Perhaps the Petrine vision of the sheet filled with animals may well descend again, this time with application to men's basic needs. Our recreational hungers remain unmet not only by those who oppose recreation, but even more by the non-satisfying kind of recreation that is purchased today. Commercialized recreation and art are often no "re"-creating but merely supplying more excitment to the already over-stimulated victims of a thrill-mad age. A cursory glance at the movie ads will demonstrate this. The total effect of such recreation is debilitating, not refreshing.

Fred Eastman had observed that no art will be great, creative, or wholesome so long as it is exploited by commercial interests. Hobbies, fine arts and recreation, like beauty, must be "their own excuse for being." When pursued for their own sake they bring a poise and composure to our spirits that helps us to meet the strains of hours of labor with equanimity.

Introductions Can Be Embarrassing - But They Needn't

by Catherine Regier, Newton, Kansas

Emily and Jack, both seniors in high school, were walking home from school when they met Fred Jones, the boy who had recently moved into Jack's neighborhood. Since Emily and Fred had not met, Jack decided an introduction was in order.

"Fred Jones," he said, "meet Emily Mason."

Emily smiled and said cordially, "How do you do, Fred."

Fred looked embarrassed and mumbled a weak "Hello" as he offered his hand. Emily courteously shook hands with Fred and then the little party broke up.

Obviously, something went wrong with this introduction. This is how it might have proceeded:

"Emily, this is Fred Jones." Both Emily and Fred should have said, "How do you do." They would probably not shake hands unless Emily offered hers. Jack might then have said, "Fred's an expert at tennis. He beat me five times today." They might have chatted on for a while, and on parting, Fred might have said, "I'm glad to have met you, Emily." Emily, in turn, might have answered, "Thank you. I hope to see you again soon."

The seemingly simple convention of making introductions may be a frightening experience unless you know two things. First, when introducing two women or two men, always address the older or more important person first. Second, when introducing a man and a woman, address first the woman. (The exception to this rule will be explained later. This means that you introduce a younger person to an older one of the same sex, and a man to a woman.

When introducing a girl friend to your mother, you would say, "Mother, this is Jean Black." When you introduce a young man to your father, the correct introduction would be, "Father, this is James Hill." When you introduce two schoolmates, it does not matter whose name you state first. You might simply say, "Fred Greene, Bill Evans."

There are no cut-and-dried expressions for every introduction you make. Take time to choose the person to be addressed first, then be natural in what you say. The only bad form is to say something ungracious or awkward. Orders such as "Meet So-and-So" or "Shake hands with Mr. —" are taboo. "May I present" is good form but sounds a bit pretentious for ordinary occasions. You would be "presented," however, to the governor of the state or to other dignitaries.

In acknowledging an introduction, the most accepted form is "How do you do" (not as a question). If you meet a person you have heard about, you may add, if you like, "I have heard Jane speak of you often," or something of that sort. Whatever you say, be natural and sincere. To say, "I'm so glad to know you," to someone you know nothing about sounds insincere and gives the impression that you are not naturally smooth but that you are worn smooth. "Pleasedtometcha" has been babbled so often by unthinking people that the expression means nothing and has become taboo.

A woman introducing her husband might say, "Mrs. Brown, I'd like you to know my husband," not "Mr. Cole." Her husband introduces her as "my wife," not as "Mrs. Cole."

When introducing your parents to your teacher, you could say something like this: "Miss Hall, I want you to meet my mother. Miss Hall, my father." If the teacher is a man, address your mother first, "Mother, this is Mr. Lee."

If you are introducing a young girl to an older or distinguished man, you make an exception to the second rule and give his name first. "Mr. Elder, this is my daughter, Mary."

Men and boys always rise to their feet when they are introduced no matter to whom, unless circumstances make this impossible. If they were seated at a banquet table, for instance, it would be foolish for them to rise. Men shake hands when they are introduced to each other; but when a man is introduced to a lady, he lets her decide whether or not to shake hands.

Girls rise from their seats when they are introduced to a woman who is standing and when they are introduced to an older or distinguished man—a teacher, a clergyman, or simply any older man. Women and girls rise, too, when they meet anyone in their homes. However, suppose a group of girls were introduced to an elderly woman who was seated in her own home. The girl's rising to meet her would not be demanded by etiquette but would show consideration and respect for old age. Rising to meet any aged person, whether man or woman, is a respectful gesture due old age.

A girl is not committing a social blunder if she offers her hand even to a young man. However, when the introduction is a casual one in the street or in a group, the girl usually does not make it a point to extend a hand. Generally, women and girls omit handshaking; but if the other person is holding out a hand, they must courteously take it.

Again, there is no formula for parting remarks. On parting with someone you have just met and have been with only a few minutes, it would be correct simply to say "Goodbye" and go. If you enjoyed a meeting of any length, be friendly and say so. A pleasant "I hope to see you again" or "I'm glad you could spend the afternoon with us" or any other friendly remark that pops into your head is in good taste. To answer "Thank you" is really acknowledgement enough. "I'm glad to have met you, too" sounds a bit parrot-like, but etiquette writers agree that, at this point, it is better to be a parrot than a clam!

The Summer's Work in Hospital Projects

(M.C.C. and General Conference Sponsored Projects are Serving in These Hospitals this Summer)

Allentown State Hospital

Allentown, Pennsylvania

"We meet every morning after breakfast for our daily devotions which are strengthening and uplifting. We can approach God in a spirit of unity, and find encouragement to carry on, and do our service here in the 'name of Christ.' We have been visiting a number of churches, and found it very interesting. Our plan is to give programs in various churches."

"Before I came to Allentown, I had heard it was one of the best mental hospitals. I have since found it to be well-equipped with well constructed brick buildings on beautiful grounds with a view of the Blue Ridge Mountains in the distance."

State Village for Epileptics

Skillman, New Jersey

"The one unique feature of the work at Skillman is the fact that a few of the patients are mentally healthy, and only require observation and medication because of occasional seizures. They are people who are as normal as I but have had this one malady to contend with, which may be for the remainder of their lives. It seems to me that it is our job to live the Christian spirit in such a way that the patients may learn to like and appreciate not only us but the other patients. I feel that if there is one thing we must do, that is to let others feel the brotherhood of Christ."

"We see a chance for satisfying and enriching our spiritual and cultural appetites through unit living. Invaluable experiences help us to understand and get a clearer insight into life—not merely our life and ways of living, but the ways of other groups and personalities. Tolerance for opinion is developed, and long-lasting fellowship is woven."

"In checking our assets acquired through Voluntary Service, we decided that no price is too great to pay. We volunteered and we love it."

Topeka State Hospital

Topeka, Kansas

"The hospital grounds cover an area of several hundred acres and practically make up a community in itself. It is self-supporting to a great extent, as it raises much of its own food, and has its own dairy, bakery, laundry, machine shop, power plant, auditorium, recreational facilities, etc.

"Six months ago a new recreational and occupational therapy program which is still in the developmental stage, was being given by members of the staff on types of illness, treatments, and future plans for TSH to orient the attendants on the attitudes, and the principles behind psychiatric treatment.

"Our prayer—'O my God, let Thy unwearied and tender love to me make my love unwearied and tender to my neighbor, and zealous to procure, promote, and preserve his health, and safety, and happiness, and live that he may be the better able to serve, and to love Thee.' "

TWO GOOD CAUSES BENEFIT

There are two good causes that benefit when you buy a HANDBOOK TO THE HYMNARY through your local youth society. For when you and your congregation uses it and you get better acquainted with the hymns in the hymnary, the singing and music in worship becomes a more real part of worship for you. A singing church is important. Then, your local society benefits in its causes by handling the sales of the HANDBOOK. Sales to August 5 were 304 copies of the HANDBOOK. Benefits to young people's societies and the Young People's Union stood at $93.90.

Delaware State Hospital

Farnhurst, Delware

"The experiences I am having this summer are going to help me as I go back to my home community. I hope to be better able to understand the problems of other people, and to be more sympathetic toward them. I feel that these experiences will also be a great help to me in my future vocation of teaching. I hope this will help me to be more considerate of other people's so-called peculiarities. I have learned that much more can be accomplished by love than by force; therefore, I covet a greater love for those with whom I associate. I hope I can bring the people in my home community to value others' opinions in the light of their own."

"Voluntary Service units give us excellent opportunity to begin practicing the principles of peace. Sometimes in dealing with violent patients one wonders how peaceful means can be employed. There are other challenges to the principle of peace in such a unit. Every time we accept the challenge our convictions are strengthened."

North Battleford Hospital

North Battleford, Sask.

The work with the patients is becoming increasingly meaningful to each member. They realize that, even if the patient is beyond medical and scientific cure, he still is entitled to kind and loving care because of the love of Christ.

Off the wards the unit finds time for picnics, hikes, and tours to local historical sites. The fact that the hospital personnel training staff is not available this summer to give lectures to the summer workers is a disappointment to them. However, the Education Committee called upon the unit eader, who is a pre-medical student, to give a course in elementary psychology and physiology as a substitute. The unit also has regular Bible study and devotional exercises.

General Hospital

Kansas City, Missouri

"We praise God for the privilege of serving Him with the service-unit family in Kansas City. The work has been a real challenge to us. Our prayer is that we have been able to leave a testimony for our Lord. We realize anew our responsibility as Christians, to live the Gospel, to give the Gospel. We have been strengthened in fellowship with the unit family. We are thankful for their help in making this a happy Christian home."

Greystone Park State Hospital

Greystone, New Jersey

"The morning worship period in the glen is proving to be a special blessing to me, and I feel, to the rest of the unit. The hymns, the Scripture reading, and the prayers for each other, and for our work are a real source of strength. The verse that best expresses the feeling it creates is, 'For we are workers together with Him.'"

"At night we usually have something to do to keep us busy, such as lectures by one of the doctors on the staff, or a discussion group of our own. Another night is set aside for recreation, and one night we have chorus practice. One of the nights we went on an outing, and had a weiner roast. Another night we went swimming at a nearby lake where we enjoyed ourselves, and spent a relaxing night. We are kept busy, but enjoy it all."

"I am learning more about what it means to practice Christian principles of peace in everyday contacts. The patients notice what type of attitude you manifest toward them, and they respond to it."

Ninette Sanitorium

Ninette, Manitoba

Ninette Sanitorium is beautifully situated on the shores of Lake Pelican. A summer unit of girls just started work here early in July. Their job is mainly bedside nursing. Here is one member's comment on the project.

"I believe that this place offers a good opportunity for Christians to witness for their Master. Daily we find ourselves among a group of people many of whom do not seek a Christian fellowship. My prayer is that God might speak through our witness."

Richmond State Hospital

Richmond, Indiana

"The experience of this past week has taught me how much a little love and understanding can do. What a reward it is to witness a favorable change in little Marigold just because she has been shown a little love and interest. What a thrill to hear old, sweet Elizabeth's voice each morning, 'Honey, will you sing and pray with me again tonight? Then I can sleep much better.' More than words of thanks can express, it is to me when introverted, melancholic Jessie opens up, and begins to talk because someone is interested in her."

"On the fourth of July the hospital sponsored a picnic in the grove for the patients. The patients eagerly looked forward to this occasion for almost a week. That afternoon all the able, walking patients were gotten out for a very enjoyable afternoon of relays and contests. Prizes were awarded to the winners. During the afternoon cake, ice cream, and range drink were served to the patients. On their return to their wards, the patients had a lovely fried chicken dinner. It was really a thrill to see the patients get a little extra treat, and they loved it."

"The morning after my day off recently a patient on my ward eagerly began to tell me how Alvina's home pastor came to visit her, 'and he prayed with her,' while Alvina sat by, beaming with pleasure. She was evidently quite appreciative of her pastor's concern for her. How many other patients there are who would greatly appreciate some contact with their home churches or, for that matter, some kind of contact with a religious counsellor from the local community."

"I am thankful for the weekly lecture and discussion hours with a staff member which our unit is privileged to have. This has helped me already in trying to understand patients, and to be of more practical help to them. Maybe, if this program could be enlarged to regular attendants who are interested in the welfare of their patients, it probably would help some in giving these poor, mentally ill people better treatment."

"Our afternoon recreational program has now gotten under way. The first few days the girls in our unit went to most of the wards to sing with and for the patients there. We felt that through singing on the wards we could become better acquainted with the individual wards and have a better idea of what type of recreation we could take those patients out for. We found that the women really appreciated singing on the wards. In a few of the wards we were even favored with piano and vocal solos. Other days we had the patients out for croquet which they enjoyed very much. For many of the patients this was a new type of entertainment."

HOW MANY IN YOUR FAMILY?

That is, how many copies of 101 HYMNS FROM THE MENNONITE HYMNARY do you have available for your family reunion when they get together late this summer or this fall for their annual ingathering?

This delightful little booklet has served many a small group, and orders keep coming for it. Perhaps we were just a little late with our suggestion last summer: Perhaps you can entertain it now. Why not put a suggestion into the ears of your program committee or the chairman of your family reunion: "Let get a bunch of song booklets, 101 HYMNS FROM THE MENNONITE HYMNARY, and have them when we need them for general singing."

And speaking of the family, let's not forget that the Church itself is a sort of a little family, all of us children of God; let's sing and let's not just sing in church! Let's sing in every little family gathering—in the homes, in the parks, in the woods, at the picnics—everybody sing!

The Mennonite Church through the generations has been a singing church. Let's keep it so.

Vacation Bible School in Los Angles

by Bruno Penner, Mt. Lake, Minnesota

The Immanuel Mennonite Church began its three-week Vacation Bible School here in Los Angeles on June 20. Although the average attendance during the first week was 150, the average has decreased with an increased enrollment of 220 compared to 130 of a year ago.

When the 9:00 o'clock bell rings, the children line up outside the church and file in by grades. Those of pre-school age have a separate entrance and go into the basement while the others have the opening devotional period in the auditorium—our main studio. Miss Arvilla Geiger, the Bible School director, announces station identification, "This is station D.V.B.S., broadcasting the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." As the children quiet down somewhat, the salutes to the American flag, the Christian flag, and the Holy Bible, are given, then singing "America," "Onward Christian Soldiers," and "Thy Word Have I Hid in My Heart," respectively. Praise to God sung with the hymn, "Holy, Holy, Holy," after which a verse of Scripture is read. After a flannelgraph story and prayer, the children go to their classes in their "studio" rooms.

In the classes the Summer Bible School Series of the General Conference is being used. During the first two weeks the lesson on the "Followers of Jesus" were taken up by the junior-high class and this third week they learned about Daniel, taking the first six chapters.

The program of the Bible School is as follows:

Opening Devotional Period	9:00
Bible Study Classes	9:20
Recess	10:15
Workbook, Handwork, Craft	10:30
Closing Assembly	11:10-11:30

So much for some of the statistics and program of the Bible School. Looking at this Bible School from another angle: It was the desire of the Immanuel Mennonite Church to make special efforts this year in increasing the Bible School by inviting all the children (ages 4 to 14) in this vicinity through canvassing and other means (parade, cards sent out, etc.), hoping to bring many not now going to Sunday School as well as these that are and win them to Christ.

Therefore, the first week after my arrival from Minnesota for the Voluntary Service Unit here, I spent canvassing from house-to-house in this area in behalf of the Bible School, inviting the children and leaving dodgers (circulars) for publicity. It was encouraging when I heard "Yes," instead of "No" and "Not interested" in response to the invitation of the children.

The discipline concerning some of the children remains a problem which we as teachers face since the background, or rather the home training of those children is rather poor.

With thanksgiving to God we can truly say that the Spirit has been working here in answer to prayer in that a number have accepted the Lord Jesus as their personal Saviour, and we trust that they as well as all the others will show forth evidence of the seed which has been sown for we know that it will not return unto Him void. For us, as teachers, also, it has been a blessing.

The teaching, as well as the fellowship here on the West Coast, specifically at the Immanuel Mennonite Church in Los Angeles, has been a joy. I appreciate the privilege which has been mine in coming here to Los Angeles to teach Bible School under the Voluntary Service program of the General Conference.

Elbert Koontz, served as director of the Intermediate Retreat held at Bethel College, July 26-30. In the evening of August 14, Austin Regier presented some of his convictions and experiences about the present conscription law and the results that come from trying to remain true to one's convictions. Our pastor was in charge of the meeting.

News Flash!!!

Just as these pages went to press a committee from the Alexanderwohl Church got 130 copies of the HANDBOOK TO THE MENNONITE HYMNARY—to be sold next week in house-to-house canvass. What a commission for them! and the YPU!

Beyond Our Own

PENNSYLVANIA. The Attorney-General of Pennsylvania announces from Pittsburgh that he will file an appeal against the Somerset Court decision that the compulsory education Act could not be enforced against Amish under the constitutional guarantee of religious freedom. The Attorney-General plans to take the case to the Superior Court. This renewal of a legal battle is the aftermath of the refusal of four Amish farmers to send their upper teenage children to school.

HESSTON, KANSAS. The decision to open mission work in Japan was one of the important actions taken at the recent meeting of the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities at Hesston. Two couples are preparing to open the work in that country, perhaps during the present year.—Mennonite Weekly Review

The physical life of large areas of Europe has been said to be almost entirely due to CARE packages. Certainly, without this nonprofit agency which has taken to literally thousands of starving people, conditions in many lands would have deteriorated much more rapidly. But even CARE recognizes that not for long can man live by bread alone.

Now CARE is embarked on a "food-for-the-mind" program to rebuild war-wrecked libraries in Europe and Asia. Only new books in English will be sent, 85 per cent on technical subjects. At first, books will be sent only to institutions. Fourteen countries will receive volumes on health and welfare medicine, dentistry, eterinary science, nursing, agriculture, the physical sciences, engineering, mathematics, psychology, sociology and English language instruction. Donations at list price will cover costs.—The Christian Adocate

MORE THAN five and a half million children will have attended Protestant vacation church schools by the end of the summer, it is estimated. More than 4,700 teachers will conduct the classes; most of these are trained volunteers.—Gospel Messenger

A TOTAL of 110 young people are serving in voluntary service units this summer under the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities. They are assisting at city and rural mission stations, summer camps, and church institutions such as homes for the aged, hospitals, and children's homes. In addition, there are now 11 members of the long term unit at the Kansas City hospital.—Mennonite Weekly Review

TAKE HEED unto yourself, and unto the teaching. This admonition to Timothy by the Apostle Paul suggests that the first problem of the teacher and minister is himself. Be careful about your teaching. The importance of that cannot be minimized. But first of all check your personal life. The attitudes and conduct of the teacher says more to the learner than his spoken word. The teaching message must be reinforced and illustrated by the teacher himself.

GREAT MEN are nearly always known for their charming simplicity. They do not put on airs. Many who heard Albert Schweitzer at Aspen, Colorado, during his recent brief sojourn in the United States, were impressed with his humility. A philosopher and theologian of high distinction, as well as a renowned organist and interpreter of Bach, Schweitzer could have had worldly fame and lived his life in comparative ease and luxury. His numerous literary works enjoy great repute and have been translated into many languages. Why then did he choose to go into medicine, and bury his life among the primitive people in the African forest?. It is because he loves Christ and is a man in Christ. He loves people, including the black people of equatorial Africa. His reverence for life compelled him to identify himself with a depressed and helpless people and share with them the spiritual riches which he himself found in Christ. Instead of chasing the almighty dollar, and seeking selfish ends, he found life in losing it. Incidentally, Schweitzer, we are told, travels third-class on the railroads in Europe in order to save money for his mission work, a rebuke to those of us who ride planes and Pullmans while on the King's business because we feel that we must save our precious selves from being worn out at the end of the journey.

THE DIGNITY OF LABOR is a part of the Christian Gospel. The Greek philosophy relegated physical work to the slave who was denied full citizenship. The necessity of working to maintain one's self was a stigma which prevented a man from being at his best. Jesus removed that stigma for He was a worker Himself. He spent most of His life at the carpenter's bench. He came to join the workers and burden-bearers of the earth. The greatest of His apostles worked as a tent maker to gain subsistence without dependence. St. Paul worked with his own hands and had little use for loafers. He dismissed idleness with the injunction, "If a man will not work, neither let him eat." The Son of Man, having toiled for daily bread, and lived His early life in a family whose economic level always compelled them to consider how to make ends meet, has forever dignified the lot of the laboring man. As we pray, and work to give effect to our prayers, we are sharing the purposes of God. Christianity has an important message for both the laborer and employer—to the latter that labor is dignified in the sight of God and deserving of adequate hire; to the former that work must be done honestly and uncomplainingly, knowing that at the end of the day it will be judged by the great Artificer Himself.

GOOD HEALTH in body and mind is a great blessing to all who enjoy it and particularly to those in the Christian ministry. The chaplains who returned from service in the army and navy are reported to have been in much better health, mentally and physically, than they were while engaged in the work of the local parish. The dean of a well-known Seminary attributes this to several reasons. In the armed service, the men were disciplined to regular hours for eating and sleeping; they lived on simple, wholesome fare; they had much out-of-door life; and they were comparatively free from the petty irritations of petty people. Even pacifist ministers and churches can learn a lesson here. Too many ministers look tired and are tired. They seem to be weighted down with the burdens of the whole world. They are not always in as good physical condition as they might be and they are not free from irritability and worry. Too many things "get their goats." The remedies suggested are obvious: more out-of-door life; at least one rest day in seven; a well-planned vacation during the year; the assurance that God does not expect you to solve all the problems in the world; and a glowing religious faith, which, far from being a burden to you and a bore to others, is a never-failing source of strength and joy. Weariness and discouragement spell defeat. Physicians of the soul must diligently foster their own physical and spiritual health, and thoughtful laymen will do all they can to help them toward this end.

THE LIQUOR PROBLEM was not solved in Kansas when the voters last fall legalized the sale of strong drink. The machinery for putting the new law into effect was gotten into running order about a month ago and now whiskey and gin are readily available in every community except where local option is keeping it out. It is too early to know what the total effect of the wet victory will be but the city commissioners of Wichita are predicting an increased problem in drunken driving. Two weeks after the sale and purchase of liquor became legal, Wichita police records show that arrests for plain drunkenness had increased 70 per cent during daylight hours and 30 to 40 per cent after dark. Anticipating an increase in drunken driving, the city officials are considering an increased punishment for offenders. The minimum penalty now is a $100 fine plus 30 days in jail, and automatic revocation of the driver's license for a period of 90 days to one year. "The thing to do," says one of the commissioners, "is to catch the first few (drunken drivers) and really give them the business. It might be a deterrent to other drivers." It might be, indeed, but it is open to question. The trouble is that alcohol steals a man's brain and after

by P. J. and Frieda Boehr

To Our Friends and Relatives in the Homeland, Greetings with Ps. 46!

Now we are living a bit more abbreviated since our landlord, Mr. Yang, has returned from Formosa, where he has been as Lieut.-Colonel in an Air-School as instructor. They now live in the eastern side of the house, downstairs, thus occupying about a third of the house, leaving me a study downstairs, which is 13'x14', nice and roomy, and the first of its kind since we are back in China this time. Here we now also have our daily morning Bible readings song and prayers, in Chinese, with all who wish to come including our helpers, the Doongs. This was last summer the dining-room for all of us missionaries of the mission, including the Rev. H. J. Browns when they were here for a visit and our first Workers' Conference the new truck had brought Mr. Voth and Miss Goertz from Shanghai, a year ago on July 10th In fact 4 out of the 6 rooms in this house have been kitchen or dining room and 6 of them bedrooms. I am very glad that after five weeks now since my hernia operation I feel fine and walk about quite freely, even to and from the Tea-House Chapel and from the prison where we conduct Gospel meetings two times weekly, Frieda on the women's and I on the men's side,—should say that I just about feel like not mentioning my operation anymore as though it never happened, and results seem satisfactory, Thank God!

Since the rapid change in politics in many parts of China, there has been a considerable increase in airplane activity here, where during the great war a number of airfields were in use. The Lutheran Plane comes oftener too to take loads out of missionaries and baggage, and still there are left over 100 missionaries in this city and suburbs, but mostly as doctors, teachers, and in other type of institutional work. Too bad that so few are in straight Evangelism; we believe the Lord has brought us here largely for this seemingly so neglected type of primary missionary work. From Mr. Voth in Hongkong we hear that he is waiting for clear leading about his future stay in China, and that for sometime at least in the other two being Misses Goertz and Kuyf. Mr. Voth needs special prayer, for the going into Shanghai doesn't yet look so hopeful to him from what he evidently finds out in Hongkong.

Mail seems very slow, still, so that hardly any comes thru from the U.S. these days. It came thru for about a week after it had stopped a month, and now the channel seems choked once again. It may be good to try letters direct to Hongkong, c/o Mrs. Paul Bartel, P.O. Box 1774, Kowloon, Hongkong; she is glad to remail it for us, and has some of our money for that purpose. Her husband is the aged Rev. H. O. Bartel's son and a leader in the C. & M.A. missionaries work in China, and has charge of putting out The Bible Magazine. His sister Agnes with her German missionary-husband left here a week ago to join grandpa Bartel up country about 250 miles, and Elsie with her Russian-missionary husband Eisenbraun was fortunate to get off to the U.S. in time before Shanghai fell, for the purpose of getting Mr. Eisenbraun naturalized in the U.S. But the aged Bartel is still a "man without a country" and carries a Chinese passport; while his older son, Loyal is a China-born boy, and thus also is a Chinese national. His family has gone to the U. S., and he is in communist held Shantung Prov., with little or no news coming thru. How much need for prayer investment there is for China alone. And the doors of the Gospel are so widely open, Praise God; we need to read often the words of Christ in Matt. 9:36-38, and "do something about it"! God help us missionaries too in this great day of opportunity, to be willing to "live dangerously," and to "buy up the time" in this Crisis, or dangerous opportunity" as crisis is called in Chinese (Wei Chi). But, please write oftener, for we also need that angle of encouragement!

Had again a fine group of 6 zechwan Uni. students here in my study for a reading class and studying of the Gospel of Mark; and how one feels love going out to them. They are more advanced than

by Coffman Shenk

The word "economic" may seem to be too secular a term to be applied to a minister's work. Assuredly he must be first of all the spiritual leader of his people. Their religious welfare, their progress and their development as an active and useful group in the service of the Lord will be the primary concern of every true shepherd of the flock. The economic task by itself in no way compares with the importance of the spiritual in our lives.

But it is none-the-less true that economic considerations must of necessity enter largely into our lives because for many of us the simple business of making a living requires most of our time and we have no question but that the secular activities necessary thereto are entirely legitimate and honorable. Furthermore, the general welfare of a church—its growth and its permanent usefulness in the Lord's work directly depend upon its economic welfare. Our relief and mission work and our various other activities require for their adequate performance a home base that is strong not only spiritually but numerically and financially as well. That fundamental in relief and mission work that men's bodies must be sustained before much can be done for them spiritually is not limited to foreign fields. It can also have applications at home. Thus it is no tenuous conclusion that the success of a church in carrying out the great commission has a definite and positive economic involvement. And this being so, the financial currents of his community are of vital concern to the pastor. It is true, of course, that the minister cannot do everything. It is true also that not all ministers are alike endowed to fill such a place in their respective communities. Even so, few will lack the ability to make progress in the right direction once there is a comprehension of the need, a vision of what can be accomplished, and an acceptance of the responsibility.

Localities and conditions vary greatly the amount and the kind of attention a minister need give the economics of his community. Some congregations are already strong financially and blessed with able Christian business leaders. A minister is fortunate when such is the case for it lessens—though it does not remove—the burden upon himself. He still should supply vision, initiative, and a greater or less degree of oversight.

The minister's duties from an economic viewpoint will be mostly in four areas: He should be alert and observant enough that he can detect trends, sense needs and probably with the counsel and co-operation of the church's business men, considerably shape and direct for the better the course of his community's economic life. One of the larger problems that has faced a number of older Mennonite communities is that the most desirable sections for farm and home sites have long since been taken up. The few locations, whether for farming or other occupation, that are available in or near community centers are usually so high in cost as to be practically out of reach for a young man starting to make his own way. What shall he—and there are many of him—do? Make out as best he can? Shall he get entirely away from agricultural pursuits which for our people generally have been regarded as definitely the most desirable, and work for wages in some business or industrial concern where associations, labor complications, etc., are undesirable or impossible from the Christian standpoint? Must he move from his home neighborhood and so be lost to his own community and sometimes even to the church itself? Usually these situations are allowed to run their own and generally undesirable course. Who more than the minister should accept the challenge thus presented? Might not he with interested laymen recognize what is going on, study and plan to the end that the situation be controlled and directed, the community people held together or otherwise provided for and its economic position strengthened? This has been done at least in the case of some newer congregations where untoward economic conditions made necessary the provision of some supplementary source of income and where, through the initiative of the minister, the establishment of new businesses or industries suitable to the location, were brought into being to supply the community's need. One—and possibly others—of our older and crowded communties is considering the reclamation of near-by areas heretofore impossible or impracticable of use because of brush, swamp, erosion, or other conditions unfavorable to development. Now such land, through the use of new equipment of very greatly increased capacity and efficiency, may in the near future be brought under cultivation. Also the minister, with his counselors, might sometimes to great advantage, provide desirable outlets for the home community's overpopulation by locating, even at some distance, usable or reclaimable tracts of land upon which enough families could locate to organize a new congregation. The church's missionary effort might well be advanced also by such moves.

Leadership of a somewhat different type also is needed in most communities. This has to do with management factors pertinent to the profitable operation of our farms and other businesses. This may sound like a large requirement, but is not necessarily too large. One minister who supplied such leadership was the late George R. Brunk, of the Warwick River congregation in Virginia from about 1910 to the time of his death in 1938. Brother Brunk, a successful farmer and fruit grower himself, markedly influenced the economic development of this prosperous Mennonite community. He got around where people lived and worked and acquainted himself with both their individual and the general needs. He was a strong advocate of labor-saving methods and machinery and of the growing of the more profitable varieties of farm and fruit crops. He was a promoter of the first telephone system in the colony. He worked for order and efficiency in handling the church's business affairs. He early saw the need of church-controlled educational facilities and did more than perhaps any other one person toward the establishment of what is now Eastern Mennonite College. He was of course an outstanding spiritual leader, and his interest in his people's business affairs and the help

The Waiting Church Must Watch

by J. N. Pauls

THE Lord Jesus particularly enjoined vigilance on his disciples. Likewise the Apostles in their epistles to the churches. In the open letters, according to Rev. 2 and 3, we see how necessary was the admonition to vigilance, for the Evil One had succeeded in lulling the churches to sleep by ways and means he had chosen and thus was able to carry on among them in his own way. In order to be vigilant, whether an individual or a church, it is necessary to be in a state of expectancy or "waiting" as is stated in the subject. As soon as someone says in his heart, as in Matthew 24:48, "The Lord is not coming for a long time," he is in danger of becoming inattentive or careless. That is one reason we often do not find in the churches any truly consecrated living, self-denial, and love that constrains one to work. The bride who awaits the groom decks herself only for her beloved. All her aspirations are directed solely toward her intended and she would like to be through with her work when the groom arrives. How I wish that this address might stimulate us to vigilance.

Greatly to be pitied is he who gets sleeping sickness naturally. He can easily sleep his life away. In the spiritual domain might not individuals or whole churches perhaps sleep themselves to death?

I would like to take up two main points in my address. First, let us ask ourselves:

1. Why Ought a Waiting Church Be Vigilant?

It is impossible for Jesus to have urged vigilance without a reason, and an answer to the "Why?" is "Because there is danger." Since the Fall of Man in the Garden of Eden, we have understood that the Devil is the archenemy of man and seeks his eternal destruction through sin, because man has been created in the image of God. When Jesus came into the world as a perfect man, in order to serve as the Lamb of God which carries the sin of the world and to redeem us, he was not spared either. The Devil tempted him—unsuccessfully, thank God! We cannot help but think that the former has applied all of his attention, cunning, and wiles to the Church of Jesus, which is being prepared as a bride and in which God wishes to glorify himself. We are truly in danger, because Satan speaks out as an angel of light or as a false prophet or preacher of the gospel. How often we underestimate this enemy and overestimate our own strength and vigilance! Thus one is misled into a false, self-reliant security. At this very point, where one deems oneself above temptation, one is tempted most. Let us not forget that we, as the Church of Jesus Christ, are at war, that we live in an enemy land, and that it is a great offence to imagine and to make the impression on others that there is no danger.

Yet, this is not the only reason why the waiting Church should be vigilant. We ought to be prepared for the coming of the Lord. When I was still a boy in my parents' home, and when father would sometimes go away for the day, he would assign work for me to do. The day was long, and there was so much time to do the assigned work—the orchard and the neighbor boy were close—why not play first and eat fruit? Before we knew it the day was over and father came driving into the yard. The work was not done. I was not prepared although I had been awake all day. How different when the Apostle Paul can say of himself in 2. Tim. 4:7-8 "I have fought the good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth, there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but to all them also that love his appearing."

Yet, our preparedness ought not be solely with a view toward our death. Often the Lord comes and requires some service or sacrifice, or an examination (test). Are we prepared for this? Do we not sometimes fail to hear a summons because we are not on the alert? I once read of a mission society which had on its seal an ox standing between a plow and an altar—ready to pull the plow and ready to be sacrificed. To be vigilant means to be prepared for whatever God wills.

I would like to mention a third reason why the waiting Church ought to be vigilant. The Church of Jesus Christ bears a responsibility. When the Lord appeared to Abraham in Hain Mamre, he could not conceal his intention to destroy Sodom and Gomorrah just because all peoples on earth were to be blessed through Abraham. What induced Abraham to plead so strongly for Sodom and Gomorrah? He felt his responsibility as preacher of righteousness and as owner of the land. In Genesis 19:27 we read that he got up early the next morning and went to the place where he had stood before the Lord, and looked toward Sodom and Gomorrah. What a "looking" that must have been, what a "getting up early," and what a place where he had stood before the Lord! What a trembling must have passed through his soul when he saw the smoke going up! What vigilance in his intercession! According to I Peter 2:9, you, beloved Church, "are the royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people, to show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his wonderful light." Today you are the preachers of righteousness. God has not concealed from you what He intends to do with the world. Do you too stand before the Lord and intercede? His Church will one day

Agriculture Research In Paraguay

One of the way in which the M.C.C. is endeavoring to help the Mennonite colonies in the Paraguayan Chaco is through the Agricultural Experiment Farm. Conditions of soil and climate are such that considerable study and experimentation is required in order to find or develop varieties of crops that can be grown successfully. A survey of the agricultural situation also reveals a number of problems that have required consideration by the Experimental Farm for the past few years and will probably continue to do so for some time to come. Some of these specific problems are: insect pests — particularly grasshoppers and leaf cutting ants; seed-eating bird pests; weeds; need for fruit trees for planting; drought and soil drifting; declining of native pastures and need for pasture planting and management; winter feed problem; need for better dairy cattle and supplementary feeds for same; need of source of reliable vegetable seed and successful dry land gardening plans; methods of handling bush land for best results; need for suitable and practical agricultural literature.

It is with problems such as these that the workers in the program are wrestling. All available information is secured from STICA, a Government agency, and from the United States, and applied to these problems. Although many agricultural problems continue to face the colonists, it is felt that this program of study and research is a very effective means of helping to overcome the difficulties.

The Value of Sewing Rooms

Various relief units of the community-center type in Germany have as one of their activities a sewing room to which women of the community may come to sew, either for themselves or on a voluntary basis for the benefit of other poor families.

Iona Hofstetter, located at Kaiserslautern, commenting on the reason that so many women are eager to use the sewing room facilities, says:

"They like to come back because they feel so much at home. They enjoy the companionship of the other sewers. Others do their sewing here because there is a competent seamstress to direct them. Their particular problem is that they do not know how to sew; so imagine their joy to be able to come here and with the direction of our competent seamstress, sew their own clothes—for many, the first time in their life.

"Now that the women . . . see the value of a place like this they ask, 'What will we do when there is no Nachbarschaftsheim?' That question is a challenge to the directors of a community center that is Christian in motivation and purpose; if they as directors can establish the idea of a permanent community center that is Christian in motivation and purpose, then all efforts will not have been in vain."

Relief Personned Notes

John and Martha Kauffman and son Kenneth, who have been serving with the Mennonites in Brazil, returned on August 11. John and Carol (Schertz) Oyer returned from Germany on Aug. 13. Homer Martin returned from Paraguay August 16.

Rev. H. J. Dyck and wife of Elbing, Kansas, left on August 15 for Europe to serve in a spiritual ministry particularly among the Prussian and Danzig Mennonite refugees. Virgil Miller of Sterling, Ohio, left on August 15 for Europe. Sailing for Ethiopia on August 19 were Erma Grove, of Hagerstown, Maryland, Leona Yoder, of West Liberty, Ohio, and Helen Witmer, of Preston, Ontario.

rule with him for a thousand years; do you suppose it will consist of such who have gone irresponsibly though life? Or, who remained indifferent at the judgment of the Lord in two world wars, instead of standing like Abraham with a trembling soul at a holy place and watching the smoke go up? Lord, let us as a waiting Church recognize danger, let us be prepared for anything, and let us be conscious of responsibility.

As a second main thought we shall pose this question:

2. In What Does the Vigilance of the Church Consist?

Just as one can dream with eyes open in the realm of the physical, perhaps also in the spiritual. We need only to look at Laodicea and note that she was rich and satisfied in her own eyes and needed nothing. In reality she was miserable, wretched, poor, blind, and naked. If one wishes to be truly vigilant, one should probably have least trust in oneself and be most on guard against oneself. The city of Sardis was situated on high cliffs, surrounded on three sides by the sea, and was deemed impregnable. Yet, she was the most besieged of all cities. Too much natural protection. Might this not be analogous to the situation in the Church at Sardis and in many other churches; too much natural protection hence too little vigilance, resulting in frequent defeats?

Therefre, our vigilance consists of sobriety (I Peter 5:8). As a waiting Church we also have certain expectations, and in these it is easy to become intemperate. The disciples in Gethsemane slept for sadness, because the circumstances did not agree with their expectations. They were intemperate. Many are mistaken when they assume that everything will go according to their desires after conversion. The Lord does not rear any of his children to be self-willed. The Psalmist Asaph (Psalm 73) almost stumbled when he saw the prosperity of the wicked. It will not embarrass me to relate here, to the glory of God and to a better understanding of sobriety, an experience of mine when I was already a preacher. I received a call from a congregation and from the Lord to devote more time to Him, and if possible, full time.

Central District

The fiftieth annual session of the Central Conference convened at the Eighth Street Church, Goshen, Indiana, August 5-8 with the Eighth Street Church acting as host to the Conference, assisted by the Silver Street, Middlebury, and Topeka churches. Rev. W. B. Weaver, of Danvers, Ill., president of the Conference, was unable to be present on account of physical disability, whereupon Rev. Lotus Troyer, vice-president, occupied the chair. Prof. Russell Lantz, of Bluffton College, served as musical director, assisted by the Conference music committee who arranged special musical numbers for the various sessions.

The opening devotional addresses for the sessions consisted of a series of meditations based on the Beatitudes, given by Rev. Ben Esch, Washington, Illinois; Rev. Leonard Metzker, Normal; Rev. Raymond Yoder, Congerville; Rev. Samuel Ummel, Peoria; Rev. Emanuel Ulrich, Flanagan; Lloyd Wayne Gundy, now at Fairview, Mich.; Rev. E. A. Sommer, Goshen; and Rev. Harold Thiessen, Middlebury. The program followed the more or less traditional pattern with reports of officers, boards and institutions, supplemented by inspirational addresses, and with special time allotments given to the Conference Women's Organization, Sunday School Association, Young People's Union, and Board of Home and Foreign Missions.

From the beginning, the fact of this being the fiftieth annual session of the Conference was a dominant note and came in for frequent mention during the conference. The first session on Friday morning closed with Revs. G. I. Gundy and Allen Yoder, two of the oldest ministers in the conference now in active service, giving "Reminiscences of 50 Years of Conference History." We were truly reminded that "other men have labored, and (we) have entered into their labors." The anniversary thought was again prominent in the Sunday morning Conference sermon at which time Rev. Weaver was to have spoken on "History Speaks." In his absence Rev. Ben Esch brought the message taking as a text Heb. 11:39-40: "And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise; God having provided some better thing concerning us, that they without us should not be made perfect."

Some of the leading addresses given were: "The Bible As Our Fathers Viewed It," Rev. Esko Loewen; "The Bible as Relevant for Today," Rev. A. E. Kreider; "Living with Our Fellowmen," Rev. Russell Mast, Wadsworth, Ohio; "Voluntary Service and Our Young People," Rev. Albert Gaeddert, Inman, Kansas; and the closing address on Sunday evening, "The Living Church," by Rev. J. N. Smucker, Bluffton, Ohio, president of General Conference.

In the platform session of Conference Women's Organzation Miss Edna Ramseyer, dean of women at Bluffton College, spoke on "Our Women's Responsibility to the Girl in College;" Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker, matron at Mennonite Seminary Home in Chicago, discussed "The Seminary's Contribution to Our Women"; and Mrs. C. E. Rediger, associate editor of the Congo Missionary Messenger, closed with "Our Way vs. His Way."

The Sunday afternoon session, as heretofore, was given over to the Board of Home and Foreign Missions, using as a theme: "Opportunities and Problems in Evangelism"—(a) "In and about Comins (Michigan)," Rev. Joseph Atherton; (b) "Among the Needy in Peoria," Rev. Samuel Ummel; (c) "In Our Field in Congo," Miss Fanny Schmallenbeger, missionary on furlough, and Rev. C. E. Rediger, executive secretary of the C. I. M. Board.

In bringing the general sessions to a close on Sunday evening, Reverend Smucker very forcefully and graphically set forth the functional characteristics of "The Living Church" as being to:

C: Conserve—to keep, to preserve, to hold eternal verities.

H: Herald—to proclaim, give out the message of truth and salvation.

U: Unite—to unify groups, nations, and integrate human life.

R: To release—set men free from the things which hold them captive in mind and heart.

C: To challenge—join the issue with the forces that mar, hurt, and destroy.

H: To heal—to lighten the woes and burdens of men.

A total of seventeen reports were submitted to and received by the Conference, viz: Conference secretary, treasurer, field secretary, ministerial committee, mission board secretary and treasurer, Mennonite Seminary, Bluffton College, Mennonite Hospital, Mennonite Home for the Aged, publication board, peace committee, Mennonite Central Committee, Y. P. Retreat and Retreat Ground committees, auditing committee, and constitutional revision committee.

The statistical report of the secretary, based upon reports received from the twenty churches of the Conference, indicated a membership of 3,189 at the beginning of the Conference year, July 1, 1948, with 183 additions and 101 deductions during the year, giving a present membership of 3271. Twelve persons entered into some form of special religious service, including summer Voluntary Service. Total contributions for all purposes amounted to $166,747.04, an average of $50.98 per member. Of this amount $30,498.59 was for foreign missions; $8,869.91, for home missions; $20,546.89, for educational and charitable institutions; $18,554.62, for relief and rehabilitation; and $7,640.36, for other benevolent purposes.

A total of ninety delegates gathered at the Monday morning delegate session for the transaction of remaining Conference business, one principal item of which was the making of Conference appropriations which were voted as follows: Peace committee, $100.00; MCC operating overhead, $150.00; field secretary allowance, $720.00; Conference officers' travel, $200.00; publication board, $1,480.00. These amounts, with a proper reserve sum agreed upon by the finance committee necessitated an allocation of the Conference budget on the basis of 80c per member, which was approved by the

Another major item of business was the consideration of the report of the constitutional revision committee. The task of this committee was to incorporate into one draft certain amendments adopted in previous years and add thereto such procedures as had in course of time been found fruitful, to provide for certain organizational structures as are not set out in the present constitution, and to seek to effect simplifications as well as efficiency in the form and functioning of the organizational setup.

The part of the report which thus dealt with organization was tentatively adopted as a basis of operation for the coming year during after which time it may be further studied by ministers and lay leaders looking toward final action next year. No change was made at this time in the Conference name in view of our affiliation with the General Conference, since it was understood that that body is now considering some possible or desirable change in its official name.

The fact of this Conference marking the close of an era of fifty years in Conference work and service gave occasion to evaluate the faith, conviction, and persistence of those who pioneered in the organization, growth and expansion of the Conference and its work. Always with such contemplation came the plea and the prayer that we in our time may be guided by the same Spirit, constrained by the same love, and challenged by the same faith as those who in their day carried the torch and the load of responsibility; and, passing on, left to us the fellowship and service program of the Conference as a rich heritage.

that happens the victim is no longer able to act rationally. Many times he is not even aware of his drunken state and will drive his car down the street, heedless to the dangers to his own life and the lives of his fellow citizens, and completely forgetful of the heavy penalties provided by the law makers. John Barleycorn is a deadly enemy in our midst whether operating as an outlaw, or dressed up with respectability and invited to a legal place in the community. The ancient proverb is still true:

> Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging;
> And whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.

Jottings

—Calvary Church, Balrou, Oregon: Many of our young folks and a few of the older folk, enjoyed a week retreat at Trout Creek Camp, near Troutdale Oregon. Rev. Robert Milller of Kitchner, Ontario, Canada, delivered the message at the Sunday morning service on August 14. Miss Shirley Heyerly, a student at Grace Bible Institute, Omaha, Nebraska, returned home the first part of August. She spent nine weeks as a Bible School teacher with the "Go Ye Mission," near Coalgate, Oklahoma. Mrs. Gladys Heyerly, a member of our church, made a gift donation of hall carpeting. A group of ladies from our church recently attended the Fellowship meeting held at the Daelas Church. The engagement of Miss Shirly Heyerly of Hubbard, to Mr. Raymond Gerig, of Pratum, was made known recently. Rev. and Mrs. Paul Roth and family, moved to Canby in July. They sold their farm to Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hershberger. A wedding reception was given August 3rd for Mr. and Mrs. Marlin Burley (nee Violet Conrad). The young couple were married on June 6th and left soon after the wedding and returned recently. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Lester Conrad, Miss Marlyn Hostetler, and Miss Beverly Yoder. Around seventy guests ware served refreshments of ice cream, cookies and punch.— Mrs. Ivan Learfield, Corr.

Waiting Church Must Watch . . . continued from p. 7

After much resistance, I must admit to my shame, I gave Him my assent in spring on condition that I might have the summer for myself and begin in fall. Without being aware of it I had come upon the intemperate idea that the Lord would now have to grant me a good harvest. Now just listen, my neighbor who had no regard for either God or man got 20 bushels per acre, and I only three. How harshly the Lord had shaken me out of my sleep. How I reared up with indignation! How I scolded the Lord for being unjust! He finally brought me to my senses, and I was more grateful for the crop failure than for some good crps, for it was a means of sobering me. Waiting Church, be temperate in your expectations. I would like to say with Peter 4:12: "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you, but rejoice inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings."

Vigilance also consists in "genuineness." How sad it is and what a disappointment when people, according to their own opinion have lived as Christians in the hope that they will be accepted, and then at the end realize to their terror that they have never tested themselves for genuineness. We see this in the case of the five foolish virgins. On the whole journey to meet the bridegroom it never occurred to them to see if they had sufficient oil. What a solemn "Be vigilant" there is at the close of this story! How terribly Ananias and Sapphira deceived themselves when they intended to deceive others with their falseness. Let our vigilance remain as the essence of our Chritianity in order to guard the oil in the vessel.

Vigilance also consists in gratitude. A grateful person has his eyes open to the gift from the Lord and also to the needs of his fellowmen. The rich man in Luke 12:16, whose fields had yielded abundantly, was not grateful and consequently did not think of either God or his neighbor, nor of his own soul. How foolish, how blind! Are we vigilant in gratitude?

Vigilance also consists of not mingling with the world. The world intoxicates, it conceals sin as in the case of Adam and Eve, and dulls the wits. He who loves the world pursues will-o'the-wisps and gets lost. How bad the advice Bileam gave to Balak, to mingle with Israel. In Rev. 2, Pergamus is warned of Bileam's precept and is called to repentance. Even today, how worldliness tries to creep into the Church and rob it of its clear insight and vigilance. Are we as watchmen of the Church vigilant enough to see this and counteract it? Do we not all, when we regard Samson's marriage, have reason to warn our youth against mingling and against unhappiness in matrimony? Peter too regretted bitterly and realized that one cannot remain vigilant at the fire of the world and that one easily denies one's Lord. Only the cock's crow brought him to his senses and awakened him.

Vigilance consists in having and using as a church our powers of discrimination. Why did John say in 1 John 4:1: "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God. Because many false prophets are gone out into the world." We must also in our day recognize as liars those who claim to be Apostles and are not, as in Ephesus according to Rev. 2:2. Oh, how the Evil one tries to mix worldliness into church affairs. If he is unsuccessful, he tries superpiety against which the Apostle Paul warns us in Col. 2:18: "Let no man beguile you of your reward in a voluntary humility and worshipping of angels, intruding into those things which he hath not seen, vain puffed up by his fleshly mind."

The last and most important thing I would like to mention is prayer, which Jesus put side by side with watching, like two columns in the life of the Church. To watch without praying would be presumptuous, to pray without watching would be stupid. In my personal work I once happened to speak about prayer to a married couple. It turned out that they did their praying while lying in bed before going to sleep. The Bible does not tell us anything about attitude during prayer except that it is to be done in spirit and in truth, which has nothing to do with attitude. Yet, since prayer has been given to us neither as pastime nor as a pious exercise, but as work, one should assume a more appropriate attitude than reclining, when one is most apt to fall asleep. In order to work one does not go to bed but one puts on working clothes. To judge by the blushing and stammering of the couple, prayer in their case was not side by side with watching but with sleeping. A praying Church is a vigilant Church. When the Lord returns, he wants to find his own awake and at work. Let us then watch as we pray.

he gave them only added to the effectiveness of his ministry in spiritual matters.

A Church of the Brethren pastor of a rural congregation in Iowa, seeing the trend of his people away from rural pursuits, has interested himself in better farms and machinery, and more attractive living conditions to encourage young people to stay on the farms. Another of his recommendations, with apparently good results, was that the older farmers retire and let their young people take over and by thus providing more room in the home neighborhood prevent some of the exodus from the land. This congregation is said to have grown from less than two hundred to over four hundred members in a period of seventeen years.

Other church communities have been blessed by more or less similar leadership, contributing greatly to the welfare and usefulness of their congregations and pointing the way for younger men to follow.

Guidance for the Unfortunate

Leadership is often needed also for single families or individuals, for not all are alike capable in money matters. Various ways will present themselves. The minister may help them with employers if and when they need work. He may personally counsel and advise them as to their individual pursuits. Mediocre results or failure in their undertakings can discourage and handicap people even to the point of making them a liability instead of an asset to the church. Personal interest and oversight by the minister may do much in such instances. One case of an emergency nature can be cited. A family of limited means fell into such straits that they were to be sold out at a sheriff's auction to satisfy creditors. One of our ministers, learning of this, realized that in the ordinary course of such a tranaction the family's own welfare would be little regarded and perhaps nothing left for them in the end. He made it his business to look after their interests in the procedure and was able to salvage a tidy sum for them so they were able to go on again to a new start.

A Spokesman on Right and Wrong

Perhaps the final area in which a minister can and should be a leader is in the maintaining of Christian ethics in business relationships. A business man once said that he would not attempt to state fine points in theology for ministers and saw no reason why ministers should have anything to say about how he conducted his business. We cannot agree with that man. If he was right, Jeremiah and Amos and Christ were wrong and should not have troubled themselves about men's ways. In our time the minister stands between God and man, and the modes of conduct of men are his rightful and necessary concern. A church member cannot say, "What I do is my own business and no one else's," for his business practices do greatly affect the cause of Christ. Many a church has lost its power for good in the community because of the business inconsistencies of its members. This may well be the most difficult aspect of a minister's leadership responsibility but the true shepherd of the flock will accept it as part of his manifold duties and teach and live the doctrine that a Christian's word should be as good as his bond and that there can be no justification ever for doing other than as we would be done by.

AN URGENT APPEAL TO THE CHURCHES

We urgently appeal to the churches of our Conference to take special offerings and contribute generously to the resettlement fund for our refugee brethren in Paraguay and Uruguay. MCC funds for this cause have been running far behind anticipated minimum needs and Orie Miller has appealed to constituent groups to bring up their proportionate share of the cost.

The Relief Board treasury has been low all year and we cannot contribute our share unless the churches give us additional help. Our Conference should contribute to this cause at the rate of $10,000 per month for the rest of the year in order to carry our part of the load.

The Lord has so unmistakably and often marvelously led in finding a new home for these brethren who came out of great tribulation and unspeakable suffering. Are we now going to leave them stranded in a heart-breaking struggle for existence? That cannot be.

Let each home and each church try imagining itself in the place of these refugees and then ask what you would wish others who had been spared your suffering would do for you and your children. Will you then under God make your contribution to this cause as His Holy Spirit directs.

Please send your contributions to the Conference Treasurer, 722 Main, Newton, Kansas indicating what the contribution is for. God guide and bless you in your giving.

—First Mennonite Church, Sugarcreek, Ohio: During the past weeks the ladies of our Church have packed for overseas shipment 17 Christmas Bundles plus other items of Relief clothing. Rev. Peter and Elfrieda Dyck were in our Community Thursday, August 18. They spoke both to the Amish and various Mennonite groups. The Relief offerings at these gatherings totaled $715.17 plus an unsolicited personal offering for the Dycks of $111.00. To those of you who have yet to hear the Dycks' amazing story and to see their fine pictures, don't miss them!—Wiley McDowell, Corr.

—Hereford Mennonite Church, Bally, Pennsylvania: The offering for the Goodwill Christmas Bundles amounted to $295.13. This amount purchased clothing and articles for 12 bundles for boys age 16, 6 for boys age 14, and 6 for boys age 12. There was a small balance which was forwarded to M. C. C. at Akron to help pay for the shipping of same. Peter and Elfrieda Dyck were in our church on Monday evening, August 15. It was a joint service between our congregation and the Old Mennonite group. Our minister and his family, Rev. and Mrs. Wilmer S. Shelly, will be gone for two weeks visiting Mrs. Shelly's folks in Washington, Illinois.—Mae Latshaw, Corr.

—Salem Mennonite Church, Dalton, Ohio: Peter and Elfrieda Dyck gave a stirring account of their work with the homeless refugees of Europe at a mass meeting of all Mennonites and Amish of the Community. An offering amounting to $292.40 was taken. The Women's Missionary Society sent five quilts to the seminary. Fifteen Christmas bundles were packed for th M. C. C.—Mrs. Merl Lehman, Corr.

many others who have come, and one feels the message goes across so much better with such minds. And Shanghai; he waits for Board instruction, and Miss Fast may still be in Hk. as well, expecting to go most likely over India back to the states. We are now carrying on with a staff of four missionaries, there is a seriousness about their attack of the subject matter. We also sing the same hymn in Chinese and Eng., like "What a Friend we have in Jesus," and there is considerable understanding there, one feels. Do pray for so many such in China, of whom Miss Kayf has a goodly number in her daily Eng.. classes and the Bible classes she conducts. We feel that she really teaches English and Eng. Bible for the purpose of leading youth to Christ. Frieda has four rather important women in Eng. classes, and she too teaches Bible in Eng. to them. We often use the Chinese to make plain the Bible teaching, and they help us in saying it right in Chinese for their understanding. We cannot emphasize too strongly the need for Prayer-Warriors for us and the great work here in China.

Commodity prices took a slump about a month ago, but are being boosted rather too much again, so that rice, which should cost about $0.50 a half bu., and was as low lately as .30, is now however again as high as 0.65 U. S. per measure (½ bu.) But if prices do not rise much more we western people can live fairly reasonable in costs still; but kerosene is around $1.50 (U. S.) per gallon. Interesting enough in the midst of so much turmoil in China, and blockading of ports, we've eaten Formosan fresh Pineapple lately, and Kunming bananas, and still have American coffee and UNRRA jam. The Mr. Yang who owns the house in which we live brought the pineapple by air from Formosa, and presented us with a nice big one; the bananas were given us by the wife of a Christian Air Transport Co. man, Mr. Che, who has preached for us a number of times. He is well liked as a simple Gospel witness, and sings well. His brother in Shanghai is a very good singer, we understand, and this man sings well too. The Lord has sent such Gospel messengers to us, when we are so short-handed and must depend much on outside preaching-help for our Sunday services in the West Sub. and nearby (at No. 25) Chapels. We have been able to get good Gospel preachers thus far, for which we are very thankful. I see I've mixed material and spiritual food in this paragraph, but it all seems necessary. Of fresh fruits and vegetables there is plenty, and we have all we need along foodlines thus far, and feel much for many all over the world who have not what they need. We are so glad for the work done by the MCC in relieving suffering in large areas of the world, for the healing ministry of this group, and whatever spiritual work is done thru the members of the staff in various areas. We trust that the MCC workers in occupied areas of China may be safe and can do the work they have come to do. One could wish that more news would come thru about occupied areas, which might help others in areas like we are in to think more intelligently and act accordingly. Sorry that there shall be missionaries who are under considerable mental strain because of their missions policy which requires remaining on the field; we are glad that our Board gives us considerable latitude in these matters, so that we may remain and do our work here, hoping for the best even under a new regime should that come here. We must not be over-confident either, and act as though there is nothing very difficult to look for should the communist regime come here, We do not know enough, but feel that we want to stay on as long as we can, to do that for which we feel the Lord has called us here.

SEMINARY PREPARES FOR ENROLLMENT

Activities at the Seminary give evidence that another school year is at hand. Apartments and rooms are being cleaned and put in order for students who will be coming to join the Seminary family. Registration for Bible School and Seminary students is scheduled for September 6 and 7, respectively. Classes will begin on Thursday morning, September 8.

S. F. Pannabecker attended the Ministers Retreat at Estes Park, Colorado, August 11 to 17. On Sunday, August 21, he is in charge of the ordination services for Marvin Dirks who will be ordained as an elder. This service will take place at the Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, where Marvin Dirks has been serving as pastor during the summer months. He and his family will be returning to their home in Chicago again by September 1.

Don E. Smucker his wife, and boys too, will be coming back to the Seminary about September 1. They have been residing at Echo Valley Farm, Stonecreek, Ohio, during the months of July and August.

Katie Andres, librarian, who spent several months at her home in Newton, Kansas, with relatives and friends is expected to return to her duties here during the latter part of August.

Frieda Claassen, secretary at the Seminary, spent several weeks vacationing at her home in Beatrice, Nebraska.

The MCC Christian Students-in-Industry Unit, which has had its headquarters at the Seminary during the summer closed August 19. Co-leaders of this Unit were Elaine Sommer, Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana; Jim Hean, Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas. Several members of this Unit have decided to continue their work for a longer period of time and will be residing in the Seminary community.

Erna Franken, a foreign exchange student from Holland, who has been attending Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas, during the past year spent the week end at the Seminary. Lucien Chouraki, from Tunis in North Africa and Jean Camile Morisset, Paris, France, also visited here. They were members of a Youth Hostel Group who toured the New England States on bicycles. During their stay in the States they met John Sommer, a medical student who lives at the Seminary and who was a leader of one of these groups, and, therefore, became acquainted with the Seminary.

What Shall I Do With My Life?

IV. I Am Studying to Be a Missionary

by Rudolph Martens, Waterloo, Ont.

THE deciding factor in directing my life toward the mission field was the experience I had one Sunday evening while listening to a returned missionary from Japan. It was in my first year of college. Before then I was a half-hearted, lukewarm Christian. It was at this meeting that I heard the Lord calling me to the mission field. It was not that I had not heard the call to serve Him many times before, but this time it was different. Before this I sincerely felt that I should continue teaching and every time the call went out for Christian workers I would conveniently find someone in the audience at whom the call was directed. I would say to myself, "He is just the person for that type of service," and in that way I tried to ease my conscience. It made me see the great need for a life dedicated to mission work, yet I did not yield. I would leave out myself entirely on these occasions. Now, when this missionary pled for young men and women to give themselves fully to Christ and dedicate their lives to serve Him, it seemed as though my eyes were opened, as though a light went on inside of me, and I felt that right now the speaker was directing his words at me, and that now I must decide, for there was to be no more rationalization, no more easing of conscience. I did decide for God. I gave my life to Him as I had never done before. Only now did I feel that there was purpose and a goal in my life.

You will pardon the personal note of the above paragraph when you will see that the purpose in writing this article is not to inflate my ego, but to urge other young men and women to take the cause of missions to heart. I am sure that there are many young people in our General Conference who are in a somewhat similar position as I was. My only advice for them is to stop making up excuses and to yield to the call.

Since that day of decision I have been strengthened in my purpose which has made me more certain that the call I heard came from God. For how can we know His will if we do not follow the light that He gives us at the moment? If we do not move forward at His bidding, how can we ever expect to be led on further?

Many times have I heard how critical the conditions on the field are and how greatly more workers are needed. While attending the Guadrenniel Conference of the Student Volunteer Movement, the native Christians from the mission fields earnestly pled with the students to come to their country for they realized that Christianity was the only hope for their countries. Especially did the words of a Chinese Christian impress themselves upon me when he told of how his neighbours were still in heathen darkness; "Come over to China, we need you," was his cry. Also, as a member of a General Conference Voluntary Service Unit last summer, while travelling from place to place one could see the possibility for service even here at home. There is much work to be done. How slowly and how half-heartedly is the work of God's Kingdom being done. I repeat what I have often said before that I am sorry that I do not have half a dozen or more lives to further the cause of Christ. I challenge other Christian young people of our Conference to take up the torch with me. Don't be slackers! "The harvest is plenteous but the laborers are few."

Christ has warned His followers that if they do not produce fruit they will be cut off and be burned. Let us bear much fruit. The possibilities of bearing fruit are legion. One needs only to glance through our Conference publications to see the crying need for people who will serve. From Nyanga, Africa, comes this call: "Consecrated young people, and consecrated money is

Roster of Service Personnel

There are 109 volunteers from the General Conference who are in either summer service or in one-year service in connection with M.C.C. sponsored or administered service units. This does not include the service units that worked in connection with General Conference mission and church work—such units as the Indian mission units, the home-mission units, the youth-farm-unit at Rosthern, Saskatchewan, or the youth team that visited Michigan and Indiana churches this summer.

The following is a list of those 109 volnteers. It is an incomplete list since it does not include the above-mentioned units. It does have the value of suggesting how youth are seriously interested in putting their lives to active, self-giving service in one form or another. It also points out that Voluntary Service is providing an outlet for youth in the Church never before provided quite in this way. Because of that, Voluntary Service needs the hearty support of everyone.

This summer's membership totals approximately 331, with 176 in the United States, 100 in Europe, 51 in Canada, and 4 in Mexico. This is considerably over last year's total, and considerably beyond what we had anticipated for this year. Fortunately, our project exploration for one-year projects has also revealed a considerable number of summer possibilities which we are now utilizing for the added number. We have avoided adding new units which would increase our expenses. We have endeavored to place as many of these who applide as possible.

Following are some statistics concerning the projects and members:

Total number in U.S., Canada, Mexico	231
Of above, number in co-operation with conferences	22
Members in U. S. hospitals	107
Members in U.S. non-hospital units	69
Members in Canadian hospitals	51

needed; and above all earnest united prayer." Or turn to the June, 1949, issue of Missionary News and Notes, page 9, the article, "Here am I, Lord, Send my Sister," in which the author pleads for more men for the mission fields, saying that we have left it up to the women to do a man's job.

Yes, my reason for preparing for a lifetime of mission work is to try to do a small part of the huge and almost overwhelming task which God has commissioned us to do. He has promised His help, His guidance, His power to those who will take His burden upon themselves and to follow where He leads. May it not be said of the youth of our conference that they have sped after worldly wealth, but may it be said of them that they have faithfully served their Lord and His Church and may they hear our Heavenly Father when He at the last day will say, "Well done thou good and faithful servant."

The responsibility lies with us. It rests squarely on the shoulders of every last one of us. The situation calls for a personal decision of each young member of the Conference to serve our Lord to the utmost.

"How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things" (Rom. 10:15).

MCC funds for this cause have been running far behind anticipated minimum needs and Orie Miller has appealed to constituent groups to bring up their proportionate share of the cost.

The Relief Board treasury has been low all year and we cannot contribute our share unless the churches give us additional help. Our Conferences should contribute to this cause at the rate of $10,000 per month for the rest of the year in order to carry our part of the load.

The Lord has so unmistakably and often marvelously led in finding a new home for these brethren who came out of great tribulation and unspeakable suffering. Are we now going to leave them stranded in a heart-breaking struggle for existence? That cannot be.

Let each home and each church try imagining itself in the place of these refugees and then ask what you would wish others who had been spared your suffering would do for you and your children. Will you then under God make your contribution to this cause as His Holy Spirit directs.

Please send your contributions to the Conference Treasurer, 722 Main, Newton, Kansas indicating what the contribution is for. God guide and bless you in your giving.

A NEW SCHOOL YEAR lies ahead. It holds many opportunities and great possibilities. How much the year will mean to students depends largely upon the attitudes with which they enter upon their work. Some young people seem happy when the schoolhouse burns down so that they will not need to go to school. They forget how much they will miss. Our schools offer young people a great fund of valuable knowledge. When young people realize this and take up their classwork with the thought of learning as much as possible for their future life, the class work takes on new meaning. The teacher then feels that her students are studying with a purpose, and this inspires her to give her best. When a teacher feels that students come to class because they must, she cannot do her best work. Parents should make it a point to help children to realize how valuable in life the knowledge is which they acquire in school. If they succeed in this, school work for the children will be a fascinating experience instead of a drudgery.

THE WORLD IS STRIVING desperately for security. Nations are forming alliances, they spend great sums of money for armaments, and all in an effort to secure safety. Still people do not feel really secure. Instead of feeling safe, they seem to be more afraid than ever. Is this perhaps an indication that they are striving for security in wrong ways?

Jesus has taught us how to strive for security. He advises that we spend our money in making friends (Luke 16:9). To have a host of good friends provides definite security for this life. Conditions may change so that money and savings are of little value. Good friends will always stand us in good stead; and together we will be able to make the best of such situations as may arise. In need good friends will always take us in and stand by us. Smehow, those who have many good friends do not feel insecure. Jesus refers here to a life which grows out of love for Him and love for fellowmen. This is a type of security which belongs to life in the Kingdom of God.

THIS IS A DAY when great strides are made in bringing together and uniting various denominations. Unity among believers is highly desirable but not easily attained in its true form. Perhaps this is the reason why Jesus prayed that believers might be one. History teaches that the periods of cleansing came to the Church when faithful people separated themselves from worldly churches. The Church will weaken when only union is emphasized. The Church needs separation as much as union, she needs separation from the world in order to come to a true unity. Separation from the world needs much greater emphasis than is usually given in our churches. True oneness in Christ is not possible in an atmosphere of worldliness and sin.

WE HAVE WATCHED with interest the controversy between Cardinal Spellman and Mrs. Roosevelt over the Barden Bill. Mrs. Roosevelt upholds our policy of separation of Church and State. The Cardinal wants the State to serve the Church by supporting Catholic parochial schools with tax money.

Government-controlled education would not be desirable, because schools can too easily become tools of propaganda. On the other hand, to let the Church alone control education seems also hazardous—there is danger of using the school for proselytizing purposes. There should be a way to avoid both of these dangers. To leave religion out of our schools is a lamentable failure, because the greatest character-building power in life is found in religion. Our missionaries in India say that the greatest influence for building Christian character in the mission field is the short opening devotional with which each school day is begun.

The Catholics pay great sums of money to keep up their parochial schools for they realize how much religious training does for people. Perhaps we are not sufficiently discontent with the fact that religion cannot now be taught in our schools. Is it not time that Christian people seek a way to bring the Christian influence back into our schools? Not much will be done to bring religion back into our schools unless there is a widespread public demand for it. The common people can do much to change this condition if they really desire it.—WFU

THE WAR YEARS revealed that the General Conference is not reaching a fairly high percentage of young people with some of the clearest and best Christian convictions of the Conference. This calls for some new practices. These practices must make the Gospel of Jesus Christ attractive and urgent. And, they must draw more of the total life of the individual into the Church. An hour or two on Sunday will never do.

A very significant step in this direction has been taken by the Oak Grove Mennonite Church, of Smithville, Ohio. It is the construction of a new building adjacent to the church called the Fellowship Center. This attractive new building is 36 feet by 60 feet and will cost from $15,000 to $18,000. The purpose of this building is to provide a suitable place for all age groups in the church to work, play, and have fellowship together. The aim is to minister to as many of the legitimate needs of the people as possible. It is a frank effort to return to the church-centered community.

It will particularly appeal to the young people's social and recreational groups; adult groups also want a place for informal activities; the women's missionary and relief sewing; Summer Bible School and religious education; choir rehearsals and a study for the pastor. Outside, a beautiful picnic ground has been built. Three acres of additional land have been purchased for outdoor activities like baseball and games for smaller children.

Inside, the building is attractive with moveable furniture, fire place, kitchen as well as smaller rooms for special interest groups. A real alternative soon will be available to dozens of questionable forces taking the church members away from the Church—King Hollywood, King Athletics, King Public School, King Automobile, and other lesser kings may now tremble because of the Fellowship Center.

Christian Love and Human Freedom

(Excerpts from Baccalaureate Address)

by L. L. Ramseyer

Scripture: John 8:31-36; Gal. 5:13-15.

PAUL said in writing to the Galatians, "You are called to freedom, brethren." The desire to be free is deeply imbedded in the lives of men. We crave to have the right to make our own decisions, to choose our own type of government, to live where we please, to work in the vocation which we choose, to say the things which we believe to be true, and to worship God as conscience dictates.

Two Types — Two Sources

There are two types of freedom—the spiritual, and the material or physical. So, too, it has two sources—that which comes as a direct result of the love of God, and that which is extended from man to man through Christian love to one's neighbor. Christ came that man might have life. He came "to proclaim release to the captives" and "to set at liberty those that are oppressed." Jesus was concerned about man's physical liberty, I am sure, but He was even more concerned about his spiritual liberty.

Christian love, extended from God to man brings freedom from the bondage of sin. Jesus said, "Everyone who commits sin is the slave of sin" (John 8:34). Peter wrote, "Whatever overcomes a man to that he is enslaved." There are those who feel that freedom gives one the right to indulge in any activity which he may choose. Such license results not in freedom, but in slavery. Many a man has found to his sorrow that the sin which he thought gave such pleasure in the beginning soon became the master, and he but a broken slave. One cannot find true liberty and freedom except through discipline. To be truly free this discipline must be from within; it must be the kind which changes man's spirit and his desires. That is the type of freedom which Christ gives to those who accept His love. He offers to so take possession of one's spirit that with a feeling of absolute freedom he does God's will, and does not become the slave of his appetites or his passions. Thus man attains spiritual liberation.

Christian love gives man freedom of conscience. It is not detection by others of the evil which he has done which places a spiritual burden upon one. It is rather the fact that he cannot get away from himself. It is the weight of one's own guilt which makes a man a slave of his own spirit. It is said that 75 per cent of the cases of mental breakdown involve a guilt complex. Man has a conscience. He is so constructed that he cannot do what he knows to be wrong and be at peace with himself. Christ's love, however, gives man freedom from his conscience. Christianity shows man how to attain forgiveness, and through that forgiveness his conscience is relieved and he gains peace of mind.

The Christian Gospel brings freedom from superstition. The medicine man, with his weird incantations, is characteristic of a heathen religion. When men fear evil spirits they are not free. Christ came to show us a God of love, one who deals with man in love, one who loves so much that He sent His only Son to die for man that man might learn to know the love of God. Such a God is not to be feared in the way that evil spirits are feared; He is not to be bought off as are the gods of some of the heathen; He does not require magic and witchcraft to satisfy Him; He does not demand the sacrifice of one's own children as a burnt offering. Such a God is a God of love who earnestly desires the best for His children. He is a God who wants man to be free rather than bound and enslaved. Love as shown in the life and teachings of Jesus brings us this spiritual freedom.

Mere physical freedom will not compensate for slavery of spirit. There are many who have every right to happiness, for they are in physical bondage to no one. Yet they lack happiness because they are bound spiritually. They have not that spiritual release which comes from being within the will of God. Such freedom is theirs if they but seek it aright, but they have not attained it. If one can have but one type of freedom, spiritual freedom is of the greater value. Yet some have sold that freedom in order that they might gain material things. Many refuse to stand for those things which they believe to be right because they desire the things that man can give, physical things which do not endure and which do not bring peace of mind. Many heroes of the faith in all ages have refused to sell their spirits for material gain, but there have also been many who have continued to live in spiritual serfdom because they did not want to give up their material possessions or the admiration of their friends.

Freedom of spirit frees one from many types of physical limitations. Man need not be a slave of his physical environment, even though he cannot control it. To a very large extent, freedom is within man, rather than contingent upon his physical condition or surroundings. Jesus nailed to the cross was much more at liberty than was Pilate washing his hands in a vain attempt to rid himself of the pangs of conscience resulting from his cowardice in permitting an innocent man to be condemned to death. Hundreds find freedom from illness, blindness, and other serious physical handicaps through a spiritual release which makes them an inspiration to others. Thousands of people able to sing in prisons, in exile, on sickbeds, and in torture chambers attest to the fact that man's spirit can be free even though his body may be bound. Man craves physical freedom, yet he has a capacity for freedom which God can give him and which no one can take from him.

While spiritual freedom is the greater value, it is not a complete substitute for other freedoms. Man craves the right, not only to have freedom between himself and God, but also to have freedom between himself and his associates. Man wants the right to worship as he chooses, to teach his children what he believes to be the truth, to not only believe but to speak of his beliefs, both in speech and in writing. This is a physical type of freedom, a freedom which man grants to man or withholds from him. It is the type of freedom which a Christian not only wants for himself, but if he acts in love he will also cherish it for others.

Summer Bible School -- In West China

by Wilhelmina Kuyf

JUST two weeks before we had said that a SBS took lots of people to help—that was the one thing we lacked. However, we went prayerfully ahead with plans for not one, but two schools. One in the city, where we have been having classes and services since the end of last year, and one in the chapel outside the west gate which was opened the day before Easter.

An ordinary announcement in Sunday school and church was all we dared give. If we had visited homes to invite the children, we should have been swamped. As it was, about one hundred appeared at each place the first morning. To begin with, there was a half-hour worship service, led by a different teacher each morning, following a Bible lesson illustrated with the flannelgraph, for the next thirty-five minutes. The theme was "The Life of Christ." Grace Chang and Mrs. Wang, who had the Bible story in charge, were both careful that all be related to the children's life. Each lesson ended with a bit of a song, to a familiar tune, giving the highlights of the lesson, and a pertinent Scripture verse to be memorized. These two periods were the best of the day, though music, which came next, was also very good. The songs selected were: "The Lord Is in His Holy Temple" and The Lord's Prayer" as well as several choruses and simpler hymns. Volume is what our Chinese youngsters produce, and it was a chore to tone them down. They loved doing "When Your Fears Rise Mountain High" with motions, but they actually came to appreciate the more devotional hymns also.

SING IT!

Have you noticed how how many articles in this issue refer to the power of song. Notice not only this article but the visitor's impression of the Canadian Conference—again and again one realizes that the Christian Church is a powerful church, is a singing church.

An activity or play-period should have been inserted right after the music; but we have only a small yard in the city, and it was wet most of the time. (Let's not get started on the subject of Szechuan rains). The West Street place has a large yard, so they worked out the happy expedient of combining the next class, hygiene, with games. If hygiene seems like a queer subject to teach in SBS, remember that many of our pupils don't know that our bodies are temples of the Holy Spirit. We were fortunate in having professional people to teach this course, and while they selected some "stiff" lessons, yet the youngsters took them in. The teachers intergrated everything with the Bible lesson. Some interesting angles turned up in hygiene class. One small poster showed a tiger's head on one side, and an enlarged picture of a fly on the other, with the caption "The Fly Is More Dangerous Than the Tiger." However, it was hard to convince the children, and it was only after repeated lessons that they were willing to concede that the fly was dangerous.

Pupils were divided into three groups for the memory work—the tiny ones and others who had never been in school, the primary and grammar-school pupils, and the middle-school students who were about 12 to 14 years old. The third group just reveled in learning the many Psalms and verses that had been assigned, and the middle group did well too.

The last day gospels and small hymn books were given out to be taken home, as well as prizes of gospel storybooks for well-done memory work. A treat of apples and cookies finished the School.

Not more than 5 per cent of these children were from Christian homes, so you can understand why there was much prayer offered that the youngsters would carry the lessons they had learned back into their homes.

At an evaluation session after school was ended, we figured that some children had been introduced to the Saviour, others had their knowledge of Him

We need to observe Religious Education Week, September 25-October 2, not only for spiritual reasons, but for health reasons. Sixty per cent of all patients who visit physicians' offices could cure themselves if they only got rid of their fears and worries. How can they get rid of their worries? I'll let William James answer that question. "Of course," said James, "the sovereign cure for worry is prayer."

You don't have to go to Harvard to learn that. My mother found that out on a Missouri farm.

We may not be able to set the world right by prayer; but we can at least begin to set our own lives right by prayer.—Dale Carnegie, reprinted from the Gospel Herald.

WHERE WERE YOU?

Ponder the following which is taken from a church paper in Georgia:

"I am a Junior boy. Last Sunday night I thought I'd go to church. My buddy went to the movies and wanted me to go along, but I didn't think I ought to go there, so I went to church.

"I looked for my Sunday school teacher, but he wasn't there.

"I looked for a couple of deacons I know, but they weren't there.

"I looked for my mother's Sunday school teacher, who has called at our house, but she wasn't there.

"I guess they don't think church Sunday night is important."—The Covenant Weekly.

A Missionary's Summer in Retrospect

by Alfred Wiebe

The summer is passing quickly. Beginning May 30th and extending for one week we had the camp meeting at Longdale with the very efficient help of the Waldo E. Harder family and Gladys Wiebe of Elbing and Whitewater, Kansas respectively.

Immediately following, three two-week periods of vacation Bible school were held at Longdale, Fonda, and Cantonment. Brother Dalke and his helpers kindly offered to take charge of the Bible school with the Arapahoe children at the church south of Canton. Daily they drove the long distance from Weatherford and then driving another 20 miles or so gathering up the children.

The Only Bible Institution

The attendance at the Bible schools was not as large as we would like to have seen it. Yet we feel that it was well worth the effort, for this is the only Bible instruction that many of the children get. We are very grateful to the Lord who supplies strength from day to day. But more than that we thank Him for those people who made a profession of accepting salvation. Several are being instructed for baptism.

Though the work often seems discouraging, yet we see the effect of the Holy Spirit's work. There is conviction of sin and realization of the need of salvation in many a heart, even though the individual lacks courage to come out openly. We trust that by the grace of God they will some day yield to Him.

"I Have Just Been Saved"

I would like to share a few lines of a letter that we received some time ago from a girl who is away from home. She writes, "It is with the greatest of joy that I am writing this letter to you. Your prayers have not been in vain, I have just been saved. I never knew the comfort and joy and peace before, that I have now. All my sins have been forgiven and by believing I've found salvation in Jesus Christ our Lord. I wish that every young boy and girl would take the time to consider how really happy they would be by accepting Jesus Christ as their personal Savior. Write and tell me more about Jesus."

Can We Depend on You?

This letter brought us a great deal of joy as have also the oral confessions and testimonies of others. The work is not in vain. However there is much territory to be conquered yet. The enemy is strongly entrenched and will not give on his grounds without severe struggle. Yet He who has commissioned His disciples to go into all the world, will yet conquer many a soul, if His own are faithful in battle —but most important, if they are faithful in their struggle upon their knees. Can we depend on you to struggle with us there?

There are a number of attitudes which the Christian who loves his neighbors as himself will possess which will help to preserve individual freedom even during periods of distress and increasing social complexity. One of these is a respect for the opinions of others. Man is under compulsion to speak and teach that which he is convinced is truth. We are still under the same compulsion that impelled Peter to say, "We ought to obey God rather than men." The Christian must be conscious of this compulsion, not only upon himself, but also upon the one who does not agree with him. He will thus realize that the man with whom he disagrees must also have the right to speak and teach that which he believes. He wants his opinions respected; he will thus accord that same privilege to another.

In order to be tolerant toward ideas with which one does not agree, an individual must have a deep faith in the final triumph of truth. Often we become so distressed about ideas contrary to our own because we do not have a deep faith in the rightness of our own cause. Gamaliel expressed this faith when he said during the trial of some of the apostles, "If this plan or this undertaking be of men, it will fail; but if it be of God, you will not be able to overthrow them. You might even be opposing God" (Acts 5:38,39). Unfortunately, though the leaders of the early church were saved by this philosophy of Gamaliel, their followers had no faith in it; but when they themselves were no longer persecuted by non-Christians, they began to persecute those who disagreed with them. Thus there came about a history of persecution where nothing but Christian love should have reigned.

Freedom to speak, to write, and to teach are important fundamental freedoms, not only for their own sakes, but also because they are fundamental to other freedoms. Freedom of religion is meaningless, unless it carries with it the freedom to share with others the truth as one sees it. Religion is spread to others by the spoken and the written word. When one is inhibited in his right to speak of the way in which he feels that Christ would have him act, he no longer has real religious freedom, for a part of one's religion is the conviction that he should spread it. Freedom of religion is empty if one is told that he may believe what he wants to believe so long as he keeps quiet about it.

Let us dedicate our lives to the truth that makes men free; to the truth that frees men spiritually through the love of Christ; to the truth of love among men, which motivates us to love others even as we love ourselves, and thus to seek their welfare and their freedom. Then we shall be true ambassadors of freedom, living in love that all might be both physically and spiritually free. As Paul said to the Galatians, "For you were called to freedom, brethren; only do not use your freedom, as an opportunity for the flesh, but through love be servants one of another. For the whole law is fulfilled in one word, 'You shall love your neighbor as yourself.' May God bless and direct you in searching for and living by the truth that makes men free.

VIENNA MENNONITE GROUP
March 1949
in the MCC office
Van Swietengasse 1, Wien IX

The group pictured here meets twice a month in the Mennonite Central Committee office rooms in Van Swietengasse 1, Vienna. A typical meeting begins with some well-known hymn such as are found in the Gesangbuch mit Noten. A visiting minister or one of the MCC unit members opens the worship service with scripture reading and prayer. A sermon or talk follows. One or several hymns close the meeting after which often coffee or tea and some sandwiches, cookies or doughnuts are served.

Of the group here nine held membership in their local Mennonite church prior to World War II—six in Galicia, and one each in Chortitza, Danzig, and Graudenz. The remainder of the group are either married to a Mennonite or are from a Mennonite family background.

A Grusome Story

Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Replogle recently told of their experiences in the Near East where they have been serving Arab refugees. About 910,000 of these refugees were driven from their homes in Jaffa, Haifa, Lydda and other areas following the division of unhappy Palestine between the Jewish and Arabian peoples. Over 200,000 of these refugees are nearly clothesless, practically blanketless, literally without heat, and homeless on the desert of the Gaza area; about 20,000 are in Egypt! almost 300,000 are in the Lebanon-Syria-Trans-Jordan area; over 300,000 are still in parts of Palestine. On the other hand, there are about 20,000 Jewish refugees which have been driven out of Jerusalem by the Arabs.

Why Are They Homeless

Officially, the new Jewish state will not take back the former Arab residents who are now refugees. Officially, the new Arab state will not allow Arab refugees to return to their former homes in what is now the nation of Israel. Obviously, this creates a terrific impasse.

Bitter Hatred

Reports are that Arabs nurture a bitter hatred not only against the Jewish people, but also against Britain and America for their influence in the partition of Palestine. For example, one Baptist church was boycotted when the Arabs discovered the United States President was a Baptist.

Immediate Help Needed

On March 24 President Truman signed Public Law 25 authorizing $16 million for Palestine refugees. Through the RFC, an $8 million check was given by Warren Austin to Trygvie Lie, United Nations Secretary, as a loan to begin at once the relief of Arab refugees. As this is written, no money has been appropriated for Arab refugees. (An authorization must be followed by an appropriation. It takes two laws, in most instances, to get actual cash payments by the government.) The House passed a deficiency appropriation bill recently with no provision for Palestine refugees; the Senate added $16 million to this bill for Palestian refugees. If the joint Senate-House conference committee approves this addition, it will likely become law.

No one saturated in the Word of God would claim that people are saved by fellowship. It is a by-product of a common faith in our Lord, a common experience of salvation. Yet no one dare leave the Christian to himself without the strength of brotherhood—a real brotherhood with meaning in terms of the total Christian task.

Acts 2:42 reveals "and they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in the breaking of bread, and in prayers." Note well their steadfastness in doctrine, fellowship, eating, and praying. This was a strong foundation to carry out the Great Commission.—D.E.S.

Book Notes

THE COMMON VENTURES OF LIFE by Elton Trueblood, Harper's; 124 pp, $1.00. Elton Trueblood is Professor of Philosophy at Earlham College. The common ventures which he places into a framework of divine grace are marriage, birth, work and death. The opening chapter is philosophical yet expressed in simple language and addressed to people who are outside the organized Church and thus do not understand the religious approach to our common ventures. Trueblood shows how spirituality must enter into every phase of life, that life should be an integrated whole, that we should glorify our common ventures.

In his discussion of marriage the author points out the difficulty of having a wedding become a sacramental experience when it is secularized or even a home ceremony. He deplores the commercialization of weddings and pleads for an understanding of marriage as the concern of the worshipping community. He acknowledges the dangers that threaten any marriage and reminds the reader that religious motivation is the only guarantee for success.

The chapter on birth branches out into a discussion of many phases of home life, including grace at the table and family worship. The closing sentence states, "The sacrament of childhood is a continuing revelation."

Mr. Trueblood emphasizes the dignity of labor in his chapter on work. He feels that any vocation is a divine calling and should be thus undertaken. He enumerates with pride several groups, who foster Christian ideals by and through their professions, such as the Gideons, the Associations of Christian Businessmen and others. When we feel that we are sharing in an unfinished creation by the work we do then the divine light shines on us.

Mr. Trueblood recognizes death as a universal theme, a transcendent fact. He alludes to the many poets and prophets who have stated profound truths about death. He gives practical counsel as to best ways of comforting those who have lost someone by death. He explains the role of the pastor as a comforter and gives his personal opinion on the matter of funerals and cemeteries. He does not object to monuments but prefers them simple and beautiful. He closes the little book by an appeal to return to our tradition of glorifying our common experiences by placing them in a framework of divine grace.

Impressions of the Canadian Conference

Missionary John Thiessen

I WAS a visitor—not a stranger. Neither did I feel myself to be an outsider. I feel always very much at home among our Canadian brethren.

The Conference met in the new, very-beautiful yet modest church building which our Sardis congregation had finished just before the devasting floods in 1948. This building is large, yet not large enough for a conference in Canada—interest in a conference is great, people come from far and wide. Further, this conference met in the picturesque Frazer Valley, surrounded by majestic growth and a pleasant climate. Yet one feels an aftermath of the extreme sorrow of only one year ago when the Frazer River dealt so cruelly with our people. Today they are again hopeful, they plant new gardens. The Government of Canada thru the Red Cross organization has shown itself a real friend to those stricken people, and has done so very much in repair work that one can seldom see a building which shows the result of the floods. Even the buildings stood in water twelve feet deep.

> There was a oneness of purpose, viz., faithfully to serve our God and His Church. Three days . . . some of the finest I have ever attended. Good-will and brotherliness . . . on a high level.

Minister's Conference

Now to the Conference. As it is the custom of our Canadian churches, the Minister's Conference met on Saturday. The mission Fest was on Sunday, and then came three days of Conference, having business and spiritual refreshing running side by side and hand in hand. At the Minister's Conference one could very distinctly feel the oneness and good spirit of about one hundred servants of Christ. There was a oneness of purpose viz., faithfully to serve our God and His Church. Several good papers were read on the subjects of faithful service, and how to deal with problems in the Church. Discussions were fraternal and uplifting.

Mission Fest

On Sunday the Mission Fest was a high point in the whole Conference. It was a glorious Sunday morning, cool air, bright sunshine, and friendly faces everywhere. Several thousand people gathered at the house of worship to rededicate themselves again to unselfish living. The large audience was lead to ever-higher resolves of remembering others by the Brethren J. M. Regier, chairman of Home Mission Board, and P. J. Dyck, veteran relief worker. We were reminded that we are indeed our brother's keeper, and that we by all means must not overlook the challenging need near home at Jerusalem; and our responsibility toward the household of our faith. During the afternoon service our attention was called to the need of our outreach to the farthest parts of the world—yes, wherever there is need, wherever there are souls to be brought to the Shepherd. "The field is the world" (Matt. 13:38), and we as a Mennonite church must heed that also. Mission-interest and mission-mindedness are essential for the life of a Church. The spiritual life of a church grows as interest in mission work grows.

As I Saw It

by J. M. Regier

It was my privilege to be present at the Canadian Conference at Sardis, British Columbia three full days, July 2-4, inclusive. This included the ministers conference, the mission festival on Sunday, and the first day of the Conference. May I record a few impressions that came to me those days:

Talent.—The Mennonites in Canada have much talent, among young and old.

Youth.—Young people receive opportunities at the Conference, and they avail themselves of these.

Unity.—One senses a deep desire to be true to one's convictions, and at the same time to work together in harmony.

Music.—People love to sing. They sang much. Well-trained choirs sang often. A cantata was presented excellently, but many (as among our own number) will still have to learn to appreciate this type of song.

Language.—The language of the Conference was German, although choirs were frequently presented in the English language. Several hundred young people attend non-Mennonite Bible schools. Evidently the language is no hindrance.

Sociability.—Canadians enjoy attending conferences. It was the first all-Canadian conference ever held in British Columbia, and it is estimated that over 2,000 attended on Sunday.

Hospitality.—There was apparent harmony in entertaining all the guests. The serving of meals proceeded smoothly, because everything had been carefully planned in advance.

Even We.—Even United States visitors felt perfectly "at home" in their midst.

Growth.—As many immigrants have gone to Canada during the last two years as have gone to South America. This will greatly strengthen the Canadian churches within a few years.

Canning Program Under Way

Non-Mennonite DP's Assisted

The MCC was approached recently by a representative of the Ukranian American Relief Committee regarding a problem in their DP assistance program. The sponsors of four Ukranian families found it impossible to receive these people when they arrived, and therefore new sponsors had to be secured. After checking with several Mennonite families who had expressed desire to receive a DP family, it was possible to help these people who were "homeless." The MCC and the Ukranian Committee will be jointly concerned with the welfare of these families in Mennonite homes.

The assistance is a part of our limited efforts to help also those beyond our own Mennonite circle. The special help to the Ukranian Committee in the case of these four families is, however, not under the larger program which the MCC has undertaken in arranging for sponsors for Protestant DPs in cooperation with Church World Service.

1949 Material Aid Needs and Plans

The clothing most needed in relief areas at the present time are: (1) Clothing for men and boys for both work and dress wear; (2) Underwear for all members of the family; (3) Sheets, or materials from which to make sheets; (4) Clothing for children, especially for those above the age of six years; (5) Yarns, yardage, thread, darning cotton and mending materials; (6) Shoes and stockings; (7) Bedding. New clothing is greatly appreciated as well as good used materials.

The foods especially needed are: dried fruits and vegetables, meats, fats, and powdered milk. Our workers in both Europe and other needy parts of the world are prepared to make distribution to the most needy of all the material aid that the churches will be able to give this year. In several communities, particularly in Kansas and Pennsylvania, it is planned that portable canners will again be available for canning meat which the churches in those areas may have to give for relief.

The MCC Food and Clothing Collection Center in Reedley, California, which was closed for the summer, will be ready to re-open on September 15, to receive food and clothing contributions from that area during the coming months.

Personnel Notes

Robert and Lois Kreider and Maynard Widmer returned from Europe on August 25.

European Exchange Students Arrive

A group of seven students arrived on August 25 at the MCC headquarters enroute to the respective Mennonite colleges where they will study during the coming year. Anny Guth, Lydia Nusbaumer, and Roland Nusbaumer, of France, will attend Goshen College. Andre Goll, of France, will study at the Mennonite Biblical Seminary; Rene Hege, of France, will attend Messiah Bible College; Eric D. Habegger, from Switzerland, will study at Freeman Junior College; and Tjietze R. Ytsma, from the Netherlands, will go to Bluffton College. Within several weeks additional students will come from Germany and other European countries. This student exchange program is under the direction of the Council of Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges, with Menno Travel Service and the MCC Mennonite Aid Section assisting in various ways.

New Attendant Training Announced

The new, year-round MCC Service Unit at Topeka State Hospital is being inaugurated under unique circumstances. This hospital has been approved as a training institution under a new program of training in the psychiatric field, authorized by the Kansas State Legislature and financed by a grant of $70,500 from the Rockefeller Foundation. The training program, directed by the Menninger Foundation, will accept groups of 25 applicants every six months. There is no fee for attending this Training School, but entrance requirements are quite rigid, admitting only those who have definite interest in a life vocation related to the psychiatric field. It is expected that a number of the group comprising the present MCC Summer Unit at this hospital will apply and be admitted to the School.

The year-round MCC Unit will have no direct connection with the special school, although indirectly it is expected that the creative approach of the Unit will have an influence on those enrolled in the School. Members of the Unit may also be able to attend certain clinics and classes of the Menninger School on non-credit basis.

It is hoped that a number of additional Mennonite young people will be available to join the Service Unit, and that there will also be those interested in enrolling in the special School with a plan to serve rather indefinitely in the mental health program of the Church.

deepened, and some said they wanted to take Him for their own Lord. Attitudes of reverence for God were learned. We appreciate much the fact that one lovable little urchin who could not manage to sit still for even one minute, learned to be reverent during prayer. In fact, once, outside the chapel door, noticing that prayer was being made, she "shssh'ed" the little ones around her, and herself joined in the spirit of the prayer.

All four of the missionaries helped, of course, as did our other workers, but so did three of our church members who were just baptized in May, and one girl who is a Christian but has not yet come into the church fellowship. Other church members helped also and when a missionary expressed thanks, and said, "You don't have to thank me, I did it for God." One of the recently baptized helpers said, "We know the children got some benefit, but we who were privileged to help learned a lot more." We enjoy the sound of Christian songs being sung on our street, as has been the case since SBS here became a reality.

Rejoice with us that these schools could be freely held and pray that the decisions made may be for eternity.

Manners at Mealtime

by Catherine Regier, Newton, Kansas

Mrs. Ruggles, of The Birds' Christmas Carol, was polishing up the manners of her children for the dinner in the big house down the street. She implored the little Ruggleses to behave so that their hosts would not ask themselves, "Who fetched them children up?"

Although Mrs. Ruggles did not speak model English, she had the right idea about people's eating habits being telltales of their characters. A person who handles his fork as he would a spade, ducks his head to meet his food, guzzles his soup, makes a bib out of his napkin, or chatters constantly would make anyone wonder "who fetched him up." The table is one place from which a person cannot escape whenever he pleases; consequently, he cannot help being noticed by other people.

The mechanics of table etiquette—use of the silver, how to eat soup, when to use your fingers, and how to use the finger bowl—are fairly easy to follow and may be found in almost any etiquette book. At a properly set table you can hardly make the mistake of using the wrong piece of silver, because the forks at the left of the plate and the knives and spoons at the right will be laid in the order in which you need them, beginning with those farthest from the plate. If you are in doubt about which piece of silver to use or how to eat some food, you can observe what the hostess is doing and follow her lead. Should you be in doubt about something such as the method of serving, you might simply ask the hostess, "Did you want me to pass this on?"

More difficult, perhaps, than knowing what to do with fish bones in your mouth is the matter of being an interesting and pleasant table companion. A knowledge of table etiquette is essential to making you feel at ease, but even a precise following of the rules cannot insure the social success of dining. Just as spices season the food, so conversation seasons the social atmosphere.

Be cheerful at mealtime, take your time, watch what you are doing, and you will add to the success of any meal. Happiness is essential not only to a delightful time but also to proper digestion. Don't relate unpleasant experiences or hash out an argument at the table. Personal remarks about "that awful Sally Smith" should be postponed if they must be made at all.

The art of table talk, as of any type of conversation, is to include all members of the group. The most brilliant conversationalist is he who says very little but makes others want to talk as well as to listen. Prolonged conversations between two people at a table of eight results in either an awkward silence when the two cease conversing or utter boredom if they continue. "Small talk" about trivial matters does not make for delightful conversation and should be avoided. Laughing loudly or snickering at the table is out.

The bore of bores is the person who tries to attract attention to himself by carrying on a monologue. Table etiquette calls for conversation, and a monologue is not conversation. The joy of joys, on the other hand, is the person of light and gay but unmalicious humor, for where he is, the successful party is also. It is not so much what he says that delights his hearers as the twist he gives it, the personality he puts into it. Will Rogers could tell a group of people that it had been hot today and would probably be hot tomorrow, and make eveyone burst into laughter—or tears, if he chose —depending upon the way he said it. The person of humor, however, is in danger of becoming a bore if he talks incessantly or if he repeats his narrative too often.

The person who speaks too little is probably more rare than the one who speaks too easily. Should an awkward silence result, let it go for a while. Far worse than a long pause is the tongue that rattles endlessly.

No matter how interesting a table conversation may be, always watch what you are doing. After all, you are at the table for the purpose of eating as well as for social reasons. If you become so involved in conversation that you spill your water or eat another person's salad, you had better stop, look, and listen before every sentence you speak. Should a piece of meat skid off your plate onto Aunt Julia's best dress, do what you can to repair the damage, and then let the matter drop. Lavish apologies, nervous grins, or hanging heads only make things worse.

Being careful of your manners every day at your own table will prepare you for any dining occasion. What is more important, you will not be guilty of uncouthness at the table of your friends or at the corner drug store with the coke crowd.

The test of good manners is to be able to put up with bad ones, pleasantly.—C. M. Messenger

Announce Play Reading Service

Have you ever planned to present a play in your church? And, have you had the problem of finding a good play which fits the particular purposes and needs for which you plan? Perhaps it is for a mission program, Thanksgiving, Christmas, or Easter and you have difficulty finding something that really fits and is appropriate.

It is difficult, if not impossible, for a local church to be informed concerning the great variety of plays available. In the light of this fact and the problems local groups face, Prof. William T. Wilkoff, of the Speech and Drama Department, Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas, has announced a "Play and Reading Service." This service is being sponsored by Professor Wilkoff in order to help make available appropriate materials for local groups.

Of the service Professor Wilkoff states: "The function of the service will be to pick suitable program readings and plays for high schools, intermediate schools, and church youth-workers anywhere in the Continental United States. The plays and readings will be chosen on the basis of their Christian suitability for presentation before either paying or other types of audiences. The main work of the Play Service will be to pick plays, cut it where needed, and give advice as to directing, staging, costuming, and advertising presentation.

"This service will be offered to any group for a flat fee of $2.00, payable in advance. This fee will cover enrolling in the service, plus one year's work. After enrolling, the fee will be approximately $1.50 a year. This fee will cover cost of original copy of play, mailing, and so forth."

You may get in touch with Professor Wilkoff through the Play Reading Service, Department of Speech and Drama, Box 116, Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas.

IMPRESSIONS OF CANADIAN CONFERENCE

directed choirs was like special seasoning to an already very good meal. There were choirs from all the churches in the Fraser valley; also an octet from our Bible College in Winnipeg. All sang exceedingly well. All this fine singing reached its climax in the mass-choir singing under the direction of K. H. Neufeld, of Winkler. Canada has fine class-singers, and they sing to the glory of God; they themselves love to sing.

The three days of church conference were some of the finest church business meetings I have ever attended. Good-will and brotherliness were always on a very high level. When sometimes something came up which seemed somewhat threatening to the good atmosphere, the very able chairman, Rev. J. J. Thiessen, instinctively knew how to avert unbrotherliness.

Facts

Most of us here are also interested in tangible results of church efforts. It is noteworthy that our Canadian Conference has an adult church membership of over 13,000 souls. Over 600 were added thru baptism to the churches in the last Conference year, i.e., July, 1948, to the end of June, 1949. The average church member of the whole Conference has contributed just over $26 during that same year for the upbuilding of the Church, including benevolence and missions. Yes, our Canadian Conference has a healthy, Growing, inner life. So it seems to an interested visitor.

A few individual points of the whole Conference moved me deeply. These were:

1. The unanimous endorsement by Conference of the buying of a large and adequate building for our Bible College in Winnipeg. Thus it took a long, forward look on behalf of our young people and the spiritual care of our churches.

2. Sending greetings to our aged and faithful writer for our churches, Rev. Jacob H. Janzen and telling him that whatever the Conference treasuries have loaned him, shall be forgotten and no refund is asked.

3. The Conference sending greetings of good-will by telegram to our old and disabled missionaries, viz, Rev, and Mrs. P. A. Penner; Rev. and Mrs. P. W. Penner; Mrs. P. J. Wiens; and to Rev. P. H. Richert, who so untiringly served the cause of missions as secretary for many years.

Also Mrs. Frieda Regier Entz was publicly remembered, whose home-going occurred during this Conference.

God bless and prosper our Canadian Conference, and every individual church member thereof.

This summer, there were about forty young people representing the youth of our churches coming in personal contact with youth in Germany, Many of those they have met with were students. They bring back a common story and common experience to tell our American representatives.

Puerto Rico through Native Eyes

by Francisco Santos, La Plata, Puerto Rico

Puerto Rico, sometimes has been called the "Paradise of the Atlantic." I think they have a reason for giving that name to it. It is a paradise for poets, for artists, for storytellers, and for people who are fond of color and contrast, flowers and trees, as it is a source of inspiration for them. For us who live there that is our home and our place of security.

Puerto Rico has a tropical and semitropical climate. It approximates the ideal. There is very little change. Trees, and flowers, grow everywhere in abundance and remain green throughout the year. The climate is very agreeable all the year, although it is excessively humid.

The Island is about a hundred miles long by thirty-five miles wide. On this rectangle of land there are about two million people, who are trying to make a living from agriculture. A small percentage of this population has been coming to the United States in search of new experience and better living conditions.

It was on October 19, 1898 that the United States took formal possession of the Island. Since that time Puerto Rico looks forward to a better position in the commerce world. We buy most of our products from the United States. But, we send most of our sugar and tobacco over here, too.

Most Puerto Ricans are of Spanish extraction. Therefore, our language is Spanish. The Department of Education has tried its best to spread the English. Those persons who go to high school and college can master the English reasonably well. Of course, we will always have that Spanish accent.

The chief products of the Island are tobacco, sugar-cane, and coffee. Next to sugar, tobacco takes the lead. Although the number of acres of land dedicated to it has greatly increased since American occupation and the quality has been much improved, it may be stated that the industry has not attained its full development.

Citrus fruits like oranges and limes grow in abundance, but they only have a local market. Our oranges cannot be compared with the ones I have eaten here as they are sweeter and there is more taste to them.

Cocoanuts are abundant too. They grow on the sandy beaches near the seashore. This fruit doesn't seem to be a source of income to the Island.

Plantains, bananas, and mangos are fruits which are grown for domestic consumption. Beans and rice have to be imported to meet the local needs.

I do believe that if our people were more educated in the field of agriculture we could raise better crops and produce more for our domestic consumption. For a program of this type we need people who will be willing to share their knowledge with us. I am sure this people will learn new things from us as we would learn from them.

The Department of Health, the Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration, schools, and other Government agencies have worked hard for a better health program. Malaria is one of the most common diseases in the coastal area. This disease has been fought by destroying mosquitos and their breeding places. Not all the houses in Puerto Rico have screened windows. I am sure that if this measure could be taken we would have fewer cases. The trouble is that most of the people cannot afford all the preventive measures for good health. It seems to me that malnutrition and overcrowding are two of our most serious problems. They will affect people physically as well as mentally.

Yes, we do have our economic problems and numerous needs, but Puerto Rico is not an unsolved problem. The progress of Puerto Rico will be the result of a careful program made by those who know conditions and problems of the island. That program will have to be made by Christians who will be willing to cooperate and who will recognize Puerto Rico as a part of the United States, instead of thinking of it as an isolated island in the Atlantic.

Comments by the Editor

The past weeks have seen a steady and rapid increase in the sales of the Handbook to the Mennnoite Hymnary by local young people's societies. Almost two hundred copies were sold in one week's time. This is a most encouraging sign of interest on the part of youth groups as well as church members in their church music.

Some of our churches have become rather weak in their singing for any of several reasons. Where this is true it becomes very important that the people make themselves acquainted with the hymns of the Church. Such a decline in singing can be met only by means of greater efforts at more appreciation and love of singing. This book should help along that line. Some of us were at one time poor singers. We may not be strong as yet, but continued devotion to and love of our hymns has done much to make our singing better. So, let ever more of the young people's societies undertake this worthy task.

We have heard frequently of various projects undertaken by local societies. Projects of service and projects to raise funds for special causes—missions, camp sites, relief, providing for local needs, etc. In these columns, the story of the Kitchener church of Kitchener, Ontario has been told. That church raises some $3,000 annually by means of such projects. This is a big contribution to their mission budget.

We are approaching the harvest time season when projects often are brought to a close. We need to think as this season closes about what to do next year, make plans, get well organized, and enter new and interesting projects. As we become organized for the new year, let us think seriously of the new projects we will undertake.

There are many ideas which can be carried out. One society raised hybrid corn, another painted mail boxes, and another used baby sitting earnings for their societies project.

The Christian and the Draft Law

By Robert W. Hartzler

Recently certain Christian youths have drawn attention to themselves by refusing to register the pertinent facts of their lives with the government as required by law. They have imagined that in doing so they have either been obedient to the gospel or have presented an effective witness against war. Their cases have drawn such an unwarranted degree of attention thru the church that it seems desirable to voice another point of view here.

One takes it for granted that the controlling spirit which the Christian brings to all his relationships is that of love. This means that he has good will not only toward all individuals — good or bad — but also toward the government. He regards the government not as a devil or evil ogre which he must combat at every point, but rather as an ally and benefactor, ordained by God according to Biblical teachings, which he must honor and respect, and which he will obey so far as he possibly can. His attitude is not that of the obstructionist who is quick to find occasion for offense; rather, it is that of the obedient conqueror who gives his cloak as well as his coat, and thereby surpasses his tormentor.

A second assumption is that the Christian comes back to the Bible and especially the N. T. to find the standard and guidance and counsel by which he makes his moral choices. It is possible to do otherwise. For example, it is possible to begin with the admonition, "Thou shalt love thine enemies" and by a process of building one supposedly logical proposition upon another to arrive at the dubious interpretation that what this means is that "Thou shalt not cooperate with a government census." This ceases to be Christianity and becomes rationalism and it falls into exactly the same pit that rationalism commonly falls—that of following an apparently logical line of reasoning out to an obviously false conclusion. Because he has the absolute of the New Testament the Christian is defended from this sort of error. He is able to correct his misleading logic by this unchanging pole star.

In the light of the foregoing, when a Christian faces the government's request that he submit to it the pertinent facts of his life he is eager to comply if he possibly can. It makes little difference what ultimate purpose the government has in making the request; so far it has demanded nothing of him that is incompatible with the spirit of love; indeed, that he should comply is strongly predicated by the Biblical demand that the Christian submit himself to his government insofar as posible. Even if the individual should consider that the act of registration is itself tainted with evil, one would think him unduly legalistic if he refused to comply, this in the light of Jesus' teaching that when a soldier compelled a Christian to carry his pack for a mile the Christian should exceed the command and carry it two miles. Surely refusal here would represent a squeamishness about evil which would be utterly impossible to maintain in all areas of life and which might, indeed, make it appear a contradiction for the individual to live with himself.

A refusal to register violates both assumptions with regard to the controls of the Christian: 1) Rather than the spirit of good will toward the government it reflects a defiant, un-cooperative spirit; 2) Rather than having the New Testament at its core it has rationalism, idealism, perhaps humanism.

And so call the man who refuses to register a man of high ideals; call him a man of strong humanitarian concern; most of all, call him a man of courage; and by all means let us call him brother; but do not call him an accurate expression of the Christian attitude and spirit in this matter. The Christian ought to register.

Bluffton College who refused to register for the draft, is to be paroled from prison. This is a most welcome bit of news for the trials of prison life are most difficult. Charles will doubtless have much to report concerning prison life and his own spiritual pilgrimage as he faced this trial of his faith. But, the news is more welcome because of the obvious fact that his imprisonment was wholly unnecessary even though he refused to register. His refusal was done in good faith and the government officials were at all times completely informed of his intentions. The letter of refusal could well have been considered registration and, we are told, now is being so used in other cases.

We have been informed that Dwight Platt, of Newton, Kansas has refused to register on his eighteenth birthday. He set forth a lengthy statement of his reasons. Doubtless his decision was not one arrived at easily. To make such resolution on your eighteenth birthday reflects quite serious inner probing and prayer. Because of this, we respect Dwight's sincerity of purpose.

The Mennonite Church has never taken a non-registrant position officially so far as war is concerned. However, in the case of the Russian experience, the 1870 migration could be called one motivated by a refusal to register for peacetime conscription. That migration solved the problem by moving to a new land. However, varied opinions are expressed as to what the stand should be. Some say, "register under existing law." Others, as we know, say, "don't register." We have printed both viewpoints, believing that there is no clear line to draw on the issue. Also, we believe each person should give the war issue his most serious and sober prayer and thought avoiding flighty decision. An article appearing in this issue presents a viewpoint in support of registration. We hope you give it serious reflection and thought.

There are three saloons for every school, two liquor outlets for every church, a liquor outlet for every 75 families in the U. S., a total of 421,000 liquor outlets in the U. S. There are more women serving where alcoholic beverages are sold than are enrolled in all the colleges in the U. S. The American people spend for retail beverages alcohol each year 2½ times the money spent for education.—Ted Hightower, as reprinted from the Salem Church Bulletin, Freeman, South Dakota.

We have read in several places of a tobacco company which sent cigarettes to high-school boys in a certain community with the purpose of encouraging them to smoke. One boy reported to the tobacco company how he had used his cigarettes. He had steeped them in water and made poisons with which to spray rosebuds. Not one bug survived. He said that he might want more for the same purpose next year if any bugs came back.

In 1906 the American Committee to the Mission to Lepers contributed almost $5,000 to leprosy suffers. The coming year the American Mission to Lepers will contribute over a half million dollars to 125 mission stations in 29 countries on five continents for this important work. India will receive the largest grant of any country from the American Mission, with over $100,000 going to 26 stations in that country. Next to India the country where mission stations will expend the most funds for lepers in Nigeria; then China; then the Philippines.

It is estimated that there are 25,000 people with leprosy in Japan, and about one third of these are receiving medical care as compared with 10,000,000 throughout the world, of whom one or two per cent receive treatment.

The American Mission and its parent body, Mission to Lepers in London, will give $43,250 to the missions of three Mennonite bodies, and $20,000 is required and called for leprosy work between July 1, 1949, and July 1, 1950.

YOUTH FOR CHRIST CRUSADE IN EUROPE

Next summer 100 Youth for Christ evangelistic teams will conduct a religious campaign in Europe as a result of action taken at the fifth annual international convention of the group. Teams of four or five young people will be recruited from among students of Christian colleges and Bible schools.

Twenty six teams of two and three men each set out after the convention at Winona Lake, Ind., in July, to travel to 30 countries this year. Athlete Gil Dodds headed the team which left for Scandinavia.

The convention adopted a budget of $800,000 and at the same session pledged $400,000 of it. Of the amount $250,000 will go for world relief.

Rev. Robert A. Cook, 37, of Chicago, re-elected president, prepared to leave for a two-week tour of Germany before going to Cannes, France, where he will direct the European Youth for Christ International Congress from Aug. 13-21.—The Christian Advocate.

"Reader Says"

It may not be amiss to make some comment to your latest issue of THE MENNONITE, a comment of recognition. What I mean is the fact that you do not join the haters of everything Russian, as is customary in our press. 98 per cent of it at any rate.

The war with Russia, or the Soviet Union is taken as a matter eo ipso. Baldwin, who is always characterized as a military expert, wrote in a leading magazine (Harper's) that a strong minority is driving at a war with the Soviet Union, and naturally the Military, who rules us at present, is doing everything to expedite such "propitious" opportunity to "conquer" the world. I found yesterday this news item is an obscure little paper which quoted from the "Official Navy document that was circulated among chiefs of the armed services, and which was handed to certain United States Senators in 1947." One passage was this:

"Realistically, all wars have been for economic reasons. To make them politically and socially papatable, ideological issues have always been invoked. Any possible future war will undoubtedly conform to historical precedent . . . But after all, war is merely diplomacy by force of arms."

That sounds cynical and, no doubt, it is. It strikes my eye, this phrase: "ideological issues have always been invoked." As our Great President (F. D. Roosevelt) pointed out so accurately: it is fear, fear of Capitalism, of Communism. The free enterprise system (read: Monopoly Capitalism) is afraid its days may be numbered: they see Mene tekel on the wall.

We as Mennonites are the exponents of peace, are we not? MITZULIEBEN, NICHT MITZUHASSEN, BIN ICH DA. Some of our dogmas have become meaningless to us, I trust; but our stand on the issue of war and peace should be kept secret, I judge. We must be creative in our endeavor to overcome the evil with good. I see in your issue of August 9 a positive move toward building bridges between nations. Communism is, in its idea, no wicked notion. Of course, humans in handling this truly Christian idea go about it in a bad way, I think. But how have we handled our whole Christianity? We certainly did not put first things first. Let us rival with the Friends who seem doing as modest Christians great things in overcoming evil with good.—Thank you for your stand.

Editorials

"IN A CERTAIN CHURCH the adult classes were meeting in large rooms while the children were crowded into less than one-fourth the space they needed." This is a quotation from a Christian education magazine. With the same article there was a picture of an adult class that had moved to the sanctuary to permit the kindergarten children to have the room they needed. In the process of the years classes have a way of becoming institutionalized in certain rooms. During those years it may very possibly be that rooms have become too small or too large for the group for which they were originally planned. Wide awake church school leaders will seek to find the space best suited to each class; and wide awake Sunday school classes will be ready to make any changes that will improve the Christian education of the boys and girls.

THIS IS THE TIME OF THE YEAR that Sunday School superintendents are busily engaged in the task of filling out the ranks of the Sunday school teachers for the coming year. So this is by implication also a time when many people, who are being approached by their Sunday school teacher to take a class, are faced with a choice of loyalties. The average superintendent finds that his most talented people are people whose talents have also been discovered by many groups or organizations in the community. People are thus faced with the question as to which organization shall receive their time. This matter, in most cases, is dealt with all too lightly. In the process of our affiliations and duties connected with those various affiliations we are participating in a sacred process. We give our time that is given to us by God. We give our talent that is given to us by God. In other words something of ourself is being invested in each affiliation and responsibility. Not only do we give in each affiliation; we also receive. What we give or receive will inevitably be eternal values either positive or negative depending on the nature of the organization in question. Thus the matter of joining and serving in various types of community organizations is an extremely crucial one. Many a talented individual has sold his soul to secular and godless organizations for a bit of profit or personal prestige. On the other hand thousands have found the deep hunger of the soul for God satisfied in fellowship and service in the Church of Jesus Christ—that organization established by God through the Holy Spirit to give opportunity for the truly normal and healthy growth of our souls.

"CHRISTIAN IMPERIALISM" was the title seen on the bulletin board of one of the nation's most prominent churches. What remarks may have been made in connection with the message is not known, but implicit in the phrase is a conception basic to both Christian education and evangelism, namely—the imperialism of truth. The imperialism of the Christian truths of faith, hope and love is the only kind of valid imperialism. We are inescapably bound to carry these truths to the ends of the earth. Without these basic truths the world cannot stand. Without these basic truths transformed into flesh and blood of human personalities those personalities will disintegrate and become lost. And what assurance do we have that these truths can become flesh and blood in us other than the living Christ who has made them accessible to us by taking on our nature?

THE WORLD JUST DOESN'T UNDERSTAND! To the world it just doesn't make sense when, for example, a state school teacher who has a secure and well-paid position turns down a contract to accept a position on the staff of a Christian college. "A man leaves a job for one of two reasons," this individual was told. "Either he doesn't like the situation in which he is working or he will receive more salary at the new post." But the teacher had to say that he left for neither of the two reasons. He couldn't say that he disliked the old position; nor was he getting an advance in salary. Once more, without a question it was that something in the experience of a Christian that makes him want to build for eternity. And as long as the world refuses to see anything beyond the horizons of time it cannot understand!

THERE IS A LOT OF SHODDY THINKING going on about the nature and importance of the Church in relation to the life of the individual. Anyone who has carefully studied the Scriptures as well as life cannot help coming to the conclusion that God did not establish the Church just to give the Christians something to do, in case they don't have anything else to occupy them at the time. Man has two basic areas of sin or maladjustment in his life. The one has to do with the individual's relation to God, the other to his relation to people. There are consequently two phases of a complete conversion experience. The one has to do with the personal cleansing from sin. The other has to do with making the individual a part of the living redemptive society—Paul called it the Body of Christ or the present earthly manifestation of Christ to the world—the Church. Baptism symbolizes both these phases—cleansing from sin and identificaton with the Body of the redeemed. In the First Epistle of John it is pointed out that one of the tests to determine whether a person has eternal life or not is whether he "loves the brethren." In other words, a person who has not become a vital part of the living Church can hardly be said to be alive to Christ. Channeling the blessings we have received from Christ to others and receiving from others what they can give us because they too are in touch with Christ and channels of blessing, is the very condition of keeping alive spiritually.—JJE

THE PRIMARY TASK OF THE CHURCH, as a minority in a secular world, and therefore the basic function of the minister, is evangelistic: winning men to Christ that His Gospel might become vital in all reaches of their lives. . . .

It is not enough to patch a man's shirt, to manipulate his environment; man himself must be changed,

An Open Door In Colombia

by Arthur Keiser

WHAT determines whether a country has an "open door" to the Gospel? If it is determined by the frequency and willingness with which the Government receives missionaries, Colombia has a closed door today. If lack of persecution is an indication of an open door, then Colombia remains closed. However, if the door to a country is open when the masses have a longing in their hearts for something that only Christ can fill, then Colombia today has an open door to the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

Mission work here in Colombia has had a struggle to hold its own until the recent interest in missions in Latin America was caused by the closed doors in other parts of the world during World War II. A few missionaries have held forth the Gospel to small groups (usually the poorer, underprivileged classes) in various parts in face of strong persecution by the Catholic Church. In the last few years, however, the Lord has seen fit to permit an increase of missionaries to enter Colombia even though visas to enter the country are still very difficult to obtain and though persecution continues.

I believe that the reason for the increase in missionaries is that the day to advance has come. A battle is not won by being on the defensive. There are hungry hearts everywhere, because the Catholic Church has failed to bring Christ in all His fullness. As the people lose faith in the Catholic Church, she tries to keep them by threats as in the recent election when the priests threatened to excommunicate all who did not vote for the party that supported the church. Christianity is not imposed upon a people in this way. There is an increasing group, including the university students, who will be the future leaders, who are searching for something because of the threats of being excommunicated and because of growing disgust with what is carried on within the Church. They are searching for something that Christ alone can fulfill in their lives. He must be brought to them.

How can the evangelical Church take best advantage of this open door? First of all, we must crawl out of our fox holes and face the persecution with a great campaign to make Christ known. (The people have many false ideas, taught them through the years by the Catholic Church, about what evangelicals believe.) Christ here is a dead Christ of tradition. The people must be brought face-to-face with the New Testament Christ who not only died, but who also arose and lives today and who is able to transform our lives unto holy living through the Holy Spirit and the searching of the Word.

In other words, we need a revival here in Colombia. There are some conditions, such as searching hearts, that point up to the possibility of this taking place. It will not come automatically, however. First we must search our own hearts before God, and then advance in faith with the gospel. Nevertheless, apart from prayer there can be no revival; and so above all we must pray. Each one of you can pray that this may take place here in Colombia. Who knows how long the door will remain open?

transformed, redeemed. The minister's basic task as a community builder remains a prophetic-redemptive task —proclaiming God's judgment and mercy by life and creative deeds as well as by words.—Eugene Smathers.

Your committee believes that if the Mennonite and Christian way in economic relations is to prevail among our people the church will need to examine more closely the roots of its problem and take steps to develop a forward-looking program of community building, so challenging as to keep the thought and energies of all the members focused upon it.

Your committee believes that the church does not yet realize as it should the possibilities for fostering the Mennonite, and we believe the Christian way of life through such means as effective organization for mutual aid, hospitalization, medical care, the co-operative purchasing of land to assist your farmers in need of help, and the co-operative operation of community industries where New Testament business and social ethics and means of security prevail.

NEED FOR SERVICE PERSONAL

Additional nurses are needed in the Mexico unit for hospital and clinic work, serving both Mennonites and Mexicans. Applicants should have Low German language and preferably some knowledge of Spanish. One nurse is needed now and another in January. Write to Voluntary Service, MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Personnel for the MCC Mental Health program is also needed, including nurses with interest in psychiatric nursing who may be available for work at Brook Lane Farm or preparatory training in other institutions. A number of voluntary construction workers will also be needed during the winter in connection with the contemplated building program at King's View Farms, the MCC mental hospital project in California.

Elmer Ediger, who formerly served at the Akron office as Director of CPS and more recently as Director of Voluntary Service and Mental Health, has secured a leave of absence and will direct the Voluntary Service and Mental Health work on a part-time basis, with Ray Horst, of Ephrata, Pennsylvania, and Deemar Stahly, of Carlock, Illinois, serving full time at the office in these two fields respectively.

Sixty-Seven Represented at Clearing House

Recently there has been developed a new coordinating organization interested in the protection of civil liberties known as the Civil Liberties Clearing House. At its conference a while back, sixty-seven organizations, many of them church groups, were represented. Others sent their regrets. The primary purpose of the organization is to share information among member groups. If there is any specific action, it is taken by member groups and not by the Clearing House. A regular informational bulletin is issued. There are four areas of interest.

Academic Freedom

The matter of retaining freedom of expression in colleges and universities is of great concern to the Clearing House. An example of a concern in this area lies in the fact that recently the Committee on Academic Freedom of the National Education Association reported in the Clearing House bulletin that "over 100 colleges and universities, all state departments of education and many local school systems have received letters from the House of Representatives Committee on Un-American Activities requesting 'lists of approved textbooks and supplementary reading material approved for use' in the institutions or school systems for 1948-49 and the coming year. . . . The factor in this particular inquiry that is particularly disturbing is that earlier inquiries by this Committee do not inspire confidence in its judicial fact-finding approach or objective."

Government Freedom and Loyalty

Another concern lies in the fact that in the last few years many government employees have been investigated to determine the degree of their loyalty to the United States. In the process of these investigations many employees have had clouds of suspicion unfairly thrown about them, or groundlessly had their reputations damaged. There is a danger that, according to many, in the process of preserving our freedom many government employees will have their rights, reputations, and job opportunities marred or destroyed.

Civil and Human Rights

A third interest of the Clearing House is that of preserving or acquiring hitherto unpossessed civil rights for many of America's citizens. Full rights for Jewish, Negro, Japanese-American, and other nationality and ethnic groups living in our country are a major objective of the Clearing House. A fourth interest is that of international human rights. The statement recently released by the United Nations on human rights has the full interest of the Clearing House.

Rights of Religious Objectors

One of the groups for whom the Clearing House is naturally concerned is the conscientious objector to war.

SHOULD THE CHURCH WAIT FOR THE PEOPLE OR GO TO THE PEOPLE

WHEN THE CHURCH FAILS

By Charles A. Wells

September 17, 1949

It is painful for us to have to admit it, but the Church can and does sometimes fail. It has failed when it was rich and strong as it did in Russia before the revolution. It has failed elsewhere in the same way throughout the world. There are great edifices in America that stand like mausoleums, expensive, grand and practically empty. What is the cause of this failure? The Church cannot perform its task of redemption and healing for the spiritual and emotionally ill unless it can reach people, and in so many instances the Church has lost its reach. How can that be corrected? Jesus gave the answer. He did not just sit in a synagogue and wait. He went to the people with His love, His healing, and His saving power. Some accepted, some rejected, some praised, some smeared, but there were the multitudes milling about him. Most clergymen who crowd their week seeking people out, helping them, serving them, will find these people crowding the Church on Sunday.

Germany's Need Today

An informative letter from Evangelisches Hilfswerk, the Protestant relief agency in Germany, gives a description of the most pressing needs in that country at the present time. Conditions are reported as "staggering" in the Russian Zone, although no exact statistics are available and there is difficulty in accomplishing relief work there. It is estimated that 45,000 persons cross from the east into the western zones of Germany each month.

There are 11.6 million refugees in Germany, among whom unemployment is particularly great. This is brought about largely by the housing situation. People must live where housing is available, thereby concentrating the population where employment is limited. Germany needs five million homes, of which only five per cent will be provided in 1949. Among the unemployed refugees, one-third live under unemployment allowance which however is not enough to provide necessities of life.

The currency reform helped to establish industry and business and relieved the need of those able to earn; but among those whose savings were reduced and who are not able to earn because of unemployment, physical ailment or dependents, the need for food and clothing relief is very real.

Assistance in construction projects, such as that being carried on at Espelkamp where the M.C.C. has a Voluntary Service unit, is also an effective form of relief work.

M.C.C. Orphanage in China Continues

The orphanage operated by the M.C.C. at Hengyang was moved to a rural location, Hung Lo Miao, because of the war situation. Under the direction of James and Hazel Liu and Theodore Ku, Chinese Mennonites, the work seems to be continuing in spite of the evacuation. The children are having vacation from their regular classe during the month of August. Their daily activity includes morning devotions and Bible lessons, and some work during the day under the supervision of teachers.

Relief Personnel Notes

Robert and Lois Kreider and Maynard Widmer returned from Europe on Aug. 25. Jonas Classen returned from France on Aug. 30. Bertha Eshleman, Elaine Snider and William Yoder returned on Aug. 30 from Java.

Mabel Miller of Wilmot, Ohio left for Puerto Rico on Sept. 1. Joseph N. Byler, Director of MCC Relief, sailed on Sept. 1 for Europe in order to assist the workers on the field in plannig for the winter relief program, particularly in view of various personnel changes; and also to visit Palestine to determine relief needs and possibilities there. He was accompanied by Sister Byler.

Voluntary Service Notes

The service unit at Skillman State Village for Epileptics closed on Aug. 29, the remaining five members transferring to the new unit at Topeka, Kansas.

Fom several places where summer units served, requests have come to have a regular year-round service unit. Among these are the Emergency Children's Home and the Industrial Home School Annex, both of which are homes for under-privileged children, in Washington, D. C. Service units will be opened as soon as personnel is available.

These and other projects are described in a new folder which will be available about Sept. 15.

GIFT OF $20,000.00 TO BLUFFTON

Real impetus was given to the building fund in late July when a gift of $20,000.00 was received from Mrs. C. H. Musselman of Biglerville, Pennsylvania. She had previously given to this fund, making the total which she has contributed for this purpose $65,000.00. This gift is very much appreciated, and means that there is now assurance that the building can be pushed much further toward completion than had first seemed probable.

This gift brings the total in the building fund as of August 1 to $185,902.59.

Two projects are being worked on in the late summer which will considerably improve the Ropp Hall dining room and kitchen facilities. A rather thorough job of remodeling the kitchen is being undertaken, financed through the Women's Advisory Council. This group of women is representative of the women's organizations in the various churches. This is only one of a number of projects which have been sponsored by this group.

One of the major additions to the kitchen will be the installation of a mechanical dish washer. Throughout the years dishes have always been washed by hand. When the regular service of the dining hall was extended to nearly two hundred regular boarders, this became quite a task. The new machine will materially increase the speed and efficiency of the process.

Four new members will be added to the staff in September. Three of these will be members of the teaching faculty, while the other will work in the business office.

Laurel Dirks, Great Bend, Kansas, a graduate of Bethel College, will teach mathematics and physics. Mr. Dirks received his M. A. degree from Kansas State University. During the war he was engaged in radio and radar work for the government.

Laurence Burkhalter, Bluffton College graduate, will join the music department. He is a specialist in violin, and will give private instruction in orchestral instruments and direct the band and orchestra. He received his M. A. degree from the Northwestern University last spring. During the past year he has been concert master of the Northwestern University Symphony Orchestra.

George G. Thielman, Toronto, Canada, a Bluffton graduate, will teach history and political science. Mr. Thielman has his masters degree from Ohio State University and has done additional graduate work in Canadian schools.

John Weaver, Goshen, Indiana, began his work as bookkeeper in early August. He has been a teacher in the Goshen, Indiana high school. Two of his children, Eleanor and Richard, are Bluffton College graduates. Mr. Weaver has moved to 109 West Elm Street, Bluffton.

SUDERMAN SPEAKS AT BETHEL'S OPENING

The formal opening of Bethel College took place Sunday, September 11, in Memorial Hall. Dr. David H. Suderman, associate professor of music at Bethel College, was the speaker of the evening. His subject was, "Why College?" Dr. Suderman is a graduate of Bethel College, '35, and took his A.M. and Ph.D. degrees in 1936 and 1947 respectively at George Peabody College, Nashville, Tennessee.

As an outgrowth of a discussion at one of the Bethel College Peace Club meetings, a five hour upper level course is being offered at Bethel College on peace principles. Students at this Mennonite college were eager to have an opportunity for systematic pursuit of information regarding Christian peace teachings, through history. A petition was presented to the faculty and arrangements made for the course to be taught in the current year. Nineteen upper level students are enrolled for the course. Four major themes are treated. First, the history and nature of war; second, the Old and New Testament teachings on war and peace; third, the

by Walter Gering

RETREAT—"Ministers Retreat"—how misleading such words may be. The word "retreat" carries with it the thought of "falling back" in the midst of a conflict. Surely, it cannot be that the ministers of our Conference have given in to the pressure of the present hour and have retreated in the face of the conflict against the forces of evil! Of all people they should be the ones to advance boldly, fearlessly, in full assurance of ultimate victory over the foe. Have they not been called and commissioned with the sacred promise "go—and lo, I am with you always even unto the end of the world"?

Words can be misleading, and such is the case with the thought of "Ministers Retreat." Certainly, the period spent at Estes Park Y.M.C.A. camp in Colorado can hardly be considered to have been a time of falling back in the conflict. In fact, those who attended will agree that it was a time of a bold advance against the vigilant foe.

Physical Renewal

It was a time of physical advance. Down below, in the valleys and on the plains, the earth was scorched with the heat of the noon-day sun. The heat of the summer was on, and weary labourers tossed upon their pillows at night longing for the refreshing touch of a cool breeze. How different it was upon the mountains. The fresh, pure mountain air, the invigorating noon-day showers, the chilly nights which lulled the mind to sleep—these indeed were moments which sent forth a strengthened renewed ministry back into the vineyard of the Lord.

Strengthened Fellowship

It was a time of advance in fellowship. The work of the ministry is often a lonely task; in the midst of friends there is a sense of having been set apart for a given task. There are moments when there floods over the soul a longing for fellowship with such who have been in like manner set apart. The Ministers Retreat provides such an opportunity. Conference

If Two Plus Two Were Five . .

OR, in other words: "When is a cat not a cat? Why, when it is a kitten."

Such thoughts come to a person when we analyze statistics. Consider this problem: Out of 243 churches comprising our General Conference 70 are on the 100 PER CENT PLAN on church subscriptions. That is 30 per cent.

These churches have a membership of 43,999, according to the HANDBOOK OF INFORMATION (available at your Conference Bookstores).

The total number of homes getting THE MENNONITE or DER BOTE, each week under the 100 PER CENT PLAN is 7,550. This is 17 per cent.

But, 7,550 what? "Readers" or "homes"? If "homes" then, counting four readers in every home, there were 30,200 who read—leaving only 12,799 who don't!

The churches which do not get THE MENNONITE on the 100 PER CENT PLAN total 173 or 70 percent.

The membership of these churches—the ones which do not get the Conference papers on the 100 PER CENT PLAN is 26,143, or 58 per cent.

See what I mean?

One way it looks like there are 73 per cent of our churches who don't read THE MENNONITE. The other way it looks like there are 58 per cent of the people who don't read THE MENNONITE.

Who do and who don't? You obviously are one of the "who do's"!

But where are those "who don't"? If we may coin a new phrase—"Conference Intelligence Quotient" (C. I. Q.)—a large part of our Conference is not sufficiently aware of Conference affairs, Conference activities, Conference commitments, Conference promises, Conference personnel, Conference trends—CONFERENCE!

Why, after the 100 PER CENT PLAN has been in operation something like fifteen years, don't those 173 churches "go for it"? Many of them do, of course, on the individual subscriptions basis so it must not be the paper itself. Could it be that here is just another example of Mennonites being afraid of working as a group?

It is not likely a matter of money, because they will subscribe personally at $2.50 per year, but hesitate to save themselves 70 cents a year by doing it as a group. The argument in many churches runs something like this: "I do not like to have to pay for the subscription for another man." In another church the pastor himself (mind you!) opposed the plan to his own church on the grounds, "I don't think it is right to force an individual to take a paper which he does not want."

Adopting the 100 PER CENT PLAN involves no such thing. The term "100 PER CENT PLAN" means that the church stands ready and willing to put THE MENNONITE into every home. Obviously those who cannot read because they are blind physically, as well as those who are blind spiritually and who don't want to read will not be forced. At any time that such people change their minds, they can have their names added to the list.

We do a lot of things for people who don't like to have things done for them. We pay taxes for good roads for good people who don't want paved roads. We build fine schools for fine people who have splendid children—but people who don't want good schools. We spend thousands upon thousands of dollars to evangelize people in this and in other countries who don't want to be evangelized, apparently, but we do it.

But those same mission-minded people will say: "We must not evangelize our own people with the knowledge of Conference affairs if they don't want to be evangelized. Leave them alone. We prefer to be as we are, rather than to help ourselves to be well-informed, brought together with others of our Conference. We like it this way—all alone."

This is not said in a critical spirit—rather in a dramatic spirit—in a challenging spirit. Can such attitudes be defended? We think not.

If 2 + 2 = 5? . . But it doesn't! You get exactly what others always have gotten when they added 2 + 2. You, also, get 4. Statistics or no statistics. the facts remain that you cannot feed three years on the memory of one General Conference. You have to eat regularly for good health. Our churches need to be informed regularly—weekly—upon the Grace of God as He reveals Himself not only to us individually but to those others, like-minded brethren. The Apostle Paul gave his life traveling, travelling, travelling—why—to keep his people informed—to put "to put them into remembrance."

This constant agitation of the mind through news—especially "good news"—is one of the great functions of our Conference. We must become agitated by the "good news" of God, working in and through other churches and communities and as the result of such agitation we become Divine agitators ourselves, as it were, of the larger community of the non-Mennonite world.

When Renewing—

"MAKE IT TWO YEARS"

Actually, it's easier to slip in a five dollar bill and say, "Make it two years," than it is to go to the post office and get a money order for $2.50. You'll never miss it. Make it for two years. If you're on the HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN, surely you have two friends who are not—make it two years—a year a-piece for each. That's doing mission work while you stay at home and work.

Remember the little poem,

"Let It Travel Down the Years"

"Have you had a kindness shown?
Pass it on.
'Twas not meant for you alone;
Pass it on!
Let it travel down the years;
Let it wipe another's tears,
'Till in heaven the deed appears—Pass it on."

Announcing

The twenty-second annual Bethel Deaconess Hospital and Bethel Home for Aged Gift and Fellowship Day will be observed on Friday, September 16, on the lawn of the Home for Aged in Newton.

The afternoon program will begin at four o'clock, and Rev. Elbert Koontz, pastor of the Hebron Church, Buhler, will be the guest speaker on this program. There will be special music by the Emmaus Church of Whitewater, the Eden Church at Moundridge, and by the student nurses of the Hospital.

The evening program will feature the Newton Community Chorus under the direction of Mr. Lester Weatherwax of Wichita. Mr. R. L. Hogan, mayor of Newton, will preside, and Rev. N. W. Underwood, pastor of the First Christian church of Newton, will be the guest speaker of the evening program which begins at eight o'clock.

The ladies of the two hospital auxiliaries will serve the evening meal on the lawn and in the basement of the home for aged. Borscht will be the main item on the menu because of its popularity in the past. Supper will be served between five and seven o'clock. The regular bazaar and sale of home-baked foods will also be conducted at that time.

A cordial invitation is extended to all friends of these institutions to attend these programs and visit the institutions on that day.

The plan is to make the course an integral part of the regular college curriculum.

Book Notes

A VALUABLE COMMENTARY

For some time I have been looking for a really helpful New Testament Commentary. Now I have found one which I like very much. A fellow minister drew my attention to this commentary and now I wish to recommend it to others. A new edition of it is coming off the press at present, one book being released each month. This commentary is scholarly, evangelical and genuinely spiritual in its interpretations and explanations. In the explanatory notes are many helpful outlines which are enlightening and useful. I find it inspiring and helpful for devotional reading. In my judgment it is unsurpassed as a pastor's commentary. It is called NOTES ON THE NEW TESTAMENT, EXPLANATORY AND PRACTICAL by Albert Barnes. Each volume costs $3.00. It can be obtained through the Mennonite Book Store, 710 Main Street, Newton, Kansas with a reduction in price for ministers.—W. F. Unruh time is a time of business and hurried activity. Retreat is a time of leisurely fellowship and strengthening of ties which bind us together. In this respect the Retreat at Estes was most profitable. It was here that we were privileged to walk thru the woods, sit upon the rocks, visit with a goodly number of our missionaries whose experience has been rich, fellow pastors and Christian workers. There was no hurry, no insistence of duties calling to be performed; it was a time of Christian communion of kindred souls. This brought with it advance for we learned to know and understand each other better. We felt the bond of love and unity being drawn tighter.

Spiritual Uplift

Then, too, it was a time of advance in the inner man. Who could climb the mountain trails, look out upon the majestic peaks, and drink in the beauty of the whole creation without crying out instinctively, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name." The whole creation seemed to speak forth of the majesty and glory of our God. There came over us all a deeper reverence and awe in the presence of God. Not only were we strangely moved by the mountain peaks of creation but also by the mountain-top experiences in the classroom. Forenoons and evening were devoted to mutual fellowship around the Word of God and our common problems. In a masterly way Dr. Beahm, of Bethany Biblical Seminary, Chicago, permitted us to look thru the open roof down into the life of the early Christian church at Corinth. His expositions of these Corinthian scenes shall long be remembered. So it was with his scholarly, yet deeply devotional presentations of the various aspects of the Kingdom. Always this is a difficult subject, and Dr. Beahm presented thought-provoking, inspirational challenges in this field of study. Then, there were the studies on various phases of the church work led by fellow pastors. There were moments repeatedly during the week when the mountain peaks of creation, majestic as they are, were forgotten under the spell of the glory of the gospel peaks.

Ministers Retreat—no, it was not a time of "falling back" in the midst of the battle. It was a week of courageous advance and we give thanks unto our Heavenly Father for the privilege of attending.

A woman who was dissatisfied with her home conditions and her husband's accomplishments, always talking of her grievances and showing her discontent in voice, look, and manner, surprised a friend one day by her quick step, bright smile, and happy voice. "How are things at home?" asked the friend, thinking that some good news had made the change. "Oh, everything is just the same, but I am different," was the reply.—From The Christian Witness, as reprinted from the Salem Church Bulletin, Freeman, South Dakota.

Youth in Christ"

Dreams of a Youth 'Workshop'

Dear Mennonite Young People:

Recently I had a dream. In this dream Mennonite youth leaders from the States and Canada gathered for a week at a camp site on a beautiful lake somewhere in the Midwest. They came together with a common desire to seek better methods for their young people's meetings at home, to learn about their conference youth organization, and to make new friends. They wanted to have a deeper experience of God and to know His will; they sought out the meaning of Christ in all areas of life. They played together, worshiped together and met in small groups to discuss problems which haunted them—all in the presence of God. Yes, there were a few adult leaders but just three. It was not only attended by youth; it was conducted by youth. Young people led the discussion groups, planned the worship services, and made the week what it was. Here those who came got new ideas for programs and projects in their home churches, but the thing that they said they appreciated most was the spiritual undertone. It pervaded every part of the program, being not dependent on externals but touching the very depths of their beings until like St. Augustine the young people were made to feel, "I am restless until I find my rest in thee." At the end of the week, these young people left camp more devoted Christians, resolving to be more loyal to the cause of Christ at all cost.

I awoke! It was not a dream. In reality, I had attended the Old Mennonite Youth Workshop at Little Eden on Portage Lake in northern Michigan, July 23-30. This was the workshop as I found it. It was a privilege for me as secretary-treasurer of the Y.P.U. to share in this experience and observe what their youth organization is doing. In every way the young

Comments by the Editor - "Hilltop" and "Workshop"

Had you ever heard of such terms as "hilltop" or "workshop" and had them applied to youth work in the church? Most of us think of "hilltop" in terms of some striking hill which we know and that is what the word means to us. And the term "workshop" recalls to mind the farm shop with its forge, drills, anvil, vise and tools—a place where we as youngsters spent an hour building everything from a peddle car to an airplane!

But a "hilltop" means something else, too. Last Spring, representatives of the Friends, Brethren and Mennonites gathered together for a "hilltop." They all were leaders in youth work in their churches and they met at Camp Mack in Indiana representing the youth program of which they were a part. The Friday, Saturday, and Sunday meeting on the shores of beautiful Lake Wabee was a "hilltop" experience just as the meeting of the three disciples and Jesus on the Mount of Transfiguration was a "mountain top" experience. We compared notes on what we were doing in our youth program, we shared ideas, and discussed goals of our work. Out of it came a keen feeling of fellowship and inspiration and the determination to meet together again. There were five different groups present. The Five Year Meeting of Friends, the Brethren Church (or Progressive Brethren) and the Church of the Brethren, the (Old) Mennonites, and the General Conference of Mennonites, each had representatives at this "hilltop."

Local societies can, also, have spiritual hilltops—little retreats whose purpose is to seek to go deeper and be strengthened to reach farther out. At one point

Y.P.U. Secretary Visits Retreats

by Myrtle Wasser, Roundhead, Ohio

It may have been a class about Christian living or Bible study in which young people were stimulated to think through the implication of the Christian Faith to the basic issues of life. Perhaps it was a vesper service or a consecration service by a quiet lake with the leaves rustling through the trees where the challenge of Christian service seemed greatest. It might have been a campfire service with the stars as the ceiling and the outline of trees as an enclosure where the truth that God is the source of all true life became real. Alone out-of-doors during morning devotions, battling a problem, "Be still and know that I am God," took on meaning. In meeting new friends the gift of friendship became sacred and the importance of choosing one's friends became valid. Or perhaps in a "roughing it" experience of an out-door camp cooperation was learned. Again, it might have been at a hard game of play that the importance of being an integrated Christian life seemed to strike at the center. Maybe in the singing of god hymns the consecration of talent became an imperative. These and many other experiences represent our Mennonite young people, attending retreats, from the East to the West, from the North to the South.

During the summer months I visited three retreats. First, there was the Junior and Young People's Retreat at Camp Mack on Lake Wawbee in Indiana. This camp is not owned by the Middle and Central Districts. However, they have now purchased their own camp site near Niles, Michigan, on two small lakes, where they are hopeful of having retreat next summer.

Secondly, I visited the Young People's Retreat at Men-O-Lan, located in the Woodlands of Pennsylvania, home of the Eastern District retreats. About ten years ago this camp was undeveloped with tents as sleeping quarters the first year. Since then the churches have built cabins and buildings until today it is a fairly well equipped camp except for recreational facilities and it also lacks a swimming and boating area.

Thirdly, I had the opportunity to take part in the first retreat of the Western District held on their own recently purchased retreat grounds near Murdock, Kansas. It was a real "roughing it" experience but the young people like it all the more. No buildings are at present erected and the fine weather helped the enjoyment of the out-door dining hall. A river with a dam and sandy beach offer many possibilities for a fine camp site of the future.

At each retreat I gave one talk on "These Are Our Mennonite Young People" in the interests of YPU. In addition to this my contribution to the retreat program depended entirely on the wishes of the retreat committee. At one retreat I was also junior cabin counsellor and at another I planned the morning worship services, and had a class.

I have enjoyed my summer travels and it has given me a broader perspective as I have shared in your re-

A World Christmas Festival

Fourteen-year-old Anne, who lives in up-state New York, is no expert on international affairs. She doesn't understand many of the newspaper stories concerning the value of the pound, the rate of exchange, or immigration quotas. But she does know about difficulties of school work in England, what an Austrian family has for Sunday dinner, what a boy in Denmark wants to be when he grows up. So when Anne becomes an adult, she will feel a friendship for peoples in countries other than her own—a friendship born of knowledge.

All this has come about because Anne was one of the first children in America to participate in the World Christmas Festival when the first one was held in 1945. When Anne learned at her school that in many countries of Europe big Christmas festivals for children were going to be held, she was interested. When she heard that they would be sad affairs without gifts which American children could send, she decided to do something about it. So she selected a nice gift, a red scarf which she wanted herself, and sent it to a little girl in England. Within a few weeks a letter came from Lilly, the English girl who received the gift, thanking Anne for her present.

Almost before they knew it, Anna and Lilly had developed a regular correspondence. For four years now they have been writing back and forth, and have become good friends. Anne talks often about Lilly. Sometimes she speaks with sympathy, for Lilly lost her mother; sometimes she mentions Lilly's difficulties in school; but she always talks as though Lilly were one of the family.

Every year since 1945, Anne has sent a Christmas present to an unknown friend abroad. Now, besides Lilly, Anne has another girl friend in Austria, and a boy friend in Denmark. Through them she is learning that though children in different countries follow different ways of life, they have much in common.

Anne is just one of the thousands of American children who have participated in the World Christmas Festivals during the past four years. As a result of this participation, one and a half million Christmas gifts have been donated by American youngsters and distributed without discrimination to children in seventeen countries. And in most cases, wherever the name and address of the donor has been clearly written, the children who received the gifts have written in return, often starting a regular correspondence.

Sponsored by the Committee on World Friendship Among Children of Church World Service, the 1949 "Share Your Gift" campaign is now underway. Children throughout America are already collecting and packing Christmas gifts, to be sent to the warehouse of World Friendship Among Children at 214 East 21st Street, New York 10, N. Y.

Because the World Christmas Festival is held on December 15, donors are urged to send parcels early so that they may reach their overseas destination in time for the occasion. The World Christmas gifts will be distributed to children without discrimination at World Christmas Festivals celebrated simultaneously on December 15 in seventeen countries. Each parcel should have attached to it a label with the name and full address of the donor written clearly on one side; and on the other side an indication of whether the gift is for a boy or a girl, and of what age. Ten cents for each pound of the parcel's weight should be sent to World Friendship Among Children at the above address to help defray shipping costs.

Songs for the Heart

When you were in grade school and in the children's department of your Sunday school, you were likely asked to memorize several passages of Scripture, to learn verses of the Bible "by heart." Perhaps you didn't enjoy the effort of learning them then, but in later years you were glad that some of the treasures of the Bible were yours.

Now that many of us have been studying the Psalms in our Sunday morning classes, why not continue to enjoy them by memorizing the best of them and letting them become songs for your heart, great poems that express your highest aspirations and give voice to your deepest prayers? Below are twelve of the most treasured Psalms that you may want to read and reread. Try to memorize at least one each week for the next three months. They will enrich your moments of worship and give you guidance in difficult days.

Psalm 1. A comparison of the way of the righteous with the way of the ungodly.

Psalm 8. A song of praise that recognizes the unique place of man in God's creation.

Psalm 23. The familiar shepherd psalm which exalts the living guidance of a heavenly Father.

Psalm 42. A song of the longing of man's soul for God.

Psalm 46. God is our refuge, our strength and our help. He is with us.

Psalm 51. A cry of sorrow for sinfulness that only God can take away.

Psalm 100. A familiar song of praise and gladness.

Psalm 103. A song of appreciation and thanksgiving, emphasizing God's mercy and grace.

Psalm 119. The long poem concerning God's Word and its benefits.—Kenneth Moorse

European Students Arrive

A group of seven students arrived on August 25 at the MCC headquarters en route to the respective Mennonite colleges where they will study during the coming year. Anny Guth, Lydia Nusbaumer and Roland Nusbaumer, of France, will attend Goshen College. Andre Goll of France will study at the Mennonite Biblical Seminary; Rene Hege of France will attend Messiah Bible College; Eric D. Habegger from Switzerland will study at Freeman Junior College; and Tjietze R. Ytsma from the Netherlands will go to Bluffton College. Within several weeks additional students will come from Germany and other European countries. This student exchange program is under the direction of the Council of Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges, with Menno Travel Service and the MCC Mennonite Aid Section assisting in various ways.

Jesus told his disciples, "Come away by yourselves to a lonely place, and rest a while." (Revised Standard Version) Such withdrawal suggests the idea of a "hilltop."

As the new year begins for many societies, such a "hilltop" would be a vital experience and an excellent one to begin the year's work. Why not plan to have a "hilltop" for your society?

What then is a "workshop?" Where a hilltop has as its primary emphasis, inspiration and spiritual retreat, the "workshop" is exactly what its name says, a "workshop." When the officers of a local society get together and plan their year's work, their projects, their programs, the service they plan to perform, the money they plan to raise, the social life in which they will participate, when they do that, they are having a "workshop" meeting.

A thorough-going "workshop" is a good idea, too. It is something every local society's officers should do during the fall months. By getting together and working through their plans thoroughly, they can start on a successful year's work where, if they don't make such plans, they may run on a haphazard basis becoming less effective.

A "workshop" is a good experience for not just a local youth group, but for a region or district to think about, too. By getting local youth leaders together, the opportunity for new zeal, insight and vision is very great.

The next time you think of a "hilltop" or a "workshop," think of them in terms of your youth fellowship and in terms of how they can be meaningful for them.

New Attendant Training at Topeka State Hospital

The new year-round MCC Service Unit at Topeka State Hospital is being inaugurated under unique circumstances. This hospital has been approved as a training institution under a new program of training in the psychiatric field, authorized by the Kansas State Legislature and financed by a grant of $70,500 from the Rockefeller Foundation. The training program, directed by the Menninger Foundation, will accept groups of 25 applicants every six months. There is no fee for attending this Training School, but entrance requirements are quite rigid, admitting only those who have definite interest in a life vocation related to the psychiatric field. It is expected that a number of the group comprising the present MCC Summer Unit at this hospital will apply and be admitted to the School.

The year-round MCC Unit will have no direct connection with the special School, although indirectly it is expected that the creative approach of the Unit will have an influence on those enrolled in the School. Members of the Unit may also be able to attend certain clinics and classes of the Menninger School or non-credit basis.

It is hoped that a number of additional Mennonite young people will be available to join the Service Unit, and that there will be those interested in enrolling in the special School with a plan to serve rather indefinitely in the mental health program of the Church.

people made me feel at home. They invited me to sit in on their youth Council meetings and asked me to extend their greetings to the 10,000 young people of YPU.

This workshop was not a dream conceived by me. I merely shared its reality. But it was the vision and dream of persons such as Paul Erb, now editor of the GOSPEL HERALD, who had worked long and hard for years to make this dream a reality in his day. Brother Erb loves young people and is loved by them; his very life is a challenge to any young person. The Workshop was an experiment in a sense, and I commend the Old Mennonites, persons such as Brother Erb, and his young people for launching out into the deep.

However, as a result of Little Eden, I do have a dream that someday—I hope not too far hence—we of the Y.P.U. may meet in a similar way as a workshop.—Myrtle Wasser, Sec.-treas. of the Y.P.U.

treats. I have met many of the young people personally. One cannot estimate the concrete value of such visits. Perhaps the informal conversations and attempts at answering questions have been of greater value than the formal talks. At any rate, the Y.P.U. is interested in your retreat programs and wishes to thank each committee for its cooperation.

Retreats are an important word in the life of a young person. The opportunity to attend retreats is one which all young people should have. There seems to be a growing tendency to have retreats which will include older young people and adults as well. It seems to me that this is a healthy trend for every person needs occasionally to retreat in a place of seclusion in order to more effectively live the Christian life. Retreats are a real avenue for making the theme of Y.P.U., "A United Mennonite Youth in Christ," a greater reality.

YOUTHS SET GOALS AT CHURCH PARLEY

Delegates from 17 countries attended a seven-day meeting of the World Christian Youth Commission held at Lausanne. They discussed plans for carrying "the Christian message" to young industrial workers whom the churches have failed to reach.

The meeting launched a plan for study and action in regard to industrial youth, which will be recommended to the participating bodies for their consideration.

Discussing youth problems in Asia, the commission recommended that an enlarged meeting of the group be held in that region in 1952, to deal primarily with the problem of forming a united Christian strategy in the Asiatic countries. Final details of the Asia meeting, it was announced, would be considered at the next meeting of the commission to be held in Toronto next summer.—C. S. Monitor.

All With One Accord

"And when the day of Pentecost had come, they were altogether in one place, and suddenly a sound came from heaven like the rush of a mighty wind and it filled all the house where they were sitting." Acts 2:1-2, R.S.V.

Pentecost is an historical event but it may also be a present day experience if our churches can meet the conditions. The call has gone out for the United Evangelistic Advance. Material has been sent out. Churches and ministers have been urged to unite in these evangelistic efforts so that Pentecost may become a living experience with us. For this reason we urge you again to (1) unite in the World-Wide Communion Service in your local church; (2) to join the Church Attendance Crusade, that is, to get every member to attend church during October; (3) to have regular prayer meetings at least once a week in which this matter of Evangelism, that is, seeking the lost and bringing to them the Gospel be made of prime importance; (4) Plan for definite Evangelistic action, either as a congregation or in cooperation with local churches.

Evangelism Committee

DP SOLVES TOWN'S TAYLOR SHORTAGE

Bennington, Vt. (RNS)—Bennington needs a tailor and he's scheduled to arrive direct from a war-ravaged life in Europe with his wife and probably one or two children.

It all started when the social action committee of the Second Congregational church here decided to make a survey of the city to determine what type of person would be best suited for settling in this quiet, historic community.

The church cabinet voted in favor of permitting the committee to apply to Church World Service, interdenominational relief agency, to bring the displaced person and his family to America to live for the rest of their days in Bennington.

All that has been done. Now the committee is concentrating on making life easy for the tailor when he arrives in the city, probably early this fall. They have organized committees to go out in search of household articles to be used in furnishing a house for the new citizen.

Already, they report, the collection includes kitchen utensils, used furniture, even curtains for the tailor's wife to add a bright note to their first real home in 10 years.

Committee members predicted the need for an extra tailor is so acute, that the new arrival will have no trouble in making a good living.

Conference Stewardship Thermometer

This office is glad to report receipts of $27,539.09 during the month of August for all the boards of our conference. All the officers of our boards are grateful to the many friends who remember their work in prayer and by giving.

We must keep in mind that if our conference is to meet its budget of $752,760 for this calendar year, with only $294,082.22 turned in so far, the receipts should average over $114,000 each month for the next four months. Because of shortages so far several boards have already had to curtail their program of help. Since so great a part of our conference work is for missions and relief, we should consider prayerfully our obligation to those in need. Surely our Lord would not wish to see any of His little ones suffer or be lost.

Please remember our conference work in your prayers.

Respectfully submitted,
A. Theodore Mueller, Office Manager

Beyond Our Own

The United Council of Church Women has appealed to the 10,000,000 Protestant church women in this country to collect dress materials for needy women overseas. The project is called "piece for peace."

The Church of the Nazarene has purchased a 20-acre tract at Sixty-third Street and the Paseo in Kansas City, Missouri. The denomination which now has its headquarters and theological seminary in a number of scattered buildings in Kansas City plans to erect a large headquarters at this location. The first to be moved will be the seminary. Later a million-dollar publication unit will be erected.

Editorials

"PLANS ARE UNDER WAY for a huge three-day combination country fair, oriental bazaar and auction where goods and merchandise of every hue, style and variety will be sold, traded, bartered and raffled in a fund-raising drive for the restoration of St. Mary's Cathedral, mother church of the San Francisco Archdiocese." This quotation probably represents the ultimate in "painless" ways of raising money. The quotation was not intended to single out the Catholic Church as the only offender in this whole area. This temptation to devise ways of getting money "painlessly" is one that plagues all the branches of the Church. One wonders whether the Christ would not be walking through some of our churches today overturning the tables of the money changers. True, we do not put the profit into our pockets directly. But is there not the temptation after sizeable amounts have been raised through such methods to let ourselves think that we do not need to give so much and consequently spend what belongs to God of our income, on ourselves? It cannot be denied that the fellowship involved in working together on such activities is definitely helpful. But again a serious question may be raised. Is it good stewardship education (stewardship of both time and money) to engage in these money-raising activities as a substitute for giving more ourselves when larger personal giving may release us from sales and "waiting at tables" to do other tasks of the Kingdom that are much more urgent?

TWO ASPECTS of the problem of non-registration must not be confused. There is general agreemnt that if a government passes a law that is basically wrong and obligates a person to commit a sinful act, the individual must not comply with such a law. In the recent trials of the war criminals this principle was basic. In this situation an individual must either flee the country or "be subject" to the higher powers and accept the punishment for disobedience. There would probably not be a Christian Church today if Christians had obeyed all laws of godless governments since the days of Christ. The area of disagreement is whether registration is merely a type of census in which a Christian need have no qualms of conscience or whether it is part and parcel of the on-going militarization of America. The fact that registration is being continued while the whole process of drafting has been dropped with the nation following a warlike foreign policy—does not all this make it difficult to believe registration is merely a census?

FROM CHURCH TO CHURCH goes the caravan. No, it is not a camel caravan. It is the India Jubilee Poster Caravan celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of our missionary work in India. These posters, made by boys and girls of our churches and Conference Academies, travel in pairs spending a month at each church as silent witnesses to the half-century of sharing our faith with our Indian brethren. A hymn, "Comrades and Crusaders," has been written especially for the occasion with words by Ralph Berky, Bally, Pennsylvania, music by Marian Bechtal, and attractive art work by Elizabeth Nimmo. The hymn is dedicated to Miss Annie C. Funk. Miss Funk, pioneer missionary to India, went down with the ill-fated Titanic in 1912. The story is told that Annie was on a life boat being lowered when another woman appeared at the railing above with a four-year-old girl, and begged, "Won't someone please take my baby?" "Is that your child?" Annie asked. "Yes," came the answer. "Then your place is on this boat," whereupon Sister Funk relinquished her seat to the mother and child. Other missionaries are dropping out from the ranks of our "ambassadors" in India. May the Jubilee stir many a young Christian to respond to the call for replacements that souls may hear and be saved.—J.J.E.

From a papyrus wound around a mummy in Egypt two or three centuries before Christ we learn that an Alexandrian, named Dorion, made a fighting machine so deadly that it was called "The Ender of War," and from that time till now new inventions have been heralded as destined to put an end to war. But the truth remains that the only sure way to end war is to spread the knowledge of the ways of the Lord and to achieve the universal acceptance of His rule in the hearts of men. "He maketh wars to cease."—Evangelical Visitor.

Columnist Leo. A. Lerner states an interesting observation in a recent article. He had read in the press that when the rains came to Kansas the price of corn and wheat went down. The farmers had been praying for rain, but when the rains came they were not entirely a blessing, because the price of the produce of the fields went down. That might not have been so bad if the consumers had benefitted by the reduction in price to the farmers, but Mr. Lerner points out that the profit went to the speculators who sell grain short. He writes:

"Will bread or corn flakes be cheaper in Chicago? I doubt it. Will pork or beef be cheaper in Kansas City? I doubt it.

"The Lord answered the prayers for rain, but whom did the rain benefit? The farmer will get less, city man will pay as much as usual. By the time the blessings of rain from heaven go through all the processes from growth to grocer, they are doubtful blessings.

"The only time food prices for the consumer seem to get really low is when nobody has any money. Our national cornucopia can overflow with the good things of life, our science, labor and agriculture can combine to out-produce the world, but there is a big gap between our wonderful production and distribution."

It is a deplorable fact that speculators are permitted to gamble with the food supplies of our nation. They are parasites that do not produce anything but live on the production and consumption by the people. —The Covenant Weekly.

Life in a Language School

by Marie Duerksen

IT is indeed quite a new experience upon coming to a foreign land to begin to learn its language from the beginning. It is as if we have re-entered the first grade—the fingers are clumsy in making the new and strange looking letters, the tongue is heavy and reluctant to form the sounds which are to be produced. We new missionaries feel quite frustrated until these sounds and marks begin to make sense, and we no longer feel strange upon hearing ourselves speak a new language.

The name Landour has a very significant meaning to all of us who have faced the language barrier, because here is located one of the large missionary language schools of India. It was my privilege to come directly to Landour after disembarking in Bombay in May 1948. My first impression was that this place was certainly ideal for the study of language. After a hot ocean voyage, and an even hotter over-land train journey the coolness of the mountains was most refreshing. The majestic rugged peaks all around was a sight which caused me to want to fall down and worship our precious Lord. In several days I had thrown myself wholeheartedly into the study of the Hindi language.

In Every Available Corner

Attending language school is somewhat different from attending school at home. School is held in the Kellogg Memorial church. Classes begin at 8:30 in the morning and close at 12 noon. There are four periods of 40 minutes with a chapel period between the 2nd and 3rd periods. In order that students may get greater advantages, the classes are kept rather small—perhaps from 8 to 10 in a class. It is an interesting picture to see small classes sitting in every available corner. Indians, both Christian and non-Christian, are our teachers. Each student studies not only in class, but an hour or two with a private Indian tutor. Departmental supervisors do their best to arrange the schedules for the students best advantage. When we realize that the teachers often teach from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. then we know that the language students aren't the only ones who spend hours of hard work. Six o'clock seems very early for a class, but students who have this hour testify that it is one of the best hours for study in the day.

The Studies Are Varied

You may ask the question, "How can you spend from four to six hours a day on the subject?" Although the subject matter is one, the studies are quite varied. One period is spent in the study of grammar, another in reading, another in oral preparation such as conservation story telling, preaching, essay and letter writing, etc. The latter are practiced in the second-year course when a greater knowledge of the language has already been acquired.

Because it is a natural tendency to speak English rather than Hindi, the Language School Student Council together with the principal seek to help us speak Hindi at all times in order that we may learn the language more quickly and really enjoy using it. One day a week the chapel period is conducted in Hindi. Two days a week we are to speak nothing but Hindi both in the class and out of class. A small fine is imposed upon those who disobey by speaking a sentence in English. Of course, for those who are just beginning their study, this rule cannot be enforced, but for those of us who have begun our second-year work it is surprising how well we are able to get along in Hindi when we set our minds to do so.

Keeping the Passion for Souls

As in other schools, our language school has a Student Council, and various committees who look after the social and spiritual welfare of the students. We have good social times together when we learn to know missionaries from many different countries, under many different boards, and engaged in many different kinds of work. The evangelistic committee looks for opportunities to engage in Christian work such as meetings in the bazaars and hospital visitation. These opportunities help us to keep within our hearts the passion for winning souls which is prone to become dim as we concentrate for several years upon the learning of the language.

The End Is Not Yet

In the summer of 1921 while the writer was building a mission home in the Cheyenne field in Montana he became acquainted with a young missionary couple who were then beginning their work at Busby, Montana. They were then young and zealous for the work and for the Lord. For almost thirty years they have labored in that hard field. Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Habegger have served faithfully and have also reared a Christian family. Today we were privileged to witness one of those very special Christian events, the ordination of a missionary couple. David and LaVita Habegger were ordained for that same mission field in which their parents have served so long and faithfully. The years come and go, generations pass on but the Kingdom of God is an everlasting Kingdom. Jesus truly said: "The end is not yet."

The ordination and consecration service took place at the Mennonite Bible Mission. Rev. A. E. Kreider of the Foreign Mission Board preached the sermon and performed the ordination. The brethren Harold Ratzlaff, Don Smucker, and John Neufeld assisted in the service. A trio of women from our Seminary community brought special music, Mrs. Delbert Schrag, Mrs. Roland Brown, and Mrs. Levi Koehn. Rev. and Mrs. Habegger are leaving in a few days for their field of service in Busby, Montana, to preach the "Glorious Gospel" as Rev. Kreider so wonderfully expressed it in his sermon and charge.

"I am not ashamed of the Gospel; for it is the power of God unto salvation."—John T. Neufeld.

The Witch Doctor's Curse

by Lynn P. Hartzler

KALONDA KETA stooped to pass through the doorway of his mud and pole parsonage and sat down under a wild olive tree to wait for the impending ordeal. The gaunt, native African pastor-teacher of the large Congo village, Kinda, had been in the community carrying out his clerical and pedagogical duties for only three weeks, but that was enough time for a man like him to make enemies.

Opening his Bible, he tried to read to compose himself. It was useless. Although the language was his own, he could not put his mind to it. Closing it impatiently and letting it fall into his lap, he dropped his head into his hands and tried to relax. Just then his wife, Banza, passed by with two earthen water pots.

"I just saw some women go past on their way to the spring. I think that I had better go down after them to be sure that I do not get poisoned water," she announced.

"It is too bad that we should have trouble like this so soon after arriving at our first appointment," Kalonda commented. "Perhaps everything will be settled today, and then we will know whether or not we must leave.

"The thing that disturbs me most is that Maria might be injured or kidnapped. If the witch doctor will only keep faith in his charms and 'medicine'! But now, dear, you had better follow the women before they get out of sight."

Alone again, he fell to pondering what he would do if the witch doctor came to carry out his threat. This time he was interrupted by the sudden entrance of his six-year-old daughter, Maria, who burst into the scene hysterically crying something about a mob of people.

"What's the matter, Maria?" Kalonda demanded as he took his small daughter in his arms.

"Those awful men with the bad witch doctor are down at the school. They're saying terrible things about you, daddy. Please don't let them hurt you, please don't!" she pleaded.

"Daddy will be all right," he confided in a tone that didn't entirely belie his anxiety. "You run into the house and wait for Mother. She'll be back from the spring right away. Lock the door and don't let a soul in except your mother and me. Be a good, brave girl and do as I say now."

After he had seen his daughter safe inside behind a locked door, he made his way down to the school to face the mob which had accompanied the witch doctor. At sight of him, with his Bible under his arms, his steps firm, and a smile on his face, the natives grew quiet and gathered in small knots.

I am still here," Kalonda announced, "and I intend to remain here to serve the people of this village and to teach and preach what I believe is the truth. I don't wish to be molested; neither do I wish to have my family annoyed."

To this daring affront the mob reacted by immediately starting to whisper. Then slowly but defiantly the witch answered first by referring to tribal customs.

"You realize that you are from a foreign tribe, don't you? The people will never trust you. Anything that happens here will be your fault. If a baby dies, it will be due to your presence in the village. If the hunting is poor, it will be you with whom the spirits of the tribe will be angry.

"Besides, you have been teaching the children against the fathers and against our witch doctor," one of the elders of the village shouted from the crowd. "The chief and his elders asked the missionary for a man who would come here to teach the children how to read and write. We did not ask the missionary to send a man who would tell the children to disobey their parents."

In a hoarse bass voice the village blacksmith bellowed, "The great witch doctor has been very good to the tribe. The village has been successful now for many years. If you have spoken against our witch doctor you have spoken against the village. As he has said, you must go!"

Kalonda listened attentively to all the accusations. Large drops of perspiration appeared on his forehead. His hands became moist from nervousness. He stood quietly, knowing that all they had said was in dead seriousness because he had been taught the same things when he was a boy in his own village before he had heard the missionary. He could have told the mob all that they were telling him now, and much more, for he knew the traditions of the people.

Answering them in a stern voice but with a smile on his face, he spoke.

"Has anyone who has taken my advice and gone to the dispensary to receive white man's medicine died? Have not many people been healed by the white man's medicine? I cannot teach falsehoods when the truth is evident.

"I have not preached against the chief nor against your elders of the village. I have preached against the false magic of the witch doctor, who has deceived you by making you believe his medicine cures you when it doesn't. He has taught you to believe that evil spirits give you fever, when it is really the mosquito which carries the fever to you. Here is the man . . ."

But by this time the mounting anger of the mob that resented this attack on their way of life had all but drowned out his voice. One man cried out that evil spirits would enter the live stock and the children unless they drove the blasphemous foreigner away.

Confident that he had Kalonda so afraid that he would leave, the witch doctor pompously ordered the mob to quiet down so that he could show the foreign devil who had the power of life and death, of truth and falsehood. With a snarl he pointed to a rafter from which hung an antelope horn of "medicine" and challenged, "Look! There is my medicine. Touch it and you die!"

Centuries of primitive fear welled up in Kalonda's mind as he mustered courage to face this new crisis. He swallowed hard, breathed a prayer to his new God, and stepped falteringly forward. With hands clammy from perspiration he touched the horn. His hands slipped along the surface.

Inter-Mennonite Meeting at Moundridge, M.C.C. Sponsored

AKRON, PENNSYLVANIA. — On Sunday afternoon and evening, October 2, at the Eden Mennonite Church near Moundridge, Kansas, there will be a "Voluntary Service Reports" meeting. Volunteers of the various conferences programs—Mennonite Brethren, (Old) Mennonite, and General Conference—and the M.C.C. program, will report on their experiences in summer, winter, and one-year service units. Slides representing various units will be shown in the evening. The purpose of this meeting is to acquaint the constituency with the Service Unit program of the individual conferences and the M.C.C. Anyone interested is welcome to attend.

Several Refugee-families Arrive

During recent weeks five Russian Mennonite families arrived in the United States and have gone to the places provided by their Mennonite sponsors. Two of these families disembarked at New Orleans and were met and assisted in their journey by Orlo Kaufman, director of the M.C.C. Voluntary Service unit at Gulfport, Mississippi. The other families arrived at Boston or New York. Maria Koop and three children have gone to Reedley, California; Lukyan Gorbatjuk and wife and four children to Kalona, Iowa; Katherina Willer and two children to Wellman, Iowa, and an older daughter to Iowa City, Iowa; Katherina Oskolkow and two children to Iowa City, Iowa; and Ewald Bartel and wife and son to Conway, Kansas.

Although these individual families were approved for migration, the technical point delaying a considerable number of Mennonite refugees in their migration to Canada or the United States, has not yet been cleared.

Additional Students Come to U.S.A.

BILLIONS FOR THE FINE ART OF KILLING PENNIES FOR THE ART OF FINE LIVING SCHOOLS

WHY OUR WORLD DOESN'T IMPROVE

By Charles A. Wells

September 24, 1949

There is no mystery about the present plight of the world. We are getting what we paid for. Mankind has spent multiplied billions on the techniques of destruction and killing and (comparatively) pennies on the techniques of living. As a result we kill much better than we live, we destroy much better than we build. Because we have often been politically irresponsible and spiritually indifferent, these forces have taken command of our world. There were many times when the Nazi revolution or the Japanese military upheaval could have been stopped before these movements became an armed threat. But we paid no attention until it was too late. There have been many times when the tormented and oppressed Russian people could have been guided away from the tightening grasp of their tyrants, but we were indifferent, uncaring. In fact, a lot of us made money helping these systems build their armed strength. So behind our present problems are great spiritual realities men must some day face.

Book Notes

THE history of Mennonite Civilian Public Service is now in print and a volume of over 500 pages awaits the reader. The book fortunately is written for a large and varied audience. If one is a former CPS man he will certainly want to own a copy of this story in which he played some part during a never-to-be-forgotten period of his life. If the reader is a member of the Mennonite Church he will welcome a copy of this record of how he helped to make possible a program of civilian service in time of war. There is still another reader who will find the book a valuable one and he is the "outside" observer in church and state who looked with interest on this experience of nonresistant people rendering unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's. All will be grateful to the author and his researchers for an account that is full of facts, fair in interpretation, and humble in tone and spirit.

Civilian Public Service is shown to have had deep roots as the Mennonite position on war is presented in the opening chapter. CPS in its main outline is also shown to have come about after much free, and on the whole, friendly discussion between conscientious groups and the Government.

Every branch of CPS and every camp or unit in this branch is described and this together with the chapters on "Religious Life in CPS" and "Education in CPS" make up about half of the large volume. The Soil Conservation Camps, the Park and Forest Service Camps are summarized and this in much detail; agriculture, dairying, public health, and mental hospital units are given their due space and improtance. A number of well-selected pictures add life to the book.

Service for Peace lets the campers and others speak. It quotes generously from camp papers, reports of hospital units, reports of county agents, letters, diaries, Selective Service memoranda, Mennonite Central Committee bulletins, and other sources. What were the benefits of work, travel, and fellowship for CPS men? The campers are quoted on this through the many statements they put on paper in those years of post-hole digging, furloughs, fire fighting, attendance on mental wards, and travel from Maine to California and from Oregon to Puerto Rico. What did the directors consider to be their problem, failures, or successes? They are also quoted and their feelings are well-recorded.

Did the churches do right in undertaking to administer CPS? The majority (72 per cent) of the 634 representative men from the different church branches thought it was wise for the churches to do so. This they reported on the evaluation questionnaire. Certainly one of the most important parts of the book is the final chapter, "An Evaluation of CPS," where the values and weakness of the program are summarized.

Nearly one-hundred pages are devoted to appendixes and a general index. All the MCC-CPS staff personnel are listed. Of special interest to Mennonite readers will be Appendix 23 which shows the results of the evaluation questionnaire. Here are the opinions of carefully selected CPS men of the six largest Mennonite branches on the importance of the work done in CPS, the wisdom of the churches administering camps, and obedience to Selective Service rules. Also here are the findings of what the men thought of placing the different Mennonite groups together, of including non-Mennonites, of choosing directors from the campers, and of the fairness or unfairness of the MCC in its administration policy. Fifty-one per cent say they hold to their religious belief more strongly as a result of the CPS exverience. Three per cent were undecided and 3 per cent omitted the question. In the opinion of the campers themselves the educational, recreational, and whole CPS experience was one that improved and matured them.

For all those who want to know accurately what happened to the Mennonite testimony on war before and during World War II this book is an unsurpassed answer. Those who desire to profit from this experience of church and state, war and peace, nonresistance and service, will find Service for Peace a genuine help—comprehensive yet detailed, factual yet alive, sympathetic yet objective and honest.

MENNONITE MEN FOR CHRIST

"The Churches Give the Bible to the World" is the title of The American Bible Society's current folder which outlines this great work of distributing the Holy Scriptures throughout the world.

As you finish reading the last words of this leaflet there is but one thing to do; thank our Heavenly Father for this unparalleled opportunity of sending forth His written Word to the eager waiting multitudes in all parts of the world! Think of it! Literally, millions of souls waiting for an opportunity to read and study the Bible.

Under the heading, "A Great Door and Effectual Is Opened" your attention is directed to but four areas where the need is especially great. From China, the United States Ambassador, J. Leighton Stuart recently cabled, . . . "circulation of Scriptures have an incalculable value;" Japan, is mentioned where ten million copies are urgently requested and where a campaign is being waged to make the Holy Bible the most read book in all Japan; Brazil, where an Evangelical Movement is sweeping over this great land and Germany, where the supply is pitifully inadequate.

Another feature of this leaflet is a list of the gifts of the various Church denominations for the past three years. Mennonites are well near the top in their contribution.

Tracts and leaflets of The American Bible Society including the above-mentioned are being disturbed by the Laymen's Organization of the General Conference as a service activity and are available without charge by writing to your local District Brotherhood or the Secretary.—John E. Fretz, Secretary Conference Layman's Organization

Last year's graduating class was the largest in the history of the school and these man are now placed in significant positions in the life of our church.

Among the students we are happy to welcome this year for the first time Andre Goll, the first foreign student we have had from France; Elmer Ediger of Akron, Pennsylvania, widely known for his work through the Mennonite Central Committee which he will continue on a part time basis; Bertha Fast who served in Egypt and Jugoslavia as relief worker; Donald Isaac, son of the late missionary Ferdinand Isaac; O'Ray Graber and Elaine Waltner from Freeman, South Dakota; Helmuth Dyck of Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ontario, Canada; Aaron J. MOVING DAY AT CANADIAN COLLEGE

It is moving day at the Canadian Mennonite Bible College. During the past few weeks we have gradually moved one thing after the other from the Bethel Mission church to the new College home on 515 Wellington Crescent. Library books, shelves, chairs, tables, files, and office equipment are all a part of the school equipment. Alterations are being made so that the rooms will be ready for school opening on September 30th.

Rev. Benno Toews and family also have arrived to take up his duties as an instuctor of the College. Brother Toews brought his household belongings in a truck from Chicago where he finished his graduate studies at the Mennonite Biblical Seminary and is now seeking a home in the city here.

At the last faculty meting sme consideration was given to the possibilities of again offering evening courses. It was decided to limit instruction to Thursday evenings. Courses in Bible, music, and Mennonite history are to be given during these evening periods. Violin and piano instruction can also be arranged through the College office.

Dr. H. A. Fast, who has been released from Bethel College for the purpose of visiting the churches and schools of Canada, will serve with a series of messages from October 16 to 20 in our College. Dr. Fast is well-known among our Canadian churches because of his former work as field secretary of the General Conference and his services in the Mennonite Central Committee.

September has come once more and everywhere school doors swing open to admit youth that is to be prepared for life. Bethel College too is getting ready for its responsible work for another year. The faculty, including all members of the teaching and administrative staff and some board members, and their wives, had a retreat at the Salvation Army Camp at Wichita, Kansas on Saturday, September 3rd. At the beginning of the day's program the President, Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman, introduced old and new members of the faculty to one another. The rest of the program consisted of a devotion period, addresses, and discussions, and at the end a consecration service. The purpose of the retreat was to unite the members of the faculty in Christian fellowship for their important work of training youth for Christian life. Each one present could testify that this purpose of the retreat was fulfilled. Moreover the restful camp was conducive to quiet meditation on the part of the teachers concerning the importance of their work. Dr. S. A. Watson, President of Friends University of Wichita, gave two addresses during the day, each of which was followed by a general discussion. A spirit of humility before the responsibility of their work, of self-searching, of fervent prayer, and of devotion, was felt during the meetings, throughout the day.

Alumni, faculty, former students, and their families were present at the second annual Bethel Family Retreat Picnic at the Moundridge City Park on Sunday afternoon, September 18, 1949.

BLUFFTON LAUNCHES YEARS WORK

The cabinet of the newly formed Student Christian Association held a retreat at Neufer's Cabin near Topeka, Indiana Wednesday and Thursday, September 7, 8. At that time plans were made for the work of the year. This organization is to take the place of the YM CA and YWCA on the campus.

Freshmen reported for orientation work and preliminary testing on Friday, September 9. On Saturday

Immigration Anniversary Celebration

At one of its early meetings the Program Committee for the commemoration of the 75th Anniversary of the coming of the Mennonites to the Western prairie of America formulated the following general plan:

That local celebrations be held on October 9th or earlier.

That a final general celebration be held October 12th at Memorial Hall, North Newton, Kansas.

That during these celebrations a definite effort be made to solicit funds for the adequate housing and care of the Mennonite Historical materials which are to be placed in the basement of the Library building now under construction.

The date of the final celebration of the 75th Anniversary of the coming of the Mennonites to the western American prairies is approaching. Mennonites everywhere are reminded to give thought to a worthy observance of the occasion. It has been suggested in the previous months that local celebrations should, if possible, be held before October 12th, leading up to the larger-scale celebration on that day at Memorial Hall, North Newton, Kansas. It was suggested that these local celebrations could use the following general plan:

The first part of the program could include addresses dealing with the question why our forefathers came to this community, and their early experiences.

The second part of the day could be devoted to speeches on the developments in the fields of agriculture, education, missions, etc.

The third part of the program could deal with the present status of our communities and the outlook.

The final celebrations at Memorial Hall, North Newton, Kansas, will consist of the following program:

The Forenoon

A praise service, which will sound the keynote for the whole day, and a general presentation of the European background from which our Mennonite immigrants came will open the day. Pioneer experiences and establishment of Mennonite communities in the northern and southern states and Manitoba will also be considered.

The Afternoon

The railroads and the coming of the Mennonites to the United States and Canada will be presented by representative of one of the railway companies and greetings from representatives of other railways.

Representations from the different Mennonite cultural groups, such as Mennonites coming from Poland, Prussia, Switzerland, Russia, and from Mennonite church groups representative of various conferences will be presented.

The Evening

Hundredth anniversary of the birth of David Goertz, and the contributions of other pioneers, such as Jacob Buller, Christian Krehbiel, Dietrich Gaeddert, J. J. Krehbiel, Bernard Warkentin, H. H. Ewert, C. H. Wedel, Jacob Stucky, Leonard Suderman, and others, will be considered.

Two addresses entitled "The Present Position and Trends" and "Things We Have Cherished and that Remain" will be presented.

Musical selections will be heard during each of the sessions.

The collections in the forenoon will go for missions, in the afternoon for refugee migration, in the evening for the historical library to be housed on the ground floor of the new library building.

Invitations to a Booster Banquet are extended to those who give $100 in commemoration of the 100th birthday of David Goertz. This banquet will be held at 6:00 p.m.

The Western District Conference will be held in the Memorial Hall, the two days following the anniversary celebration, North Newton, Kansas.

So You're On a Committee

One day you suddenly awaken to the fact that you either have been appointed or elected to serve as the chairman of a committee or organization in your church. You have a new role to play. Perhaps you wondered why you were chosen. Let us just assume that it was because you have potential leadership ability. Then came the first meeting. Somehow things didn't work out so well. The discussion climate wasn't too wholesome—somebody was forever establishing himself as the source of truth. He was the authoritative voice. Someone else was constantly on the defensive, busy figuring out how to defend his or her ideas—sort of a day-dreaming superiority. Others were listening but not hearing. They were all talking past each other. You came home disgusted, wondering how you might step out gracefully. But wait! Perhaps you are just the person to help mould these people into a successful group working together for the furthering of God's purposes.

First, let us be sure of the values of deliberating in small groups. Usually committees are not just formed to facilitate progress or to put extra work on a few people. Committees serve a definite function. Decisions that grow out of a group thinking process are on a more solid footing than those made by any one person. They are more free of individual prejudices and personal limitations. In a group each individual is directly exposed to points of view other than his own. Often for the first time he is made aware of his own prejudices. The variety of backgrounds and experiences are good and help to stimulate everyone in their thinking. Group discussion also creates morale, which is essential for the successful implementation of the subsequent decisions that will need to be carried out. Again, most people function better in committee than alone. They are stimulated to do their best thinking in a group. All of us have had the experience of coming away from a conversation or meeting with a feeling that our minds had been quickened to unusual insights.

Conditions Necessary for the Group-Thinking Process

In a wholesome group-atmosphere the self of each person is alive. Everyone is free to express his innermost concerns and feelings. There is no need for anyone putting on a false front to bolster his prestige and thus to give weight to his opinions. Each person feels that his contribution is understood and valued. He feels himself a part of the group, being respected and likewise respecting others. Everybody is actively participating in the discussion and there are no passive recipients. We have all had experiences in small groups where there were those who were present in body but not with their total self. They seemingly listened but didn't hear a word that was said. It is impossible to feel a sense of groupness with others who give evidence of being bored, or who always leave us guessing as to what they think or refuse to give.

What Is the Group-Thinking Process?

John Dewey has given us a universally accepted outline of the process of group thinking. 1. There must be a felt difficulty or problem to be solved. 2. The difficulty must be defined. 3. Possible solutions are suggested and the group rehearses the results of each. 4

Assistance from outside facts and resource leaders is brought into the picture. 5. The final choosing and testing of the preferred solution to the problem. The role of the chairman is to guide the group through this process. After the problem has been defined, suggestions for its solution are discussed and evaluated and finally the most promising is adopted. To quote Elliot, "Group thinking is a bit-by-bit, point-by-point, affair in which a contribution is brief and on the immediate subject."

Although the goal of group discussion is to agree on some solution, seldom does the discussion begin at the beginning and move directly to the end. It often gets sidetracked. This in itself is not bad for it gives some time for the ideas to lie dormant in our subconscious minds. The chairman may easily bring back the discussion by presenting a brief summary of the progress already made. The summary should point out previous points of agreement to avoid further repetition and to bring the arguments back to the essentials. The summary should also register a sense of achievement and avoid any confusion that may exist. Here the secretary or recorder is often helpful in making notes to verify the chairman's mental record.

Always there will be those who are wisest and those who are not. Unfortunately they do not always correspond to those who talk the most and those who talk the least. The chairman should realize that to discourage the over-talkative is more of an art than a matter of technique. Various hints such as looking at one's watch, rising, or interrupting the speaker to summarize what has been said might be used. All this should be done courteously remembering that however gracious our technique there is no substitute for a genuine love and concern and understanding of the individual involved. I Corinthians 13 is an excellent commentary on this.

Hindrances to Group-Thinking

Perhaps the greatest hindrance to successful group thinking is the area of emotional conflicts which stem from within individuals. The egoistic impulses such as, display, face-saving, anger, frustration, defense, domination are usually called into play in the company of others where persons are not at ease.

Someone may be suffering each day under the domination of some superior and by way of compensation must be the head or overlord of his family or of any other group in which he is a part. Often a person's prestige of position and the fact that it must be maintained overbalances the importance of finding the right solution. These often lead to arguments and sudden outbursts of anger followed by embarrassed silences, and often delay the process.

On the other hand we should add that purely intellectual agreements which cover up disagreeable emotional differences do not really solve our problems. Sheffield writes, "The man convinced against his will is one whose arguments have been refuted but whose reasons have not been touched." It is of great importance that decisions are reached sympathetically and that each person feels himself a part of the decision, otherwise they may be rejected later. Leigh, in his book, Group Leadership, concludes, "If an idea is 'put over' it may not stay 'put.' If it isn't accepted sympathetically, later they are likely to reject it."

The Light of Life is The Light for Life

by Glen Weimer

God is the light of life.
God lights up the issues of life.
God is ever-ready to rekindle life's flickering torches.
Christ is God's light within history,
    God's light within human life,
    God's light for the centuries,
    God's light for the continents,
    God's light for the common life,
    God's light for the individual conscience.
God purposes to save life through his light in Christ:
    God's light in Christ illumines life's meaninglessness,
    Sharpens human discernment of life's meaning,
    Deepens human devotedness to the enduring,
    Purifies life's purpose,
    Searches out each unworthy trait in life,
    Enedgizes the human will to live, understand, forgive, and to realize brotherhood.
God's light in Christ casts the shadow of the cross over life:
    Pointing the way out of world chaos to world meaning,
    Setting forth the way of victory over enmities, Indicating the way of releasing the leaven of the good within the common life.
God's light in Christ never fails.
O God, make us as desirous of thy light in Christ, as thou art eager to give it. Make us to seek and to love the light in each human relationship—to ever turn towards the light—to ever walk within the light. As the quiet power of the sun's light overcomes the darkness of night, so let thy light in Christ overrule each darkness of heart.

The Chairman's Role

It is easy to see that the role of the chairman is a significant one, and often upon his skill rests the success of a committee discussion. Briefly we would offer the following suggestions which chairmen of committees and organizations could well afford to consider before conducting a meeting.

1. The Chairman should see to it that the environment and atmosphere of the meeting should be as conducive to good thinking as possible. Such things as setting the members at ease with a bit of humor and making the group conscious that they have gathered for a distinct purpose is often effective. At all times the chairman should so conduct himself that members of the group will be free to be their real selves without necessitating them to put up a front or resort to any of the ego impulses listed previously. This atmosphere of the meeting is most important.

2. The chairman should not be a salesman of his own ideas. This does not prohibit him from being well informed, but it means that his primary purpose is to lead the group to arrive at the best decision in a group-thinking process. Sometimes we may have an idea which we feel especially has merit. How shall we put it across? We may on the other hand explain it

Comments by the Editor — "Projects, Programs, and Social"

Has your young people's society or youth fellowship organized for the year? September is the time for laying plans and getting ready for a year's work. And when youth groups get started for the year, it would be fun to be able to sit in their meetings and hear what they discuss. "What will we do this year?" "How should we organize ourselves for our task?" "Who should be responsible?" "What sort of programs should we plan?" Those and dozens of other questions are September questions!

A good plan for your youth group would be to divide your work up into three sections. Call them project, program, and social sections or, if you prefer, call them commissions and give them bigger names. Thus, the project work could be called "Missions and Service." The program work could be called, "Faith and Life." And the social activity could be called "Christian Fellowship." Likely the simpler the name, the more understandable.

By dividing your work into sections such as this, you can get, at a quick glance, an idea of how complete your work is and how adequate you are in performing the work of a youth group. Of course, the program committee would be responsible for the programs given by the youth group. These programs may be given to the church at large or to the youth group as such. They may be programs given at other churches—wherever and however given, they are the responsibility of the program chairman and his committee.

The project committee would then be responsible for the carrying out of youth projects. Perhaps a number of the members are good singers and they could be organized to sing for shut-ins, at hospitals, and at Old People's homes. The project committee would be responsible for organizing and arranging this. Possibly the young people would want to have an ice-cream social or a bake sale or raise potatoes, hybrid seed corn, or any of a dozen other projects to raise funds for a cause in which they are interested. The project committee would be responsible for this. Possibly the young people are interested in assisting in a mission, giving services at the local jail, sponsoring a mission student, sending gifts to a person over seas, keeping in touch with students away from home. Any and all projects undertaken would be the responsibility of the project committee.

Finally, the social committee would be responsible for the social life of the group. Perhaps each month a party is scheduled. Possibly in the fall and spring of the year a special retreat or outing is held annually. Perhaps the young people sponsor skating parties and have an outdoor breakfast at the Easter sunrise service. At Christmas time when college students are home, the young people have a banquet for them. At these various social events, the social committee is responsible.

Program, project, and social! It is rather simple and it covers quite well the activity of a youth fellowship. One should not be too rigidly organized. In a small group, much over-lapping would be necessary. But, a chairman of each division would help spread responsibility. In a large group, more hands can be at work. However you look at it, a youth group organized this way should effectively do the tasks a youth group should do.

carefully in detail and perhaps if the group is in the right frame of mind they may accept it unanimously without further discussion. This may be efficient but it works against all good rules of group thinking. The better way would be to have the group think it through, rather than trusting to our own exposition and persuasion. This may be slower and perhaps time consuming, but we may rest assured it will bring about more lasting results.

3. The good chairman will avoid using his prestige to force the group to reproduce his won processes of thought and accept his own conclusions.

4. A chairman should always see to it that different and opposing points of view are represented and sympathetically considered.

5. The chairman should avoid answering questions from the group but direct them back to the group. Leigh suggests, "His function is often compared to that of the conductor of a small orchestra, where from time to time he may join in with his violin, without surrendering the conductor's place.

6. The chairman should have an adequate background of his material, should be fair, openminded, exercise self-control, and have patience. If in addition he demonstrates a good sense of humor, sincerity and sympathy he has every chance of leading a group into a wholesome, creative group-thinking process.

7. Finally, all that has been suggested above is of no avail unless in addition we utilize in full measure the gift of the Holy Spirit. When in the early church a committee of seven were selected to look after the needy, we are told that they were selected on the basis of having an "honest report" and "full of the Holy Ghost" (Acts 6:3). While there is no real substitute for this gift, one would like to suggest that a combination of the indwelling of the Holy Spirit together with a thorough understanding of the workings of human nature will enable us to be more effective servants of the church.

Agricultural Work in the Paraguayan Chaco

by Menno Klassen, Altona, Manitoba

This is the story of our work on the agricultural front among the Mennonite colonies in the Paraguayan Chaco.

It was Brother Orie Miller's vision that an agricultural program should do for the colonists in the agricultural field what the medical and Central School programs are doing in their respective spheres. An M.C.C. agriculturist was to liason between the newly formed STICA and the colonies.

The MCC asked me to go to Paraguay to make the start. Immediately upon arrival in Paraguay I became first of all a student, studying with great eagerness all the adventures of laymen in the colonies and from my own observations. Of course, agriculture in sub-tropical Paraguay is different from what I knew in Western Canada where I grew up.

Upon my arrival in the Fernheim colony of the Chaco, where our main efforts were to be concentrated, it became clear to me that conditions of soil and climate there were radically different than in Eastern Paraguay where STICA has her work. It became clear that liason work would have to be accompanied by considerable adaptation to drier, hotter and windier conditions, which seemed to call for a good deal more initiative and originality on our part than thought necessary before I arrived in Paraguay. This, of course, changed our whole approach to the problem of solving the dificulties our Chaco friends were experiencing. Faintly, I could visualize establishing headquarters on a small farm which would serve as sort of a laboratory and demonstration farm.

I later found that the Fernheimers more or less took it for granted that an agricultural program and an experimental farm go together. As a result, plans were drawn up at the request of the colony administration. These stipulated that the M.C.C. would be willing to provide what it takes to give it demonstrational, experimental, and educational value, if they would provide a typical colony farm, a farmer, Indian labor, buildings, fencing, machinery, horses, cattle, etc. The administration took us up on this and we went ahead.

Rev. Jacob Isaak helped us find a suitable site for the farm that is typical of the colony and is about ten kilometers N. E. from Filadelfia. There has been made available 100 hectares of land of which 21 have been fenced in and cleared for cultivation. One third of the whole area is campo and the rest is bush. The fenced-in part contains four hectares of cleared bush for the purpose of learning the possibilities of this great Chaco resource. First, a well was dug and a tent shelter put up until the granary was ready to serve as temporary housing till the house was built a year later. Later a horse barn, a machinery, tool, seed and office building and a shower house were erected. M.C.C. funds built the laboratory and office building toward the end of my term. Farm workers later erected the horse-barn and shower house. The 21 hectares of land were fenced in, of which about four hectares were bush which had to be cleared.

A survey of the agricultural situation revealed a number of problems that assured us no rest for many years and a full program. Some of these could briefly be listed as follows: insect pests—particularly grasshoppers and leaf cutting ants; seed-eating bird pests; weeds; need for fruit trees for planting; drought and soil drifting; declining of native pastures and need for pasture planting and management; winter feed problem; need for better dairy cattle and supplementary feeds for same; need for source of reliable vegetable seed and successful dry-land gardening plans; methods of handling bush-land for best results; and need for suitable and practical agricultural literature.

The agricultural situation revealed a large number of pressing problems that assured us plenty of work and searching for years to come. Some of these could be listed as follows:

1. Pests—locusts, ants, birds, Bermuda grass.
2. Feed problem—native pastures depleted, winter feed shortages, need for pasture and supplementary feed, silos.
3. Need for nursery stock of fruit trees.
4. Food problem—lack of vegetables on account of unreliable sources of vegetable seed, winter drought (to combat drought—need for green manuring).
5. Soil and moisture conservation.
6. Need for grading up dairy cattle to meet good demand for milk products.
7. Need for suitable, practical and adaptable literature on agricultural topics for benefit of the colonist farmers.

It is with these problems that the active members in the program are still wrestling. All available information that could be obtained from STICA and the U.S.A., etc., was sought and this information, together with our own experiences, was brought to bear on the difficulties that the Chaco offered.

Space does not permit a discussion of the outcome of three years of work. Some of the experiences are recorded in the folder of bulletins entitled Leitfaden zur besseren Landwirtschaft in Sub-tropischen Paraguay, published by the Fernheim Experimental Farm. Really, only a small start has been made in this adventure of discovering the secrets hidden in the bosom of the Chaco.

evening the Faculty met at the new class at a dinner meeting in Ropp Hall.

The Faculty held its annual conference on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 10, 11. The discussion centered around the objectives of the College and ways of evaluating to determine the extent to which these objectives are being reached. Objectives with relation to the student, the community, and the churches were discussed.

During the summer extensive improvements have been made in the Ropp Hall dining hall and kitchen. New cupboards have been installed, a new sound proof ceiling has been put in the dining hall, and both kitchen and dining hall have been redecorated. Returning students are also interested in progress on the new building.

Beyond Our Own

PHILADELPHIA. Immediate freedom for imprisoned conscientious objectors was urged today by 75 prominent Americans in a joint letter to President Truman. Text of the letter was released here by the Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors, which will deliver it to the White House.

Pointing out that there is "no national danger to justify the abridgement of the religious liberty of this minority," signers of the letter find it "deeply disturbing" that America continues to imprison conscientious objectors four years after the war's end.

NEW YORK. Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Dr. William C. Menninger, Rev. John Sutherland Bonnell and Dr. Benjamin Mays, president of Morehouse College, will head a list of distnguished participants in a new series of Protestant radio programs announced today by the Protestant Radio Commission. Entitled, "Someone You Know," the series, to be heard over the facilities of the American Broadcasting Company (Thursdays, 10:30-11:00 P.M., EST, starting September 29), will deal with problems of mental health and pastoral counselling.

"Someone You Know" is the first attempt on a national scale to show the place of the minister as counselor and friend in helping to solve personal problems, according to Rev. Everett C. Parker, director of program and production of the Protestant Radio Commission. Each program will dramatize a personal problem commonly met by clergymen in the course of their pastoral ministry. Following the dramatization a panel of expert ministers, doctors and educators will discuss the problems raised by the program.

Among the subjects to be treated in the thirteen week series are alcholism, juvenile delinquency, mental illness, bereavement, old age, physical handicaps, marital difficulties, personal prejudice and premarital counselling. All will be handled in terms of real experiences in which ministers have been of help to their parishioners.

UTICA, NEW YORK. Fraternities at Cornell University have joined with the university in underwriting college expenses for 11 foreign students, 5 of whom are from Germany. According to the plan worked out by the interfraternity council, the students will be given board and room in the chapter houses, while the University will grant scholarships to cover tuition. Spending money is being provided by various agencies and individuals. The plan has been launched as a contribution to international understanding and is expected to continue until the students complete their courses. — Christian Century.

Colonization in Columbia Basin Considered

For some time the Mennonite Aid Section of the M.C.C. has been interested in finding a suitable area where Mennonites might develop a colonization project within the United States. The Columbia Basin, better known as the Coulee Dam area, has been considred as a possibility.

During August, J. Winfield Fretz of North Newton, Kansas, who is Chairman of the Mennonite Aid Section, spent two weeks investigating resettlement possibilities in this area, partciularly in the states of Idaho and Washington.

Those of us who love music have opportunities to help in this way. This year a choral group of 70 members was organized, presenting the Messiah after long hours of hard practice. Every other week a "Singspiration" is held in the church. At this time we not only sing but have opportunity to hear the varied vocal and instrumental talent on the hillside.

We are very grateful for the two full terms that our mission grants us for study here in Landour. Through meeting people of other missions, hearing talks given for our instruction and guidance by older and experienced missionaries, help us to become orientated into the life and work in a new country. Here we can give our full time to study and have the benefit of long experienced, competent teachers.

Is it easy to learn a new language? Of course not, but in this also, "The Lord is my shepherd." For every task he not only "giveth more grace," but joy as well.

The Lord willing this will be my last term in the Landour Language school, but I shall carry with me many happy memories of days spent there in study.

Nothing happened! . . . He grasped it firmly . . . . Still nothing happened!

With renewed couraged he jerked the horn from the rafter. He was aware that the witch doctor was screaming his curse upon him, "Die!"

But he did not die. Instead he held the horn up before the terrified mob as they scrambled to escape.

The witch doctor, in terror lest he should become the object of the mob's wrath, screeched, "Die! Die! Die!"

Kalonda laughed with ecstasy and threw the horn at the witch doctor's feet. Moments later, the witch doctor could be seen fleeing into the jungle after his terrified followers.

Gathering together to praise their new found God, the school children and a few faithful believers sang. Today they could be happy. But tomorrow they would awake to face again the curse which tugged at their faith because it lay hidden in the minds of their fathers and mothers.—Reprinted from The Christian Advocate

World Communion Sunday-October 2

For he is our peace, who has made us both one, and has broken down the dividing wall of hostility, by abolishing in his flesh the law of commandments and ordinances, that he might create in himself one new man in place of two, so making peace, and might reconcile us both to God in one body through the cross, thereby bringing the hostility to an end. And he came and preached peace to you who were far off and peace to those who were near; for through him we both have access in one Spirit to the Father. So then you are no longer strangers and sojourners, but you are fellow citizens with the saints and members of the household of God, built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Christ Jesus himself being the chief corner-stone, in whom the whole structure is joined together and grows into a holy temple in the Lord; in whom you also are built into it for a dwelling place of God in the Spirit.—Eph. 2:14-22 (RSV).

"Reader Says"

Dear Editor: Have noticed and read your editorial, "For Church Board Members," in No. 29 of The MENNONITE, (August 2) and must confess that my enthusiasm for retreats is not as great as that expressed in your brief appeal. I am not a board member this year,—just mere layman and the views expressed are not in behalf of any group necessarily, yet I believe that many of the older Christians in our conference and outside, would agree with me generally.

Retreats for young people and ministers were introduced not too many years ago,—they are relatively young yet compared to our general conference. Have observed the movement through our church and religious periodicals from the outset, and have even attended some local ones, and if my observations are accurate, at its inception the emphasis in this movement was decidedly and almost exclusively spiritual, which by this time has apparently shifted more to the social and recreational.

My concern is not so much on account of the quality of most of these social and recreational activities, but rather the quantity. Too much of these otherwise good secular things will divert the attention from the vital matters—those concerning the Kingdom of God.

There is another form (referring to ministers' retreats) of diversion from the strain of pastoral duties, namely, manual labor among one's own parishioners when the peak load is on for them and this also provides a good contact like horseshoe or baseball, and in addition, in the case of a small salary will enable a pastor to buy an extra pound of butter or bushel of potatoes Of course this will not give a pastor the spiritual infilling sought after in a retreat or conference.

I feel that the pastor should not be overworked nor underpaid, but with all the various types of convocations which our pastors are urged to attend, they are kept at a pace that can well nigh defeat its own purpose.

In fairness to those who desire an opportunity for spiritual refreshing I will gladly agree that a week of fellowship and prayer and Bible study be granted our active ministers, once or at the most twice a year, but they should not be required to go across half of the continent to attend and meetings should be held in various districts across the country so that a pastor does not get too far away from his flock

THE PATH to true World-wide Communion is clearly marked out in the first upper-room Communion experience. There must be a frank facing of those elements in the group that are concerned with matters contradictory to the concerns and convictions of the Church. This is a most painful experience. "Is it I?" is the soul-searching question that all are driven to ask in the presence of the Lord. From all outward appearances it would seem much more conducive not to mention the sharp demands of the law. We are prone to think unity will come much quicker by ignoring the high standards and clear demands of Christ. When we let down on the demands of Christ for the purpose of making this Way more palatable to more people—when we do this, we are postponing World-wide Communion. Real Communion is more than a physical gathering to partake of physical elements. It is the very mingling of lives whose soul, mind, and will are possessed by Jesus Christ. Our Communion lacks spiritual dynamic because we bring into it whole areas of life that are not surrendered to Christ. This can result in only one thing—disunity and spiritual powerlessness. The Church today longs for genuine Communion, but at the same time she refuses to eliminate from her life those compromises with immorality, unbelief, selfishness, greed, lust, murder, and strong drink—the very forces that are cutting away the unity that exists. Real Communion, real coming together, means first an individual as well as a group break with sin and godlessness.

THE SECOND MARKER is the marker of blood. "This is my blood of the new covenant, which is poured out for many," "The just for the unjust," the Righteous One giving his life willingly for the sinner and his evil. The path to World-wide Communion was purchased with the precious blood of Christ. And does the Church of our day think that she can arrive at World-wide Communion without sharing in "the fellowship of his sufferings"? We need to get back on the path of blood and suffering from whence we have wandered. The Christ is still suffering alone because there are thousands clamouring for His blessings while only individuals here and there give to Him the priceless gift of their willingness to pay any price to follow Him. J.J.E.

The church is fairly well supplied with conductors. It shows a shortage of engineers, but an overplus of brakemen.—Zion Church Bulletin, Souderton, Pa.

An Open Letter

To Our General Conference Churches;

Greetings, in Jesus Name:

I call special attention to suggestions made by our Evangelism Committee, in former issues of The Mennonite, (JULY 12 and 26 and SEPTEMBER 13), relative to a United Evangelistic Advance. This is a program of Evangelism planned on a national scale for the period from World Communion Sunday, October 2, 1949 and continuing through-out the year 1950. Surely our churches, which believe so thoroughly in the spreading of the Gospel both at home and abroad, should also make a special effort to start a revival of religious interest in the local church and in the immediate community.

Let us make Communion Sunday, October 2, a sacred and holy day, for which prayerful preparation has been made, that the Spirit of God may use us each one and lead us into deeper religious fellowship of worship and service.

Each church should work out a plan best suited to the particular locality and needs. The worship service, the Sunday School, the evening meeting, the prayer-meeting,—all should work together with renewed zeal, for the saving of souls and the building up of souls in Christ. Among specific suggestions made, the following might be used with profit:

1. Observe World Communion Sunday, October 2.
2. Use October for a Church Attendance crusade.
3. Make special effort and plans to have lay men interested in visitation evangelistic efforts .
4. Conduct at least one series of meetings which might be called evangelistic meetings or preaching missions, in the coming year.
5. Make a special effort to strengthen the Sunday School work during the coming year.
6. Give special attention to the problem of husband and wife belonging to different churches, seeking to have all members of the family have a united church interest.
7. Urge members of churches to transfer their membership to the church in the community where they have moved.
8. Let each pastor and religious worker pray with humility and sincerity, "O Lord, send us a revival, beginning with ME."

May we, unitedly, for the period of the next fifteen months, in special ways, work and plan prayerfully in faith, for the ingathering and upbuilding of souls. This is our high mission. May God help us to be faithful in the discharging of this work.

In His Name,

From the Mission Front

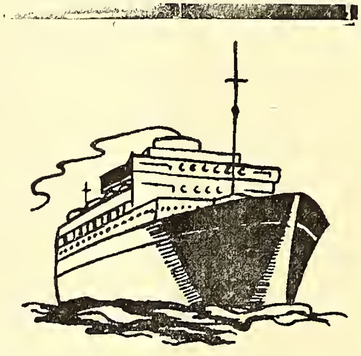
The Latch String Is Out

by S. T. Moyer

NOW is the time to plan that trip abroad. Autumn 1950 is the time to take it. Come as far as India. Why now? Your India Mission is celebrating its 50th Jubilee between Christmas and New Year, 1950.

Consider the thrills you will have as you leave New York, bound toward the rising sun—the unique experience of being out of sight of land, of being days on the vast deep, of stopping at strange ports of call, of visiting other cultures than that of your home land.

Plan your journey to stop a couple of days in England, and then Holland, the early stronghold of Mennonitism, then up the Rhine, into Germany, and into Switzerland. As you see the land where our ancestors in the faith lived, suffered, and died the martyr's death, and today see the Mennonite churches and enter Mennonite homes whether in Germany or amongst the Alps, you will receive soul-stirring experiences which will stay with you as long as you live. You may want to visit Ringgenberg, near Inter-Laken, and stay in a Pension run by Mennonites, Beau-Sejour and view the grandeurs of snow and glacier covered Alps.



Two Thousand Years in Three Weeks

What would you not give to see the Catacombs and the Colliseum of Rome where the blood of the martyrs became the seed of the church? Or Naples and Vesuvius? Or Port Said and the Suez? Perchance the way is open, a side trip to Jerusalem, Haifa, Tiberias, and Nazareth can be arranged, within one week's time. You thus far will live two thousand years history within three weeks time.

Once again, "All Aboard!" Next stop, Bombay! After all, your chief goal is Champa, Central Province, India. To do all the above may be expensive and it will certainly be tiring. It will be worth all this to be present for the one week of programs. You will want to visit each Mission Station, visiting the various types of work, the Leper Home, possibly take Communion service in their midst, the Christian homes, churches, hospitals and schools. You ought to spend two weeks in January on an evangelistic tour or campaign, and you should by all means visit other missions for sake of comparison and see other types of work. India is rich in places of pilgrimage and historic interest—Agra, Delhi, Benares, Allahabad, the Himalaya Mountains. Early in February, or maybe before, depending on world conditions, you might continue your journey toward the rising sun, homeward bound. Thus you will return in March and escape the rigors of the winters of the homeland. India winter season in day time is as mild and balmy as Florida.

Requirements for a trip of this sort! Time. You have to get busy and get your Passport at once. Write Dept. of State, Washington, D. C. Have a Passport valid for two years. Get a Visa for India, good from November or December 1950 through to February 1951. This also should be validated for every country you plan on going through. Go to some good New York Travel Agency, as Sarah Marquis Travel Agency, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York. They can arrange nearly all of this, except passport, as cheaply as you can. But be sure to start at once, else you may not get official documents as needed in time for this trip. To procure steamship reservations you may have to apply from six to nine months in advance.

Equipment

They say, "travel light." Certain equipment is a barrier to enter and leave certain countries, e. g. typewriters etc. Inquire of travel agency. You will want your camera, and before you leave you ought to know thoroughly from experience how to handle it. Not the best clothes will be required for inland travel in certain countries, including India.

Costs

Ask the travel agency. Old rates in Europe and Palestine, excluding travel tickets used to be about $10.00 per day. Rate now may be double. One way direct to India will cost about $500.00.

You will have to have injections against typhoid and cholera, and inoculations against small pox. If possible you will want to read up, ahead of time, all about the points at which you plan on stopping. Of course if you do not have the time nor money to "take in" Europe (and too much will be very tiring) then coming direct from New York to Bombay, by De Luxe Suite on a freighter and stopping at ports enroute, will restore your health, your love for your Christ and your love for your homeland. Why should not a delegation of from twelve to twenty come to see what Christ our Lord and Saviour is doing in your India Mission Field? We heartily invite you. Plan to arrive not later than Dec. 20th, 1950. The latch string is out.

Secretary's note: You can make sailing arrangements through the Menno Travel service, Akron, Pennsylvania, by writing to Abe Wiebe.

Robert Kreider Reports On European Relief Work

AKRON PENNSYLVANIA. — "There is going to be a continuing material need in Europe," reported Robert Kreider upon his return from over two and one-half years of relief service in Europe. Robert and Lois Kreider spent a day at the M.C.C. headquarters on August 26 before proceeding to their home in Indiana.

Speaking to the group of M.C.C. staff workers in their regular devotional period, Brother Kreider emphasized the transition that is taking place in the relief program in Europe. At one time, several years ago, 80,000 children and adults were being fed each day. This meant in reality every Mennonite home in the United States and Canada had two destitute guests at each meal. At that time there were large scale movements of supplies and large, yet efficient, feeding and distribution programs.

In more recent months, while the material aid program is still continuing, there has emerged a stronger emphasis in endeavoring to give a more specific "plus" service of a spiritual nature. The work goes beyond the material aspect of relief and welfare, endeavoring to give more specifically a rich spiritual witness.

Among the projects in which this emphasis is followed are community center activities, service with students, help to vagrant youth, voluntary service at Espelkamp, rehabilitation of children, refugee counselling, and other types of assistance. These services of a rehabilitation nature are a logical extension of the relief service which has been in progress in previous years.

To distribute material aid to the most needy at this time will require a more careful, selective and vigilant administration than may have been necessary when needs were more prevalent among all of the people. It is true that the need at present in Germany is not as widespread as previously but among certain population groups, such as old people, the unemployed, there are still intense needs. Supplying the needs of refugees will also need to be concentrated upon.

Although Mennonites have historically been a quiet people, it seems that God has called us forth to give a witness through relief service. He has laid upon us a burden of stewardship and has given a vision of service which lies before us as a great challenge.

Inter-Mennonite

VOLUNTARY SERVICE REPORT MEETING

Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas

October 2, 1949

Resettlement in Brazil

Mennonites in Brazil are interested in establishing a new settlement, the place under consideration being Rio Grande do Sul. Various factors prompting this interest arise principally from the growth of their colonies in population. The present chief industry of the Mennonites in Curitiba is milk production, which has expanded to the point where supply tends to exceed the demand. Thus young people face the problem of a satisfactory occupation. With their past experience of wheat farming in Russia, these Mennonites feel that they could make a greater contribution in an area where farming might be their chief occupation. Certain spiritual problems would also be eased by a partial withdrawal from the dairy industry which has tended to interfere with their family, church and colony life.

Cornelius Dyck and Frank Wiens, M.C.C. representatives in the South American colonies, recently discussed this problem with Brazilian colony members.

Uruguay Land Transaction Delayed

It has taken more time than had been anticipated to complete the land transaction in Uruguay and get the people moved from the temporary camps to the permanent settlement, El Ombu. The sellers do not want the people to occupy the land until the bank loan from the government has been cleared. This delay has required much patience on the part of the immigrants, and a great deal of work by the M.C.C. workers there.

Leather Contributions Needed

The leather which has been available for use in carrying on shoe repair projects in various M.C.C. relief centers has served a very valuable purpose. Walter Eicher, acting Director of European Relief, writes, "The contributions made through the repairing of shoes should not be underestimated, since many poor people are able to have their shoes repaired in our centers who otherwise could not afford to pay the requested price at a regular shoe maker."

Additional leather is needed for this work during the coming winter months. Contributions of suitable leather or funds designated for leather purchase, are encouraged.

Brook-Lane Farm Notes

Vera Yoder of Conway, Kansas, Bertha Huber of Bareville, Pennsylvania and Naomi Derstine of Hatfield, Pennsylvania, are the three nurses who are serving for a temporary period to allow Delvin and Helen Kirchhofer to take a short vacation. Regular staff members are also assuming additional responsibilities during this time.

The enrollment at present is fourteen, with eleven women and three men. This represents the near capacity of the hospital for women patients, although additional admissions will be possible from time to time as others are discharged. Brook Lane Farm endeavors to serve more specifically the mild or acutely mentally ill, for which hospitalization would be for only a short time.

THE WARS WE MAKE

N. Peters

I gaze into the world with sorrowing eyes
And see the wide-abounding fruits of hate.
We fight, we say, for peace, and find
The wars we make
To be a spring of hate and source of future war.

Is there no peace for man?
No hope that this accursed flow
Of blood may cease?
Is this our destiny: to kill and maim
For peace?

Or is this 'peace' we strive to gain
A thin unholy masquerade
Which, when our pride, our greed, our gain
Is touched too far,
Is shed, and stands uncovered, what we are?

Show me your light, O God
That I may fight for peace with peace
And not with war:
To prove my love with love,
And hate no more!

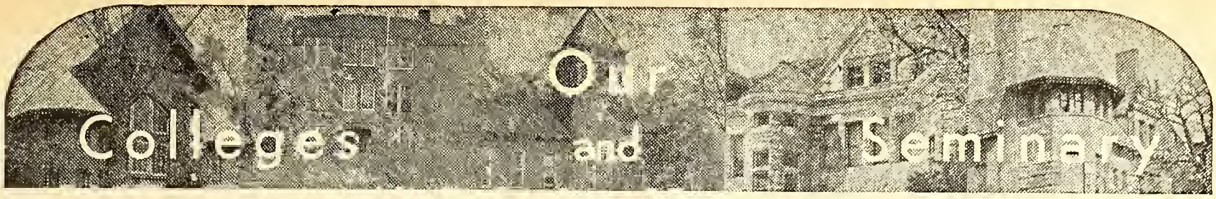
MIGHTY HAWSER OR STRINGS

By Charles A. Wells

September 10, 1949

Christian unity does not imply that we should in any degree surrender the attachments of creed, doctrine, or denomination in which our individual spiritual needs have found satisfaction. It simply means that above these inner personal spiritual attachments there is a community, national and world need that we cannot meet unless we are willing to work together. Evil is always well organized, well financed, cooperative. The gambling and vice interests that corrupt and control so much of American life are highly organized and cooperative within their own ranks. The Church is constantly being out-maneuvered and defeated, because it will not unite to meet the great moral issues of our day. A mighty hawser can hold the heavy ship against the tides, not because it is made up of so many little strands, but because the strands are bound together!



BETHEL ENROLLS 390

Enrollment has reached 390, and five whose applications have been received, are expected to arrive. The number at this time last year was 399.

The numbers for each of the classes are as follows: 121 freshmen, 83 sophomores, 83 juniors, 98 seniors, and 5 special.

Two students, of whom one is an M. C. C. exchange student, are expected to arrive from Germany.

Friday night was Freshmen Night. The ceremony of providing the freshmen with their caps proceeded quite orderly although gleefully.

A large number of students enjoyed a practice of folk games conducted by Mr. Tully, the physical education director, on Saturday night.

Bethel College submitted to a public opinion test at a picnic of the College and constituency held yesterday afternoon at Moundridge Park. The president of the college, Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman, led a discussion concerning the constituents' opinions regarding the college's contributions and its weaknesses. Cards were distributed for written comments. The College came out of it with its contributions far outweighing its weaknesses.

Sunday evening climaxed the activities of the day when the college students were given an opening reception by Bethel College Church. Dr. J. W. Fretz, chairman of the church board, presided. Highlights of the program were welcoming speeches by a layman, Carl Voth of Newton and by the pastor, Rev. Lester Hostetler, and a solo by Mrs. Henry D. Dyck, a graduate of Westminster Choir College, Princeton, New Jersey, and a response by a student, Marjorie Reimer, of Reedley, California.

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

President S. F. Pannabecker addressed the opening Vesper Service of the year on Sunday, September 18. The subject of his message was "The Religion of Form and Spirit." Marvin Dirks directed the Seminary Choir which also appeared for the first time. These services are held on the first and third Sunday of each month at 4:00 p.m. in the sanctuary of the Swedenborgian Church located next to the Seminary.

Arthur S. Rosenberger, Quakertown, Pennsylvania, President of our Board of Trustees, has announced the fall meeting of the Board here in Chicago for October 4 and 5. The Executive Committee will meet on the 4th and the entire Board on the 5th. The Seminary Board is composed of nine regular members elected by the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America, augmented by five advisory members, two of which represent the Alumni Association and three representing the Mennonite Colleges—Bethel, Bluffton, and Freeman. The General Conference representatives are A. S. Rosenberger, Quakertown, Pennsylvania; J. N. Smucker, Bluffton, Ohio; R. L. Hartzler, Bloomington, Illinois; Elmer W. Baumgartner, Berne, Indiana; Willard K. Claassen, Freeman, South Dakota; Ben Esch, Washington, Illinois; Alfred Habegger, Lame Deer, Montana; A. E. Kreider, Goshen, Indiana; and Erland Waltner, North Newton, Kansas. Representatives of the Alumni are Wilmer S. Shelly, Bally, Pennsylvania and Robert W. Hartzler, Goshen, Indiana. Representatives of the colleges are E. G. Kaufman, Bethel College; L. L. Ramseyer, Bluffton College; and Ed. J. Miller, Freeman Junior College.

An interesting program for parents of children in Shakespeare School, the large grade school located immediately back of the Seminary, was held Monday night, September 19. President S. F. Pannabecker was on the program to explain the background of the Mennonite Church and the guiding convictions behind the development of the Mennonite community. Other speakers, included Rev. George Inishimoto, director of the Ellis Community Center, who explained the outlook of the Japanese Americans who have moved into this neighborhood; and Mrs. Irene McCoyGain from the National Association of the colored people, described the movement of the colored population of this area; and finally, Mrs. Philip Toomin, president of the Oakland-Kenwood Planning Association, and organization for property owners in this vicinity. The Seminary was happy for this opportunity to explain some of its plans and Christian convictions to the neighborhood people.

Considerable interest is being shown well in advance of the E. B. Hoff Memorial Lectureship (October 24-28) this year to be delivered by Dr. Nels Ferre of Andover Newton Theological School, Newton Center, Massachusetts.

Communion Services will be held at the Mennonite Bible Mission on October 2 for Seminary people as well as the regular members of this congregation with the message delivered by Dr. Pannabecker.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

The pulpits of the Mennonite church at Wadsworth and the Presbyterian Church at Ottawa are being temporarily supplied by Bluffton College faculty men. Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, an alumnus of the College, will take the Wadsworth charge in early October.

The first chapel service was held Wednesday, September 14. President Ramseyer used the subject, "Look Up." He urged students to look up to secure broader horizons, to see human needs, to see opportunities for service, and to get a deeper sense of God and His way of life. Classes began on Thursday, Sept. 15.

The annual faculty-student "mixer" was held in the library Friday evening, September 16. This is an annual formal social event sponsored by the S. C. A.

On Saturday, Sept. 17, the officers of the Gospel teams held an afternoon and evening retreat to plan the activities of the year. A more intensive plan of deputation work is to be undertaken this year. In addi-

Resettlement
Mennonit

J. V

UNDER the auspices of the Board of Mutual Aid of the General Conference and the Aid section of the MCC, I investigated resettlement possibilities in a number of Mennonite communities in Idaho and Washington during the past summer. One area of investigation, the Columbia Basin area, was not a Mennonite community, but was an area in which Mennonites of all groups have frequently expressed interest and a desire for more information.

Caldwell, Idaho

The Caldwell, Idaho Mennonite Church was organized in 1948. At the present time it has 29 members, consisting of eleven families. The families come from a variety of Mennonite communities. Rev. and Mrs. Meno Kliewer and their daughter, Janice, and son, Richard, moved to Caldwell from Cordell, Oklahoma. The Leonard and John Schmidt families came originally from Saskatchewan to Dallas, Oregon, and then to Caldwell. The Samuel and David Ulrich families came originally from the eastern states, the wives from Ohio and the husbands from Illinois. The Abraham and Ben Hueberts, and the Christian and August Dicks came from Henderson, Nebraska. Ernest Pankratz and his wife moved from Hutchinson, Kansas to Aberdeen, and then to Caldwell. This illustrates how new communities attract people from various parts of the country. Some are attracted by climate, others by employment opportunities, and still others are influenced by close relatives and friends.

The John Reimer farm Lynden Washington, in 1939 and 1949

It was my first visit to Caldwell, and I was agreeably surprised to find a larger and more flourishing town than I had expected. The town is located on the main line of the Union Pacific Railroad, just west of Nampa and Boise, Idaho. It has a population of 12,500, and is slightly over 50 years old. The entire community is a result of irrigation. Without an adequate water supply, articificially brought in by means of reservoirs and canals, this beautiful little town would never exist. It is a modern town in respect, and is far ahead of most older towns of its size, in terms of public-mindedness and civic improvements. It has a fine large public park, a public library, a large public swimming pool, an excellent school system, good roads, a fine assortment of stores and a number of industries, such as a fish-fly manufacturing company, a 3,000-member farmers' dairy cooperative, a 5000-member egg producers cooperative, and is a rather large shipping center for beef cattle. The town also has a number of packing houses and other subsidiary businesses and industries providing a number of jobs for the growing population.

The members of the Mennonite Church have found employment as farm laborers, maintenance workers in stores, clerks, carpenters, factory workers, bookkeepers, salesmen, one of the members is engaged in real estate business, and a number of heads of families are engaged as farmers. The chief explanation for the establishment of a Mennonite community in Caldwell is the fact that additional land is being brought under cultivation as a result of enlarging the irrigation facilities. The Caldwell community is an attactive one for young people who wish to venture forth on their own and have no opportunities in the older communities. The community also offers splendid opportunities for investment of funds in land to be developed.

The Board of Mutual Aid has decided to concentrate on Caldwell as one of the smaller communities in which to establish additional families by means of modest financial assistance. A local aid committee in the church, with the able help of Mr. D. D. Ulrich, the chairman, who is a farmer of long experience and now engaged in real estate business, renders excellent assistance to newcomers to the community. The Home Mission Board is supporting this church and with the assistance of the Board of Mutual Aid, is expecting that the church will continue to grow, and in time, become a self-supporting church.

Lynden, Washington

A second community visited was that of Lynden, Washington, in the extreme northwest corner of the United States. A glance at the map will reveal Lynden located just east of Blaine, and about 10 miles south of the Mennonite community in British Columbia. This is a Mennonite settlement in cut-over timber land. Here there is a large amount of annual rainfall, climate is mild throughout most of the year, the vegetation is heavy, crops of all types can be readily grown, and the acreages of farms are very small, ranging anywhere from five to 60 and 70 acres. Many farms of 40 acres produce adequate living for a man and his family. Dairying and poultry, along with berry raising, hay crops, potatoes and some fruit are the chief crops.

In 1943 I visited this community and at that time there was no General Conference Church in the area. A few General Conference Mennonites were worshipping with a small Mennonite Brethren church near by. Coming there, I found the Mennonite Brethren had built an attractive new church, and the General Conference group was operating with a membership of 72, a full-time pastor and had purchased a splendid two-room school building located on a highway, and have since bought a small church building from a disbanded group and moved it adjacent to the school, to provide Sunday school space. Additional people are moving into the Lynden community constantly. The 28 families represented in this congregation have moved here in the last 10 years. They came from a wide variety of communities and most of them have moved two or more times previous to their location in Lynden. A number came from Perryton, Texas, others from Buhler and Goessel, Kansas, from Wolf Point, Montana, Meno and Enid, Oklahoma, Newport and Deer Park, Washington, and Dallas and Portland, Oregon. Rev. Dan Toavs, from Wolfpoint, Montana, is the energetic and able pastor of the growing congregation. Almost without exception, these people are enthusiastic about their community and believe it is the finest place they have yet lived, so far as climate and chances for earn-

A Suburb Witness, Then ---- Eternity!

by W. C. Voth

THE account of the courageous and glorious witness of two of Christ's faithful servants has been told in private and in public and has appeared in some papers. This gripping story was told in a meeting in Hongkong, where I heard it. It is that of Miss Elna Lenell and a Chinese elder of the Swedish Mission in China. Here is the gist of this heart-stirring event.

She Had No Choice

Miss Lenell was the only missionary in a station separated by mountains from the other mission stations. She had felt a special call from God to work in that lonely station. In the early Spring of 1947 missionaries on the nearby stations sent word to her that they were evacuating and her station too might soon be in danger, so she was advised to evacuate. She arranged for carts to take her away, but it was too late, the roads were already blocked. Thus she had no choice; and remained with the Chinese Church where for another nine months she gave a faithful witness for the Lord. During this time the pressure against the church and especially its workers increased. After these nine months some false accusation was brought against the Chinese elder and Miss Lenell. On December 24, 1947 these two were arrested; and Christmas Eve they were imprisoned. How they were treated under this detention no one knows. December 29 they were taken out in the open for a public trial, not before a jury, but to be judged by the heterogeneous street public.

Beaten Slowly

To compel them to admit what they were accused of, the pastor and Miss Lenell were beaten severely and slowly, starting on the feet and gradually working upward on the body. The tormentors did not want the victims to die at once, so there were time intervals when they let them rest; and again when they became unconscious they waited for consciousness to return, then flaying them again until finally welcome death released these staunch heroic souls who stood for truth and CHRIST till death.

Under threat of severe punishment the public was warned by the authorities not to touch the bodies lying there in the open under the northern frosts. However later under cover of the night some sympathetic persons ventured out to cover them with a thin blanket of "good earth."

Their Final Witness

Witnesses of this tragic incident later reported they had never seen a face after death so serene and shining with a glorious peace, as those of the Chinese Elder and sister Lenell. Thus these two faithful servants of the Lord rested in their final witness to Christ who was with them in Power unto the end.

Here their bodies remained from December 29 until January 11, when the city had again changed hands, and the Christians could go to take them for burial.

"These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the Throne of God, and serve Him day and night in His Temple; and He that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them. . . . . . and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes." Rev. 7:14, 15, 17b.

ing a living are concerned. The Lynden community is heavily settled with Reformed Church members who are conservative, religiously, and directly concerned with maintaining moral and spiritual standards in the community. They operate their own elementary and high schools, although there are good public schools in the area. A number of instances were pointed out to me where Mennonites with very little capital established themselves on their own farms. Many of them within four or five years improved their economic situation considerably. One man bought a 20-acre farm for $6000 with $2500 down-payment and financed the rest through a local bank, which most people in the community think very generous with its credit to Mennonite settlers. Another bought a 60-acre farm for $8000 and has a 25-head dairy herd. Still another farmer bought a 40-acre farm for $1,000 and claimed he would not sell it for $25,000. There are a considerable number of farms available for sale and are being bought by Mennonites who are expecting to move into the area.

Other Communities

Brief visits were paid also to the Newport and Lind, Washington communities and to Aberdeen, Idaho. Newport and Lind are Mennonite settlements in sharp contrast to each other. One, a settlement in a rather rugged mountainous area, and the other, a large-scale dry-farming area. Both of these communities are older than the ones previously described.

The Columbia Basin project is to bring under cultivation about 1,000,000 acres in the next seven years. There are opportunities for settlement in this area, but the demands for land thus far have been about ten times as great as the supply. Each year a new block of land is supplied with water and all of the land suitable for farming is divided into practical family-sized farm units. The government owns about 15% of the land, while 85% is held privately. All of this land, previous to being brought under cultivation, was desert and dry-land farming area. The most suitable area for Mennonite settlement is what is called District 4 East, which is within easy driving distance of the Lind, Washington Mennonite Community. This land will not, however, be developed before 1952. In general, the Columbia Basin land, while desirable, will require a minimum capital of from $3,000 to $4,000 per farm unit. It is not an area for people who have no funds to begin farming.

Much additional information is available on all of these communities visited, and any prospective settlers may inquire further by writing to the Board of Mutual Aid, North Newton, Kansas.

EASTERN-DISTRICT GIRDS FOR EVANGELISM

Harleigh Rosenberger formerly of the Zion Church, Souderton, Pennsylvania, spoke on "Visitation Evangelism" at the Quarterly Conference on August 29. This public meeting was designed to help churches of the Eastern District prepare for such a visitation campaign during the first week of October.

—The first 5,000 copies of the church bulletins for Christian Education Sunday were not sufficient and another printing had to be run off.

—Christian Medical Service is the goal of Otto D. Klassen, a graduate of Bluffton College. He has entered Loyola University School of Medicine, Chicago. His wife, Helen, expects to take a laboratory job at the University of Illinois School of Medicine, and perhaps enter the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing the following year.

—Lorraine Avenue Church, Wichita, Kansas: The period set aside for Christian Education by the Board of Education was observed by using the following themes for sermons: August 28, "Teach Them," September 4, "Teaching Children," September 11, "Teaching Youth," September 18, "Teaching Parents," September 25, 'Teaching The Aged."

—First Church, Pretty Prairie, Kansas: It was necessary for our pastor, Howard C. Nyce, to leave Sunday afternoon for Chicago, in the interest of the Foreign Mission Board. Our Sunday evening C. E. program consisted of talks given by Hazel Graber and Veda Mae Krehbiel, telling of their experiences in the Summer Service Units. Miss Krehbiel served in California while Miss Graber served in Europe. It was interesting to know that Miss Graber had visited in the home of Helga Kemnitzer, foreign student at Bethel College. Guest speaker at our annual Mission Festival, held the first Sunday in October, will be A. E. Krieder, president of the Board of Foreign Missions.—Ralph Krehbiel, Corr.

—Immanuel Church, Los Angeles, California: On September 4, our new pastor, Alfred Regier, and his family, were welcomed by the members of the church. A short program was given following the noon meal served in the church basement. The young people are in charge of the Union Rescue Mission the first Wednesday night of each month. A challenging service is held for the lost men of this part of the city. Gospel Recordings has requested that we make more German recordings to fill the increased demand for them.—Betty Kroeker Corr.

—Deep Run Church, Bedminster, Pennsylvania: Missionary Orlando Waltner of India spoke for us one evening recently. He has succeeded the pioneer P. A. Penner as director of the famous Champa Leper Home. Our youth has returned to our elementary and high schools and advanced training. Our new college students this year are Phyllis Charles at West Chester, Pa., and Donald Wismer at Bluffton, Ohio. Myrtle Wasser is beginning her first year of teaching in Ohio.—Corr.

—Salem Church, Dalton, Ohio: Now that the remodeling of the church is completed, plans for a service of rededication are taking form. Sunday, the second of October, is the date chosen, with Reverend G. T. Soldner giving the morning sermon and Reverend A. S. Rosenberger the sermon of rededication in the afternoon. Arrangements for the evening services are not complete. A basket dinner will be served at noon in the church basement. Friends are cordially invited to come to the services and spend a day in fellowship together.—Mrs. Merl E. Lehman, Corr.

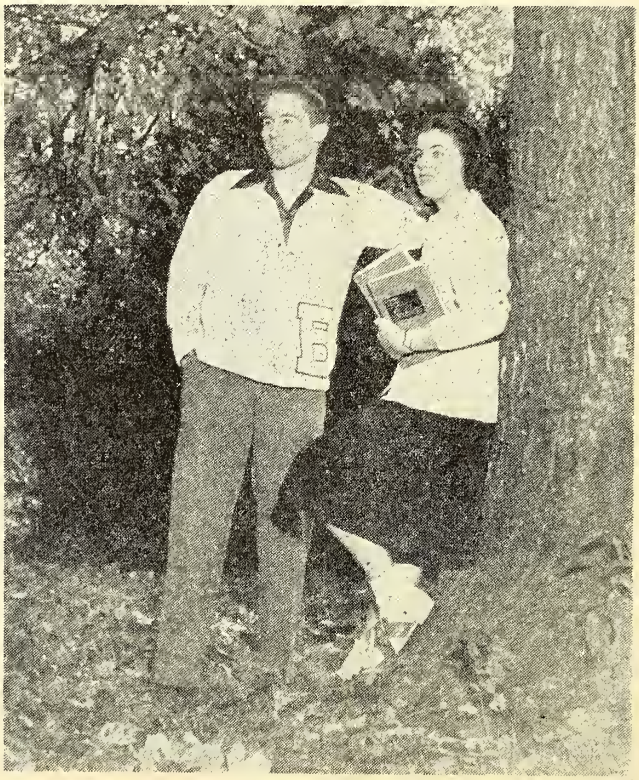
Too Many Opportunities

by W. G. Montgomery

MAKING the best of the one opportunity that comes to your door is usually wiser than going here and there hunting for others.

Herman Parks was one of a large family of boys. His father lived on a small farm, and was too poor to give his children much of a chance for an education.

Herman had little schooling, and there wasn't much work to do in that neighborhood. Had he left home, there would have been no position he could fill, except that of an unskilled laborer. And yet Herman was ambitious; he wanted to do something.



Often one opportunity for our lives is to be preferred over the confusion of many choices and chances.

Then a mine was opened in his neighborhood. A new mineral had been discovered. Herman went to the mine because there was no other place to go. He began as a day-laborer, but he did more than handle a pick and shovel. He studied mining, and learned all about that particular mine and the mineral it was producing.

Thirty years have passed since Herman took hold of his one opportunity, and today he is superintendent of that mine, which produces a million dollars worth of ore each year. He is a wealthy man, and is an authority in that particular mining industry. Talking to Herman awhile ago, I discovered that success had not gone to his head. As he took me through his enormous mine and the many buildings, I discovered that he was well liked by everyone there.

Now, had there been more things Herman could have done when a young man, he might have jumped from one business to another, hunting something easy, and failed at everything. He said to me, "You know, I had no choice of occupations. It was this or nothing; and so I went into it with all I had."

He now knows, of course, that had he traveled the world over, he would not have found another opportunity so big as the one he had at his very door. Today Herman is both successful and happy, and still is living in the house where he was born. And all this has come because he had the advantage of only one opportunity.

Where one young person fails because he has no chance, many others fail, and indeed, most all others fail because they have too many chances. If you have only one opportunity, if it's a matter of doing one thing well or nothing at all, you will probably dig in and do your best. But when several fields are open and digging becomes too hard in one, the temptation is to try another, and then another, and then another, until there's no end to the things you try to do, with no permanent success anywhere.

I believe that each young person will have at least one big chance to make good in life; but he may lose out in the long run if he leaves that one opportunity to try to find something else he thinks is easier. If he has but one opportunity and stays with it, he will win out in the end, as Herman did.

When I was in school, an older boy, named Hayden, was quite popular. His father was the leading doctor in town, and was a man of considerable wealth and influence. Well, he sent Hayden to high school, then to college and finally to a medical school. But because he had so much money and so many opportunities, Hayden could not decide what to do.

So, not having to do anything for a livelihood, Hayden became indolent, failed in his examinations, gave up medicine, became a clerk in a drugstore and then took up selling life insurance. Thus he drifted from one thing to another, looking for something easy to do and big money.

Then the depression came. His father's fortune was wiped out. Hayden had no one now to fall back upon, and by this time he had become a perfect misfit, stranded and out of work. The last time I saw him he was drifting from pillar to post, a failure because he had too many opportunities in early life.

Handel had but one talent, that of music. Working hard at his music, he became one of the world's greatest composers. Daniel Webster had but two opportunities, that of a life position as a law clerk, or that of practicing law, which was much harder and less remunerating for the time being; but he chose the profession, difficult as it was, and by working fourteen hours a day for forty years became one of the most eminent men of his time.

Whatever you undertake to do, there is nothing that will take the place of hard work. This is why the one-opportunity persons succeed more often than those who have many. There's nothing else for them to try, and so they work harder to make good, and by working harder, succeed. Michelangelo naturally turned to the fine arts of sculpture and painting. He felt he had to be an artist or nothing. This was his one opportunity. And so determined was he to succeed, that he slept in his clothes, so he could begin his work as soon as he awoke without having to take time to dress. He kept a block of marble, paint and canvas in his bedroom so he might work during the night in case he couldn't sleep.

Having but one opportunity might be the best thing that could happen to you. That one opportunity might be on the farm. It might be teaching, or the ministry, or in the factory. If you feel this is your one talent and your one opporunity, that you must do this or nothing, the chance is that you will become a far greater success than you would by having too many fields to jump around in.

So, don't grieve any because you don't have a dozen opportunities. Use the one you have and you will go much further than the person who has too many, and doesn't know which one to choose. And be thankful that you do have one.

You will do better in the one field that now looks so barren than you would by being tempted by so many that look rich and easy. One opportunity is enough if we use it; and by doing the best with it, others will come along. Besides, I feel that it is much better to have only one talent, and using it, turn it into five, than to have five to start with, and to lose all of them by not being able to decide what to do with them.—Courtesy of YOUTH.

tion to holding services in churches, as in the past, it is planned to also make arrangements to serve in jails, public hospitals, and the like.

The churches of the community combined in a union service as a welcome to college students Sunday evening, September 18. Ministers presented the need for contact with the church and the opportunities presented for such contacts in Bluffton. A reception in the basement of the Evangelical Reformed Church followed the service, which had been held in the same church.

C.P.S. REUNION AT CAMP MACK

On Sunday, September 11, all roads led to Camp Mack, near Milford, Indiana for approximately 500 people. These people were former C.P.S. men, their wives, friends and children who are now living in either Illinois, Indiana, Michigan or Ohio. The reason for their meeting at Camp Mack was for a day of fellowship and renewing old acquaintances.

A glance at the license plates on the parked cars showed that a good representation from all four States were present. A familiar scene throughout the day was that of boys, or men if you prefer, striding briskly toward someone with a broad grin and an extended hand.

Shortly after 10:30 a.m., the morning worship service was opened with a welcome by chairman Edward Brookmeyer, Jr. He called on Alvin Schrock to lead the group in singing. Paul Miller of Goshen, Indiana delivered the morning sermon.

A pot-luck dinner was then arranged by a hard-working kitchen crew of former C.P.S. men and their wives. We might note here that the wives were doing the managing while the former "kitchen boys" took orders from them.

The afternoon meeting opened with several selections of songs led by Ralph Pletcher. Rev. Clarence Yoder gave the devotionals. The afternoon address was given by Don Smucker of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary in Chicago. He called for all Christians to completely surrender to the will of God.

Following the worship service a short business meeting was held. A new planning committee was elected to make arrangements for next year's meeting. It was voted to accept an invitation to hold next year's meeting at Camp Mack on the second Sunday in September.

A short discussion followed concerning the purposes and motives of our meetings. A concern was expressed that we give more time to a study of peace problems and include more people in our meetings. A committee was appointed to study the proposal.

TELL HIM SO

If you hear a kind word spoken
  Of some worthy soul you know,
It may fill his heart with sunshine
  If you only tell him so.

If a deed, however humble,
  Helps you on your way to go,
Seek the one whose hand has helped you
  Seek him out and tell him so!

If your heart is touched and tender
  Toward a sinner, lost and low,
It might help him to do better
  If you'd only tell him so!

Oh, my sisters, Oh, my brothers,
  As o'er life's rough path you go,
If God's love has saved and kept you,
  Do not fail to tell men so!

The Basis of the Emerging Church in Europe

by Kurtis F. Naylor, Geneva, Switzerland

One of the most profound and hopeful undercurrents of Europe today is the emerging church. In a world of tumbling walls, dreary existence and often aimless living, the church of Jesus Christ is surging up from many communities. We are witnessing the recovery of the church as a community with a purpose.

It is well for us to examine this movement. In the first place, this church is based on the firm conviction that behind the events of today we can see the inescapable hand of God. God will not be mocked. We have not chaos but awful confusion because the sins of man are being balanced in awful retribution. Our present difficulties exist because the order of God is standing firm. Our talking about peace and living a life of selfishness, our homage to service yet relentless grabbing for conveniences and luxuries, our espousal of brotherhood yet our insistence that some men are inferior, our statements of love and our mass killing of men and wanton destruction have come up against the order of God. We have been weighed and found wanting.

The emerging church in Europe is based first of all upon the conviction that behind the events of today we can see the inescapable hand of God. In the second place, the emerging church in Europe is based on the conviction that the failure of the church is not the present mess but its failure to draw man's attention to that which has been and is causing our crisis.

Many people glibly say that because the church did or did not do certain things we have the present predicament. The exponents of this view have led the church to allow the crisis in the world to cause her to question the validity of the gospel. We must repeatedly emphasize the truth that the gospel is not on trial but rather what we see are the sins of man leading him and his civilization to utter ruin and despair. It is this that the emerging church of Europe is emphasizing.

In the third place, the emerging church in Europe grows out of the conviction that that part of the church of Christ which is human is on trial. We must in penitent humility admit that we have erred and strayed from the way of God. We are estranged from God.

Is it any wonder that our programs of advance and schemes of evangelism are falling flat? Here we see both the judgment and the providence of God and his edict against us. The Christian communities of Europe firmly believe that God in his infinite wisdom will not allow us to evangelize until the church herself becomes in fact the bride of Christ and the vessel of the Lord. In the bareness of the land the living God thunders the inescapable challenge, "Repent ye and change."

The emerging church in Europe is based in the fourth place on the belief that the high and mighty One who inhabits eternity is a living God and that he has a living message of hope and salvation for us today. The repentant Christian communities have turned from their despair to hope and from listless existence to dynamic cells of life. God still seeks the church to proclaim his message of hope and love. The emerging church has come to the profound conviction that the redemptive message of Christ must be brought to all of society. It has been in this area that these emerging communities are turning the world upside down. They are, thanks to the divine providence of God, located throughout all of Europe. They know no East or West, nor are they respecters of curtains of man-made divisions. They are creative in that they dare to believe that there is a gospel of salvation for East and West, Communist and capitalist, Greek and barbarian, male and female. This is the new movement in Europe.

The emerging church is living in courageous and daring experimentation. It is living a radical social gospel in its community based on worship of the living God and rooted in the Christian truths. The emerging church in Europe dares to believe that it has a living message of salvation to win the world to Christ.

A CHILD DOES LEAD THEM

Comes now a letter from a lady in one of our good churches as follows:

"Do you by any chance have a book for E-flat saxophone to correspond with THE MENNONITE HYMNARY? You see, my girl plays the piano and my boy plays the saxaphone, and my boy doesn't have any book to play with THE HYMNARY. If you do have one, would you please let me know, and please let me know the price. And do you also have a trombone book too?—Yours sincerely,"

It is embarrassing to have to answer letter like that, when a Publication Office for our Conference should be ahead and not behind in the publications commonly called for by our people—and children at that. "Or what man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone?"

Yes, we have no saxaphone book and no trombone book, but we got a local musician to show this lady how any boy or girl playing a saxaphone or a trombone could easily transpose the notes in THE HYMNARY so that they could be played directly from THE HYMNARY without too much trouble. That was an answer—after a fashion!

In another sense, it was not a satisfactory answer. For one woman who writes frankly, telling of the needs of the children in the home, there are perhaps ten thousand mothers who never think of writing and of whose heartfelt needs the Board of Publication can hardly be aware. Such letters as these suggest areas of service into which our Conference has made no attempt to enter, much less actually function. So it does appear that the words of Jesus are being realized when he said, "and a little child shall lead them." Here is a case where a child does lead them; when a child asks, what shall we say?

Christian Endeavor in India

by Mrs. J. R. Duerksen, Janjgir, C. P., India

As I took part in our Christian Endeavor program tonight I could not help but wish that some of our American young folks could have been present. Of course, for them there would have been the language barrier. To us, who have used the Hindi language more or less successfully for more than twenty years, the Scripture, songs and prayers were as precious as though they had all been given in English.

The thought of God as Light was carried through the whole program. We as children of Light must walk in the light. It was the evening for the installation of officers and as each came forward to the front of the church the line grew until there were twenty-four. Reverently, Philip Ludar, the young pastor now serving the Janjgir church, took through the service of dedication to its natural close, that pledge "Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength, I promise . . . . . ." A candle for each made a row of lights as they sang "Take my Life and let be, consecrated Lord to Thee." How precious these young people are. And how India needs the Light of Life."

Last summer, in spite of very hot weather, the young people of the Janjgir Church sponsored a retreat here for the young people of our mission. Those who were able to be present felt that it had been a time of spiritual growth. Puran Bunwar was one of the chief speakers.

Comments by the Editor— "Teach Us to Pray"

Pentecost came at a prayer meeting and hundreds of other great upsurging movements in the Christian church were motivated in the experience and atmosphere of prayer. We all know these as facts. And we cherish them as personal experiences to motivate us in our lives. Yet, when you discuss prayer among good church people, there is a wistful hope that we may also be moved by prayer, implying that all too often we haven't!

A recent talk with a young person who learned the vividness of real devotion and prayer at a voluntary service unit, reflected the condition of most of us. We practice our devotions—if we do—because we know we are supposed to. It is the Christian thing to do! But, to have daily devotional experiences that are central for life, vivid, rich and the source of power—that is another matter. Such power has not touched our lives—at least not often.

The disciple's cry is ours today—"Teach us to pray." And real prayer needs to be learned! It comes because of a desire to learn and because of a recognition that we need prayer to live. There are many helps and some of them are outstanding—ones that should be read and re-read. Such classics as St. Augustine's CONFESSIONS, Thomas a' Kempis' THE IMITATION OF CHRIST, Brother Lawrence's THE PRACTICE OF THE PRESENCE OF GOD are each worthy of a place, a permanent place in our collection of devotional literature.

But, peer of peers is the Bible itself. Repeated thumbing of the Bible has been a source of power for all generations. Read a Gospel or a letter through in leisurely fashion over a period of weeks or months. Read it devotionally. Read until you find something especially meaningful to you. Then stop and ponder it. Such devotional reading has its own fruits.

A recent book on prayer which is practical, simple, and strongly Christian—for there is such thing as un-Christian prayer! — is a book by Charles Francis Whiston called TEACH US TO PRAY. It is published by the Pilgrim Press and available from any of our book stores. This book in a simple way can teach you to pray in a way that you had never prayed before.

It is written by a man who conducts Schools of Prayer in many parts of our country. And Mr. Whiston finds that people are deeply hungering for the experience of genuine and real prayer. There is a wistful hope in the hearts of many a person that he may plumb the depths of prayer. Mr. Whiston can help anyone who has such a desire.

SPECIAL MEETING ON VOLUNTARY SERVICE

On Sunday afternoon and evening, October 2, at the Eden Mennonite Church near Moundridge, Kansas there will be a "Voluntary Service Reports" meeting. Volunteers of the various conferences programs—Mennonite Brethren, (Old) Mennonite, and General Conference —and the M.C.C. program, will report on their experiences in summer, winter, and one-year service units. Slides representing various units will be shown in the evening. The purpose of this meeting is to acquaint the constituency with the Service Unit program of the individual conferences and the M.C.C. Anyone interested is welcome to attend.

Beyond Our Own

NEW YORK. Dr. Walter W. Van Kirk will return to N. B. C. with his weekly analysis of the latest news in the world of religion on Saturday, October 1 6:15-6:30 p.m., (EST).

HARRISONBURG, VIRGINIA. A number of important steps were taken by the Mennonite General Conference during its biennial session on the campus of Eastern Mennonite College, August 23-26. A major change affecting the organizational set-up of the conference was the approval of a representative General Council to replace the Committee on Arrangements and the Interboard Committee. The council will be made up of representatives from each board and district conference.

In a report of Mennonite Mutual Aid, C. L. Graber announced the organization of the Mennonite Mutual Relief Association for the purpose of giving mutual assistance for sickness, disability, and burial expense. Membership in the new organization was opened September 1. Approval was given to the publication of two new song books, one to succeed Life Songs II and the other for primary children. Attendance and interest were good throughout the session, even though it was a "delegate session" rather than a general one. A total of 313 ministers and bishops were in attendance from throughout the United States and Canada.—Mennonite Weekly Review

GRANTHAM, PENNSYLVANIA. The Brethren in Christ Church voted at their annual Conference which convened at Stayner, Ontario, recently to affiliate with the National Association of Evangelicals. — United Evangelical Action.

TOKYO. More than 100,000 Japanese have signed the peace petition of atom-bombed Hiroshima which the city plans to present to President Truman in leather booklet form. Circulation of the petition asking the United States press to lead a campaign for permanent world peace began August 6, fourth anniversary of Hiroshima's atom-bomb explosion.—Christian Science Monitor.

SCOTTDALE, PENNSYLVANIA. The new $250,000 addition to the Mennonite Publishing House here was dedicated at special services on Sunday afternoon, August 21, during the annual meeting of the Publication Board, which was in session from August 20-22.—Mennonite Weekly Review.

TOLEDO. In one of the "longest and most spirited meetings in its history," the Toledo Ministerial Association adopted a set of resolutions supporting the right of Dr. Aleck D. Dodd to follow the dictates of his conscience in refusing to pay a portion of his taxes, and sharply criticized the Toledo Council of Churches for dismissing Dr. Dodd as director of Pastoral Relations. The Council's action followed the Internal Revenue Bureau's garnishee of Dr. Dodd's salary to collect $150.47, the portion of his 1948 taxes comparable to the part of the budget which he feels goes for war purposes.

The statement of the Ministerial Association read in part: "While we have not felt impelled to take the step Mr. Dodd has taken in refusing to pay that part of his income tax which he feels is devoted to furthering the cause of war, yet we are of the opinion that he should follow the dictates of his conscience."—Fellowship

CHICAGO. A gain of 19,060 Sunday Schools in this country between 1945 and 1948 was shown in figures released by the International Council of Religious Education. During the same period, however, there was a net loss of 21,891 pupils in the Sunday School enrollment of all churches. The International Council said there are now 232,672 Sunday or Sabbath schools in the United States as well as 2,406,505 officers and teachers, and 24,588,112 pupils of all faiths.

Please enclose this label when writing.

THE UNITED EVANGELISTIC ADVANCE

The United Evangelistic Advance of which you have been reading in the Mennonite is to begin on October 2 by observing the day as World Communion Sunday when each church will make special effort to have all of her members at the Lord's Table. This is the beginning of fifteen months of consecrated and concerted planning to win the unsaved to Christ and to strengthen the Christians in their spiritual life. Further, all churches are asked to plan a series of evangelistic meetings this fall, either separately or in a united effort with other churches of the community. During November all Sunday schools will be asked to give themselves to this cause. J. T. Friesen, Beatrice, Nebraska, a member of the Evangelism Committee, will be in touch with the Sunday school superintendents and will offer guidance to the Sunday schools in this work.

These three suggestions the Evangelism Committee would like to make to all General Conference churches at this time. In addition to this each District Conference is encouraged to plan its own evangelistic program.

THE EVANGELISM COMMITTEE

REMEMBERING OUR FATHERS

Once again we remind Mennonite communities of the 75th anniversary of the Mennonite Immigration which is to be celebrated this year.

At one of its early meetings the General Anniversary Program Committee worked out the following plan:

That local celebrations should be held before October 12th.

That on October 12 all groups unite in a mass celebration at Memorial Hall, North Newton, Kansas.

That during these celebrations a definite effort be made to solicit funds for the adequate housing and care of the Mennonite Historical materials which are to be placed in the basement of the Library building now under construction.

In consideration of the privations, cares, and indefatigable work of our pioneer fathers it seems only fitting that we should this 75th Anniversary set aside a day in their memory.

too often. In all these conferences, retreats, conventions, etc., would be reduced to one-half the frequency the work would still not necessarily suffer because of the change.

Very sincerely,

THE MOST EFFECTIVE MEANS OF REACHING PEOPLE

WHILE we are interested in every phase of evangelistic approach, we are primarily concerned with visitation evangelism because it is a most effective means for reaching the unchurched people in our generation. The unsaved multitudes are not coming into church to hear the gospel preached. If they are to hear it at all, we must take it to them. . . . There are not enough preachers on earth to reach the billion and a half non-Christians. There are not preachers enough in "Christian" America to reach the 69 million unchurched people, people unchurched in any faith, Protestant, Catholic, or Jewish. Every second person in the United States is a member of no faith. The world's lay Christians, however, are enough to reach the billion and a half if they are willing to be used of Christ for that purpose. The Protestant church members in United States are enough to reach the 69 million unchurched if we would be used of Him to that end . . . .

Two-by-two is Christ's own method for establishing His Kingdom.

A CHALLENGE FOR TODAY

TIME was when it was said of Christians that they had turned the world upside down. It is now evident that despite Christianity, the world has turned upside down again. Our society has gone pagan. Once Christianity molded men's minds. Its great concepts were veritable windows through which Western man looked out upon the whole scene of life. That is true no longer. Today the Christian church faces a task

HOW EASY IT IS TO TALK. We talk about everything. The worst thing about this is not that we often talk without thinking but that too often we make talk a substitute for action. We fool ourselves into thinking that we have done something worthwhile when we have talked about a great social issue or a particular problem that confronts us.

We profess an interest in the prohibition of the use of strong drink. We discuss this in our temperance lessons. Then having discussed it we feel that we have done something and let the "wets" vote in the sale of liquor and set up stores where our people and others can buy intoxicating liquors freely.

We profess an interest in race relations. How many of us have ever invited a member of another race to eat a Sunday dinner with us and participate in the social hour following. We have talked about good race relations and can muster many arguments why there should be no discrimination but talk is not enough. Talk does not erase prejudices. These are much too deep-seated. Words cannot erase them. Undertaking action which would give us experiences that would recondition us emotionally would help.

We are opposed to strikes on the part of labor and we voice our opposition freely. We feel that too much money is already being paid to the laborer and he has no business to strike. Much of our talk comes from not having any information in regard to the working conditions of the laborer, the number of days he is permitted to work, how much money he actually has for his living expenses. The least we could do would be to get information which would help us form an intelligent opinion.

We talk about love and brotherhood. It is an excellent theme. Yet how many of us are in favor of cooperating with other churches of our own denomination and with other denominations in a youth program for Sunday night? How shall we bring about that unity of spirit which was a part of the experience of the early disciples in the upper room? We send missionaries out to foreign fields because we have a love for those who have never heard the gospel, yet are we willing to accept the fruit of our own mission work into our homes, our churches and institutions? Somehow we feel much more comfortable when we talk about the brotherhood of man through Jesus Christ then when we are to practice it. With the rest of America it is easy to hate the Russians and be suspicious of the Jews. We sit in the church pew with those who have about the same social and economic status as we have. Where is this brotherhood in practice about which we talk as Christians? We do not practice it more faithfully because we feel we have done something when we have talked about it.

Is it not time to put our Christian profession to a test and give expression to the faith that is in us? We need talk but we also need action to accompany it. That is why I say that talk is not enough. "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say."—D.C.W.

NONCONFORMITY is not only good doctrine. It is fundamentally essential to life. It is rather strange that many people, who discourage or even sneer at the idea, practice it in some phase of their own lives. There is the individual who observes a Christian withdraw from certain activities accepted as right and proper by the rest of the world in order to practice the Christian Life; he considers the Christian queer. Yet he may lock himself from the pleasures of the world for hours at a time as he practices his violin. Or he may forgo the comforts of less strenuous activities to practice football for many hours during the week. It is really not a matter of whether we believe in nonconformity or not; it is rather a matter of evaluating the various causes for which we are willing to withdraw ourselves. For no great blessing has come to life without separation from the world in some area. Separation and discipline are the twin sources of creativity. This is a paradox of life; if we are to be a blessing to the world we must in strict discipline separate ourselves from the world. But, you say, isolationism is the one word that has been banned once and for all from our vocabulary by science. While it is true that physical isolationism as revealed in such barriers as language, race, distance, and international boundries has become meaningless, there does, however, remain a need for a deeper, spiritual and moral isolationism. This is in the very nature of the Church of Jesus Christ. Like her Saviour, she must have the world at heart—the world of sinful and needy humanity; but if this concern is to remain pure, holy, and impassioned it must not be contaminated at any point with compromise or evil. Mennonites have tried to separate themselves long enough in a physical sense. Let them at this 75th anniversary of the arrival in this country of a large segment of their number, determine to go deeper on the matter of separation from the world. Let them imitate their founders whose inner separation from the world was unconditional. Because it was so cleancut, they fearlessly threw themselves into the very heart of the world's need for Christ instead of withdrawing and becoming quiescent. The heritage we have received from our forefathers has been a great one, but we must understand clearly that if we are to convey it to our posterity and make the next seventy-five years our greatest, it will demand going further and deeper with Christ in an uncompromising break with the world and its sins in all areas in order that we may reach out further and down further to bring back those straying in sin and lift those who have fallen into the pitfalls of corruption. After 75 Years

Has Our Spiritual Progress Kept Pace?

by P. P. Wedel

WE may well raise the question whether we have made spiritual growth in the inner life of the church and of the individual comparable in any wise to material growth and whether we measure up to the faith of our fathers.

As we raise this question we are conscious of the fact that as we look back we are prone to magnify the virtues of our fathers and to think of them as perfect saints. However, all of them were human as we are and had their temptations, faults, and short-comings, and there were a few individual cases of persons who went far astray. But after having said this we are happy to say that on the whole they were men and women who stood for principle and who believed in Jesus Christ the Saviour. So we ask, do we their descendants live up to the moral and spiritual qualities and standards they have set for us?

Their high standard of honesty is the first one to which we call attention. In the community and in the business world our fathers made for themselves a reputation of honesty, integrity, and fairness. Is it not true that in the materialism of our age and of our country we have lost this reputation of honesty and integrity? We, too, have become materialistic. People do not have the confidence and trust in us that our pioneer fathers enjoyed.

Within Their Means

The second thing we want to mention is that of nonconformity to the world. They separated themselves from the world. We may think that they separated themselves too much, or that it was easy for them to do so because of the language barrier. All this may be true; but the fact remains that they did not conform to things the world practiced. They also led the more simple life. We may argue that necessity demanded it, since they did not have the financial means, and that they did not live much more simple than other people who came to these regions as pioneers. This too may be true in part; but again the fact remains that they did live the simple life. In their dress, in the building of their homes and the furnishing of the same, in their food, in the matter of luxuries they lived within their means.

A Far Cry from Their Nonconformity

Nor were they beguiled to follow the trend of an ever-increasing pleasure and amusement-mad America. As Christians they felt that they could not take part in everything that the world did and even that some churches were advocating. They took literally the words of Paul in II Corinthians 6:14-17, "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: . . . . . . Come ye out from among them and be ye separate." It is a far cry from their noncomformity and what we practice today.

At the beginning of the second world war a friend visited us to discuss some of the problems that were confronting the Mennonite Church as a result of the war. Among other things he related an experience that he had just a few days previous to his visit. He was making an auto drive with an acquaintance who was not a Mennonite, and in their conversation this acquaintance turned to him and said, "What is the matter with you Mennonites? You are so different than we. We smoke; so do you; We drink; so do you. We dance; so do you. We go to the movies; so do you. We play cards; so do you. There is nothing we do, that you do not do, except when it comes to war; then you refuse to render military service." That to some extent this was a voice of prejudice and misunderstanding, we admit; but that in this voice there is enough truth to make us uncomfortable, we humbly confess. We fall far short of our forefathers in obedience to the admonition of Romans 12:2, "Be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may. prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God."

As we do not measure up to our pioneer fathers in honesty and in nonconformity, so also in other qualities or characteristics. We merely make mention of some of them, such as, diligence, industry, frugality, sociability, mutual helpfulness, fidelity in family relations, absence of divorce, and obedience to civil law.

Sacrifice for Conviction

Above all we want to point to the fact that our fore-fathers had faith in God. They believed in God and in His only begotten Son, Jesus Christ the Saviour. Because of their faith they came to this country, where they could live in accordance with the dictates of their conscience founded on the Word of God. They sacrificed for it. Especially did they think of their children and of coming generations, whom they desired to save from the militarism and dictatorship of Europe. For them too they were willing to sacrifice. They gave up home, fatherland and friends, and turned their steps towards a new and unknown world. It cost them much in money, in comfort, in heartache, and in the fear of an uncertain future.

Here in this country they practiced the doctrine of their church. They refused to swear the oath, they practiced the teaching of non resistance and non-violence, they avoided lawsuits and secret, oath-bound societies, and they practiced or at least endeavored to practice a biblical church discipline.

At Least Argued

To them the whole Bible was the Word of God. It was their most important piece of literature, and they believed, it from cover to cover. To live up to its precepts was their aim and their desire. It was the book not only for the church, but also for the home. There it was studied; there and in social gatherings it was discussed. Yes, they sometimes argued about its doctrines; but at least they had enough interest in it to argue about it.

The church was near and dear to them. Services were attended regularly, even though for some it meant a walk of four and more miles. They had great respect for the house of worship and even the children caught something of this respect. Prayer and family worship was quite generally practiced, and the children were taught to pray and to love the Lord Jesus Christ. In difficulties and trials, when the going was hard they put their trust in the Lord, and submitted to His will, believing that He would undertake for them.

We have drifted away from some of these spiritual traits of our fathers. Seventy-five years of life in America finds us morally and spiritually poorer, at least in some respects, than they were.

This Seventy-fifth Anniversary Celebration of the coming of our fathers to America is a loud challenge to us to prove ourselves worthy of them. Let us thank God for the heritage they have left us. Let us appreciate the great advantages, privileges, and opportunities and blessings we enjoy, because they were willing to sacrifice for us. Let us repent and confess that we have lost some of their moral and spiritual values and do all we can to regain them. Let us do all we can to bequeath to our children and children's children the good heritage they have left us, so that coming generations can rise to call us blessed as we today rise to call our forefathers blessed.

Book Notes

FROM THE STEPPES TO THE PRAIRIES, edited by Cornelius Krahn, published by The Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas, 1949, 115 pages $1.50.

This is really an ingenious commemorative booklet. Ingenious, because the account of 75 years of history is not told in a dry matter-of-fact way. It is a collection of documents written by several authors on various aspects of the same general subject—namely, on the coming of the Mennonites from the plains of Russia to the prairies of the middle west. Cornelius Krahn has written the first chapter in his usual interesting and authoritiative style. Three interesting glimpses by Noble Prentis, a newspaper man from Topeka, Kansas are included in this book. He saw the Mennonites in transit and visited them in their early prairie homes and wrote interestingly about his impressions. No one who has any interest in the subject can drop this book once he has started to read this personal impressions.

Equally interesting is the original chapter of excerpts from the Christian Krehbiel diary, who recounts his own experiences in helping to settle the early Mennonites who came to Kansas. Leland Harder, one of the promising young writers of our Conference, contributes a splendid chapter on the treatment Mennonites received in Congress in the 1870's. Many of the the readers of the MENNONITE may never have been aware of the considerable discusion the proposed Mennonite immigration caused in the halls of Congress. A facinating chapter on John F. Funk, the pioneer printer and publisher in the Old Mennonite Church of Elkhart, Indiana, is written by Kempes Schnell. It will be a source of information to many to know of how wide-spread was the interest among the American Mennonites in the migrations, and how significant a part the American Mennonites played in the bringing of the Mennonites from Russia to America. Melvin Gingerich writes a chapter on Jacob Y. Shantz, an Ontario Old Mennonite, who worked closely with John F. Funk and Christian Krehbiel on this project. A short chapter on the founding of Gnadenau, a pioneer European

Then and Now

A 100,000 Acre Purchase

One of the largest bona fide land sales ever made in Kansas, perhaps in America, has just been concluded by the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Company with a community of Russian Mennonites who landed in New York during the month of September with the steamers Cimbria, Teutonia and City of Richmond, and most of whom have spent the last thirty days and a good many of their rubles in our city. Their land purchase amounts in round numbers to about 100,000 acres of railroad land, aside from a number of improved farms, all lying north of the stations of Florence, Peabody, Walton, Newton, Halstead, Burrton and Hutchinson. Thanks to the untiring energy and the extraordinary liberality of the A. T. & S. F. Railroad Company, this means to Kansas and particularly to Marion, Harvey, McPherson and Reno counties, an acquisition of about one million and a half of capital and a wholesale addition to her producing population of some two thousand souls. From the Cottonwood River to the Little Arkansas, a scope of magnificent prairie country fifty miles in length, is now one colony, composed of the thriftiest and most intelligent class of foreigners that ever landed upon our shores; and "in three years," to use the language of one of their elders, "that ocean of grass will be transformed into an ocean of waving fields of grain, just as we left our Molotschna colony." Kansas will be to America what the country of the Black Sea of Azov is now to Europe her wheat-field.—by Noble L. Prentis, THE COMMONWEALTH, 1874 as reprinted in: FROM THE STEPPES TO THE PRAIRIES

A Prophecy As of 1889

It is a matter, I regret to say, of uncertainty, whether the work begun by these Mennonite settlers will be completed. If the sons and grandsons of Peter Schmidt, of Emmathal, and Heinrich Richert, of Blumenfeld, will walk in the ways of those worthy men, the result will be something like fairyland—the fairies being, however, substantial men, weighing about 185 pounds each. The orchards will bud and bloom, amid them will stand the solid brick houses, like those of Russia, and the richest farmers of Kansas will dwell therein. But there is a danger that this will not come to pass. Jacob and David will go to work on the railroad, and let the plow take care of itself; and Susanna and Aganetha will go out to service in the towns, and fall to wearing fine clothes and marrying American Gentiles; and the evil day may come when the descendent of the Mennonites of the old stock will be cushioning store-boxes, saving the Nation with his mouth, or even going about like a roaring lion, seeking a nomination for Congress. I wish I could believe it otherwise. I wish our atmosphere did not make us all so smart that we cannot enjoy good health. Were it not for that accursed vanity and restlessness which is our heritage, I could indulge in a vision of the future—of a peaceful quiet, wealthy people, undisturbed by the throes of speculation or politics, dwelling in great content under the vines and mulberry trees which their fathers planted in the grassy, wind-swept wilderness.—by Noble L. Prentis, from Kansas Miscellanies, reprinted in FROM THE STEPPES TO THE PRAIRIES. Prentis had visited the Mennonites on arrival in 1874; in 1889 he paid them another visit making the above observation.

Plow and Bible

The share of the Mennonites in transforming the prairies into wheat fields is due mainly to the following factors. The prairies were similar to the steppes from which they had come. Therefore the hard winter wheat seed they had brought with them was well adapted to the soil and climatic conditions of their new home. They were born farmers with "plow and Bible" as the symbol of their religious, social, and economic life. Settling in compact and homogeneous communities made the very rapid spread of the hard winter wheat possible. Thus by tilling the soil in quietness and following the way of life set by them for generations they made their contribution without being aware of its vast consequences. Symbolically the broken pillar of Cornies in the steppes was completed on the prairies.—by Cornelius Krahn, FROM THE STEPPES TO THE PRAIRIES, 1949

Separation Automatic, Not Legalistic

The Church, as a body of believers, is a community. Mennonites should settle in compact groups. This is both desirable and necessary and it is spiritual. We should settle in groups large enough for Christian standards to be determined and maintained. I approve of separation in the sense of being in the world but not of it. Nonconformity to those customs and practices which are not commensurate with holy living are devotion to Jesus Christ and our desire for holy living should be so great that separation is an automatic, not legalistic thing.

Infiltration or assimilation should be practiced only inasmuch as it is with fellow believers in Christ except where it is contacting non-believers for purposes of giving Christian witness and assistance and showing love wherever it is needed. Cooperation may be carried on with other Christian groups and with non-believers, but this is not imitation. Christian standards ought to maintain this way of life without shame or a sense of condescension. Mennonites have a good heritage. They should not be ashamed of it. They need not apologize for it, nor need they be provincial nor bigoted in their attitude toward Christians and non-Christians who disagree with their point of view.—by J. Winfield Fretz, an excerpt from an address delivered at one of the local anniversary celebrations commemorating the 75th anniversary of the Mennonite immigrations, held at Hoffnungsfeld, Moundridge, Kansas, September 5, 1949.

Ellengowan House

by Helen Kornelson

Ellengowan House to me has come to mean more than a mere house to live in while in Language School. To live here this summer has been a wonderful opportunity for me to get acquainted with our missionaries. Although I met them all at the Hindustani Conference last November, I did not really get to know them. This summer's stay up here, therefore, has become very meaningful to me for this very reason. Not only have I become better acquainted with our missionaries, but with their work as well.

As a mission house for our missionaries, while in Language School or on vacation, it is almost ideal in many respects. It is right next door to the Kellog Church which also serves as the language school. A wonderful view presents itself just a short distance from the house, both to the east and the west. Another advantage we have here is that we are quite close to the post-office and the two stores on this hill-top. The hospital and the Community Center are not too distant, either. Since we are almost on the very top of this mountain, at an altitude of 7,500 feet, we are, however, quite a distance from the big bazaars.

The rooms in Ellengowan House are not large, but there are quite a number of them. Because there are several apartments, several missionaries can be here together at one time. Downstairs are two fair-sized rooms with bath-rooms and a suite consisting of bed-room, bath-room, small dressing room, living room, dining room and small kitchenette, as well as six small rooms to be used as store-rooms and servant quarters. Upstairs are four apartments with bath-rooms for each.

During the first part of the summer Rev. and Mrs. Duerksen, Lois, Marie Duerksen, Melva Lehman and I occupied the suite and the one large bed-room. Erwin Schrag stayed in the room at the other end of the house. In the one upstairs apartment were Dr. and Mrs. Dester; in one Rev. and Mrs. Lubin Jantzen; in one Mr. and Mrs. Willard Unruh, and in the fourth apartment are Rev. and Mrs. Edward Burkhalter. When Duerksens returned to the plains, we girls vacated our room and moved into that suite, thus leaving room for Miss Kroehler, a friend of Miss Nickel's. When Desters left at the end of June, Miss Nickel and Elenore Schmidt lived in that apartment.

Ellengowan House

Our regular Sunday evening prayer meetings always find us crowding into one room for fellowship. Oh, what blessed times we have had together. The piano has afforded us much joy and we usually assemble in the room where the piano is.

We have enjoyed meeting and getting acquainted with missionaries from other missions. When we entertain we generally have to borrow the dishes from the other apartments, but this, too, is another means to draw us closer and increases the already so natural family feeling amongst us.

In comparison to many houses on this hill-side, we have a fair-sized enclosed yard. During the first part of the summer, when the weather was so ideal for outdoor activities, we had several lawn parties. The children, too, have enjoyed the spacious yard where they could play and roam at will. Sometimes there were as many as eight youngsters playing together.

Now in the rainy season all such out-door activities have ceased, and we are happy to be in a dry place. In the rains the downstairs rooms are very damp and uncomfortable unless a small fire is kept in the room every day. The greatest problem is the one of drying one's clothing and keeping them from moulding.

Ellengowan House is very much appreciated by us all. It is not elaborate nor fancy; the rooms are small and simple; the furniture is old-fashioned and some quite awkward, and the household furnishings are very limited, but to us it is a "home," a "missionary home." It is a place of rest for those on vacation and a home to these who spend so much of their time here for language study. We are indeed grateful to our heavenly Father and to all who have made it possible for us to have Ellengowan House.

Farm Youth Exchange MCC's Newest Possibility

AKRON, PENNSYLVANIA. Application has been made for an exchange program by which Mennonite farm youth from Europe could visit the United States for a specified period in order to become acquainted with Mennonite church and community life in America. This concept was prompted by the Student Exchange program sponsored by the Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges. It is thought that since the exchange of students has been such a mutually helpful experience, a similar opportunity extended to farm youth from communities in Europe would also be a rich experience. The number able to come will likely be small, perhaps not more than a dozen or two. It is hoped that these farm youth may be able to perform regular farm work and that their earnings may apply against their cost of travel from and to Europe. Further information will be given as plans develop.

Paraguayan Service Workers Report

The first Voluntary Service workers assigned to Paraguay, Darrel Albright and Robert Snyder, report that they have begun their work on the S.T.I.C.A. ranch about 110 miles southeast of Asuncion. Enroute to this place they had opportunity to stop at the M.C.C. Unit in Puerto Rico, and also the M.C.C. office in Asuncion.

Their work for this government agricultural organization is to assist in the experimental projects designed to develop better methods of agriculture in the Latin American countries. The actual work done by the young men includes the care of machinery and cattle, and other general farm duties. (Their maintenance is financed by the organization S.T.I.C.A.) The work of S.T.I.C.A. is not related to the Mennonite colonies in Paraguay, except as some of the results of research and experimentation may eventually benefit the colonists in their agricultural practices.

Brook Lane Farm Note

A farmer is needed to manage the farm work at this M.C.C. mental hospital. The work consists of general farming, with emphasis on chicken raising. A married couple could be used, in which case the wife would assist in housekeeping or other duties. Anyone interested (on maintenance or salary basis) write to Mental Health Service, M.C.C., Akron, Pennsylvania.

"Top Priority" Relief Foods

Concerning relief foods especially needed this year, J. N. Byler writes from Europe on September 16 as follows:

"In general I would like to say that our workers feel that flour is still being considered the chief relief food, and following flour is meat and fats. This of course is what we have considered top priority food."

Serving Children in Italy

The M. C. C. Unit in Italy recently completed a four-week children's colony project in which a group of poor children from the city of Naples were invited to share in a period of rest, wholesome recreation and religious instruction, with good food and clothing provided. It was felt that the project was very effective, the children giving evidence of improved physical condition and also growth in character.

Although not enough M.C.C. clothing was at hand to give each child the needed items, the shipment of shoes contributed by children in the United States and Canada in the special children's Shoe Project, arrived on one of the last days thus making it possible for these needy children in Italy to receive shoes.

A similar project is planned for October, although somewhat different in details. The Waldensian young people assisted in the previous project and are interested in continuing to help in such M.C.C. work.

FREEMAN BEGINS PIONEER HALL

Work commenced September 19 on Pioneer Hall. The Women's Auxiliary has been active in raising funds for the new kitchen and is sponsoring a concert Thursday, Sept. 22, featuring the harpist Frances Gilman Miller, and a Men's Fellowship Dinner, Friday, Sept. 30, with an informal program: music and special speaker. Proceeds of both affairs will be used for the new kitchen.

The annual Community Entertainment Series sponsored by Freeman Junior College is opening with a ticket drive this week. The five numbers of the series include: the Northwest Sinfonietta, a group composed of twenty musicians from the Minneapolis Symphony under the direction of Henry Deneke, October 7; the comic opera, "Pirates of Penzance," by Gilbert and Sullivan, a production of the music and dramatics departments, November 3-4; the Gainey-Rondahl-Poleri-Trio, in a costumed performance of a chamber opera, February 3; Dr. Charles Emerson Boddie, with the lecture, "Christianity and Freedom," March 3; Rupert Hohmann, member of the Wichita Symphony Orchestra and son of Professor Hohmann of Bethel College, in a violin concert, Mar. 31.

Rev. H. J. Brown, returned missionary from China, spoke in chapel on Wednesday September 14. On September 30 James W. Montgomery will speak on South America.

Tryouts have been held for the Academy play and the college operetta. Rehearsals are under way for both.

BLUFFTON TO STUDY COLLEGE GOVERNMENT

A joint student-faculty committee is working on the problem of reorganizing College government in such a way as to provide more cooperation between faculty and students in the solution of problems concerning the campus community. A number of specific recommendations have been decided upon and referred to the faculty and student council for action.

The Gospel Teams held a joint meeting Wednesday evening, September 21, which new students as well as old members were invited to attend. There was a good response from the students. Officers of the two groups met again recently to make plans for the year. Rev. Paul Shelly is faculty sponsor of the men's group and Mrs. L. L. Ramseyer is advisor for the women.

Plans are being made for the homecoming and parent's day festivities October 29, 30. Some emphasis will be placed at these sessions on the 50th anniversary of the college. Rev. George Stoneback, pastor of the Fairfield, Pennsylvania church, will be the vesper speaker October 30.

SEMINARY STUDENTS ELECT

Because Rollin Moser, Nappanee, Indiana, will not be in school this quarter, Melvin Funk, Hillsboro, Kansas was named the President of the Mennonite Seminary Fellowship. Other officers are Erna Friesen, Henderson, Nebraska, Secretary; Frieda Claassen, Beatrice, Nebraska, Treasurer; Orval Shoemaker, Freeport, Indiana, Vice-President. Those serving on various committees are Harold Ratzlaff and Robert Kreider, as student representatives on the Religious Life Committee; Elmer Ediger and Melvin Funk as inter-Seminary representatives; Rudolph Martens, chairman, Bertha Fast, Lois Kreider on the Social Committee; Frances Funk, chairman, Jacob Goering, Delbert Schrag on the Welfare Committee; and Frieda Claassen as director of the Student Book Club.

BETHEL ENROLLMENT NEAR 400

Of the 393 students present at Bethel College at this time, 246 are men and 147 women. Married students number 43. The students come from 22 states and from 7 foreign countries. The foreign countries are Canada, Puerto Rico, Costa Rica, India, Germany, Paraguay, and China. A few more students are expected to arrive.

Chapel hour is conducted every morning at 10 o'clock. Unless excused for a valid reason, all students and faculty members are expected to attend, and the chapel barely holds the gatherings.

An atmosphere of reverence and dignity marks these services. Preceding the service the college dean makes important announcements concerning studies and life on the campus. Enough of variety is observed to prevent the meetings from becoming monotonous. Members of the faculty alternate with outside speakers and students in conducting the chapel services. The extensive work of the college's music department becomes apparent during chapel hours. Occasional services consist of a Scripture reading and music only, the latter provided by students in the form of solos and organ recitals. Much singing of hymns during all of the periods is done.

Recently the pastor of Bethel College Church, Rev. Lester Hostetler, spoke. He pointed out the significance of the name "Bethel," and the responsibility of the students to live up to it. He also stressed the need for regular Sunday church attendance, and invited the students to attend Bethel College Church or other churches.

The journalism class with its instructor toured the new printshop Thursday afternoon, last week. Glen McCaslin, the manager of the shop, gave the students thorough explanations of the various machines in use. Technological miracles, such as the linotype, the "human brain" folding machine, and the "offset" or lithographing machine would interest anybody, the budding journalists found learning from actual observation a method far superior to that of studying descriptions in the textbook.

Looking Out on Today's World

(Ed. Note—The following article was not written with the 75th anniversary of the Mennonite migration from Russia to the U. S. in mind. However, in the light of that event, it has significance for it makes an attempt to evaluate the life of today as we know it.)

PIETY in our age is not easy. Our good intentions for the development of a life of devotion is immediately confronted with a host of problems. This does not say that our age is peculiar in confronting us with obstacles to a devout life. All ages have had the same general problem. If it had not been so history would not be filled with tales of men seeking God in hundreds of different ways. Devout Hundus lie on nails and crawl to shrines on bleeding knees; ancient Christians spent up to thirty years on pillars to be nearer to God; pilgrims of the Middle Ages traveled countless weary miles to kiss the bones of martyrs as witness in Chaucer's Centurbury Tales. Each age has sought God in its own way because each age presented its own unique problems. The way they chose, whether right or wrong, seemed to them to serve a practical end. They sought to bring pace to the souls of men.

Our age

But, what of our age? How are we to overcome the obstacles which confront us in achieving peace with God?

First, we must evaluate our age and see with what stuff we deal. When we compare it with the saint-worshipping middle ages, or the mechanistic, romantic nineteenth century, we can see we have our own needs and our own problems. Not only do we need the eternal message concerning the Eternal God, but we need the message so that it will apply to us and our problems. Where, in the feudal ages, the problem was not so much that of a white man being Christian to a black man, the twentieth century faces that issue. Where, a hundred years ago, the Christian was confronted with slavery, today a new kind of nationalism plagues him and social inequality replaces slavery.

Our Dynamic Universe

But, not only are we confronted with social issues. The development of thought has changed things, too. The nineteenth century was busy fighting a battle with science. A cold mechanistic universe was what men grappled with in the last century. Today, instead of a mechanistic universe, we face a dynamic universe and men who possess such power that the soul quakes in the face of it.

Rather than a mechanistic universe, ours is a machine age which has revolutionized life for us. Where twenty years ago we lived comfortably safe in Kansas, today there is talk of ocean girdling rockets with atomic bomb war heads designed to pick off any million or so persons desired by the guiding minds. Ours is an age of quaking fear. Our power has made life more tenuous than it was for the barbarians. Where the ancient hunter, creeping through the forest, might stub his toe, today's business man, by a mis-move of his plane, is hurtled to his death. Our power has increased the factor of uncertainty for us.

Impersonal

We live in a world which is grim and stern. It is impersonal. We live month after month not knowing the people living a bare twenty feet away in the neighboring apartment. We are dependent. We never before were so dependent on these very people we don't know. Our milk comes from cows we don't know, is milked by people we don't know, is processed by other people we don't know, is delivered by someone we just call the "milkman."

Flood of Ideas

We live in a world that is flooded with ideas. The printing presses grind out such a myriad of material we exhaust ourselves just trying to "keep up." Our best minds are so busy driving ignorance farther back that the facts they unearth almost clutter the place up like the mound of earth beside the freshly dug hole. We cannot masticate all that we know. The common man, in the midst of it all, becomes an even tinier confused voice only adding to the general tumult.

Indeed, our age does need God! In the midst of our naked power and magnificence, we also are quaking brutes killing as man has never killed before. In the midst of our plush, chrome-plated comfort, we look out upon a crude world wrought by our hands with as much uncertainty and fear as the Neanderthal man saw in the world as he looked from his cave—a world wrought by the native hand of God. We are a little more comfortable, but our security has not increased much!

And, finally, with all the collection of ways of doing things, we also have collected a myriad of ideas. We have every conceivable idea about eternal truth and answer to the puzzle of life. From the occult sciences and Eastern mysticism to the strictist orthodoxy, our field of choice is almost limitless. We can join the snake cults, find our salvation in a Father Divine chicken dinner, get religion in a tent meeting, or sit in stolid silence at a Quaker meeting, and each will, in their way, show us the way to our salvation.

We Gave up in Despair

We are so overcome with varied ideas that many is the man who has thrown up his hands in despair and given up. What's the use of it all anyway? None of them have the answer anyway. Why waste time that way, why not live one's life and accept the decree of fate? Each one of us has our day and when it is up, nothing can preserve us from our final doom.

Indeed, amidst all the accumulation of our culture, the institutions we have inherited and which we preserve, amidst the ways of doing things, the gadgets, the attitudes, the opinions that were given us by our fathers and given them by their fathers, we are no happier than the fatalist. We are as far from ultimate reality as were the smart Romans, our forebears in so many things. Who can say he is nearer God than was the writer of the Twenty-third Psalm? We are not happy. In many ways we are broken in the midst of our finery. We are confused, groping, we have lost confidence. We are not sure. We seek happiness in marriage and get a divorce. We seek happiness in drink and sink lower. We seek happiness in more things, or farms, or books, or cars, and they turn to powder in our hands.

Such, it seems to me, is the age in which we live. This is no more than a hurried survey and serves only to suggest the many areas in which we grope in confusion. The Book of Ecclesiastes is for our age. Everything is in vain!

For him who has found in the abundance of our time the fulfillment of life, such a mood of despair must needs come. But, and this is the vital reality that each new generation must discover, there are ancient verities and ancient truths which are filled with truth and quite far from being uncouth. When one is steeped in these realities of the Bible, the despair of the moment changes to a glow of hope. Read Ecclesiastes and do not be discouraged with the discouraging picture it paints for its answer is given in the twelfth chapter the thirteenth and fourteenth verses! Those are the last two verses of the book.

Comments by the Editor "Migrants with a Purpose"

YESTERDAY, a tramp stopped me in town and was hunting a bite to eat. I told him to come with me I would give him something to eat. As we walked the block to the house, he told me how the local restaurant follows a policy of not feeding people free of charge, how he needed a new pair of shoes, that he needed a razor to shave. On our way, I noted one of my church members look shocked at us. We got to the house and my wife fixed a breakfast for this poor man. He in the meantime told about the Methodist minister who was very fine—he was generous, and repeated his suggestion that he needed certain things. About this time my church member was at the door telling me she had given the man money to buy a meal at the restaurant. When she confronted him with this, he vaguely explained he wanted to fix his shoes with that money. I had asked him where he was going. To that he gave a vague answer. I asked him if he wanted to work, again he was vague. He was a typical derelict living on the edge of existence, practiced in the art of bumming. I was brought to think of Jesus' words, "The poor you have with you always."

On October 12, we will see certain of our Mennonite communities celebrating the 75th anniversary of their ancestral migration to this land. They were migrants, too, just as the tramp wandering from hamlet to hamlet, sleeping where he may, getting a bare existence from other more purposeful and energetic people. Yet, what a difference between the migrations of a tramp and the migrations of those Mennonites! That migration was one with purpose. It was one seeking the freedom to practice one's religion according to convictions, it was one seeking to be free from the oppressions that were threatening them in Russia. They could have stayed. They were prospering and there was room for expan-

“My Spiritual Growth While Attending College”

by Donald Isaac, Chicago, Illinois

BEFORE actually relating my experiences in college, I would like to give a background which started while I was attending high school in India.

I was baptized and became a member of the Church January 2, 1938. I always thought of the Christians in India, at least the Protestants, as belonging to one big Church. I never thought of a person as being a Baptist, a Methodist, a Presbyterian, or a Mennonite. For ten years we went to school together, worshiped in the same place, and never gave much thought to our different religious backgrounds.

I heard of conscientious objectors in India but only those who went to prison. So I thought of all Conscientious Objectors as criminals thereby feeling that I would never become one.

When I came to the United States in 1942 I did not especially want to join the army but if I would have to go then I would let them take me. Then, in the fall of 1942 I entered Bethel College, little realizing that when I would graduate I would have completely changed my ideas and would be a changed person spiritually. I had two roommates who were strong in their views on nonresistance and I still remember the many nights we would argue as we lay in bed. This was the beginning of a change that came over me which did not end until I had been in C.P.S. a number of months. My contact with the professors also helped me as I went along. Although I did go to C.P.S., I was not strong in my beliefs. I rationalized my position by telling myself that I was not a real Consicentious Objector I felt that I would still be happy when the Americans won in the battles and their enemies would lose. I would be safe, far from the bombs and torpedoes, while others would do the fighting.

After being in Civilian Public Service several months I went completely over to the nonresistant point of view. I got to the point where I couldn’t see why a Christian would want to take up arms. It seemed to be in contradiction with everything Christ had taught.

I was eager to go back to Bethel College in the fall of 1946 and start my sophomore year. All this time I felt that something was lacking in my life. I believed in the doctrine of nonresistance and Christ’s way of love. I was a baptized member of the Church and I believed in Jesus Christ as the Son of God and through whom we might have redemption to eternal life. Paul said to the Philippian jailer, “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved,” (Acts 16:31). I could say this much for myself but something was still lacking.

While getting the courses lined up for my junior year I couldn’t think of any course to complete my winter quarter schedule. My adviser told me to take a course in philosophy of education, which he was going to teach. It was this course which made me think in terms of becoming a teacher. As I progressed in my thinking, I thought of my father who had given his all for the people of India and who was buried in the country he had loved. It wasn’t long before I felt that I was being called to take over where my father had left off and do Christian education work on the mission field. I knew very well that I wasn’t spiritually ready to do the task, but one thing I was sure of, when the time would come, I would be absolutely ready.

In this state of mind I entered my Senior year at Bethel. For a month nothing happened. Then an experience occurred that changed my life once more. Every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday a prayer meeting was held after the evening meal. Jokingly, I said to a friend of mine, “Do you think I should go to prayer meeting?” She urged me to go and I went to prayer meeting for the first time in two years. I can hardly describe the way I felt as I sat there. A peace came over me which I had never experienced. It seemed as though I was lifted into a higher fellowship. From that time on I attended it regularly. About two months later I attended the weekly meeting of the Student Volunteers and I got the same feeling I had in that first prayer meeting. Immediately I became a member of that organization and took part in as many activities as I could.

Thus, my year at Bethel College changed me, first, in making nonresistance an intimate part of my life and second, in making Christianity more dynamic and powerful in my life. God’s love for me was so great that my heart goes out to those who are still groping in darkness. I must give my life to service on the foreign mission field in the realm of Christian education or whatever task God has for me.

sion. Their brethren who stayed did prosper greatly in the next forty years. But, they became migrants in order to have a freedom they cherished. They were migrants with a purpose.

The comfortable living of today, seventy-five years later, brings rise to some questions. Those people were migrants with a purpose. Can we say that we are residents of the new land occupied with a purpose? And is that purpose the same as seventy-five years ago? Or would we be as vague as the tramp about our purposes today?

I spent a summer once in New England in a work camp. One day some people from Harvard University came to see our camp and questioned us individually why we were in this camp, what our purpose was, what we hoped to achieve. After questioning us, they told us we were the first summer camp they had visited which had a purpose other than getting out of the city, taking it easy, enjoying the recreation and swimming. And they had visited dozens of summer camps for New England is full of them. This was true of our camp because we came there to help rebuild a hurricane-ridden and flooded community which suffered the loss of half the town during the famous New England hurricane.

If we questioned the members of our churches why they are members, what their purpose is, why they are members of that church, could we find among them real purpose as was true of the migrants of seventy-five years ago?

We do not propose to answer these questions for you, but suggest that you discuss these questions in your C. E. or Young People's Society. It is good every now and then to try to discover our real purposes.

The God Who Does Not Let Men Go

by Glen Weimer

God is in living contact with life:
    Quickening the pulse beat of life for his life,
    Purifying the human "will to live" with his will,
    Nurturing the tender plant of reverence in the human heart,
    Inspiring every good impulse in life,
        heart of man with redeeming love.
God stirs life to a healthy restlessness.
God awakens the conscience with new insights.
God turns the stagnant pools of life into living fountains.
As the spring rains wash the world, so God cleanses the heart of man with redeeming love.
As the spring sun awakens new life in the earth, so God infuses human life with a new Spirit.
God is able to turn life's roughness smooth,
    Life's sorrow into joy,
    Life's night into day,
    Life's fear into faith,
    Life's weakness into strength,
    Life's doubt into confidence,
    Life's loss into gain,
    Life's bewilderment into a pattern of meaning.
God transforms whatever is committed to him.
God imparts peace to the soul that seeks his face.
As the earth faithfully moves in its orbit, so God ever seeks to bring man into his true course.
As a man's shadow follows a man, so is God's love ever in pursuit of the human heart. —Horizons type agriculture village, and a reprint from the story of the Santa Fe Railroad by G. D. Bradley, and a chapter on the Mennonite pioneer by Elmer F. Suderman, conclude the volume.

Mr. Suderman has established himself as an authority in the field of Mennonite literature and writes impressively about the place of Mennonites in literature and the impressions they made as pioneers in the early days of Kansas. This little booklet is a priceless little document which all those interested in their heritage should want to possess. It provides an interesting glimpse into the problems and life of our forefathers. Mennonites, from other parts of the country will want to familianize themselves with this fascinating chapter of American Mennonite history. The value of the volume is increased by interesting pictures interspersed throughout. Perhaps most fascinating of the pictures is a reproduction of an early painting of activity inside the Immigrant House, Alexanderwohl near Goessel, Kansas. J. W. Fretz

Beyond Our Own

JAPAN. Japan's unprecedented effort to raise funds for a Christian educational enterprise had succeeded. Word has been received from Tokyo that the goal of 150,000,000 yen for the International Christian University has been exceeded by 2,000,000 yen and that 99 per cent of those contributing were non-Christians.

"Never before in this country has a fund-raising campaign been launched among the people of all fields on nationwide scale for the establishment of a University," wrote Hisato Ichimada, governor of the Bank of Japan, who served as the campaign chairman. The fact that the Emperor and Empress each made a gift of 100,000 and 50,000 yen respectively, received world-wide notice. It was said that this is the first time Japan's imperial family ever contributed to a Christian educational project.

In commentary on this unique achievement in fund-raising, Dr. Ralph E. Diffendorfer, president of the Japan International Christian University Foundation, said the amount contributed was the largest ever raised in Japan for other than a government-backed project. The money came from every perfecture in Japan, he said, and was raised by an organization made up of prominent business and professional men who gave their time and efforts throughout the campaign period.

strikingly like that which the early Christians confronted. It has got to turn the world upside down yet again. But the Church, which has allowed itself to be seduced by the spirit of this pagan world must itself be turned upside down. It must recapture its own lost gospel. It must recover and reproclaim the great convictions which belong to the genius of Christianity—the absolute sovereignty of God, the creatureliness of man together with man's dignity as the child of God, and the headship of Jesus Christ in the Church and over all things. We are faced with the threat of a totalitarian state, not alone from other countries, but in our own as well. Such a demonic state is the supreme enemy of Christianity. It can be resisted only by divine totalitarianism of the Christian gospel.

The Reader Says

Dear Editor:

Your concluding editorial on page three of the September 20 issue of "The Mennonite" appears to be a reprint of "The Covenant Weekly." However, since this has been inserted into "The Mennonite," I presume it represents your thinking. I am disappointed that "The Mennonite" should publish something of this kind which contains so many generalizations and half-truths.

The writer does not know too much about bread prices since we do not ship to bakers, but he is resident sales manager of a corporation which each day sends carloads of flour to wholesale grocers in the eastern and southern part of the United States. Each time the wheat market fluctuates by one cent, the price of flour per Cwt. to carload customers fluctuates by 2.35 cents since it takes 2.35 bushel of wheat to make 100 pounds of flour. We know that the wholesalers' price fluctuates also and that the retailers' price to the consumer does the same. In other words, when wheat goes up, flour goes up, and when wheat goes down, flour goes down.

We do not claim to be better than any other mill and know that other mills operate on the same principle. Human nature being what it is, we might like to do otherwise, but competition forces us to abide by these economic laws.

In the second place, the article speaks of the speculator as a "parasite." In view of the public condemnation the speculator has been receiving for many years, it would seem that he would long ago have been legislated out of existence. Since he is still with us, he must evidently, perform some economic function.

Perhaps you remember the crop year of 1947-1948. That was the year that wheat prices started up in July and by January were about 80 cents higher than they had been in summer. All during that time, President Truman and his economic advisors were condemning the speculator for this price rise. In February of 1948 the wheat market broke 50 cents in ten days. Then the senators from the farm states loudly denounced the same speculator for breaking the price of wheat. It is always a safe political policy to blame the speculator.

Both the consumer and the pro-

Editorials

IN TEN SHORT YEARS one phase of the life of the Mennonite denomination has been veritably revolutionized. Up to 1939 only those few young people, mostly those fully decided for Christian service, had opportunity to work under the direct supervision of the church. In 1949 some five hundred youth in our denomination had opportunity to serve the church directly irrespective of future plans. Voluntary Service, as reported in the recent Inter-Mennonite V. S. Reports meeting at Moundridge, is one of the church's means of placing its hand on the shoulder of youth and saying "I need your talent!" Voluntary Service is not adding something new, as it were. It is rather a means of making available to the church more personnel to implement the present work of the church. Volunteers have served under the Home and Foreign Mission Boards as well as under the Peace Committee and Relief work. It is giving youth an opportunity to be literal followers of Christ in visiting the sick and imprisoned, in healing the sick, in helping the poor and outcast, in visiting the fatherless, and in proclaiming "the acceptable year of the Lord."

WHAT ABOUT EVANGELISM in large, thickly settled Mennonite areas? Everyone is a member of the church or a member of a churched family. What need is there for evangelism? In the first place, it must not be assumed that membership in the church automatically makes a person a child of God. We have a task of winning those who are nominally Christian and within the reach and care of the church. This task is probably more difficult than winning those who do not connect themselves in any way with the church. This is what makes many a pastor realize that in every sermon dealing with every phase of the Christian life he must appeal for decision. Sunday school teachers will always close their session with an appeal for Christian decisions. This may not be in the traditional pattern of asking people to "accept Christ." They will dodge this by saying they are Christian. But when a pastor asks his people to accept this or that mode of Christian action it has the potentiality of producing conviction of sin and a renewed sense of the need for Christ. Pressing for the decision to forsake specific wicked, unchristian ways and turning to Christ for redemptive resources to take up the cross is the unchanging evangelistic task of the church toward those nominally Christian in its group.

BUT THE SOLID MENNONITE COMMUNITIES also have a responsibility to the unchurched. Somewhere the boundry of that solid community ends. At that point the other phase of the evangelistic responsibility of the church begins. This has two aspects. One is that of sharing with Christians of other denominations the heritage that has been intrusted to us, particularly that phase of our heritage that the Christian world so desperately needs—the unconditional law of love. The other aspect is the seeking of those who are outside of Christ and make no profession of Christianity at all and have no contact with the church. Perhaps churches make the mistake in permitting their membership to become concentrated in large organizations centrally located in a community. Ought not a given church after it has reached several hundred examine areas on the periphery of its geographical outreach with a view toward establishing a new center from which to reach out its saving fellowship? Members of the church nearest the area would form a new church. Thus they would be much more able to translate their convictions into Christian action in their own immediate area. This is needed to effectively reach the unchurched who may not see the point of driving miles or across the city to worship. But this would also have the important effect of doing something for churches that has long needed to be done in many areas. It would keep churches from growing so large that people have an excuse for being inactive because "there are so many others who can do it." It would also prevent churches from bogging down in excessive organizational machinery that tends to make a church self-centered and even proud at times.

SIXTY BIRTHDAY CARDS from eight different countries on three different continents is the amazing report on the late Sister Hillegonda van der Smissen's experience on her 101st birthday some three months before her recent passing. Furthermore, it is probable that few of those cards came from people of her own generation or the generation after her. Can we imagine anything like this happening apart from the bonds of the love of Christ that not only bind individuals but generations together? Probably more than any other one thing, the world needs people who will go through life, short or long it may be, letting the love of God as imparted through a life-transforming experience of Christ reach out in loving concern for others.—J.J.E.

Someone Should Get Him In

by Roy L. Smith

SHE WAS well-groomed and carried with her a certain air of refinement. It was very evident from her manner that she was quite intent upon the errand that brought her to the church that morning.

"I have come to see about my boy," she said. "He is just seventeen and has never given us any trouble until lately. He seems to have started running with the wrong crowd, and I am greatly worried about what may happen. I would like to see someone get him into Church School, and I have come to see if you have some young men who would try to show an interest in him. It would not do, of course, to let him know that I have been in to see you about the matter, but there must be some bright boys who can get next to him in some way."

"We will be glad to try," replied the pastor. "Do you and your husband come here to church?"

"No," the mother declared, "but we live here in the neighborhood, and the boy knows some of the boys in your Church School.'

"I just thought it might be easier to get him into the Church School where his parents belong," the pastor went on, with a guileless expression on his face.

"Well, you see, my husband is in business and away from town a good deal. When he gets in on Saturday, we like to have our Sundays together to ourselves. It is our only chance. Besides, he belonged to one church, and I belonged to another when we were married, and so we just never went to any church. I know we ought to have done so, but we did not know whether we were going to be permanent in the city—his business is so uncertain, you know — —"

"I think I have a plan, then, that will get your boy into a Church School class. We have a splendid men's class of business men that I know your husband will greatly enjoy. We also have a class of mothers, under the leadership of a very intelligent woman, that would mean a great deal to you. Now, why not, next Sunday morning, all of you come to church together? I will meet you here and will introduce you to the leaders of the classes and will take your son, myself, down to the young men's class."

"That is very kind of you, I'm sure, and I appreciate the invitation, but I do not believe we could, this Sunday at least. My husband and I have made other plans." And there was a trace of restlessness in her manner as she spoke.

"Then, why not a week from Sunday? We will have some of the women call this week, and get acquainted." The pastor was pressing the matter kindly but relentlessly.

"Thank you so much. But it was not for ourselves that I was concerned—" and she was rising to go. "It's my boy—he needs the Church School. I would do anything to get him into some Church School class. I want him to get started in life the right way, and in a crowd of church boys he has a better chance to meet the right sort."

With this the pastor became very serious. Rising to his feet, he looked into the woman's eyes searchingly. "Yes, my good woman," said he, "I, too, would like to see someone get your boy into Church School. He needs to be there; every boy does. The world he is going to live in is a very treacherous one, and he needs all the help he can get if he is not to make a mess of life. But if anyone is going to get your boy into Church School, you and your husband are the ones who are going to do it.

"You just now said that you would 'do anything' to get him into Church School, but I guess you meant you would 'do anything' except go to Church School yourself. If your boy's future is not worth more to you than a Sunday outing, then I do not see why you should ask other people to take a greater interest in him than you do yourself."

And to himself he added, as he watched her drive away, "Yes, I would like to see 'someone' get that boy into Church School, with an example in the home like that of those two parents!"—Reprinted by permission, The Christian Advocate.

From the Heart to the Heart

by Orlo Kaufman

There is only one ground of rejoicing if our rejoicing is never to turn into weeping. This ground is God, what He is and what He has done. Who cannot rejoice forevermore when he rejoices in the fact that God is love —that He is merciful, kind, forgiving, holy, etc. If this is the ground of our rejoicing we shall never have occasion not to rejoice, for God remaineth the same.

If, however, our rejoicing is in anything else, as in our newly acquired possessions, in our friends, in our church, in our work and the seeming progress of it, our rejoicing shall not be forevermore. For our possessions may be taken or destroyed. At last we must part with them. Our friends may betray us, and even though they are faithful, yet the day of parting will make rejoicing to cease and bring sorrow to our hearts. If it is in our church that we rejoice, that too will lead to disappointment, for what church shall stand spotless, having never manifested an unChrist-like spirit or fallen into error? To rejoice in our work, even though it is ever so important and we win over so many souls to Christ is to rejoice in ourselves and who, rejoicing in himself, shall rejoice in the day of judgment?

Rejoicing in anything or anyone beside God is setting that thing or person up as God. Rejoicing in anything but God is rebellion against God and will cause our rejoicing to turn to weeping.

In what is our rejoicing? Would we still rejoice if we were on a bed of pain or were our possessions taken from us? If not, is our rejoicing in God or in those things? May God separate us from anything in which we rejoice but Him and cause us to rejoice in Him alone. Then we shall indeed "rejoice evermore."

Several Workers Leave Shanghai

Three M.C.C. workers, Wilbert Lind, Robert Waltner, and John Friesen, left Shanghai on September 24 aboard the General Gordon, along with over one thousand other Americans who had been similarly situated in this Communist-held city. This evacuation of American personnel was made possible through arrangements made with both the Communist and Nationalist governments. The leaving of these M.C.C. workers was occasioned by the completion of their service terms, this having been the first opportunity to leave the city for some time. Three other workers, two of whom have also completed their terms, have chosen to remain with their work in Shanghai, though restricted in their activity, rather than return to the United States at this time. It is difficult to move from place to place within China, as for instance from Shanghai to the Island of Formosa where a number of other M.C.C. workers have developed a significance medical project. In this project the service of the MCC personnel is supplemented by the assistance of a native doctor.

Swiss Mennonite Minister Visits America

Samuel Gerber, President of the Swiss Mennonite Conference, is making a tour of Mennonite congregations in the United States and Canada, during a period of about three months. He has come upon the invitation of the M.C.C. and his chief interest as he represents the Swiss congregations, is to establish better acquaintance between the Mennonites in Switzerland and America.

He will visit churches in Ontario from October 2 to 10; in Western Canada October 10 to November 10; and in the United States from November 10 to about December 15. It is expected that he will be able to include church colleges and other institutions on his itinerary.

Personnel Notes

Paul Suderman of Hillsboro, Kansas, and Alvin Voth of Springstein, Manitoba, left on September 12 for Voluntary Service work in Europe. Edith Kauffman of Middlebury, Indiana, Margaret Jahnke of North Newton, Kansas, and Esther Eby of Lititz, Pennsylvania, sailed for Europe on September 13. Miriam Bowers of Upland, California, left on September 21 for a second term of relief service in Europe. Glenn Graber returned from China on September 15.

OUR CHILDREN'S HOMES

The children's homes in Europe represent one phase of the transition from direct relief work to that which is known as moral and spiritual rehabilitation, or the "plus" in relief work. Two of these children's homes are in France, and a third is in Holland.

In the northeastern corner of France just across the border of the French Zone of Germany lies a slow-moving typical Alsatian town, Wissembourg. Within walking distance and overlooking both Wissembourg and the little village of Weiler, is the M.C.C. children's home, Weiler or "Mont des Oiseaux" (mountain of the birds). Here M.C.C. maintains the home with a staff of four Americans as well as other Alsatian workers.

About 125 kilometers to the west of Weiler, in the French-speaking section of France, M.C.C. is sponsoring another children's home in the city of Nancy. As you drive through the city and on toward the outskirts where the houses are less frequent and where there are more trees and bigger lawns, there is a large old chalet with the M.C.C. sign out on the gate. There, too, is a spacious lawn where 30 young Frenchmen can release all their pent-up energy. Back of the house is a big garden with a plentiful supply of fresh vegetables. Here at Nancy are four of our M.C.C. workers.

Although relief work officially closed in Holland, there are still a number of workers at Heerewegen, caring for a group of 16 children. None of the children are orphans; all come from separated parents who are not together because of circumstances which occurred during the period of '40-'45. The parents of some children were German collaborators; other children find shelter because of poor health due to war experiences or diets, and some because divorced parents aren't able to provide homes.

Each child presents an individual opportunity. And this opportunity becomes a serious responsibility. Sunday-school teachers often lament the fact that they have the children for such a short time, and that the rest of the time they are subjected to so many counter influences. Day-school teachers lament the fact that in a public institution teaching is strictly limited. But here in our children's homes the doors are now wide open. The children are with us day and night, weekday and Sunday, and we are free to do what we can with them.

A serious responsibility falls upon the girl who is a monitrix, for it is she who spends the most time with the children. It is through her that they learn to grow, to become a person; through her they learn the right and wrong; and from her they learn of Jesus. It is the policy of the homes to find Christian girls, preferably Mennonite girls who will serve in these children's homes.—From European Relief Notes, in M.C.C. Services Bulletin, July, 1949.

ducer have reasons to thank the speculator because he is largely responsible for the liquid market which makes trading on low profit margins possible. If we could not protect ourselves at a moment's notice, we would have to pay the farmer less for his wheat and sell flour for a higher price because we would have to be prepared to accept heavy losses at times. In our business, we often sell flour in July which we will not deliver until December. For this reason, we need the speculator to enable us to share the risk which our trading entails.

For a more complete story of our future market, I would suggest that you read "The Grain Traders" in the August issue of "Fortune" magazine.

Chicago "Number Seven"

by A. J. Neuenschwander

CHICAGO No. 7 was the name given to the Service Unit that has conducted Daily Vacation Bible School in four centers in that city. The centers were: Mennonite Bible Mission, Happy Hours Sunday School, First Mennonite Church, and Mennonite Biblical Seminary.

There were seven members in this Unit with Miss Erna Friesen 4614 Woodlawn, Chicago 15, Illinois as leader. This is the third year, that the summer volunteer units have conducted D.V.B.S. in the city. The Board of Home Missions furnishes the necessary support so that the board and room while in Chicago is paid. The Unit sends a report or two during the summer to the Board so that we can see what kind of work and experiences they have. The last report sent this summer seemed so good that it was decided to share their short articles with the readers. Two of the Unit, Miss Vivian Brockmueller and Miss Cleva Schrag, both from Freeman, South Dakota, worked with the group with deep devotion and enthusiasm, although their article is not published. We trust you will be moved to remember this as well as other Volunteer Units and their work in prayer and with your gifts.

FIRST MENNONITE BIBLE SCHOOL

"The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth labourers into his harvest." Matthew 9:37-38.

We were soon made aware of the truth of this passage. On Monday as we began our Bible school teaching we left with a great deal of confidence since we were going to one of our Mennonite churches. However, we soon discovered that although there is a Mennonite church that by no means is an indication that the children and their parents will be found in church on Sundays.

On Monday we began with about twenty-four children. For the first morning we thought that was very good. As is usually the case in a large city, our attendance for the short period was quite irregular. As time went on, our attendance increased and decreased as new ones came and others left. Many different churches were represented. Included in these was the Catholic church. One of the teachers was even addressed as "Sister."

A program was the climax of the two weeks' work. Besides the numbers given by each of the classes, Jacqualine Lipinski drew a picture of the "Old Rugged Cross" while the audience sang the song very softly.

We hope the little bit of good we have done will live on in the hearts and lives of the children.

—Mary Ann Kaufman, McPherson, Kansas

WHAT GOAL CAN WE REACH?

It has become an accepted supposition of each member of our unit that a prolonged period with each student in Bible school would give us a greater insight on the value of our work for them. We like to think that in this period of time we have contributed in a way that these children may be capable to distinguish between a Christian and non-Christian atmosphere.

As we think of our work, we cannot see many accomplishments. Have we only taken these children off the hands of parents whose great concern was a few hours of diversion from daily routine, or was it that parents sent their child because they felt it a Christian need to be fulfilled within their child? We think of the individual child, and with what purpose each entered school and how this purpose was satisfied.

The evaluation of a project such as this can only be made after a length of time has elapsed. However, we cannot rightly say that there are no immediate results to be seen. I am thinking particularly of the little girl who felt the pain of going from this Christian environment to the broken home she was a member of. This humble child can be a messenger for God's cause and we feel she will be, because she was capable to grasp the love and affection of God through His instruments.

If we have not accomplished more than that of coming to a realization that a child with this surrounding environment, has many influences which appear more attractive than that of working for their Maker, we have accomplished something worthy of mention. The average child that we taught does not have much direction towards devoting his life to the Master. Now that we, as a unit, see the problem in reality, we are eager to follow steps beyond it if possible. Our interest has been high in the work done and we do feel that it was a great experience.

—Irene Zerger, Moundridge, Kansas

SEMINARY INFLUENCE

We have been residents of Chicago! Chicago, the city of smoky factories, clanging streetcars, towering buildings, and surging humanity at first filled our country-bred hearts with awe and a tinge of fear.

On our way to Woodlawn Avenue we see dirty tenements crowded together, children in filth and rags, and saloons in over-abundance. We have met the Chicago most tourists never see.

And here, in the heart of the noisy city we found a refuge—a tiny bit of home with large green lawns, well-kept flower beds, gracious living and a Christian atmosphere. The Mennonite Biblical Seminary and its adjoining buildings have transplanted our Mennonite heritage to a vast city and are spreading their influence over the neighborhood. It is a symbol not only to the weary visitors who stop within its doors nor the permanent residents who are affiliated with the school but to many others who live near-by.

Little children from crowded apartment houses delight in the privilege of tumbling on the Seminary lawn or playing in the sand box at the rear of the yard. Grass is a luxury here. While Bible School itself reached out to include children whose parents never attend any church. Some of these same mothers accompanied us on picnic excursions. Others, in gratitude, supervised the playground when our unit members could not be present. Who knows the ties that were forged through this contact?

Thus stand our Mennonite Biblical Seminary and the people within its gates—a living witness of God's love to an unbelieving people. Countless opportunities are beckoning through this open door if we but fulfill our part and lean on God's unfailing strength.

—Barbara Miller, Hesston, Kansas

WHAT ARE YOU BUYING, MISTER?

This question comes from either or any side of you while walking down Maxwell Street. The street is crowded with booths. The people are milling along as determined as the ones selling their merchandise.

The Sunday afternoon when our units visited Maxwell Street, the Jewish market, we were awed by the sight of it. Since everything is out on the street, everything gets dirty too. Clothes are marked down considerably, and they seem to be in a fair condition except being "counter soiled." Fruit and vegetable stands were closely related to what most of us do not eat from. The flies have free range from the filthy street to cut cantaloupes! The hot dogs——are hot!

You can readily tell by the accent that the merchants are Jews. Another assurance we had was when we turned our backs, the seller would say, "I'll let you have it for 25c instead of 75c," or "Give me $1.50 and you can have it." Hardly did it seem like Sunday to us with so much bargaining going on.

We then took a street car for a number of blocks to Chinatown. As we entered Mee Hong Restaurant there were clean tables, neat looking Chinese waiters, and quite a few hungry people (not mentioning the inviting aroma). We were told to order one 8-course dinner for two people. (Just to clear ourselves, this 8-course dinner costs only one dollar plus 15c for an extra plate, which, they willingly gave us.) As we ate a bowl of delicious soup, the waiter brought all kinds of strange but appetizing looking foods to the table. One of the unit members didn't know that the little dish of something that smelled like vinegar was sauce for the meat instead of a flavoring for the soup.

We enjoyed our evening meal a great deal. To complete our Sunday, we attended the services at the Pacific Garden Mission on a street filled with taverns and horrible shows and men dragging their feet because of a load of sin.

GOODBYE CHICAGO

Two more days—the 1949 summer service unit will have left Chicago, like all other summer units before it. The unceasing ebb of humanity in this great city goes on as before. Has its course been changed any by our feeble efforts? We wonder—. Will the lives of the boys and girls we taught be affected any? Or will they continue their games of "cops and robbers" until they become the heartless characters they imagined themselves to be? Again we wonder. Yet God has promised this His word shall not return void.

The question that arises in my mind is what will be the lasting results of this summer in our own lives. After having given a month or more of our lives, will we go back home and forget about serving Christ and others, and join the vicious struggle for satisfying self—financially and otherwise? When we recall Chicago will it be only to tell about the unusual things we have been privileged to see? However, I am sure that those of our unit that lived at the Seminary will not soon forget the dedicated Christians there who are making it an influence for Christianity.

Having lived at the Mission during the summer, LaVera and I will especially remember the problems and unceasing efforts of Rev. and Mrs. John T. Neufeld in Home Mission work in the city. They go on for a lifetime, while we were occasionally discouraged in a month. Their home is one of unusual hospitality—occasionally having a different guest for every meal of the day. We wish to thank them for letting us be a part of their home.

Last but not least, none of us will forget the children whom we have learned to love in D.V.B.S.—even the boys and girls that made school difficult for us, yet only because of the environment they are in, the boy or

by Jacob T. Friesen

THE SUNDAY school faces the challenge of evangelizing the world by winning the child. The spiritual power of a church may be gauged by the way it presents Christ to the coming generation. The Sunday school stands at the center of this ministry to the children and young people as well as in its teaching of the adults.

Evangelism in the Sunday school begins by planting the seeds of the gospel in the virgin soil of character. This is grass-roots evangelism, and the Sunday school is in a strategic position to carry this forward.

The Evangelism Committee, serving under the Home Mission Board of the General Conference, is deeply aware of the strategic position of the Sunday School. Therefore, it is again sponsoring the Annual Evangelistic Effort through the Sunday School during the month of November. Plans have been laid to send a letter of explanation to all Sunday school superintendents stating aims and procedure. Concise messages have been prepared for each Sunday in November to be read either at the opening or closing of the Sunday school session.

Pastors are encouraged to give recognition of this Evangelistic Effort through the Sunday school with appropriate advance announcements and if possible, an appropriate sermon on the first Sunday in November stressing the unique contribution of the Sunday school in the total evangelistic program of the church and the Conference.

The success of this effort depends upon prayers of intercession that the Holy Spirit may be poured out in power upon our Sunday schools, Sunday school superintendents, and the pastors in carrying forward the suggested plans. May God grant his guidance and blessings in our united efforts to serve him.

Take The Profit Out!

I spent one never-to-be-forgotten December Saturday night in a famous Ohio hotel after a college football game. Mrs. Grundy would have called what happened a "drunken debauch." Young people, some of them high-school boys and girls, became increasingly loud until at four in the morning they were screaming and shouting through the halls and in some of the rooms. At breakfast a gentleman who knows said, "You have to be drunk to enjoy it." Well, I didn't like it.

What is America going to do about this growing orgy of social drinking? What is America doing about it? Let us be specific. Here is one thing she is doing about it. Within the law she is helping to seduce and debauch her own children. By permitting the advertising of intoxicating liquor, particularly strong liquor, as the "road to distinction," she is making it look like a diamond ring on a man's little finger instead of a hand-out in a Bowery flophouse.

To be sure, there are other things that America is doing to hurt and hinder youth, but right now Christian Herald concentrates on one of the most dangerous. Liquor advertising in all its aspects, both direct and indirect—newspapers and magazines, radio and motion pictures, billboards, and electric signs—is the number one evil of the business that deals with the product that made hotel life in America on one Saturday night what I found it to be in an Ohio city and what you know it is if you get around.

Last week, I heard a doctor, in a radio broadcast, say that "liquor in moderation is relaxing." In my hotel experience it didn't reach the point of relaxation until four o'clock in the morning. A bromide would have worked faster and without keeping the rest of us awake.

Today the social pressure to drink is an all but universal fact of American life. It is no longer "You may have it if you want it," but rather, "You take it or else!" Also, American parents are entirely too careless in selecting schools for their children. There are still institutions of high academic rank where football and highballs are not confused and where boys and girls associate in a wholesome freedom that alcohol does not change into the license I saw and heard.

But do not misunderstand me. In that Ohio hotel which was so wet you couldn't wring it out, there were still only a few of the great city's many young people present and "passing out." I believe in youth and in this generation of youth. I have a harder time believing in my own generation. We make the liquor and advertise it. We pass the laws and break them. We fix the social standards and set the example.

High-pressure salesmanship in partnership with the advertising genius of a business that from its "take" gives to labor less than any other comparable industry, exploits the habitforming quality of its product straight across the board and to all ages. Today no social function, sacred or profane, is exempt. The liquor business preaches moderation too, but in its advertising copy and methods its practices every excess.

What then is our constructive proposal? First, Christian Herald reaffirms its platform declaration "to achieve temperance through education." Looking toward the solution of the liquor problem, a comprehensive educational program—objective, scientific, and adapted to all age levels—is the immediate imperative. In the field of youth we have found the program of Allied Youth most effective and timely.

But is there not another area in the field of political action that should be explored? More than ten years ago there appeared in Christian Herald an editorial, "Private Profit—Take It Out! Strategy for Dry Unity." In this editorial we said, "Under repeal, private profit is socially, economically, and morally the supreme curse of the liquor traffic. Private profit subsidizes propaganda. Private profit stimulates sales. . . . Private profit with its advertising buys the silence or support of public journals. Private profit captures and corrupts government. Private Profit—take it out!" Here is the slogan and plan.

At that time the organized temperance and prohibition groups of the country answered unanimously and sometimes violently "No!" However, some of the most distinguished leaders in the broad field of liquor reform gave us an equally emphatic "Yes!" Colonel Raymond Robins, one of the most eloquent voices ever raised in the support of law enforcement and the Eighteenth Amendment, wrote: "A genuine inspiration sound in logic, instinct with immediacy, vital with the capacity for unity . . . . It was 'profit' that repealed the Eighteenth Amendment. Liquor 'profit,' newspaper 'profit,' billboard 'profit,' political machine 'profit' . . . —and not a few other 'profits' united to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment. They have all united to maintain and extend the liquor traffic."

If, ten years ago, our editorial was sound and timely and the endorsement of Colonel Raymond Robins justified, then is not that proposal imperative now?

—Christian Herald, March, 1949.

COUNT THAT DAY LOST

If you sit down at set of sun
And count the acts that you have done,
  And counting find
One self-denying deed, one word
That eased the heart of him who heard;
  One glance most kind,
That fell like sunshine where it went—
Then you may count that day well spent.
But if, throughout all the livelong day,
You've cheered no heart, by yea or nay—
  If, through it all
You've done nothing that you can trace
That brought the sunshine to one face—
  No act most small
That helped some soul and nothing cost—
Then count that day as worse than lost.

CHRISTIAN LIFE WEEK AT BETHEL

The week of October 3rd to 7th is Christian Life Week. Dr. Cecil Hinshaw, former president of Penn College, Oskaloosa, Iowa, will give daily addresses all based on the theme, "The Meaning of the Cross" and "The Kingdom of God."

There is much stir and bustle noticable in the preparation for the 75th Anniversary Celebration and particularly for the Bethel College Booster Banquet to be held on the Anniversary Day, October 12th. This day is the College's traditional "Founders' Day."

H. A. Fast, director of the Bible department, has been released from his Bethel College duties for a period, to go on a speaking tour of Canada. He will speak at various places in the province of Manitoba during the period from October 5 to 20. He will be in the province of Saskatchewan from October 23 to November 7, in Alberta from November 9 to 17, and in British Columbia from November 18 to 28. The itinerary will include the Canadian Bible College in Winnipeg, Man., the Mennonite Collegiate Institute at Gretna, Man., and the Mennonite Academy at Rosthern, Sask.

A total of seventy voices, make up the a cappella choir for the year, 1849-50. Over half of these are new members. Walter H. Hohmann, director called the group together for the first time on Monday, September 19. Some requests for the choir have already been made, the first being for the Bethel College Booster Banquet on October 12th.

The college faculty and staff and their families had a picnic on Monday evening, September 26, in the Athletic Park, in Newton.

With the coming of cool weather the football players appreciate particularly the gift to them last year of 22 sideline coats by a donor who wishes his name to remain unknown.

The engagement of Miss Frances Becker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Becker of Ringwood, Oklahoma, to Mr. Daniel J. Ewy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Reinhold Ewy of Parlier, California, was announced on September 28. Both are members of the faculty.

FREEMAN ENTERTAINS EDUCATORS

On September 26 and 27 the Hutchinson County Teachers' Institute was held on the College campus. The A Cappella Choir sang for the educators. Dean Suderman, of Springfield Normal, who was chairman of the institute presented a challenge to the students in chapel on Monday.

Other recent chapel speakers were H. J. Brown, former missionary to China; and Russell Mast, the new pastor of the Salem-Zion Church.

The College Student Christian Association, which was organized last year, met to make plans for promoting spiritual growth of the students.

On September 22 Frances Gillman Miller, harpist, presented a harp concert in the College Auditorium. She also had charge of the music chapel period on September 23.

We feel fortunate in again having with us two foreign students. Eric Habeggar from Switzerland is classified as a special student. Marianne Stauffer from Germany is taking college sophomore work.

Elvira Voth, our music director, has organized the College and Academy A Cappella Choirs. Plans for this year include a light opera to be presented in late fall and a tour in spring, besides serving the surrounding communities in numerous ways.

Faculty members visiting Chicago include Elvira Voth, who attended the Council of the College Choir Directors, and President E. J. Miller, who is attending the meeting of the Seminary Board and also the council of the Board of Directors.

MUSIC INSTRUCTORS MEET AT SEMINARY

Marvin J. Dirks, head of our Department of Music, served recently as chairman of a meeting of Mennonite Music Instructors from our various schools. This meeting was an attempt to unify the standards and work of the various institutions and also to point toward some musical presentations at the General Conference at Freeman, South Dakota.

At the mid-year meeting of the Mennonite Central Committee Peace Section Don Smucker read a paper on "The Christian Responsibility on Meeting National and International Problems." Aaron Epp and Bertha Fast were appointed as representatives for the Seminary at these meetings. Robert Kreider, of our larger fellowship, assisted Harold S. Bender in reporting on the Summer Peace Deputation Team which toured Europe.

Another meeting was for Voluntary Service Leaders consisting of all individuals who have led units for one year or longer. Elmer Ediger took a prominent part in this work along with Erna Friesen and Melvin Funk.

Kirby Page is scheduled to speak at Bethany Seminary during the afternoon and evening of October 13. The titles of his messages are "As Christians Face Total War" and "How Can We Help to Prevent War With Russia?" His appearance is sponsored by the American Friends Service Committee.

Missionary Orlando Waltner has returned from a month in the East where he attempted to clarify reasons for the delay of his family returning to India. During that time he did considerable speaking in the Eastern District Churches as he will now do in some of the churches in this area.

MINISTERS HANDBOOK ON THE WAY

Ministers of the General Conference and perhaps many others will be interested to know that the manuscript for the long-awaited, new MINISTERS HANDBOOK is now on its way as far as publication is concerned. The Committee who prepared the manuscript for what will turn out to be the third edition of a General Conference Handbook for Ministers was as follows: David C. Wedel, Chairman; Howard G. Nyce, Russell Mast, R. L. Hartzler, I. R. Friesen, Willard Claassen, and Earl Salzman.

The perusal of the Table of Contents reveals a number of new features in the new edition. Pastors will welcome them. New forms for Communion Services as well as some additions in the section for dedication such as corner-stone layings, dedication of hymn books, dedication of a home, and others.

One of the features of the new edition will be a form for the installation of teachers, alongside forms for installation of other church officers such as deacons, pastors, etc.

Those who through long use had learned to appreciate the old forms will find them like familiar faces in the new edition; and those who are looking for new forms will find them, also, as alternative forms of service.

Exact date of publication has not yet been announcd but this book will probably take a high priority with the Board of Publication.

A HINT TO OUR PASTORS

Want to help along the Conference publications just a little?

Here's one thing that you can do that would help a lot? If your church uses a regular Sunday morning bulletin—either printed or mimeographed—how would it be to insert a line each Sunday, something like this: "Concerning the story back of the hymns used in this morning's service, consult your HANDBOOK TO THE MENNONITE HYMNARY."

This type of indirect "planting of the seed" goes a long way in making people conscious of our Conference publications.

ACCIDENT TAKES BLUFFTON COLLEGE LIBRARIAN

On Thursday afternoon, September 29, Mrs. Lenore Myers, college librarian, died in an automobile accident five miles northwest of Bluffton. The accident also took the life of her mother, Mrs. George Miller, and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. George Myers. Mrs. Myers leaves two children, Addison, a college sophomore, and George; and three grandchildren, children of George, ranging in age from nine months to four years.

Mrs. Lenore Myers was a graduate of Bluffton College with the class of 1919. She held degrees from the University of Pennsylvania, the University of Michigan and did additional graduate work at Columbia University. Her husband, Aaron, died in 1937. Mrs. Myers then taught English at Bluffton College from 1938-41, was later a teacher at Lafayette high school, and returned to Bluffton College as librarian in 1945.

Funeral services for the three accident victims were held in the First Mennonite Church, Bluffton. J. N. Smucker, E. J. Bohn, and President L. L. Ramseyer were in charge.

Mrs. Myers, being a lover of books helped to instill in students a love of literature. Her ideal was service, and she gave far more of her thought to the cause which she served than she did to her own welfare. She was one of those individuals who radiate optimism and who help to instill a spirit of cooperation and mutual confidence into a campus group.

May God help those who are left behind to carry on the unfinished tasks which she left and to dedicate their services to the ideals for which she lived.

The great causes of God are not defeated by the assaults of the devil, but by the slow, crushing mass of indifferent "believers."—George Adam Smith

Brahmsee - Rehabilitating Wrecked Lives

1. The Birth of a Project

by Norman Wingert

I could not sleep.

Siegfried had been in the office that day and, across my desk, had related to me in a quite nonchalant manner the details of his short but misery-packed life.

And there he was still sitting beside my bed, staring at me with beady eyes, lisping through his toothless upper jaw. I could even smell the stink of his dirty clothes.

"I had a very good childhood," Siegfried was saying again. "My parents owned their own farm, and it was well stocked. For six years I attended the Volksschule. Two years later I was confirmed in the Evangelische Kirche, and during two more years I was an apprentice as electrician . . ."

"A normal, happy childhood, like my own," I mused.

But Siegfried was speaking on, seated there besides my squeaking bed, saying over and over again what he had told me that morning at the office:

"I left home when I was seventeen. I was drafted into the Wehrmacht. I never saw my home or any relative after that. I learned indirectly that both my father and my mother died by their own hand by cutting their wrists when the Russians came into our home. The Russians brutally attacked my sister and then shot her dead. I was taken to Italy, and, in 1945, I was captured by the Russians . . ."

And just as at the office that morning, Siegfried's recounting of the cruelties of those three years of forced labor had blurred into a general impression of incredibility, so now again I was staring incredulously at my absent but very real bedside guest.

"Tell me, Siegfried, is it really true that your teeth were knocked out by a club in a human hand?"

"Yes, I was knocked unconscious several times, and one time my front teeth were missing when I regained consciousness."

He reached again into his pocket and drew out a small photograph. It was that of his sister. "It is the only thing I have left from home," he said. On the back I read again the words, "Zur Erinnerung, Gertrud."

"The only fragment out of a happy childhood!" I mused further.

Siegfried now left off speaking. But he kept sitting there by my bed and would not go. Statuette-like, his uncomfortable presence caused me to toss more than ever on my bed, and his very muteness seemed to pose the question, "What are you going to do about it?"

It seemed to me there that night that God had sent Siegfried as a delegate from the thousands of young men in similar straits to ask the question, "What are you going to do about us?"

Thousands of young men, uprooted like tender plants from home and homeland, mauled by war, cast upon society as flotsam, friendless, helpless, hopeless, jobless, and—yes, many of them—Godless, fertile soil for the growth of criminals and communists!

And there that night, in answer to the question, "What are you going to do about us?" was born the idea of Brahmsee, before I even knew there was a Brahmsee.

Could the Mennonite Central Committee not call together into a temporary family circle for four weeks twenty of these young men and give them some of the substantial food and clothing and loving care and Christian atmosphere which they have been so sadly missing during the last five years of their lives?

I felt that God had spoken to me through Siegfried, and I determined that night before going to sleep that I would do something about it.

Little did I know then how God would go ahead and open doors. In His behind-the-scene moves, God worked out the details of this project in such a thorough manner as no mere human effort could have effected.

The Evangelische Kirche made available for the project the use of their finest youth camp, the one at Brahmsee. Pastor Plath, as head of the Arbeitsgemeinschaft des Wohlfartspflege, offered to pay the rent for the use of the camp (about 500 DM per month). Executives of the Mennonite Central Committee gave their official approval and encouragement. The Public Health and Welfare and the Education branches of the British Military Government gave their enthusiastic support, donating some clothing and promising to send out their barber to give all the boys free haircuts. City officials, the Stadtmission, the Swiss Relief team, and other organizations gave their support in one form or another. Dr. Eits, of the city Arbeitsamt, in collaboration with Herr Neufeldt, a Mennonite contractor in Kiel, promised to give jobs to all the boys after their stay at Brahmsee. This was beyond expectations, for of the 248,000 people in Kiel, 35% are without work.

Thus, under the blessing guidance of God, was launched—BRAHMSEE!

2. What Is Brahmsee?

What is Brahmsee? It is a beautiful lake nestled among rolling hills, located about 30 kilometers southwest of Kiel. On this lake is a large and substantially built youth center, owned and operated by the Schleswig-Holstein branch of the Evangelische Kirche of Germany. With its permanent staff of four people it can accommodate one hundred young people. The year round, groups of children are taken there for Erholung.

Twenty young men having been jointly selected by Mennonite, the British, and the various church and relief agencies, were invited to spend the month of May, 1949, as guests of M.C.C. at Brahmsee. They were asked to bring with them their ration cards, a doctor's certificate, and their appetites. M.C.C. would furnish the food, clothing for each, and a personnel of four people. The ages of the young men ranged from 15 to 32, the average being about 21. The program and activities can be summarized as follows: morning and evening devotions; regular work assignments, such as peeling potatoes, kitchen service, and table service; special work projects, such as clearing out brush, digging holes, and felling trees; sports, football, tennis and hikes; talks, discussions, projection slides, and musical programs; worship services by both Evangelical pastors and M.C.C. personnel; leather working projects; and much free time.

There was a second group of twenty young men for the month of June. These were more of one age, all of them falling within the limits of 17 and 25. This tended toward a greater unity in the group than was the case in May. The activities for the June group were much the same as for the earlier, with the exception that there was more direction in the activities.

M.C.C. personnel present for the two months were Kurt Reiss, a young German, and Lois and Norman Wingert. Ruth Hilty was there for the first month but had to go to Frankfurt in June. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Roth, just returned from their work in Poland, were present for the second period.

3. Meet the Boys

(The following excerpts are taken from the Lebenslauf, or biography, which the boys themselves wrote. Special care has been taken to retain the exact thought in the translation from the German to the English.)

. . . On May 8, 1945, (notice these dates!) I came into a Russian prison; on April 15, 1949, I was released and came to Kiel.

. . . In 1943 I became a Russian war prisoner through having been wounded. I was released after five years. Because of my physical handicaps I have thus far not been about to get work.

. . . I had a very good childhood. I was drafted into the Arbeitsdienst and then into the Wehrmacht. In October, 1945, I was captured by the Russians, and (again notice the dates!) was released in October, 1948.

. . . The war broke out in 1939. Then my school days were at an end. In 1944, the Russians overran our community, Pommern. My father had been taken prisoner by the English. The Russians forced my mother and my brothers and sisters out of our home. And then a period of misery began for us. My youngest brother died at the Ruhr, and I myself was near death. My mother was taken away nights by the Russians and we got practically nothing to eat. In the year 1946, we came with a refugee transport to Kiel in the British Zone. We lost all our goods, and today we are living in a small attic. My father was released from prison in May, 1947.

4. What I Liked Best at Brahmsee

(The young men were asked to write down what phrase of the Brahmsee program pleased them most. Following are their replies.)

. . . The food is 1-A and we can absolutely not ask for anything better. At the same time it is very fine that we have an opportunity to hear the Word of God.

. . . It is hard to say what I like best, because I like everything. But to point out the best and the most beautiful—it is the daily devotions. There isn't anything better than to be with the Lord and to speak to Him. In second place is the food. Such an abundance of meals and such a great variety certainly deserves to be praised. A laborer cannot afford what is given here; how then can one who is without work expect to receive this much! Interesting and good were also the series of addresses. To explain all of the good things would take too long.

. . . I must say that I am extraordinarily happy and I am receiving an unexpected joy to be introduced to the Word of God. I would never have thought that it is so wonderful to believe in God, and to love in the manner we are being taught here.

. . . I must confess that these three weeks belong to the most beautiful period in my life, since I have received here that which I have missed for so long. And so I hope that after these wonderful days God will continue to guide me further through life, since I have had the privilege of learning to know God and to believe in His Incarnate Son.

. . . It was a special privilege to get clothing at last.

. . . I believe I have found what I lacked before—an inner hold. I wish that we would never have war any more.

. . . The food was the very best. One was able to again eat as much as one wanted, in an orderly way. The hikes were also fine.

. . . I must say that within this holiday period I have been able to above everything else to make fast my inner fundamental convictions. After the long years of my imprisonment I have been able to find here new strength and courage for my future life. Recovered thus in body and soul, I return again to my home.

. . . Since I had been here in Germany only a few days before coming to Brahmsee and still had fresh memories of the hard times in the prison camp, it was a dispensation from God that I could spend four wonderful weeks at Brahmsee. And besides the rest and quiet, could eat all that one wanted. I therefore know that it is no accident but a providence from God that I could forget my troubles. I can therefore hope that God and good luck will continue to be with me.

5. The Boys Send Greetings

. . . Through my greetings to American youth, I want to express our oneness, and to wish for a better understanding and working together of the youth of both countries.

. . . If I may be permitted to send my greetings to our American friends I will do so with the consciousness that it is in the spirit of a new inner friendliness and comradeship.

. . . As a refugee without a home and country, I greet the youth in America. My wish would be that the American youth would not despise the German youth in these difficult times but seek to understand us.

. . . I wish that the youth of both of our countries might find the opportunity to come closer together on a Christian foundation. If both sides would take this step at the same time as an honest Christian conviction, then would they learn how to better understand each other. With this thought I greet all the young people in America.

Spiritual Power . . .

Henry Poettcker, Elbing, Kansas

The busy summer with its varied and numerous projects of Voluntary Service is again a thing of the past. Some of our number who went out for a longer period of time are only now completing their itinerary, whereas a few are continuing their work for some time to come. Those who have returned to their respective places look back over their experiences with mixed feelings. Needless to say, most of them are happy. The varied experiences they have had are priceless treasures which they wouldn't exchange for anything. How the Lord blessed in the different undertakings! How the people responded and cooperated! Why, that row of smiling children's faces or that warm handclasp and grateful look of some old father or mother was due reward for any efforts expended! It was good to behold.—

Yet along with these feelings of joy came others as well. Now that all is over, the workers look back and seek to evaluate their work. Just what has been accomplished? In a few words the answer would possibly be: a great deal. With that, however, the matter does not rest. No doubt different ones remember some of the mistakes which they made, something about which they are not happy. And the question comes to them: How can I improve my methods and become more efficient in my future work?

Such a question is not appropriate merely for returned workers. I believe it is pertinent for all of us, no matter where our field of service is. At present many of us are back at school, college, or university. If at all possible we're going to seek to improve those methods and thus avoid those several mistakes in the future. In that connection, however, perhaps we need to ask another question: Is it merely the method that needs improvement, or do our inward selves need an added something which will make us more efficient?

In the world in which we are living man is becoming more and more a mere mechanism, a cog-wheel in a great machine. Involuntarily that feeling appears also to affect us in our spiritual thinking and we are prone to react accordingly also in that field—mechanistically. Yet God never intended for us to operate in that way. It's true, we as Christians are to be the channels through which He conveys His purposes to the rest of mankind, but certainly not as cold, inanimate, lifeless objects. On the contrary, we are to be that vitalizing, invigorating influence—the salt of the earth and the light of the world—which lifts men's hearts and minds onto a higher plain. Because of us, our mannerisms, our actions, our thinking and feeling, etc., the world at large must become aware of its shortcomings. Through observance of us in all that we stand for, the world must come to realize that there is something high and noble to strive for—something worthwhile.

What a challenge that is to us as Christian young people! But with that realization comes another one. To be what we are supposed to be requires more than we as frail human beings of ourselves can ever hope to muster. How then can we reconcile the two? It is at this point that spiritual power enters in. We need to become aware of the fact that the resources of spiritual power at our disposal are literally limitless. However, we need also to become aware of the added fact that this power is not bestowed upon us by chance. We must meet the necessary requirements. Only as our relationship to our Master is in complete accord with His will can He give us the power of the Spirit. And then only as we ask for it. Luke 11:13. The disciples of old give us some very striking examples. Their relationship to the Master was truly the right one and how powerful they were spiritually. The Acts gives us a very vivid picture of that. They had caught the truth and the significance of the words of the prophet of old when he said: ". . . in quietness and in confidence shall be your strength." Isa. 30:15.

We today, also need to realize just that. Only as we increase in our strength spiritually, can we hope to become more efficient workers in our Master's vineyard. Only then will we have that added something which influences not only our own lives but the lives of others as well.

ABOUT PURAN BANWAR

Our Bible school is not quite as large as it was last year. We have 43 students. Most of them are married and each little family lives separately in a living and bedroom combined, a small room for study, a kitchen and a store room. Besides this there are two verandas which they also use for many purposes. In addition there are six single girls who live in the Girls' Boarding of the Funk Memorial Girls' Middle School, and six single boys, who live on an opposite side of the mission compound. They run their own boarding using the mess hall with its provision of kitchen and store rooms. At present we have more room than we need but we confidently expect our Bible school to grow. P. A. Banwar has already been a great help as a teacher and member of the staff. There are several new projects beginning with this year. Puran has been asked to work out a simple correspondence course in Hindi Bible for the young people and mission workers who do not have opportunity to come to school for the regular course. Besides we have also planned a "Refresher Course" for all former graduates and for the pastors and the evangelistic workers of our mission. The time for this "Refresher Course" will be from September 27 to October 6. We would appreciate if you would remember us.—Christina & J. R. Duerksen, Janjgir, C.P., India.

girl that came early in the morning because there was nothing to do at home, the little child that didn't want to go home at noon because mother was working anyhow, the girl that cried because Bible School is over and we are leaving. They need love, like children anywhere—how thankful we should be for our Christian homes.

No, we will not soon forget our summer's experience, and though we may never return, we can at least remember them in our prayers.

Comments by the Editor - - - "What Do We Sing?"

These days are ones when Doodles Weaver is mimicked in high school halls and we hear that "Bettlebomb wins by a nose." A decade and more ago it was Joe Penner and Eddie Canter and dizzy music akin to their personalities such as "Potatoes Are Cheaper."

People are singing, they do in each generation. A half century ago it may have been "A bicycle built for two," and during the recent war years it was about the "wild blue yonder." Each generation and each cultural group of people produce their collection of songs. The Indians had their war dance music, the ancient Hebrews had their tunes for Temple worship.

When one of the exchange students came from Germany, one of the interesting reactions about America that came from him was the evaluation he gave American music. In Germany, any hour of the day one can hear opera or symphonic music on the radio. Here, the radio is hard-pressed to serve up such fare even an hour a day. In Germany, there are folk songs in abundance for every occasion and circumstance. Walking songs, love songs, nature songs, songs of the city, family songs, a great host and variety are used constantly by the people. Over here, the car radio and the roar of motors pretty much rules out the much singing that Europe is known for.

There is need in our country for a much expanded selection of music for a great variety of occasions. America will not be a great singing people without it. And, there is a great expansion in American music. Twenty years ago, very few people heard great symphonic music. Today millions do. Twenty years ago, there were few good musical associations. Today there are hundreds of them. The expansion in music is rapid and impressive.

Needed is more folk music. The simple little social songs and tunes that you love to whistle and any group of half a dozen could sing are needed for parties, informal gatherings, lighter sing fests around the piano.

In recent years many groups have published pocket songsters which are collections of such music. It would be a good thing for us to do as well.*

We cannot hope to change musical taste by criticizing we don't like. We can change that taste by providing something better.

jobs in the community and earnings will be turned over to the building fund. Two previous work days netted an income of approximately $2,500.00. The goal this year was set at $1,000.00, which means that each student will earn about four dollars if the goal is to be reached. The total in the fund now from all sources, stands at $188,065.75.

The public speaking department is beginning rehearsals for a play, "Death Takes a Holiday," to be given November 1, 2. The play is being sponsored by the Junior Class.

The first Vesper service of the year was scheduled for Sunday afternoon, October 9, with Robert Kreider as the speaker. Kreider has recently returned from several years of relief work in Europe. This vesper service also marked the first appearance of the Vesper Choir for this year.

Beyond Our Own

GERMANY—One hundred twenty thousand children in the Russian zone of Germany are being cared for by Lutheran World Action. The organization has recently allocated another $150,000 for a child feeding scheme. Gospel Messenger

TOKYO. About $1,778,000 has already been raised toward the establishment of a Christian University in Japan, Dr. Ralph E. Diffendorfer, president of the Japan Christian University Foundation, Inc., disclosed here.

Dr. Diffendorfer, a top missions official of the Methodist Church in the United States, spoke at the annual meeting of the National Christian Council in Japan.

Reports to date show, Dr. Diffendorfer declared, that $1,300,000 has been raised for the university in the United States, while 132,000,000 yen, or about $478,000, has been contributed in Japan.—C. S. Monitor

OKLAHOMA CITY. Three easy lessons on how to be a good church usher were given at the Oklahoma City University downtown school here.

ST. PAUL. A Negro student at the University of Minnesota has been awarded the King Gustav of Sweden medal and a $100 scholarship by the Jewish Hillel Foundation. He was cited for his work in organizing the drive to raise funds for Chinese students in the United States whose income has been cut off because of conditions in China.—Gospel Messenger

WASHINGTON. There were 6,439 men deferred as conscientious objectors under the 1948 Draft Act as of July 15, according to an announcement made today by the National Service Board for Religious Objectors.

This number compares with 6,001 deferred as of March 31 and 4,502 as of December 31 of last year. The steady climb reflects the fact that men are still being classified, even though inductions have temporarily been abandoned.

HILLSBORO, KANSAS. Representatives from the various Mennonite churches of this community met at the Hillsboro First Mennonite church last Thursday evening in the interest of the meat canning for European relief. This has been carried on during the last four years. It is reported that the needs for meats and fats are still very critical since over 45,000 refugees from the Russian zone continue coming into the American zone every month. Hillsboro Journal

NEW PROGRAM POSSIBILITIES THROUGH

Conference Visual Aids Library

YOU WILL remember that the Board of Education of the General Conference is sponsoring the formation of a Visual Aids Library for the use of the churches. Some progress has been made on this collection, and a number of slide sets are either ready for use now or will be ready in the near future.

There is considerable expense involved in setting up this library and in keeping it operatng. The Board of Education therefore felt it best if churches using the slides would help to pay this expense. It was felt that a rental of $3.00 plus return postage would be suitable. However, the primary purpose of setting up this library is so that it will be used. If the rental fee seems an impossible barrier to some groups, feel free to say so and arrangements will be made so that the slides can be used. All sets are 2x2 inch in color.

The following sets are ready for use now. They may be secured by writing Lloyd L. Ramseyer, Bluffton College, Bluffton, Ohio, who has been in charge of the information of this library.

Available Now

.......Mennonite Mission in Colombia: A set of forty slides on the General Conference Mission work in South America, with script prepared by Gerald Stucky.

Christ and the Fine Arts: A set of 57 slides of great paintings of life of Christ, plus hymn slides. This is furnished with complete script and suggested worship service. The service is planned to last about eighty minutes. All slides in this set are found in Maus, Christ and the Fins Arts, with more extended descriptions of each picture.

In Preparation

The following sets are in preparation, and should be ready about the time indicated. Reservations may be made now for use after these dates. All of the following sets are being made up in triplicate and will be available from Bethel College and also from a center in Canada, not yet determined, except the set on Mennonite churches which can be secured only from Bluffton. However, Bethel College also has a set available on this subject.

The India Mission Field: Script to accompany these pictures is being prepared by John Thiessen and Harold Ratzlaff. Should be ready by December 1.

The China Mission Field: Script is being prepared by S. F. Pannabecker. Should be ready by November 1.

The Congo Inland Mission: Slides and script will be secured from C. E. Rediger. Should be ready by December 1.

Montana American Indian Missions: Slides and script in preparation by Malcom Wenger. Should be ready for use by January 1.

General and District Institutions: A set of slides on schools, hospitals, homes for the aged, etc., operated by General Conference groups. Should be ready for circulation by November 1.

Mennonite Church Buildings: A set of slides is being made up on American and European Mennonite Churches. Help in making up this set is solicited. If you have a good Kodochrome slide of your church that we could use for two months to secure a duplicate, you are invited to send it to us. Should be ready for preliminary use about January 1.

Other sets are still in preliminary stages. Suggestions as to types of slide sets which churches would find useful are welcome. Send suggestions to Lloyd L. Ramseyer, Bluffton College, Bluffton, Ohio.

Editorials

THERE IS A REAL TEST for Mennonite churches in the present commitment of M.C.C. to place some 1,500 non-Mennonite D.P.'s While it is true that the foreign ministry of M.C.C. has not been denominationally restricted, it remains to be seen how the basic principle of providing help "In the name of Christ" irrespective of denominational background will work out when the problem is brought right into our midst. Our leaders in M.C.C. have the confidence that our people will respond as based on several isolated non-Mennonite families that have found homes here. Now, however, the unusual is to approach the usual. We must recognize that, more than many groups, our Mennonite communities are closely knit and often isolated, if not geographically than surely religiously and culturally. The temptation to force non-Mennonites into this mold may readily be expected, and we will confuse proselyting with the basic missionary task of sharing. In this situation we must study ourselves to determine what is essential gospel in our whole way of life; and, what, on the other hand, are the more cultural and material ways of maintaining our unity and loyalties. On the first there can be no question. The truth of Christ and the personal experience of Christ are absolutely essential to any unity and peace. But let us be careful that we do not make the immediate conditioning of these peoples to the ways of life in our communities the criterion by which we evaluate their basic Christian life. If we do this we commit the Galatian heresy and with the priest and Levite we walk by on the other side. On the other hand, welcoming the non-Mennonite D.P.'s offers to us Mennonites as we operate together through M.C.C., one of our most unusual opportunities. It gives us an opportunity to reach out "beyond our own" and come to grips in a personal way with the character and needs of other groups. Thus we are thrown by the present crisis into a situation where we have the opportunity of helping to answer our Lord's prayer "that they all may be one."

It is easier to use Bible language than obey Bible commands.—Selected.

LEGITIMATE DIFFERENCE OF OPINION on the matter of public versus Christian high schools has developed in recent years. Those who favor Christian high schools feel that all the Christian nurture that the home and Church may seek to instill is neutralized by the high school which is being increasingly secularized. This secularism is not only characterized by its indifference to Christianity, but also in its promotion of ways of life which are essentially and aggressively pagen. This is the educational expression of our traditional emphasis upon separation from the world. It is probably another way of saying that 'Christian" America has become pagan. Those who favor keeping Christian young people as well as Christian teachers in the public school hold that by pulling out we only hasten rather than arrest the drift of American life into paganism. The basic question seems to resolve itself to this: how far can we isolate ourselves from the world for the sake of nurturing without losing contact with the world for the sake of making our Christian impact upon the world—our unchanging obligation as commissioned by Jesus Christ and the objective or reason for our discipline? We are not alone Christian for our own and the Church's welfare. We are Christians that non-Christians may become Christian. So those who object to Christian high schools would point out that many non-Christian youth would be robbed of the impact of young Christian lives at a very formative period. Those who favor Christian high schools, however, would raise the question whether bringing this impact in a non-Christian situation in such formative years will not be done at the cost of many of our youth to the Church. Is that the job of formative youth? We have tried to outline some opinions commonly expressed on this problem. This is a knotty problem for which there is no hasty or easy answer.

IN A RECENT ISSUE OF THE MENNONITE attention was called to the availability of various sets of slides from our own Conference visual-aids library. Pastors and Christian educators ought to make it their business to keep abreast of all the possibilities of visual aids for evangelism and Christian education. This observation is based on the fundamental psychological law that learning takes place more readily if there is something for the eye as well as the ear. (And even more, if there is something for the hand.) However, to be used effectively, visual aids demand careful and thoughtful planning. Some of this planning must go into the building of the Church itself. For example in visiting two different re-modeled churches in the last year, the writer found that one had planned for a blackboard in every classroom. The other had blank walls, thus depending entirely on the spoken word. The presence of a blackboard implies that the teacher will explore and possibilities of its use. But there are also pictures, flannelgraph, and slides and films among the materials that come into this category. The public school literally bombards our youngsters with stimuli through the eye-gate and the ear-gate. But in churches we still amble along on one cylinder pedagogically. Furthermore, as we utilize these various methods, it becomes increasingly clear that these techniques must be fully mastered. Because of neglect at this point, advertising a film or slides in connection with

by Jacob T. Friesen

How can the faith of one generation be passed on to the next? How can the religious experience of the parents be imparted to the children? The answer to these questions is found at least in part in the Evangelistic Effort which the General Conference Evangelism Committee is planning for the month of November. These questions are pertinent since most of us have received our Christian training from childhood. We do not remember the time when the stories of Noah, Joseph, Moses and David were strange to us. The stories of Jesus were retold to us before we could read or write. We were taught to listen attentively in Sunday School and church while God's word was explained.

If you were asked to write your own articles of faith and you were to put down only what you have experienced with God in your life, what would you write?

In this respect we have much in common with Paul, the apostle. His defense before the people reveals this fact. "I am verily a man which am a Jew, born in Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, yet brought up in this city at the feet of Gamaliel, and taught according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers, and was zealous toward God." Acts 22:2-3. With this training and background Paul says, "I persecuted this way (Jesus) unto the death, binding and delivering into prison both men and women."

This presents a strange paradox. A man who had been taught in the Scriptures, and trained in the best religious schools of his day is found fighting against God and Christ. It is no less strange to see a person today, trained in a Christian home, taught in Sunday school and church but living a half-hearted Christian life. How can a child be taught in all the stories and message of the Bible and still fail to live like a Christian. The answer drives us to the conclusion that faith must not only be repeated by the child, it must be reborn within the child.

Dr. J. E. Hartzler recently made the statement that first there must be an experience with God before there can be a creed or a doctrine. Therefore, if we would pass on our faith, our creed and doctrines we must pass on the experience which gave birth to them. This constitutes the challenge of evangelism for our established and closely knit Mennonite communities. There are three crucial steps to remember in achieving a rebirth of our faith in the next generation.

Faith to Be Reborn Must Be Taught

Paul had been taught the Jewish law "precept upon precept" with all of its traditions. Gameliel was his teacher in the historic city of Jerusalem. In many ways the ancient Jewish school system was excellent. It assured a knowledge of the Old Testament. Stories were repeated until they were common knowledge. Ancient festivals were observed annually with elaborate ceremonies. All this came under the educational work of the Jewish home and the synagogue.

Learning the facts or the content of a faith is the first step in its rebirth. However, we cannot stop here. If we do, we fall into the error of the Pharisees who heroically defended the letter of the law but lost its spirit. "You honor me with your lips but your heart is far from me," was God's indictment. They become "blind leaders of the blind" placing the traditions of men above the commandment of God.

Faith to Be Reborn Must Be Experienced

Paul experienced a very fundamental law of life. "The letter killeth but the spirit maketh alive." Head knowledge is good but if it does not enter the heart it becomes dangerous and misleading. Paul knew the facts of his faith. He had repeated them every Sabbath, but they did not become his own until his experience on the road to Damascus. Only a personal experience with God can make faith personal and vital.

Nicodemus was a learned man who desired to know the truth. He had the facts but lacked the glow of a vital personal experience of these facts. Jesus said, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, you must be born again." Your head-knowledge must be born again into the heart experience.

Evangelism through the Sunday school is essentially providing the experience which Paul received on the road to Damascus and which Nicodemus had when he came to Jesus on the memorable night. For a large per cent of our well-established Mennonite churches this requires a combined program of carefully planned education with an appeal for definite decisions of personal commitment to Christ. Failure to recognize this need in your local church results ultimately in an indifferent lukewarm membership that lacks vitality and spiritual enthusiasm.

We may repeat the Articles of Faith of our General Conference in unison, but they have no value unless they are reborn in the hearts of each of us. If you were asked to write your own Articles of Faith and you were to put down only what you had experienced with God in your own life, what would you write? We must distinguish between what we merely recall and what has become a part of our experience.

Much unhappy Christian living in the world and also in our churches is due to the failure to make the facts of our faith and heritage our very own. Every person and every succeeding generation must experience a rebirth of faith if the cause of Christ is

Fruit of Our Mission

by H. J. Brown

Dear Readers:

This letter with the family photo comes from my student friend in China. It brings me and us all a Christmas greeting. This seventeen-year-old student is very promising, and we hope and pray, that he will develop into a strong Christian leader in the Church of China. He has a great desire to come to America some day and do post-graduate work.

Now some explanations on the picture itself: The parents of the student sit in front. The mother used to teach school. The father is a graduate nurse and for many years was the superintendent of the K'ai Chow School of Nursing. Both are working now in the West China Mission at Ch'engtu, Szechuen. The lady standing on the left side is Miss Wang Shu Ying, the sister to Mr. Franklin Wang. She is a college graduate and also took some theological and child welfare work. She has during this year gone to the Tibetan border as a missionary. Samuel our student stands in the middle of the picture. This is a Chinese Christian family. The Hopei Mennonite Mission field has produced many such all-Christian families. We thank God for the power of the Gospel of Jesus Christ that has so wonderfully revealed itself in our work for the salvation of many souls; and the end is not yet. God is using these fruits of the Gospel even in these so trying communistic days in bringing the message of life event to regions far beyond the borders of our mission field. Please pray for all our students and workers scattered throughout China! Remember this boy Samuel.

Yours in Christ Jesus, H. J. Brown

WAI HSI, HUA FANG KAI, NO. 4
(Fu Yin T'ang)
Chengtu 14, Sze.
August 22, 1949.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Brown:

Greetings are sent to you by my family in the Name of our Lord. I didn't write to you for many days, sorry. I have heard that you left Shanghai and arrived in the States safely, praise the Lord for He always looks after His children as in Psalm 121: "The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night, the Lord shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth and even for evermore." You have done many things for Him and the souls of the Chinese. May He give you rest, I hope you will always pray for us and the work before us.

Many things happened which are important to me. I was baptized on May 29. He saved me with His blood for a long time I believe and now I have things to say to Satan when he comes. It's an important step in my life. I hope by reading the Bible and praying, my spirit will grow stronger. Even in bad conditions I shall not change my faith. Pray for me.

The Canadian School was closed on June 16. Most of the students have gone back to their native countries, I doubt if it will open. Anyway I am supposed to finish my high school courses this summer, so I prepared for taking entrance examinations of the university in this vacation.

At first, I didn't know why, maybe it's according to some law, that the Dean of studies of the West China University didn't even allow me to take the examination. The reason is I had no diploma. We prayed to the Lord and tried to find a way out, at last the Dean of studies said "O.K." 2500 students took that examination with me, and I did not do very well in it. So I was wondering if I could get in. The report was announced on August 16th, that I passed. Thanks to the Lord. I will study hard for His work.

I took the examination on my first anniversary in Chengtu, and I have to stay here seven more years to finish my courses. Will the Lord give me strength and wisdom to do it?

I helped our mission's work a little in summer time too. I play the organ for the meetings, sometimes I register the patients for the clinic. I shall tell you our clinic is very prosperous. When first we began it, we had very few patients, even when I came home, twenty-five was the record, but it increased rapidly, now we have more or less than seventy every time.

We held a summer Bible school for the children for ten days. More than a hundred came and learned songs, Bible stories, etc.

My family went to Ch'ing Ch'eng (Green City) Mountain for five days, which is seventy miles from here. It is a famous place, and it's nice and cool. We took few pictures there, I send you two with this letter. We developed them ourselves so they aren't very good. Maybe I better tell you that I have glasses now, so you may recognize me.

Please greet Dr. Kaufman, Mr. and Mrs. Goering and Mr. and Mrs. Wuthrich from me, and tell them some of the things I wrote in this letter.

The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be always with you and with us.

Yours truly, your student, Samuel Wang

Leaders Confer on Marriage Problem

by A. J. Neuenschwander

It was a blessed occasion to be privileged to attend the Second Conference of Mennonite Leaders of South America to which all Mennonites of South America had been asked to send representatives. Ninety-six elders, ministers and deacons from the Mennonite Brethren, Evangelical Mennonites, and General Conference, coming from Brazil, Uruguay, and Paraguay, were registered. Rev. John E. Kaufman and the undersigned were the North American visitor to this Conference.

Weather was pleasant in that we did not have rain, but the clouds made it cool and different delegates kept their overcoats on most of the time. The delegates were entertained in the homes of the community over night, but all three meals were served at the church. Such favorites as borscht and Plummen Muss and Zwieback were featured and enjoyed by everyone. The host congregations (General Conference and Mennonite Brethren churches worship together) had erected a temporary kitchen on the church yard and the meals were served on the veranda of the church.

The Minister: Call, Preparation, and Problems

This served as the general theme for the Conference. Hans Legiehn, teacher in the Bible School, Philadelphia, gave an exhaustive study of II Timothy 4:1-22, the assigned passage of Scripture, in a series of addresses on the different days of the Conference. Jacob Franz, missionary among the Paraguayan Indians, treated the theme, "How I prepare myself to serve as a minister." This was followed by J. W. Nickel's presentation, "How I prepare a sermon for delivery." A. A. Harder was to treat the theme, "The shepherd according to Scripture," but since he was sick on that day, David Koop, Curitiba, Brazil, a visitor to the World Mennonite Conference, 1948, spoke on the theme. "The evangelist according to Scripture," was presented by Cornelius Voth. Each presentation was followed by a lively discussion period that brought forth many valuable thoughts on the subject.

The work among and with young people in Sunday school and Y. P. meetings was presented by Peter Klassen and Missionary Jacob Franz treated in a thoroughgoing manner the subject, "Working with children."

Evening Services

The evening worship hours were well attended and many came miles with horses and wagons or spring wagons to hear the messages. Two addresses were presented each evening, representing different countries or colonies. David Nickel, Witmarsum, Brazil, who attended the 1947 General Conference, spoke. A minister who had been a prisoner in Russian prisons, gave a report on how the Lord had saved him and his loved ones. Another evening Bruno Ewert, Uruguay used as his theme, "There was no room for them in the inn," as he described the development and migrations of Mennonites in Europe. John E. Kaufman spoke of the work of establishing a Mennonite home in Sao Paulo. "The Christian Home" was the subject of the writer and R. S. Seibel delivered an evangelistic sermon.

The local choir, under the direction of Jacob Wall, assisted by neighboring choirs, presented well-rendered selections every evening and on the Sunday services. Judging by the number of singers, the type of selections selected and the manner in which they were presented, one is convinced that they love to sing in the Chaco.

Both branches, the Mennonite Brethren and the General Conference, were represented at the Conference. Subjects concerning individual conference matters, were omitted. Such matters were taken up by the two groups on Monday and Tuesday, July 18 and 19.

Marriage and Home Problems of Refugees

Since the problem of marriages, broken in Russia during the war, by one or the other of the contracting parties being taken away by force (verschlept) and leaving the other partner stand alone was a common concern, this subject was taken up. It is a well-known fact that there are many homes in Paraguay where mother and children stand alone, since father had to be left in unknown circumstances. Instances are fewer, but there are some, where mother is lost or taken by force, leaving father and children alone. In many cases the children are small and the surviving parent faces almost insurmountable problems in pioneering to establish a home. The natural inclination is for such survivors to seek a partner. In many cases referred to, the surviving partners have not had any word from the one they had to leave behind for five, six, seven or even more years. The South American churches had asked for aid in the solution of these problems, from their respective Conferences in North America. Both Conferences considered the request, but because both groups felt they had insufficient knowledge or grasp of the problem, they conuld not offer any concrete solution.

After discussing the problems for some time, and after prolonged silent prayer seeking the Lord's aid, a committee, of key men from both branches, was selected and directed to bring back a workable plan that would also be in the spirit of the Scriptures. The committee after a lengthy deliberation returned with the recommendation that Christian marriage be sanctioned by the church on condition that neither of the contracting partners to the proposed new union have had any word whatever from the earlier partner for a period of seven years. Other conditions were made for specific cases, but since this is not an official report, these details are not available. There was much joy and praise to God that He guided in finding a mutually satisfactory solution of these knotty problems. All the delegates accepted the recommendations and felt this would help the local ministers greatly in adjusting the many home problems that have arisen out of these unfortunate situations.

The Conference adjourned with a note of praise and thanksgiving to the Lord for His guidance and help.

The thought was voiced repeatedly that the brethren in South America earnestly desire the daily prayers of the friends in North America that the Lord might help them in their many problems that come up constantly.

Into the Beyond

HENRY M. LANDIS, Quakertown, Pennsylvania, a member of the Springfield Church, was born October 3, 1862, and died September 26, 1949. The oldest member of Springfield Church, baptized by Rev. Jacob Moyer in 1876.

DAVID M. RUTH, Trenton, Illinois, a member of First Church, Summerfield, Illinois, was born January 30, 1894, and died September 26, 1949.

Cooperative Lay Evangelism

by Walter H. McDowell

The month of October will be a memorable month in the history of the Eastern District Conference. Realizing the great need of bringing souls into a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ the Eastern Conference is sponsoring a lay evangelism campaign. The Mennonite church as a whole has in the past rejected revivals and mass evangelism because of some supposedly objectionable features and overemphasis on emotionalism but it has been slow to sponsor any method of evangelism which is acceptable to take the place of the rejected methods. The ministers of the Eastern District are united in their feeling that this method —lay evangelism—is acceptable to all and will bring the desired results.

To assist in stimulating interest the Conference Executive called Harleigh Rosenberger, formerly of this Conference, but now a Baptist pastor in Lockport, New York, to speak to our Quarterly Conference group on this subject. The report of large ingatherings in his own church and similar results in other churches in his community brought the desired result in the minds and hearts of all present. The pastors of the Conference were so enthused that a meeting was called between the Conference sessions to arrange another such meeting where more of the laity would be present to receive the same stimulus. Sunday, September 26, Rev. Rosenberger flew down to speak to a group that filled the Souderton church to capacity.

The ministers of the Conference are by various methods finding those in their respective communities who have moved away from their home churches or have never accepted Christ as Saviour. From their membership they will choose teams of lay members who, on appointed evenings, will meet at the church for a period of fellowship and prayer and then go to these individuals and encourage them to accept the Lord as their Saviour. We feel there will be real spiritual ingatherings when lay members themselves carry the Gospel to others.

Rosenberger further pointed out one danger which must be met, that is that this method can become merely a membership drive if we do not have the real message to give. But we have the real message —the same message the early apostles gave—the message of salvation from sin by the blood of Christ. May we send forth our laity with the glorious gospel to give to all, not because of persecution, as in the Acts, but because of a desire to serve the Lord. With this message within and on our lips and a burning zeal in our hearts for those still outside the fold of Christ, the Lord can use our testimony for His glory and "compel them to come in" and receive His salvation.

You had better despise the anger that is still in your heart, it will become dangerous to you.—Congo Missionary Messenger

Our Mission a Year After

by P. J. Boehr

"HITHERTO hath the Lord helped us"! We can say "Ebenezer" from the inmost being of our hearts, because when we came here to Ch'engtu a year ago last May, there was seemingly no outlook for the future of Christian work for our Mennonites here in a so-called "occupied" mission field. But the "Lord of the Harvest" knew the need, and that we as a church should establish a testimony here in this great China's West, the gateway to Sikang and the areas of the Tribes People and to Tibet. We have seen the clear leading of the Lord in placing us in the northwest section of this city of 600,000 where we now have a Chapel at No. 25 Tung Ma P'eng Chieh, another one twelve minutes' walk from there at the old West Gate of the city, and twelve more minutes walk further from there a third chapel in the West Suburb. This latter place opened on April 16, 1949, and has been open every night since for preaching services, and nearly all afternoons for dispensary work with Elisabeth Goertz and Franklin Wang couple holding forth, of course with a goodly number of co-laborers in preaching and dispensary work from the outside, of our mission and of other missions. We feel very grateful for the fine cooperation on the part of busy missionaries and Chinese workers from other missions who have helped in preaching. We believe that we have around 150,000 people living in this section where we have been at work for the last year; and we have the testimony of other missions that we chose the needy of the city. There had been Salvation Army work in this area some years ago which was dissolved long ago, we understand.

Uncertainties

At first we came here in a refugee capacity like many other missionaries had done, many of whom are still living that way at present. We soon rented a property on Tung Ma P'eng Street which we still have as residence property. Soon we found properties for rent which could serve as chapel places, one of them inside the West Gate we've rented since October last is the place we call the Tea-House Chapel, and it is indeed a Tea-House, though the manager rents the room to us for nightly Gospel meetings together with the chairs and tables needed. The chapel at No. 25 Tung Ma P'eng Chieh has been rented since the middle of November, 1948 and soon was the regular church-chapel after repairs had been made under Brother Voth's supervision. It is well to remember that thus far all properties have been rented, with no promise for their use beyond the year's contract, so that one after the other they will go out of our hands unless we are able to re-rent. Before we had any chapel property rented we had church services in the first rented residence at 31 Tung Ma Peng Chieh, which has lately been partly returned to the owner who returned from his government post in Formosa and was concerned about his property should a change in politics take place. Hence we conceded to his wish and turned about a third of the property back to him for the use of residence with his family.

We Need Recruits

We are now there where we feel a great need for more permanent quarters and have appealed to the Mission Board for permission to buy. A local church was organized late in May of this year, when also the first group of people, seven, were baptized. It just seems we cannot establish permanent work in rented properties only, and whatever the political outcome may be in China, the Church will go on and will also need a place of worship,—"the gates of hell shall not prevail against her," Thank God! What a challenge to prayer! There is another group of around seven soon ready for baptism we feel, and so the Church here grows. There seem to be also a few men and maybe women in the prisons where some of us work, ready for baptism. As soon as we had any footing we felt the need for all-round Christian work, with students, families, in chapels, and tract distribution on streets and everywhere, and the Lord "gave the increase." We need much prayer for the work, as we are four left here, and we very much need "young blood" infused into the work here. In fact four new missionaries of other connections have arrived here in Ch'engtu lately, and if the work is to go on and grow, we need recruits. PRAY!

M.C.C. Takes Responsibility For 1,500 Non-Mennonite D.P.'S

Because of the particular need at this time for sponsors for certain Protestant DPs who wish to come to the United States, the MCC, has agreed to assist in the location of sponsors for as many as 1500 DPs (500 family units). Since only a limited number of Mennonite refugees have been able until this time to qualify under the U.S. DP Act of 1948, and since many non-Mennonites are able to come except for lack of a sponsor, it is felt that this is an opportunity to render a worthwhile service. The International Refugee Organization provides for the cost of ocean passage, so that sponsorship of these people includes only employment and housing assurance. Our D.P. workers in Europe will select the individual families, which will then be processed for migration under Church World Service organization. There will be opportunity for additional sponsors for these non-Mennonite DP immigrants.

Tiawan Medical Unit Finds Need

Several M.C.C. relief workers who were not able to continue their work on the mainland of China because of the conflict there, are now busy in work on the island of Tiawan (Formosa) were significant needs are being relieved. The work is among the more primitive people of the mountain villages. Assisting the M.C.C. workers are several medical personnel who are also interested in surveying in more detail the needs of these people.

Service to Buenos Aires Mennonites Considered

In the area of Buenos Aires, Argentina, are a number of Mennonite people of various backgrounds, some having come from Europe with the first Volendam voyage, a few being from other refugee groups, and others having been converts of missionary work in Argentina. Interest has been expressed by these Mennonite people in maintaining contact with each other through some spiritual fellowship. Ways to accomplish this are being explored by the M.C.C. and the conference groups concerned.

Brazil Resettlement Delayed

The Brazilian government is apparently not as ready to support the establishment by the Mennonites of Brazil of a daughter colony in Rio Grande do Sul, as had earlier indicated. The M.C.C. is keeping in touch with this matter as it is of concern and interest to the North American brotherhood.

Fifth Mennonite World Conference

A Committee to make plans for the Fifth Mennonite World Conference met at Basel, Switzerland, on August 15, with representatives from Holland, North and South Germany, Switzerland, Alsace, France, the United States and Canada. Tentative plans were laid for this Fifth World Conference to be held in the area of the Swiss and French Mennonite churches, during the period of August 10-20, 1952, with possibly 200 delegates attending. Details regarding program and representation remain to be worked out later.

Mental Health Notes

The M.C.C. Executive Committee on October 1 confirmed the plans to begin the building program of the M.C.C. mental hospital near Reedley, California, by about mid-November. A few additional short-term voluntary construction workers can be used.

The West Coast Mental Hospital Advisory Committee is also being enlarged in order that the interested MCC contituent groups may be more adequately represented.

a program often falls on dull ears because there have been too many programs of this kind that have been interrupted by adjustments in machinery that ought to have been made before the program began. There will be more and more opportunity to use visual aids in evangelism and Christian education. But, let's not fumble the ball by permitting the first experiences of our audiences with this method to have negative effect and thus lose them before we start. J.J.E.

YOU HAVE DONE AN ADMIRABLE PIECE of work. The book is well arranged, well printed, very informative, and accurate. It will take a high place among such handbooks and will be useful to many inquiries outside the Mennonite fellowship. I trust that a copy is already on the shelves of the Hymn Society of America at Union Theological Seminary, New York . . . . Congratulations to you on the highly successful accomplishment of an important task.

BLUFFTON TO BUILD "FOUNDERS HALL"

Oliver Davidson, who helped design the Musselman Library and made the first drawings for the new auditorium-physical education building, died October 7 after an illness of three days. He was employed to supervise the construction of the new building, and was an intermediary between the College, the architects, and the contractors. He will be very greatly missed by the building committee. President Ramseyer and E. J. Bohn were in charge of the funeral services.

Friday, October 7, H. W. Berky represented the College at the dedication of the new science building at Capital University. On Sunday, October 9, Prof. Howard Raid represented the College at the inauguration of a new president at Ohio Northern University.

The new auditorium-physical education building is to be called Founders Hall, in memory of the founders of the College. This seems especially appropriate due to the fact that it is being constructed during the golden anniversary year. The cornerstone is to be laid October 30.

President Ramseyer attended a meeting of the Seminary Board in Chicago October 4 and a meeting of a Council of Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges in the same city October 8.

SEMINARY ENTERTAINS INTER-MENNONITE BODY

The Board of Trustees had a very fruitful meeting on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. They discussed a number of questions regarding the fundamental direction and purpose of the Seminary with very basic agreements on the Board regarding these matters. In the more practical realm the Board decided to make a very concerted effort to increase the income of the Seminary during these days of fluctuation.

Warden Frank G. Sain, formerly of the Chicago Municipal Prison and now of the House of Correction delivered a lecture at Bethany this week on "The Prison System of Chicago."

The Council of Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges held its meeting at the Seminary on Saturday, October 8. This Council includes Mennonite and Brethren in Christ institutions of all the Mennonite Conferences and represents the significant development in the unity of Mennonite people in this country. Its outstanding accomplishment in recent years has been the bringing of foreign students to our colleges and seminaries.

We are happy to welcome the Congo Inland Mission Board which well convene here at the Seminary under the direction of the Executive Secretary, C. E. Rediger, who now has both the office and his family residence at this place. Members of this Board come from the Central Conference and Evangelical Mennonite Church with participation also from the General Conference of Mennonites. In terms of missionaries in the field it is the most representative Mennonite mission.

Chicago is a city of many seminaries and Bible schools. The organization which seeks to relate these schools to one another at the student level is called the Inter-Seminary organization. Our representatives this year are Elmer Ediger and Melvin Funk.

Marvin J. Dirks, director of deputation work is completing assignments in practical work for our students. The Seminary has a requirement that every student must have some practical expression of his Christian conviction.

Janet Soldner, on furlough from the Mission field in Colombia, South America gave an illustrated message of the work there on Tuesday of this week.

BETHEL HEARS VIGOROUS PRESENTATION OF GOSPEL

The main interest at Bethel College last week was the Christian Life Week program. Cecil Hinshaw of the Friends or Quaker Church was the speaker. Although he is nationally known, he attracted the individual student by his simple, sincere, and humble manner. Everyone of his lectures left a profound impression on the students because he had experienced inwardly what he said. Hinshaw, a comparatively young man, has concerned himself early in his life with religious problems and values. He gave the power of Christ a chance in his life and faces all personal, social, or universal problems with this power.

He began his lectures by explaining that the modern attitude of considering conscience as something relative, leads to an ever-growing cynicism and the destruction of man's moral nature. There is a moral law in the universe. The only way of getting to where God wants us to be is the cross of Jesus. This cross draws us like a magnet, attracting what is good in us and repelling what is evil. There is forgiveness in the cross, but also power. The cross disciplines us in our pride, our economic security, and our physical habits. The cross makes us humble.

In addition to the personal morning chapel addresses, Dr. Hinshaw dealt with social or universal problems during the evening sessions. He had an interesting method for dealing with war. If we want to be pacifists, we should go all the way. He illustrated his idea by referring to Russia. If the Americans were all Christians, he suggested, we would offer no resistance to the Russians. They might, therefore, invade our country and do here as they liked. But it would be impossible for a Russian occupation army to remain unaffected if such a mass of people as the American Nation were nonresistant in the Christian sense. Christian nonresistance has nothing passive about it; it is militant in its own way.

Many individual students and also student groups had interviews and consultations with Hinshaw.

Jottings

—First Church, Nappaneee, Ind.: Don E. Smucker of our Seminary in Chicago was the speaker for the union service held in our church on September 11. This meeting honored the teachers of the Nappanee schools. Following the public meeting the Ministerial Association held a reception in the basement for the teachers, and their husbands and wives.—Corr.

—First Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: Kirby Page, well known speaker, was at the First Presbyterian Church on October 4, sponsored by the Beatrice Ministerial Association. "How to keep out of war with Russia" was the title of his message.—Corr.

—Bethel Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: For the three summer months Marvin Dirks has been our pastor and I am sure that we have been greatly blessed through his ministry. Being a music lover he also directed our choir. On the last Sunday of the Dirks' stay, August 28, a sacred recital of baritone songs was rendered by him. On September 4 Erland Waltner, who had recently returned from his summer work in Europe, brought the morning message. In the evening he told of some of his many experiences while in Europe. On Monday evening he showed pictures taken during the summer. Those who have served our church recently are Willard Wiebe, from Lind, Washington; Max Eisenbraun, a returned missionary from China; and H. H. Dick, from Mountain Lake. On October 2 a catechism class will be started and Mrs. P. R. Schroeder will be the teacher.—Corr.

—First Church, Pretty, Kansas: During the year the Sewing Society made 11 large comforters and 3 baby quilts. 430 pounds of used clothing and 39 pounds of new clothing were packed. 56 yards of mending material, 24 spools of thread, 186 pairs of stockings, 29 pairs of underwear, 51 slips, 6 baby layettes, and 5 and ¾ gallons of soap grease were sent for relief purposes. 67 pairs of men's shoes and 66 pairs of women's shoes were purchased. 40 Christmas bundles were received and packed and 92 pounds of German books were packed and sent to Canada. At present the Society is making girls' dresses, age five, for the Oraibi Mission, as well as quilt blocks are 4 by 4 and 4 by 6 are being cut. This project should be completed by November 1.

—Lehigh Church, Lehigh, Kansas: Our congregation has been most happy to welcome into our midst the Wilhelm Harder family originally from the Ukraine, but since 1945 they have been members of a refugee camp. Wilhelm and Aganetha Harder have two children, Johann, age 10, and Aganetha, nineteen months. A house was obtained for them and completely furnished by the congregation. Wednesday evening, October 5, a shower was given them at which time Mr. Harder told us of their experiences of the last years.—M. E. Goering, Corr.

—Apostalic Church, Trenton, Ohio: Orlin Frey, a student from the Seminary in Chicago, was the speaker at the church service Sunday, September 25. He spoke in the interest of the Youth Union of the General Conference. Sunday, October 2, communion services were held. Three members were received into the church. Miss Elise Holly, life long member of the church, celebrated her 100th birthday on September 25. Open house was held in the afternoon. She resides at 616 Dayton Street, Hamilton, Ohio. Her life is a full one. She loves to read, is fond of good music, enjoys the radio, listens to the commentators and keeps abreast of the times. —Corr.

—Menno Church, Lind, Washington: The annual Harvest Festival was held September 25. The total thank offering amounted to $27,744.37. Twenty-one organizations will share in the returns of this offering. —Corr.

—Grace Church, Pandora, Ohio: On Sunday afternoon, October 2, memorial services were held for Mrs. Ezra Steiner who passed away at Darchula, India, on September 2. Mrs. Steiner was ill only a few hours with coronary thrombosis. E. J. Bohn was assisted by Frank S. Harder of the St. John's Church. Those of us who knew Mrs. Steiner cherish pleasant memories of her rich, devoted life that she spent in His service.—Susan Basinger, Corr.

—Pulaski Church, Pulaski, Iowa: Sixty-three calls were made Sunday afternoon, September 18, in connection with the religious census. A brief study of the results reveals the following: 36 families living within six miles of our church do not attend church with any regularity. Of these, 16 families have no preference for any church, six families prefer our own Mennonite church, and 14 belong to churches too far away to attend and consequently do not go anywhere. What a challenge this presents to be witnesses both "in word and in deed!"—Corr.

—Einsiedel Church, Hanston, Kansas: Instead of the evening services our pastor, Harry Albrecht, recently showed a series of slides on Paul's missionary journeys. In September the Ransom and Hanston C. E.'s exchanged programs. Ransom discussed the pro and con of religious education in the schools. Hanston's topic was "The Christian and his use of leisure time." On September 16 and 17 Paul Goering, associate secretary of the National Service Board for Conscientious Objectors showed slides of the work of the Mennonite Central Committee. During the summer months a weekly child evangelism class was conducted at the Mennonite parsonage under the leadership of the pastor's wife, assisted by members of the other churches. On September 21 Arlene Neufeld, a member of the Hanston Church, showed slides of her recent trip to European countries.—Mrs. Wm. P. Schowalter, Corr.

—Bergtal Church, Pawnee Rock, Kansas: John E. Kaufman has accepted the call to become our minister and Elder beginning the first of November. Rev. and Mrs. Kaufman and son Kenneth will move here about that time. A group of women made 17 pillows and 18 pillow slips and sent them to the hospital at La Plata, Puerto Rico, where Louise Deckert R. N. is supervisor. Miss Frances Siebert was married to Mr. Lloyd Rempel of the Brudertal Church, Hillsboro, on the evening of October 9 by Arnold Funk. Reception in the church basement followed. —Mrs. John K. Friesen. Corr.

—Eden Church, Moundridge, Kansas: On September 15 some 262 cans of chicken were sealed in our church basement. A beef canning project has gotten under way in October. The members of the local peace committee, a new organization in our church, composed of individuals especially interested in promoting the peace teaching in our community, met recently and discussed the promotion of peace teaching in our work. A committee was delegated to work out a constitution and rules of procedure for the group.—Corr.

—Gospel Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: The farewell service for Tina Quiring took place Sunday based on Acts 17:30. H. H. Quiring, the father, gave message on "What's the business of the believer?" based on Acts 17:30. H. H. Quiring, the father, gave a message in German based on John 17:13. Miss Quiring is leaving here October 10 and will sail from New York on October 13 for Belgium to study for twelve months. The Relief Committee and others helped can 107 cans of chickens, which are now ready for labeling and sending out.—Corr.

The Peace Witness in the Netherlands

by William Keeney

DURING the summer months here in Holland there has been on interesting series of conferences. They may have an influence toward peace and the principles of nonresistance, the scope of which cannot now be realized. The sequence of these meetings was also somewhat interesting since they extended from the more limited, special groups, to the broader, more general representation. This demonstrates a certain trend among most persons and organizations seeking to find a way to peace according to biblical, or at least religious precepts.

International Inter-Mennonite Conference

The first of these conferences was held at the Elspeet Doopsgezind Brotherhood House, July 23-26, 1949. It was the International Mennonite Peace Conference. Representatives were there from Canada, France, Germany, Holland, Switzerland and the United States. A very fine spirit of fellowship and kinship of direction was felt at these meetings. Different persons felt themselves to be standing at different places on the road, but all felt that it was the same road. According to those who have been working in this area for some time, such unanimity of accord from all national Mennonite groups on this particular issue had never been realized before in our modern period.

The results of this conference have already been published. Those present seemed to be filled with the sense of the historic as these various groups decided to maintain this unity as much as possible by setting up a provisional "International Mennonite Peace Committee." This is subject to the approval of the various national Mennonite groups in America and Europe, but it at least reflected the strong desire of the representatives there to move in this direction.

Interdenominational Conference

The second of these conferences was held at Heerewegen in Zeist on August 2-4. It was held at the place where the M.C.C. Children's Home has been, but is now in the process of closing as a children's home and being used for other purposes. This conference was the second meeting in Europe of representatives from the Historic Peace Churches—Mennonites, Brethren, Friends, with the Disciples of Christ also having a representative. The conferences started with the purpose of sharing information and ideas about our respective work in Europe primarily, but also elsewhere and to consider problems of mutual concern. Again, in this conference, the unity of purpose and the urgency for more effective work expressed itself. There were certain variations in the methods of activities according to the peculiar characteristics of the groups, but the basic unity of purpose was soon evident. As a result, a continuation committee was appointed. No joint action is planned except for a continuation of these conferences for mutual sharing of information and inspiration.

. . . And Others

The third conference was one in which the M.C.C. did not participate directly but was there to observe. This conference was held at the Woodbrooke House in Bentveld from August 8-11 and was a "Conference among Representatives of Christian Socialist and Pacifist Movements." About 12 to 15 organizations were represented including such groups as International Fellowship of Reconciliation, Church and Peace, Christian Ministers against War, The Church Peace Union, Religious Socialists, Christian Service for Peace, Quakers, The German Catholic Peace Organization, etc. Countries represented were Holland, Germany, Belgium, France, England, Switzerland, Italy and Austria, with two or three observers from the U.S.

The meeting was called by the Fellowship of Reconciliation with Andre Trocme of France as the leading spirit in the calling and organization of the conference. The theme of the conference centered around the "Existence, Techniques, Activities and Witness of a Christian Third Force." This was based on the assumption that there are two principle forces in the world today, the Communists on the one side and Capitalism on the other. The purpose of the conference was to seek to establish a third force, Christianity, between the two and attempt to prevent a clash between them.

> It cannot be denied that the past war has given to all those who are concerned in this work a greater sense of urgency . . . The leadership came out knowing that these principles must be based upon the eternal truths of Christianity.

As can readily be seen by the list of organizations above, they were quite divergent in their nature. But they were all based on an interpretation of Christianity, and it seemed that all the representatives present had the conviction that Christianity and war are incompatible. They ranged in focus of activity from those on the left who would engage almost exclusively in political activity to bring peace through government, to those on the right whose main concern is to bring peace by changing the hearts of men. All seemed to agree that the range of activities was between these two poles but there was a difference in degree of emphasis on the respective methods.

The results of the conference were very similar to the Historic Peace Church conference, although the long-range intention is somewhat different. A Bentveld Continuation Committee was established representing a wide variety of organizations and all the European countries mentioned except Italy. Their main purpose is to maintain contact, exchange information, speakers, etc. The ultimate objective is to establish a European Council for Peace, or something of that nature which will unite these groups organizationally, although that is not expected before 1951 when the next full-scale conference of this group is planned. In the meantime a rather loose method of coordination is expected to draw the groups closer together.

All this activity for peace leads one to ponder the present situation in Europe. It cannot be denied that the past war has given all those who are engaged in this greater sense of urgency. Those organizations that existed before the war have had a decrease in membership for the most part, but they feel that it was a cleansing of the ranks. Those who retained their peace convictions through the war had to have them well-founded for the testing was severe and persistent. The leadership came out knowing that these principles must be based upon the eternal truths of Christianity. Much of the interest seen among the young people today is the result of a search for a pragmatic method of stopping war and the tendency of the state to overwhelm the individual with its totalitarian methods and philosophies. If this pacifism does not work pragmatically, they are not too interested. And yet they seem to feel that there must be something fundamentally sound about the idea for they keep on searching in it. If they can be led to see the religious nature of the issue then one can expect that the future of the pacifists movements in Europe looks more hopeful than it did prior to the war. The various organizations seem to sense this and are casting about for the most consistent way of increasing their strength for the trials which they see ahead. It seems that unity and peace among themselves is the proper place to begin.

Preparing to Go to Church

By James Perkins

GET ready for church! This means more than the last-minute things such as putting clean clothes on yourself and your children, placing the roast in the oven and having money ready for the collection plate. Certain preparations of mind and heart are necessary. Here are some suggestions that may help you.

I. Let nothing except illness or some equally compelling reason prevent your going to your church tomorrow. Permit no social engagement to interfere. It is not enough to practice religion by proxy, sending your wife or children and staying home yourself. Show your loyalty by regular habits of church attendance.

II. Go to church in a spirit of eager expectation. Go expecting to have your spirit strengthened and refreshed. Go to seek fellowship with like minded Christians, confident that you will be helped by worshipping together with fellow-believers. If you attend church in a spirit of censorious criticism and fault-finding, expecting nothing of value, it is probable you will get little from the service. If you go to the house of God just from force of habit, small benefit will be derived from worship. But when you go as a child sincerely seeking a Heavenly Father's comforting blessing and presence, your confident faith will be rewarded.

III. Get ready for church by forgiving anyone who has wronged you. This is important. The Lord Jesus Christ has taught us that God forgives us as we forgive one another. He said to be first reconciled to your brother before coming to offer your gift in God's house. A spirit of unforgiveness will prevent our experiencing the forgiving love of God as we worship.

IV. Prepare to come to church in a humble and teachable frame of mind, seeking new truth and new light. Think of the truths set forth in the Scripture lesson or in the sermon as a message from God with your address on it. Henry Wadsworth Longfellow once wrote in his diary, "John Ware of Cambridge preached a good sermon. I applied it to myself." The best compliment you can pay your pastor is to apply to yourself those eternal truths of the Gospel which he seeks to proclaim.

V. Come to church prepared to take an active part in the praying, singing and praising God with your fellow-worshippers. Some attend church as mere onlookers or spectators, seeking to be entertained by the music or the sermon. But this is not the spirit of true worship which means lifting one's heart and soul with others to God in prayer and adoration.

VI. Go to church prepared to act upon and to put into practice those truths of the Christian life which you will hear proclaimed. Go not merely as a hearer but as a doer. In this way you will be a true follower of the Master who said, "Everyone therefore that heareth these words of mine, and doeth them, shall be likened unto a wise man, who built his house upon the rock."—Arizona Republic.

Young Elder Serves in S. A.

Our citizens have long wished to have a teacher from our own North America in our midst, who would be active in educating and enlightening our youth. We found such a one some time ago in the person of Elder J. W. Nickel from Canada. His main field of labor was supposed to be the new Volendam colony. But because the necessary room was at first lacking he decided to offer a four-month Bible course in Friesland. Young people of 17 and above were permitted to enroll. This was something quite new for us. Sixteen were on hand for the opening. Unfortunately there were only girls this time. It is hard to say just why no young men wished to participate. One reason is definitely the difficult economic situation, but is that the only one?

The Bible School instruction was given in the forenoon here at the Central. There was hardly any room for it in our Central school so another room had to be located and one was found with Mr. John Görzen. Instruction was arranged to parallel that of the Central School so that Elder J. W. Nickel could exchange several courses with the teachers of the Central School. In addition to these Bible courses in the forenoon, Elder Nickel also offered a Bible course once a week in the evening, which was planned for ministers, Sunday School teachers and taechers, and also singing instruction for Men's Chorus, once a week. I believe that Bible students, ministers and singers all derived great benefit from these courses. And all the citizens of Friesland learned to respect, appreciate and love Elder Nickel, especially those who came into closer contact with him.

On July 10, 1949 closing exercises for these four months' courses were held in the Central school. For this event we had visitors from the U.S.A.; Elder A. J. Neuenschwander and Elder John E. Kaufman; the latter has worked for two years among the Mennonites in Brazil. Both were en route to Fernheim for the Ministerial Conference.

That we liked the closing exercises was proved by the large attendance, for our school could hold only a little over half of the visitors. Elder J. W. Nickel is now going to Volendam for four months in order to conduct similar courses there. We wish him God's blessings in his work there, and hope very much that he will return next year to serve us in this way, or even stay a whole year if possible. We say a sincere "Thank You" to Elder Nickel and to all who helped make it possible for him to work here.

Which?

There are two ways of beginning the day—with prayer, or without it. You begin the day in one of these two ways. Which?

There are two ways of spending Sunday—idly or devotionally. You spend Sunday in one of these two ways. Which?

There are two classes of people in the world—the righteous and the wicked. You belong to one of these two classes. Which?

There are two great rulers in the universe—God and Satan. You are serving under one of these two great rulers. Which?

There are two roads which lead through time to eternity—the broad and the narrow road. You are walking in one of these two roads. Which?

There are two deaths which people die—some die "in the Lord" and others die "in their sins." You will die one of these two deaths. Which?

There are two places to which people go—Heaven or Hell. You will go to one of these places. Which?

Ponder these questions. Pray over them. May the issue be your salvation from "the wrath to come."

Why God's Work Must Be Supported By God's People

"An Illinois business man took a dollar bill, pinned a piece of paper to it, asking everybody who spent the money to write down what it was for, and send it back into circulation for two weeks. At the end of the time it came back with the following story:

It was spent five times for salary.
It was spent five times for tobacco.
It was spent five times for cigarettes.
It was spent three times for candy.
It was spent twice for haberdashery.
It was spent three times for meals.
It was spent once for automobile parts.
It was spent once for groceries.
It was spent once for washing.
It was spent twice for shaves.
It was spent once for toothpaste.

"God never had a chance with that dollar.

"There are millions of other dollars that never touch the offering plate in church. Who comes first in life—God or self?"—Congo Missionary Messenger

Seminary Survey of Service

A recent survey of the placement of our nine graduates of 1949 reveals that the preaching ministry leads with five, missions two, with teaching and graduate work, one each. The preaching ministry includes Robert W. Hartzler, Eight Street Church, Goshen, Indiana; Esko W. Loewen, Topeka, Indiana Mennonite Church; Irvin E. Richert, Salem Church, Dalton, Ohio; Maynard Shelly, First Mennonite Church, Allentown, Pennsylvania. The missionaries are David L. Habegger, the Montana Indian Field, Busby, Montana; and Orlando Waltner scheduled to return for his second term in the Central Provinces of India. Benno Toews is Professor of Biblical Theology at the Canadian Mennonite Bible College, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada, and Jacob D. Goering is planning a doctrate at the University of Chicago in connection with his professional plans for a career in counselling and the teaching of courses in psychology and personality. This placement is fairly ideal with the weight in the local congregation and yet with men going into the total life of the Conference.

In every Chicago synagogue and temple the singing of ancient hymns started Friday September 23 at Sunset when 350,000 members of the Jewish faith in Chicago start celebrating Rosh Hashama the Jewish New Year. Let us pray that the Seminary might be used to show an attitude of love to these Hebrew children and to witness concerning the stupendous fact that Jesus truly is the Christ the Messiah foretold in Old Testament prophecy.

The offices of the Congo Inland Mission are now located here, and Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Rediger have moved into one of our apartments. Meanwhile the Orland Waltner family is with us undergoing an unexpected delay on their return to India.

We are happy to welcome Andre Goll our first student exchange student from France. He is a member of the Montbeliard Church and his address is Dampierre les Bois Daubs, France. A co-worker of Pierre Witmer, well-known in the states because of his participation in the recent World Conference, Andre Goll has had preaching and evangelistic experience as well as study in a French Bible Institute.

DR. HOHMANN'S ANTHEMS PUBLISHED RECENTLY

Hall and McCreary company of Chicago has recently published two anthems composed by Dr. Walter H. Hohmann. Both numbers are somewhat difficult for untrained choir groups, but are excellent selections for organized church group renditions.

"Jesus Put Forth His Hand," based on Matt. 14, tells of Jesus walking on the water. Dr. Hohmann's "Wind in the Pines" was sung from the original score by the college a cappella choir last year. Through portrayal of a storm in the forest, the power of the Creator and His care for His own are told in song.

Dr. Hohmann's numbers will undoubtedly be well received by musicians because of the excellent work done in the composition of them.—Bethel Collegian to triumph. Loyalty to Christ and the church must spring from inner desires and motivation which issue from a personal experience.

Faith to Be Reborn Must Be Lived

Following Paul's Damascus experience we observe that "straightway he preached Christ in the Synagogues, that he was the Son of God, but all that heard him were amazed, and said; is not this he that destroyed them which called on this name in Jerusalem, and came hither for that intent? But Paul increased the more in strength, and confounded the Jews which dwelt at Damascus, proving that this is very Christ." Acts 22:20-22.

Here is a man who had first learned the facts of his faith, then had a personal experience with God which made them his own, and now he was living this newly experienced faith before the people, and we are told that all were amazed. The whole world would be amazed if we would follow Paul's example. There is no substitute for a personal experience with God. Jesus said to Nicodemus, "You must be born again," even with his training and background. You know the facts but you need to have them made your own.

The greatest danger to our faith and heritage lies in being satisfied to repeat the words of our distinctive doctrines without reliving the experience which brought them into being. A faith is reborn when its facts have been learned, its spirit and person made our own, and its message lived before men.

Evangelism through the Sunday School must embrace these three steps if it is to win its own membership as well as the unchurched to Christ.

"The use of tax money in preparation for war completely overshadows the consideration of the manner in which taxes are obtained. If one favors paying taxes, no matter for what they are asked . . . . he may just as well favor conscription which is equally democratic in its impressment of men."

When the budgets for this year were prepared, the various committee and board members were conscious of the fact that the total receipts for 1948 were over $200,000 less than the preceding year. Therefore, the total budgets, as adopted for 1949, were reduced nearly $200,000. Can our various boards, especially our Foreign Mission, Home Mission and relief Board, reduce their aid on the fields of service below their budget estimates? You will notice that these three boards have by far the largest portion of the total budget. Dare we ask our workers and missionaries to curtail their activities? Dare we tell our needy brethren that we cannot give them help? How can we send out more missionaries to meet the calls for additional workers?

"Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest" that we may all work together to help those in need of spiritual and material aid.

Respectfully submitted,
A Theodore Mueller, Office Manager

WHEN I HAVE TIME

When I have time, so many things I'll do
To make life happier and more fair
For those whose lives are crowded now with care
I'll help to lift them from their low despair
When I have time.

When I have time, the friend I love so well
Shall know no more these weary, toiling days;
I'll lead his feet in pleasant paths always,
And cheer his heart with words of sweetest praise,
When I have time.

When I have time—the friend you hold so dear
May be beyond the reach of all your sweet intent;
May never know that you so kindly meant
To fill his life with sweet content—
When you have time!

Now is the time! Ah, friend, no longer wait
To scatter loving deeds and words of cheer
To those around whose lives are now so drear.
They may not meet you in the coming year—
Now is the time! —Anonymous

OVER FOUR HUNDRED YEARS since Martin Luther's nailing of the 95 theses on a church door in Germany in October, 1517, have served to show that some of the half-truths sown at the time of the Reformation can only bear the terrifying fruits of strife and catastrophe. Of course, the world needed desperately to recover the basic Christian doctrine of justification by faith alone, apart from any accumulation of righteousness on man's part. But Luther wrote "faith" so large on the page that he had no room left to write that we are "God's workmanship (as saved by grace) created unto good works." He was so convinced of the absolute inadequace of man apart from Christ that he had no confidence even in the man "in Christ." Of course, we can understand if a man grows up in a tradition freighted with the emphasis on action and works, that he can very easily react with just as heavy an emphasis upon relationship as over against action. And it seems that the Protestant church as a whole has followed Luther in this heresy—including a large segment of Mennonites. The Anabaptist or early Mennonite vision, on the other hand, which was eclipsed by persecution for some two hundred years, has always insisted that any existing relationship with Jesus Christ commonly called salvation is meaningless unless it is expressed by a Christ-like life. This is the other side of the great Reformation truth, "the Universal Priesthood of the Believers"—a truth that stressed the fact that each individual has direct access to God through Christ rather than indirect access through human priests. The recovery of this truth was of signal value in the purification of the Gospel. But somehow most of the reformers forgot that the doctrine "each man his own best priest" involved a great responsibility. Man's new relationship to God inevitably implies new responsibility. This new responsibility may be called "the universal prophethood of the believers." Any presentation of the Gospel that concerns itself exclusively with getting man's relationship to God right at the expense of presenting the radical implications of that relationship in a changed life and a life of service is a dangerous half truth the fruit of which is nominal Christians with unconverted lives. The Reformation did only half the job. Reformation Sunday should be a trumpet call to finish the job with the doctrine, "the universal prophethood of the believers."—J. J. E.

> Is there a church in America which calls itself fundamental which has not sent forth more of its money and more of its men to kill sinners than it has to bring them the power of the Gospel?—Carl M. Lehman in the Mennonite Adult Quarterly.

WHEN IS A CONFERENCE a success? When it finishes its business on schedule? When there have been no serious "tangles"? These are some of the questions that come to the mind of one who was on the Program Committee planning for and helping steer the recent Western District Conference session. First and foremost, the quality of a conference must be judged in the light of the times in which it meets. There was a time in the history of our church when the very realization of the fact of a conference in itself could mean a tremendous success. After over fifty conference sessions, however, the mere gathering of delegates to listen to reports and pass resolutions may have no significance or possibly even negative significance. When we look at the world at large, the context for any conference, we see not only corruption and disorder but perversion. The foundations of the home are tottering. Lust is further taking its toll in the smashing of personalities by way of the appetites. Greed is taking its toll in the lives of men sacrificed on the pagan altar of war. The devil is doing big business while we have conferences. Of course, we were made aware of many of these conditions and resolutions were passed. But on looking back, one wonders whether there was that deep stirring of conviction, that deep sense of repentance, and that renewed decision and dedication that ought to mark the life of the Church in such catastrophic times. One has the feeling that there is needed a revival of evangelistic fervor—that must inevitably accompany the Gospel which claims to have the answers to the needs of even our super-troubled modern world. Evangelistic movements that do not ask for complete transformation of life and non-Christian "isms" are attracting the masses because they have fervor and devotion to their cause. Let the true Church descend from its conference tables to its knees and then rise up and proclaim the healing, redeeming Gospel.

Three outstanding medical authorities, Leo Alexander, M.D., Merrill Moore, M.D., and Abraham Myerson, M.D., have suggested the following label for bottles containing alcoholic beverages:

Directions for Use: Use moderately and not on successive days. Eat well while drinking and if necessary supplement food by vitamin tablets, if drinking.

Warning: May be habit-forming. Not for use by children. If this beverage is indulged in immoderately, it may cause intoxication (drunkenness), later neuralgia (neuritis) and serious mental derangement such as delirium tremens and other curable and incurable mental diseases, as well as kidney and liver diseases. . . . . the Government should stop treating the alcoholic-beverage industry as a "Special Privilege" industry and . . . require all advertising . . . to comply with . . . regulations governing the advertising of other products.—United Evangelical Action.

The Price of Survival

by Elton Trueblood

IF THE TRUTH IS TO BE TOLD we must admit that many in America are deeply disturbed by the immense success of the Roman Church in our country. Many who have heretofore assumed, without argument and without doubt, that ours is a Protestant country have begun to wonder; and among these are some who are deeply worried.

It is not a subject about which men talk easily or like to talk, but it cannot be denied that there are profound misgivings. These are increased by the obvious fact that many middle-sized American cities often provide more actual attenders, in a given week, at two or three Roman Churches than they provide at fifteen or twenty Protestant churches of all types and shades. If we are honest we admit that it is now a common sight for Roman churches to be crowded while it is an uncommon sight for Protestant churches to be crowded.

Having observed this phenomenon in many parts of our country, I have come to what seems to me a very important practical conclusion. My conclusion is that this shift in relative popularity comes not primarily from any strength in Romanism, though it has elements of strength, but rather from the weakness of Protestantism. Our tendency is to blame the Romans, to accuse them of being overagressive, but it is far more intelligent to blame ourselves. In any case that is a point about which there is something we can do.

My personal observation is that, in nearly all cases of the transfer of alleged Protestants to Rome, there has been no conversion at all. These people who are attracted to Rome were not real Protestants, but were pagans or exhibitors of the conventional religion of our day, which limits itself to weddings, funerals, and Easter. These people were easy marks for the vigorous Roman evangelists because they were essentially empty and, feeling the natural futility of their position, grasped frantically at something which seemed positive and real. This is particularly true of those of high station among whom the loss of a sense of meaning in life is often most vivid.

I am not dealing now with those transfers of loyalty which arise from the pressure brought to bear in the experience of mixed marriages. I am thinking instead of the firm and voluntary adoption of a faith. The point is that this is seldom a shift from one faith to another, but rather a shift from nothing to something. Why blame the Roman Catholic evangelists? They are merely occupying an empty field. It is not their fault, but ours. A prominent Roman Catholic enthusiast in Britain told me frankly that the chief reason for the success of their movement in that country was the decay of non-conformity.

Build a New Reformation

Instead of wasting our breath accusing others of being over-aggressive, we have a clear line of duty in occupying the empty field ourselves and building up a positive faith in the millions whose membership is now merely nominal. Our line of attack is not to malign our competitors but to get at the job. Our task is to rediscover the glory of our own potential position and lead our people in a new Reformation.

This will not come about by anything as easy as putting on clerical collars or otherwise copying a priestly position, which is clearly a departure from essential Christianity. It will come rather by rediscovering the glory of a faith that lies in the main stream of Christian history because it seeks to be loyal to first century Christianity which was so miraculously successful in the ancient world. It will come, not by copying others, but by loyalty to our own essential genius.

There is a kind of religion which can catch the attention of distraught men and women, and this is lay religion. The original Reformation was a movement in the general direction of lay religion, but the sixteenth century leaders did not have the necessary courage or insight to follow their own development to its logical conclusion. They spoke, and rightly, of the priesthood of the believer, but, if they had seen more fully the meaning of their own movement, they would have announced, in addition, "the prophethood of the believer," and they would have put it into actual practice.

Minister Puts on the Show

I am not surprised that millions of people are disgusted with the average church as they find it today. There are, indeed, wonderful churches, and I have seen some of them, but I am afraid they are exceptions, even though there are brave and loyal individuals in almost all churches.

Too often the Protestant church is clergy-centered, in a more striking way than the Roman church is, though we might have supposed that our tradition would have saved us from this. In most churches it is still true that the people do very little except to sit in the pews and make financial contributions. The minister, with the help of the choir, puts on the show while the people sit and watch or listen, and then he retires to the other end of the building while the members of the "audience" tell him how well he performed. Quite seriously, this is not a parody, and I am ready to show countless examples of this situation to anyone who thinks it is a parody.

If a congregation were a society of praying, preaching, sewing, evangelizing Christians there might be growth all along the line in ways of which we cannot now even dream. But a church organized along these lines might be so different from the conventional suburban church you now know that you might not ever recognize it.

Unless we are to go into a steady decline, we must have a sharp reversal in our procedure. A clergyman's religion is bound to fail and is already failing. The real alternative is not a priestly religion with a hierarchy, "princes of the church," and claims to secular power. The real alternative is the gathered group of humble and faithful followers of the Lord Jesus Christ, all of whom are seeking to be His ambassadors in the modern world. This is lay religion, and this is what Jesus left as His corporate witness.

If the Protestant church were to rediscover the glory of its own position it could startle the world again as it did four hundred years ago. We must make ourselves into a new "Jesus Society" to recover the lost provinces. But this will not be done just by decorating the Sunday service a bit, or even by putting in a divided chancel, or providing seminary courses in church management. It will come only if we arrive at a radically altered conception of our total task and a radically altered meaning of a Christian society. If we can form a Christian society in which all members recognize themselves as recruits for an aggressive enterprise in forwarding the total Gospel, we may begin to see a new day, and quickly. The crucial change is from attender or observer to participator or evangelist. Whenever any Protestant church takes so seriously its meaning that it begins to expect all of its members to be volunteers in an active program of continual recruitment, it will not need to fear any more the supposed over-aggressiveness of the Roman Church.

From the Mission Front

Indian Mission Retreat at Flagstaff

IT WAS indeed an occasion long to be remembered—the first Bible camp we had for Hopi girls, from July 11-16, 1949. We were very happy that Albert Jantzen could be our special speaker and we would not forget all the kind help Mrs. Jantzen gave. Then too, we were fortunate in getting Dora Peshlakai to cook for us. She used to cook for the Southwest Bible and Missionary Conference. The Henry Kliewers were in charge of the camp and did things very well. We want to say a word of appreciation too, for the help that was given by Dora Reimer, Aganetha Penner, and Ruby Enns. They were Counselors for the girls.

The rising bell sounded at 6:30 a.m. The first morning some of the girls were ready to get up at 5:15 a.m., but after a few days 6:30 seemed rather early. Breakfast was served at 7 a.m. At the tables we had our devotions for which we memorized Psalm 121. We usually sang choruses at mealtime. The girls enjoyed this very much. Then six girls washed dishes. They all had an opportunity to do them by taking turns. At 9 a.m. the morning classes started. They all studied the "House of Life" comparing the different rooms to parts of our life and how we should take the Lord into all of them. These classes ran till almost 11:30 at times with the handwork and all. After that Mr. Jantzen had about half an hour for studying the Gospel of John with them. Then followed the noon meal.

After about an hour's time for resting, Mr. Kliewer took them on a little recreational tour in the truck. One afternoon we all went to Flagstaff. We had a counselor for every five or six girls. It was interesting to note that they all wanted to go to more or less the same place—the dime store. There they bought small jewelry and candy. They all seemed to have a little spending money. Three little girls bought dark glasses just for fun. Supper was served at 5:30. As soon as the dishes were done, the bell rang for the evening evangelistic service when Rev. Jantzen again spoke. Half an hour after the service was over, it was "lights out."

We had hoped to have 50 girls, but only 27 came. The Lord, however, does not look at numbers and certainly showered us with blessing. The whole camp seems to have been a miracle. It looked rather impossible at times, but we could see His hand very definitely. Four girls professed faith in Christ as their Saviour. There may have been others, but we'll let Him be the judge. We had girls from five different villages. I was a bit afraid they might not mingle so well, but they all say they enjoyed it very much.

Do we really take the Lord at His word when He says one soul is worth more than the whole world? Then "let us rejoice and be exceeding glad" for those who have professed faith in Christ and forget the little sacrifices we might have had to make to make this camp possible.

Pictures below show the group at the Bible Camp Retreat at Flagstaff. First, standing before the dining hall, second, a group of the older girls, and third, the campers with mountains in the background. 8729

Processing of Mennonite Refugees Proceeds Again

AKRON, PENNSYLVANIA. — Word has been received that 293 Russian Mennonite refugees bound for Canada are among the passengers aboard the Samaria which was due to sail from Bremerhaven on October 13. Of this group, 226 are coming under the farm-labor program, and 57 have close relatives in Canada. These have all been screened by the I.R.O. and have been declared I.R.O. eligibles. It is encouraging that the processing of Mennonite refugees has again recommenced after some delay.

Currency Devaluation May Affect Paraguay

The country of Argentina has recently devaluated its currency, following a course similar to that taken by England. Since the economy of Paraguay is closely connected with that of Argentina, it is thought that a similar currency adjustment may take place there. In practice such devaluation causes the country to receive a proportionately higher dollar return for exports; but it also often results in higher prices within the country for imported items. Just as devaluation has affected the M.C.C. relief work in various foreign fields, it will also have an effect in Paraguay.

Progress in Tool Distribution

Several months ago substantial shipments of contributed agricultural equipment were sent from Canada and the United States, to Paraguay for distribution among the Mennonite immigrants. Since that time further shipments have been held until the workers on the field were able to specify the items for which there is the most immediate need. Nearly all of the contributed equipment will be usable, but the order in shipping the various types of items must be evaluated carefully in view of the immediate needs, and the availability of funds for shipping. Several congregations have made helpful contributions to provide additional funds for this movement of tools to South America.

Michael Horsch Passes Away

The following cablegram was received on October 12: MICHAEL HORSCH PASSED AWAY STROKE. Brother Horsch was a well-known leader among the Mennonites of Germany, and was instrumental in forming the organization Christenpflicht which has been very helpful in the distribution of M. C. C. relief materials in the American Zone of Germany.

Statement on Heifer Project

The Heifer Project, a relief effort sponsored during the past few years by various church groups, is still interested in supplying good dairy stock to needy countries, particularly Germany. Anyone desiring to contribute heifers to this cause should write to the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Penna., for further details.

Persons having beef animals to contribute should also contact the M.C.C. office or their local relief committee for information on the M.C.C. meat canning program for this year.

Voluntary Service Notes

Assignments for the volunteers enrolled in the sixth M.C.C. Orientation Class are as follows: Neale Sider and Lorne Ruegg to Gulfport, Mississippi; Merlin and Delores Harms, Anne Funk and Helene Neufeld to Industrial Home School Annex, Washingtn, D. C.; Menno Gaeddert to National Training School, Washington; Ray Harnly and Warren Fuller to Topeka State Hospital, Kansas; Vernon Schroeder to Relief Warehouse work at Akron, Pa.; Charles Rickert to Brook Lane Farm; and Kay Wiens to Cuauhtemoc, Mexico.

AMERICAN FREEDOM AND CATHOLIC POWER
By Paul Blanshard. Beacon Press, Boston, $3.50

THIS is the most penetrating analysis of the enormous power exercised by the Roman church that has appeared in our time. The author deals with this power in its two aspects—public affairs and the private lives of the faithful. He shows how the hierarchy has intimidated the makers and administrators of law and the molders of public opinion. And with amazing frankness he shows how the hierarchical priesthood exploits the devotion of the faithful. The Catholic problem is still with us, says Mr. Blanshard. "Essentially the Catholic problem in America is what to do with the hierarchy of the Roman church. The American Catholic people have done their best to join the rest of America, but the American Catholic hierarchy . . . has never been assimilated. It is still fundamentally Roman in its spirit and directives. It is an autocratic moral monarchy in a liberal democracy." While the church's claims of numerical growth in recent decades may be discounted, its tremendous growth in power is indisputable. It holds the organs of public opinion in a tight censorship and presents legislatures and executives with the dilemma of supporting Catholic interests or losing the Catholic vote. All this public power is based upon the power exercised by the priesthood over the Catholic people. The author's knowledge of the working of this system is phenomenally intimate. The documentation, mostly from Catholic authorities; makes his case invulnerable. Every Protestant minister simply must have this book. It may be hard to get. The book trade will not exploit it, and it is unlikely that the general press will even review it. But your bookstore will order it from the publisher.

PANNABECKER PRESENTS SEMINARY CONCERNS

The music teachers of the various Mennonite schools who met here were W. H. Hohmann, Bethel College, David Suderman, Bethel College; Russell Lantz, Bluffton College; Marvin J. Dirks, Mennonite Biblical Seminary; John R. Konrad, Winnipeg Bible College; Mr. Paetkau, Rosthern Junior College; and Elvera Voth, Freeman Junior College.

Just before the prayer meeting this week President Pannabecker shared with the student body and the Central Conference ministers some of the special problems and needs of the school at this time. Along with other institutions Mennonite Biblical Seminary has had decreased income in the last five months. The Board of Trustees has sought to enter the financial needs of the school by a more vigorous program of solicitation and special letters to supporters of the school. The newly appointed full-time field secretary, Andrew R. Shelly, of Kitchener, Ontario, will not be ready for total service until January 1, 1950. He also shared his concern that the teaching of the school would be thoroughly Biblical and meaningful to our students as well as the members of our local congregation. The address touched upon our affiliated relationship with Bethany Biblical Seminary and concluded with an outline of unique convictions of the school as presented to the Board by J. N. Smucker, president of the General Conference. These include God's love and grace as the basis for our Christian faith; the importance of faith as the way of salvation; fervor in evangelism; the supremacy of Bible and the importance of the simple life.

A survey of proposed names for our Seminary building is now under way. Students, Staff, and Board members are participating in the study of appropriate names for the buildings in which we work and live. At the present time these places are known primarily through the address of the buildings.

Missionary, Harold Ratzlaff is scheduled to preach at Donnellson, Iowa, Sunday, October 16.

Marvin J. Dirks has started plans for the development of our deputation work this year which includes at least one large trip during the holiday season. A number of other students are participating in the work of the various missions in the city.

Vesper speaker on October 16, was Don. E. Smucker of the Seminary faculty. He also addressed the Mennonite Church at Morton, Illinois on October 9.

W.S.S.F. SECRETARY SPEAKS AT BETHEL

George Kyncl, Secretary of the World Service Student Fund, recently coming from Europe spoke to the students during the Chapel hour Monday morning. He is of Roumanian background and said he gets first-hand information about Roumania through letters from his near relatives who live there. The great load of the people there makes them accept communism because the Communists give them material help as part of their propaganda.

Mr. Kyncl visits educational institutions in a drive for funds supporting needy students of the world. He gave Bethel College high praise saying that it was at the top amongst contributing colleges and universities. During the last year Bethel "adopted" Mainz University in Germany, sending material assistance and maintaining students' exchange correspondence.

Friday morning was another chapel meeting of particular interest. Mr. Steg, Instructor of Wind instruments at Friend's University, Wichita, and teaching woodwind instruments at Bethel College every Wednesday, brought a group of his Wichita students to give a performance.

A good number of students attended the evening session of the Western District Conference, Oct. 15th, reserved for the Young People's program.

Henry W. Claassen, Assistant in the Public Relations Department of Bethel College and President of the District Young People's Union, was chairman of the meeting.

Jakob Friesen, a student from Fernheim, Paraguay, and sponsored by the Missionary Education Fund was among the speakers. He said that he intends to continue his medical training after graduation from Bethel and then go back to Paraguay. He has been a student at Freeman Junior College and at Bluffton College prior to coming to Bethel.

LOCAL CITIZENS SPEARHEAD BLUFFTON DRIVE

Wiliam Burbick, Bluffton College speech instructor spoke on "The Basic Radio Course in Bluffton College" at the Radio and Television section of the Ohio Conference for Speech Education held at the Deschler-Wallick Hotel, Columbus, October 8. The speech department at Bluffton will present a play, "Death Takes a Holiday," in the college chapel November 1, 2.

The second intensive campaign for funds for the new building, Founders Hall, in the local community will be launched November 1 and continue for a week. Campaign committees are at work in Bluffton and Pandora making plans for the drive. A large force of solicitors will do the work. All of the planning and solicitation work is being done by local citizens.

Bible Lectures by Dr. Carl Rasmussen, Professor of Systematic Theology, Lutheran Theological Seminary, Gettysburg, Penna. will begin the morning of November 13 and continue through the 17th. Special minister's and women's conferences will also be held that week.

Western Distri

NORTH NEWTON, KANSAS. In the midst of all the fall beauty of the Bethel College campus, some 388 delegates and a host of guests representing 64 of the 67 churches of the Western District Conference met for the 58th session of conference in the Memorial Hall October 13 and 14.

New Oragnization Proposed

An appointed committee brought recommendations for a revision of the conference constitution. The revision that was suggested and offered for adoption next year enlarges the Executive Committee by a provision which states that the officers of conference and the chairmen of all standing committees shall constitute the Executive Committee. The revision also provides for a central conference treasury and for a conference treasurer.

The Peace Concern

The Peace Committee reported that it is giving hearty encouragement to the Bethel College Peace Group in their plans for an extensive visitation program in the District churches, looking toward closer cooperation in program planning, literature distribution, and necessary subsidies for the carrying out of these plans.

The Home Mission Challenge

The report of the Home Missions Committee was received with a great deal of interest and grateful appreciation. The Home Mission workers who were present on the platform to report in person on the work in their respective churches gave reports which were an inspiration and challenge. The financial report of this committee revealed a disturbing fact. The total contributions of the conference—$560,123.58—amount to $52.00 per capita, whereas our contributions for Home Missions amount to only $1.07 per capita. It was agreed that this was not giving Home Missions its rightful place; a resolution was passed to bring contributions up to at least $1.50 per member next year.

Education

The report of the Education Committee was heartening. Our Bible Academies are doing excellent work. It was reported that the new Daily Vacation Bible School materials will be complete by 1950.

The Education Committee also reported that in order to foster the vacation Bible schools in our churches a workshop was planned and held and curricular material was introduced and explained. It was announced by the Committee that the Western District Loan Library, which is housed in the Historical Library of Bethel College, is to be continued and built up.

College Goes to Constituency

Notable in the report of Bethel College as presented by Ed. G. Kaufman were the home fellowship meetings, 84 of which were held in the various homes of the friends of the college in various congregations in the neighborhood of the school. The objective was to secure better acquaintance and mutual understanding of the College and its constituency. Like other small church colleges, a definite decrease in gifts has been experienced in the past five years which has been concomitant with the inflationary situation.

Future Deaconess Work?

The Deaconess Committee presented a recommendation which worded the concern as to whether the deaconess work is sufficiently broad enough in scope to include all of the service areas in which deaconesses should be active. Young women who receive a call to serve the Lord may feel compelled to serve in missions, relief, or some other field because of this may not feel qualified to become a deaconess. In view of this a recommendation was passed that to the effect that the District Conference recommend to the Executive Committee of the General Conference that a committee be appointed to make a detailed study of the matter, considering the advisability of establishing a Deaconess program on the General Conference basis and to bring a report to the next session of the General Conference.

Proposal for Seminary Support Adopted

The Conference also went on record at the suggestion of the Executive Committee to accept a recommendation presented to the 1948 session of the Western District Conference as follows: "The Seminary and the Seminary Board would like to urge the Western District Conference to recommend to the churches of the District that each church give recognition to the Seminary in outlining their budgets or in planning their contributions for the year, to the end that operating expenses at the Seminary would be covered by regular contributions from the churches." This plan has been accepted by several of the other districts in the General Conference. The Seminary Board has suggested that if each church would contribute the equivalent of one dollar per member per year, the current expenses of the Seminary could be met.

Youth Night

The young people's program on Thursday evening carried the note of hope and advance. Henry W. Claassen, president of the Young People's Union of the Western District, reported that the budget for that organization for the coming year is $7,300 which will be divided among the Missionary Education Fund, the Voluntary Service Project, printing distribution of the Prayer Calendar, and the paying for and the developing of the Western District Retreat ground at Murdock, Kans. After various projects of service for the year had been presented, a message by W. F. Unruh, the District Field Worker, challenged the young people to follow the leadership of the Living Christ and to continue the "movement of service and sacrifice" which is so nobly exemplified by over 500 young Mennonite men and women who gave months of free service in the Voluntary Service projects last summer. The total effect of all the devotional messages might be given by saying that they "provoked unto love and good works."

Other Concerns

There were a number of appeals made to the Conference which left a deep impression. H. J. Brown pled that the China Mission is not dead but very much alive and called for young people to go out into that field. An appeal was made by the Evangelism Committee that all churches cooperate in the nation-wide United Evangelistic Advance program by making their own plans to win the non-Christians of their respective communities to our Saviour. The pastors were urged to take the initiative in this. Rev. J. M. Regier of the Home Mission Board pled for the South American brethren, appealing especially for help to build churches there and to help provide leaders and literature.

"Looking Unto Jesus"

Henry Hege, Corn, Oklahoma, President of the Conference, in his opening message dwelt on the Theme of the Conference, "Looking unto Jesus." He put it on our hearts that we are watchmen who are placed here to warn people against sin and to point them to the Saviour. This commission to every child of God, he said, can be carried out only as we look unto Jesus and re-dedicate ourselves unto Him. In the devotionals during Conference the key-note that was sounded was that we as Christians must "take the offensive" and not expect God to do things without consecrated service.

Waltner and Pannabecker Speak

Dr. Waltner out of his experiences in Europe last summer spoke on the peace that we find alone in Christ. "He is our peace." He related how army officers of enemy nations are now members of an international peace committee, devoted to Christ and His way of peace.

Dr. Pannabecker in one of his messages interpreted to us what it means to worship God in spirit and in truth. In his second message he drew attention to four great emphases which we dare not neglect in our schools and churches. The first emphasis he named is the Word of God as the guide for faith and life, with the Living Christ as the norm of all interpretations of the Bible. The second emphasis is that of our Mennonite faith which holds that by conversion we come into the Church of Jesus Christ. Conversion is the "narrow gate" and discipleship the "straight and narrow way" by which we enter the Kingdom of God. There is a certain exclusiveness to this way of life. We cannot consider everybody and anybody as in the Church. The third is the Pietistic emphasis. Like the early Pietists, people should read the Bible, witness to each other, and pray together, for out of this inner fortification of the soul come the works of missions, relief, and other Christian services. The fourth is the ecumenical emphasis. We need to feel ourselves in fellowship with all of God's people the world over. As Mennonites we are inclined to draw apart too much; that makes for detachment and self-sufficiency. Christ's Kingdom is universal.

The newly elected officers of the conference are Lester Hostetler, President; Elbert Koontz, Vice-President; and Arnold Epp, Secretary. In a brief ceremony Henry Hege presented the gavel to Lester Hostetler as a symbol of authority; but Brother Hostetler accepted the gavel as a symbol of hard work, and pledged himself to serve the Conference.

Other officers elected were: to the Home Mission Committee, A. J. Dyck, Inman, Kansas, and J. J. Voth, Goessel, Kansas; to the Education Committee, Henry Hege, Corn Oklahoma, Waldo Kaufman, Hydro, Oklahoma, and Eldon Graber, North Newton, Kansas; Peace Committee, Mr. Crawford, Burns, Kansas and R. C. Kauffman, North Newton, Kansas; to the Deaconess Committee, Richard C. Wiebe, Beatrice, Nebraska; to the Charity Committee, J. E. Entz, Newton, Kansas; to the Board of Trustees, Joe Krehbiel, Aaron J. Kansas Church to Be Dedicted

The First Mennonite Church of McPherson, Kansas will be dedicated on Sunday October 30. Friends of the church are invited to attend. Services for the day will begin with the a door opening service at 10 o'clock in the morning followed by the regular church service. A basket dinner will be served at noon. The dedication service will begin at 2 o'clock in the afternoon with Rev. Arnold Funk, from the Home Mission Committee as the speaker. John W. Goering, a member of the congregation will also present a history of the church.

Starting Sunday evening, Dr. J. E. Hartzler will give the first sermon of a week's series continuing through Friday evening of November 4.

The First Mennonite Church of McPherson is a newly organized church because of the large number of Mennonites who have moved into the city of McPherson and the rural areas surrounding the city. The Home Mission Board of the General Conference has sponsored and guided this group. The Church was organized in July, 1945 with 36 charter members and has now grown to a membership of 103.

Jottings

—Salem-Zion Church, Freeman, South Dakota: On October 9 we observed the Lord's Supper. The Women's Mission Society met for a whole day recently and tacked twenty-six comforters and made thirty layettes. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to Mrs. P. A. Penner. Reverend Penners served our church a short time a few years ago.—Mrs. Robert Graber, Corr.

—Community Church, Portland, Oregon: October 2 was a big day for our group as we combined our Rally Day with Homecoming and also the twenty-first anniversary of our Church. During the Sunday School hour a Rally Day program was presented by the Sunday School. This was followed by the regular morning worship service at which our pastor gave the message and communion was observed. At noon a potluck dinner was enjoyed by all. The afternoon service was in charge of the Ladies Missionary Society at which we had various members of special music and different ones spoke on the early days of the Church and its organizations. For the evening service one of our former pastors, Rev. Herman Wiebe, was present and brought the message. It was a blessed day for the many in attendance.—Mrs. Clyde H. Dirks, Corr.

—Oklahoma Bible Academy, Meno, Oklahoma: The dedication service of our new Administration building and heating plant was held October 16. In the afternoon program Rev. August Schmidt gave a historical sketch, followed by a message by Rev. Harold Burkholder. Rev. J. R. Barkman also gave a message, and one at the evening program. Rev. Harold Burkholder gave his second message of the day at the evening program. We want to praise the Lord for giving us a modern building which well meets our present need.

—Lorraine Avenue Church, Wichita, Kansas: Once each week 200 children come to our Church from a nearby grade school for week day Bible school. We have eight full time teachers and three assistants with Mrs. Emery Ruth as director. Rev. D. C. Wedel was our guest minister Sunday morning, October 9.—Mrs. Waldo Leisip, Corr.

—Meadow Church, Colby, Kansas: Our pastor, Walter H. Regier and family left October 6 for a visit at Enid, Oklahoma and to attend the Conference at Newton. Miss Agness Harder, Missionary on furlough of the Sudan Interior Mission, filled the service hour Sunday morning, October 9, by telling of her work in Nigeria, Africa. Miss Martha Wall, of the same Mission, was with us on October 16. In the evening of October 9 a children's program was given by the Christian Endeavor. A sound film of songs and stories for children was shown. On October 20 a sound film entitled "Voice of the Deep" was shown. The wedding of Miss Irene Nickel and Edward Rempel of Meade was in the evening of September 30. On Sunday afternoon, October 16, the wedding of Miss Helen Luella Willems and Elgin Decker of McPherson took place. —Mrs. Peter J. Franz, Corr.

—Goessel Church, Goessel, Kansas: Rev. D. C. Wedel has conducted our Sunday morning services several times recently. On October 9, Mr. Leo Miller, a Bethel College student, preached here. The entire congregation met in the church basement October 10 for a supper and a miscellaneous shower to welcome the Johann Horn family. After months of delay Mr. and Mrs. Horn and their seven children left a displaced persons camp in Germany to make our town and our congregation their home. Sunday, September 11, the Mission Friends Circle sponsored a public program at which Mr. and Mrs. Roy Henry talked and showed slides of their recent work in Puerto Rico. —Mrs. Eldon Rich, Corr.

—Bethany Church, Quakerstown, Pennsylvania: In the evening of October 9 we had our last service with Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander as our pastor. It is with regret that we see our pastor and his wife leave us, but we wish God's blessing on them in their new pastorate at Wadsworth, Ohio. The topic of his sermon was "Worthy of the Gospel of Christ." When are we worthy of Christ? (1) When we are diligent students of His word. (2) When the Christian church comes to agree on general principles. (3) When we cooperate in spreading the Gospel at home, in foreign missions, and in relief work. We each must be a light. We must tune ourselves to Christ. On October 10 Bethany and Flatland had a farewell fellowship gathering for the Neuenschwanders in our Church. A program and refreshments were given.—Mrs. Ed. K. Stoneback, Corr.

—First Church, Allentown, Pennsylvania: Our Visitation Evangelism Program was conducted from October 3 to 6. As a result there were twelve decisions to unite with our church. More than thirty calls were made by the Visitors. The success of the program cannot be counted by the decisions that were made alone, but by the witness that was given by the Visitors as they made their calls.—Mrs. LeRoy K. Weidner, Corr.

K. U. Mennonites Meet

A gathering of thirty Mennonite students and staff members was held in the Kansas Room of the Memorial Union Sunday afternoon, October 9.

Walter E. Ewert presided at a short business session, at which it was decided that the group meet once a month, tentatively the second Sunday afternoon. At an election of officers, Wesley Prieb was chosen chairman, and Mrs Tal Hiebert, secretary-treasurer.

Helga Kemnitzer was the speaker, and portrayed vividly the hardships of the student in Germany since the war.

The meeting was then adjoured to the informality which accompanies a cup of coffee and cookies.

—Bethel Church, Inman, Kansas: Miss Katherine Enns showed slides and reported on her voluntary service unit. She did some recreation work with the children in New York City. Mr. and Mrs. Sam Entz also spoke. They are candidates for mission work in Africa. They were to leave New York on October 14 for their field of work.—Corr.

What Shall I Do with My Life?

5. God Called Me to Be a Farmer

MY father, who was never too strong, had three sons of which I was the youngest. Bill, the oldest, was lame in one leg, so it was up to Pete and me to help father. As a young boy I learned to follow the horses and later to drive the tractor. Of course milking cows was always part of the daily program, except at seeding time and harvest, when the girls took over that job.

All of us just finished the eighth grade, but when I got that far I wanted to go on to high-school. I think father would have let me go, but that fall Pete decided to get married, and so father needed my help. I swallowed my disappointment by taking a high school course in English by correspondence. But grammar was not my line and so I never finished it.

The farm magazine to which my father subscribed appealed to me. And I soon sent for more literature on animal husbandry. I heard of organic farming and studied up on what I could find. My father let me put things I learned into practice. We improved our stock. We developed the land by plowing under a cover crop, and practicing crop rotation. Father didn't get rich but he got ahead.

RESETTLEMENT ADMINISTRATION PHOTOGRAPH BY ROTHSTEIN

One spring day after a nice rain, I stood beside a field and looked at the green carpet of young wheat coming up. I took up a handful of fine black soil and crumpled it through my fingers. How wonderful nature was if you worked with her. Find out her secrets and you found out a way to make things grow better. But wasn't God behind it all? Had He not planned it so? He had made the soil and the seed to grow in the soil. True, the seed took something out of the soil, but there were ways of putting it back if one would just make the effort to find out how. It all fitted together like a jig-saw puzzle, only one had to find the pieces and place them together where they belonged.

Without thinking further, my soul looked up to God to thank Him for the way He fitted things together. I had prayed before, for I was a Christian; but now it was different. My whole life seemed laid out before God, like that field. And only He and I could work out a plan whereby we could fit things together to make the most of it. Before I knew it, I was kneeling in the dirt and saying, What do you want me to do, Lord?"

Since I was now twenty years old, my father gave his permission for me to go to Bible school, provided I would come home for two weeks in spring and help all summer.

School was hard for me, but I managed. While I ran the elevator in an apartment house I memorized the assigned Scripture verses. But what bothered me most were the missionaries who spoke to the student body. It made me feel guilty to think I had known the way of Salvation all my life, and so many had never heard of the Lord Jesus and the hope He offered. I felt I ought to do something about it. But what?

The teachers, too, emphasized service to Him. They gave us assignments, and even though I wasn't much of a speaker, I managed to give my testimony at a Mission to which the street-car took me once a week.

This Bible school had a great record for putting out missionaries. About one-third of its graduatee went to the foreign field, which the school felt to be quite an honor. What about me? Should I be in that total, too? Several girls at the school appealed to me, and they were planning to go to the mission field. I was a bit afraid to ask for a date, for fear I would get into something from which I could not back out.

God's will was uppermost in my mind, and I wanted to go to the mission field if He so wanted it. But I didn't want to be pressed into it by any teacher or missionary or girl. The jig-saw puzzle of my life was to be put together by God and me.

Then the second spring I went home to put in the seed for my father. One morning, early, I stood beside a field and let the rich black earth crumble through my fingers. How I loved it. My soul reached up to God as it had several years before. I fell down in my knees and cried, "Lord, I'll go anywhere you want me to go, even though I like to farm." A peace came over my soul. I saw the jig-saw puzzle of my life taking shape. God wanted me to farm for Him. How happy I was!

I went back to Bible school for my last two months, and finished. But my name was not added to the list of missionary volunteers, for God had called me to stay at home and farm for Him.

Now I have a home and family and farm of my own. I'm not one who likes to talk about it, but since you don't know my name, I'll tell you something. The check I handed to our church treasurer last fall will keep two missionary families in the field for a year. God has called me to be a farmer.

Dutch Youth Publish Calendar and Pictures of American Mennonite Life

A fine wall calendar with a different picture for each month has been published by the Doopsgezinde Jongeren Bond, the Dutch Mennonite Youth organization. The calendar has pictures of familiar youth and church scenes. It is an excellent means of becoming acquainted with the life of the Dutch youth. Mr. Dick van Voorst, Devenvoordestraat 106, Haarlem, Holland, is the editor of the Dutch youth paper, De Hoeksteen. He has forwarded to the editor of Mennonite Youth, Esko Loewen, a copy of the calendar.

Dick van Voorst offers to anyone who can read Dutch a free subscription to De Hoeksteen.

Also, Dick van Voorst asks for good photos of American Mennonite church life such as photos of churches, colleges, youth activities, etc. He states that such material is very scarce in Holland and it would be very valuable in giving the Dutch youth a better idea of American Mennonite life. If any reader desires to send photos, please send them to Dick at the above address.

Differences of Function

Does this conception leave any place for a recognized ministry? Certainly, it does. All are called for a holy vocation by virtue of being Christians, but there are diversities of gifts within the band of recruits. There are not differences of honor within the Christian army, but there are differences of function. That is why we are not to be called, "Rabbi, Rabbi," and why we must let no man call us "Father" when One is our Father, as Jesus said, but there can be a division of labor without any difference of higher and lower. One of our worst heresies has been the introduction of differences of honor along with division of labor, but this only demonstrates a radical inability to understand the revolutionary significance of the Gospel.

The minister exists not as a priest and not as a "Doctor," but as one who seeks to stir up in others the potential life in them. Ideally, most of his operations are not such as to be noticed at all, but are done quietly though effectively. He is not the "leader" of the congregation, since radical Christianity must renounce the Fuehrer principle, but he may be the servant of the congregation. Most emphatically, he cannot have the members' religion for them, because each must have his own.

Let the Laymen Preach

There is no good reason at all why a man who is the servant of a congregation should always be the one to preach and pray. Many have gifts in these directions, but in our conventional and dying clergyman's religion we do not develop the majority of these powers. If a congregation were a society of praying, preaching, sewing, evangelizing Christians there might be growth all along the line in ways of which we cannot now even dream. But a church organized along these lines might be so different from the conventional suburban church you now know that you might not even recognize it.

Here, then, is a way. We need not waste our time in futile anxiety and in pining over the loss of a former advantageous position. If we have lost it, we have only ourselves to blame. Our job is to move forward with a new vision of what the Christian faith may be in our perplexed time. The Protestant Church will either decline or rise depending on whether it follows out the logic of its own position.

The only way to be true to the Reformation is to reform.

Hallowe'en -- the Story of How it Came to be

Have you often wondered where our Hallowe'en originated? You perhaps have heard it was once "All Hallow's Eve" the evening before "All Saint's Day." But, from where came the hobgoblins and the spooks? Here is the story of the mixture of ancient pagan custom with Christian tradition.

Away back in the dawn of history, man had no books on psychology or natural science or psychiatry, no experiments in "extrasensory perception," no biographies, even, of men of genius. If things happened that he could not explain from his immediate surroundings, he was terrified. If certain of his fellows possessed unusual abilities—such as singing, or composing poems, or telling stories, or drawing pictures, or having a clear insight into the future based on observation of the present—they were strange beings. They were revered as prophets and wise men or women, as bards and scalds, as witches and wizards. And those who used their talents for evils were feared.

The priests of primitive religions—the Druids and the priests in the Scandinavian temples—made use of this love of the common man for mystery and the supernatural to gain the desired effects in their religious observances. Much of the Druidic rites has been lost to us, but the ancient sages have preserved some of the Scandinavian ceremonies.

The average Viking could not read, but he had probably seen the Phoenician script, which some ancient scholar may have brought with him on his voyage. The weather marks on rocks, the lines in the bark of trees, the markings on various organs of sacrified animals seemed to the Viking to resemble this writing and therefore to hold supernatural messages. It was the practice of the priest to read these signs and foretell coming events from them Certain wise women also were versed in reading "runes" and were famous for their prophecies. These women were called "valas."

Another duty of the priests and wise women was that of calling up the spirits of the departed. Deceased Vikings were often buried at sea, or sent out from land on their boats on which a fire had been kindled. But many were buried, together with their horse, dog, and, sometimes, favorite wife, their sword and certain utensils and jewels, in mounds known as "barrows." At certain times these barrows glowed with an eerie, blue light, and even appeared to open and show their contents. A vala could call forth the occupant of a barrow, it was believed, by certain incantations in which chips of the sacred ash tree, a silver-headed staff, and the contents of a bag of black cat fur played a mysterious part.

Those women who used their gifts for evil were known as "wicca" and were the forerunners of our traditional "witches." They rode on sticks, often using snakes as reins, and stories are told by the hardy Vikings of seeing these witches riding across the full moon, and even of finding some of the venom from the snakes' jaws on the decks of their ships.

Such is the background of our day of creepy fun —Halloween!

Today, of course, we do not believe in ghosts or witches or the supernatural powers of human beings. We are not superstitous. But we get a certain thrill in telling ghost stories, or in reading a good fantasy or horror story. We know it's all in fun, but something elemental in us responds to it with "goose-bumps," and it's fun sometimes to pretend.

So at Halloween we pretend. We dress up in strange costumes and go to parties, or visit our neighbors, or play "fortune-telling" games.

Halloween itself—the name, of course, means "All Hallow's Eve," the night before All Saints' Day —goes back to the days of the Druids. The early Christian missionaries added their holy days to the days already observed by the pagans. Thus Halloween corresponds to a feast of the Druids and with one of the so-called "witches' sabbaths" of Northern Europe. These were the occasions when the witches went across the moon on their broomsticks—to some horrible rites at some secret place. Possibly because of its night-prowling habits, the common housecat, especially a black cat, was supposed to be a "familiar" of witches and a spirit of evil. Many people even today do not like cats and shrink away from contact with them.

It is easy to understand why, on these nights when evil was supposed to be abroad, human beings would be tempted to don masks and costumes and go out bent on mischief. People more than half believed that spirits were out that night anyway working harm, and so the pranksters of the community helped the tradition along a little. If the householder awoke next morning and found that some harmless, or even malicious mischief had been performed in the night, he blamed the fairies or brownies or trolls or witches.

But the reason for the custom of wearing masks has even deeper roots. Ceremonial masks have been worn by priests of primitive religions from earliest times. These masks were, of course, primarily to conceal the identity of the human being who was working the strange wonders. They also added drama and plausibility to the ceremony by making the priest seem actually the deity worshiped. And in many cases the priest, by donning the mask and costume, thought he really was that deity! In any museum you will find masks of primitive peoples of China, Africa, Alaska, South America, and our Indian tribes. The ceremonial dances of our Southwestern Indians are usually performed with at least some of the participants in masks which have tribal significance. Some are frightening; some are funny. They are made of wood, or leather, trimmed with beads, fur, and feathers. Some of the ancient Central and South American masks of the Incas, Aztecs, and other early tribes, are exquistely fashioned of gold or turquoise mosaic, and some are built up into elaborate head-dresses of feathers.

So, when you go to your Halloween party this year you will be having fun with customs that had their roots far back in the history of the human race.

Comments by the Editor --
"The Lives of Heroes"

The stories of men's lives always stir us—and they especially stir us in our youth. For, in our youth we are ever concerned about what we are going to "be." Shall we be a great aviator, a great athlete, a statesman and orator, a really successful farmer, a minister or churchman? And, what we "become" is often largely influenced by the lives of others whose influence has touched us.

Doubtless, many a farmer can look back to the time when he was influenced to undertake farming by the example of others. Doubtless, many a minister and missionary can point to individuals whose lives greatly influenced them in "becoming" what they are.

It is for this reason that biography is such important literature. We are so much influenced by the lives of others. When one thinks of the Bible as biography, there is a vast storehouse of material in its pages. What is the book of Isaiah but biography? What are many of the tales of the Old Testament but the biographical account of great men—Abraham in Genesis 12-26, Samuel in I Samuel, etc. And, what are the Gospels but biographical accounts of the life and ministry of Jesus?

All this points to one very rich source of biography, the Bible. Young readers should not feel bound to reading this biography from only the King James version, but some modern translations would likewise be good. In addition to the Biblical biographies, remember the biographical novels of our day such as The Apostle by Scholem Asch, The Big Fisherman by Lloyd Douglas, and numerous other similar novels based on the lives of familiar Biblical characters. By outlining a program of winter reading such as this, we would have some rich and new experiences.

HUTCHINSON, KANSAS. Eleanor Betty Thiessen, Newton, was presented the Linda Richards achievement award by Governor Frank Carlson Friday night at a state nurses association banquet in the Wiley tearoom.

The award is given by the American Nurses' association to the outstanding nurse in each state. Miss Thiessen was chosen from seven candidates.

The award winner is the daughter of Mennonite missionaries to India. She was born in India, coming to this country five years ago. She is a graduate of the Bethel Deaconess School of Nursing, Newton, and next spring will receive a B. S. in nursing from Bethel College. On completion of her schooling she plans to return to India.

Upon graduation from the nursing school Miss Thiessen was first in her class of 17 and she was top in the 70 who took the state nurses examination. The award is given on the basis of scholarship, personality, devotion to duty, and appearance.

Following the presentation, Gov. Carlson spoke briefly, praising the nurses for their work. He also praised Miss Thiessen as "a fine example of a young Kansas woman."

Over 10,000 Christmas Bundles Go Abroad

Over 10,000 Christmas Bundles that were sent to the Akron warehouse by children and others in the United States, will soon be on their way to the foreign lands to which they have been assigned. Already a total of over 3,000 have left for England, France, Italy, Belgium and Paraguay. Shipments to Holland, Japan and Java will leave very shortly. A rather large portion of the bundles will be sent to Germany and Austria since more children there are in need.

It is expected that the work of packing these bundles for overseas shipment will be completed early in October. Volunteer groups from the Mennonite congregations in the vicinity of Akron and Lancaster gave very helpful assistance in this work. The accompanying picture shows a girls' Sunday School class busy packing just after most of the bundles had come in. A New Testament in the appropriate foreign language is placed in each bundle.

The churches in Canada have also responded liberally in sending bundles to the Kitchener, Ontario center. The exact number of bundles received in Canada and the United States will be announced later.

Beyond Our Own

WASHINGTON, D. C. "Immediate and unconditional freedom" for America's imprisoned C. O.'s is demanded in a letter sent to President Truman last month, signed by 77 notables drawn from many fields of American life.

"There is surely no national danger to justify the abridgement of the religious liberty of this minority," the letter says. "The Quaker record of service to humanity is known and universally respected. Yet members of this group, practicing its teachings and supported by the statements of their religious Meetings, are branded as felons and numbered as convicts in prisons from coast to coast."

Signers include Frank Aydelotte, former director of Princeton's Institute of Advanced Study; Chancellor Robert M. Hutchins of the University of Chicago; philosopher John Dewey; and college presidents Thomas E. Jones (Earlham), Clyde A. Milner (Guilford, Lloyd L. Ramseyer (Bluffton) and Gilbert F. LET'S FINISH THE PROJECT!

We want to thank the churches for thus far keeping their promise to the boys who upheld the principles of the church during the last war. We are nearing the end of the project of assisting our conscientious objectors, who received no pay, with getting their education. Approximately $4,200 will complete the matter. We do not want to fall down when we are so near the goal. Send your contributions to the General Conference Headquarters, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas, and designate them for the C.P.S. Educational Rehabilitation Fund.

Editorials

A REFORMATION SUNDAY after-thought comes in the form of a question. How far have we really "gone in and possessed the land"—the lands of a pure Christian Gospel that the various Reformation insights seemed to make possible? In a previous issue we have noted the emphasis upon faith alone, that while it clarified the matter of the ground of our salvation as being exclusively in the work of Christ for us, it nevertheless drove such a wedge between faith and works that works for all practical purposes, became irrelevant. As a very decided revolt against such a partial reformation the Anabaptists insisted, as one has put it, that faith and its expression in works are so inseparable that either one must automatically give evidence of the other. Works, in the Christian sense, are always an evidence of faith not of unbelief. It is evident however that, in many ways, works have for modern Christians become an expression of unbelief rather than faith. How is this possible? It is entirely possible that an act which for one person is a true expression of faith may, for another person, be a means of satisfying a conscience that is crying aloud against sin. In such a life, works are no longer the expression of Christian character but a substitution for character. We as Mennonites are not exempt from the guilt of this. There are burning questions of right and wrong in our communities concerning which we may talk about, yes, but act—? The invasion of the liquor interests, the moral domination of filmdom, the deterioration of the Sabbath, the militarization of America using the money and lives of Christians, the doctrine of white supremacy even in church institutions, and a host of others, call for action. So closely are we involved in the guilt connected with these matters, and so much would it cost to take our stand that we find it much less painful to go to church regularly, give our tithes and more, talk missions and relief and even evangelism—not as a true expression of our faith but as sedative for our overactive consciences. This is reverting to a pre-Reformation level.

> God does not seek words nor appearance but power and deed. Do you think it sufficient if you know Christ only according to the flesh? Or if you but say that you believe on Him, that you are baptized and are Christians, and that you are purchased by the blood and death of Christ? Ah no! I have told you often and tell you again, you must be born of God and your life changed and converted in such a manner that you are new men in Christ, that Christ be in you and you in Christ, or you can never be Christians, for, If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature. (I:172b).—Menno Simons

To Larger Service

P. H. Richert, Newton, Kansas, for 35 years, Secretary of the General Conference Foreign Mission Board, long time member of the Board of Directors of Bethel College, and Pastor of the Tabor Church, passed away Tuesday morning, October 25. Funeral services were held at the Tabor Church on Thursday, October 27. He was born in Gnadenheim, South Russia in 1871.

TO GO BEYOND THE REFORMATION involves bringing the glorious Gospel and the sin, corruption, and moral rot of our time into direct contact once again. No immorality is greater than that of prostituting the Gospel or Christian institutions by making them a means of falsely comforting us in our guilt and thus denying them the sincere expression they should have as they speak to the world through words and actions. What will this mean? It must mean that when we call people to accept Christ we will not hesitate to show them plainly what it will mean in their relationships to family, friends, country, material possessions, other races, appetites etc. It must mean the end of compromises of the church with the liquor traffic and the beginning of a consistent and persistent prophetic utterance against this evil. It must mean the end of the compromises of missions with nationalism with its accompanying agreements that neutralize the Gospel. Is not preaching of a half Gospel more dangerous than no Gospel at all? Furthermore, and here is where we break the Mennonite shell, does it not mean the end of a heavy emphasis on an essentially negative program of keeping the ambulance at the bottom of the precipice in our relief program and starting to put up a fence at the top in the form of invading the area of statesmanship with the zeal of redeemed Christian leaders of state?

OFFERINGS apparently are becoming more and more increased in the activities and meetings of our Mennonite churches. One can very readily see that to have an offering for various causes at every gathering in the course of a church's weekly program could well produce a chaotic state of mind in the loyal church member. He is forced, if he wants to put something in the plate each time, to go through extended planning to give to every cause its just amount. One can further see how many members finally would give up trying and start giving one amount regardless of the cause. Important causes would then be neglected and secondary causes oversubscribed. One philosophy back of increasing the number of offerings is that people give when they are at church; since attendance is becoming sporadic by many, every opportunity it is thought, to receive must be taken. Furthermore, it is probably felt that more offerings necessarily mean greater giving. But is this basically true? It would seem that the average church member would appreciate deciding with the other members of the congregation in the annual business meeting just what percentage is to go for the various needs, local and conference, and then make his gifts regularly to the total task of the church—J. Evangelism in the Sunday School

by C. Ernest Davis

IN THE light of the Great Commission, the program of evangelism in most of our churches is far too small. It is too small to match the concern of Christ for the lost, too small to meet the need of the unsaved, too small to challenge the congregation, too small to cope with the world emergency that is upon us, and too small to satisfy the Father's desire that we bear much fruit. It is so small, both in our efforts and in its results, that we should be willing to learn and to practice techniques of evangelism that promise greater results.

We should make more efficient and definite use of the Sunday school in our program of evangelism. When I say that, I am not forgetting that the majority of our converts already come from the Sunday school. Perhaps few of us realize how effective an agency for evangelism we have in the Sunday school. Its chief curriculum source is the Bible. In a carefully organized way it teaches the Bible, in graded lessons, to graded pupils. This presents an exceptional opportunity for effectively teaching individuals the plan of salvation and the way of life. Where else in our church setup do we have an opportunity to deal face to face with so many?

Then, the Sunday school has, or can have, active, trained soul-winners throughout its entire staff of officers and teachers, thereby greatly increasing the number of workers in the congregation.

Wide-Open Opportunity

Sunday-school teachers and superintendents have a wide-open opportunity to do personal work with their pupils; in class and in the many contacts that can be had outside of class, they are in a position to work intensively at the task of personal evangelism. The Sunday school can carry out a great program of home visitation, getting into the homes of evangelistic prospects once a month or so, cultivating friendships, showing an interest in people, teaching the Word, witnessing for Christ and the church, and inviting people to accept the Lord. Cradle roll workers can visit cradle roll parents; teachers in the beginners department can visit the parents of beginners; and so on. In so doing, they can not only show an interest in their pupils; they can also actively evangelize the parents they visit. Much of this home visitation work can be done in teams of two; some of it can be done single-handed.

A New Sense Needed

Especially, as we come to the intermediate, youth and adult departments, do we need to put definite evangelistic emphasis into our class and visitation work with all unsaved pupils. Many of us need a new sense of the lostness of the soul that is without Christ. Think what would happen if, over the space of even one year, we would prepare for, train our workers and diligently carry out such a program of visitation; if we would visit all the nonchurch people on our Sunday-school rolls, all we can discover in the community, all unaffiliated and inactive Brethren, and all unaffiliated members of other churches that we can find in our community; if we would invite people to enroll in the Sunday school to accept Christ, and to join the church.

The Sunday school is particularly effective because it can enlist the attendance of the unsaved better than some other church agencies. People who would not readily respond to an invitation to attend church will come to Sunday school or allow their children to attend. Once you have them in the Sunday school, you have a chance to do something with them and for them. Children can invite children, youth can invite youth, and adults can can invite everyone. The activities of organized classes often provide openings for interesting others. The Sunday school can get people if it goes after them. Once secured, their evangelization is up to you.

Evangelism at Close Range

Sunday morning provides many evangelistic opportunities for Sunday-school workers. Before the school opens, they should be on hand, actively greeting each arrival. Words fitly chosen for the individual—such as "I hope you will stay for the church service this morning," "I am praying for you," or "I hope you will make the decision today"—and spoken to him in a friendly way can be very effective. The opening worship in the class or department brings the opportunity to exalt the Lord and confront the individual with God. In the les-

SHORT excerpts from "Christians under Communistic State," a column which appeared in supplement to the June 1949 issue of The Church, follow. This magazine in English is published occasionally by the General Assembly of the Church of Christ in China, in Shanghai. This supplement with the current issue of The Church is published in Hongkong.

A Short Time After . . .

The following are quotations from letters from missionaries behind the "bamboo curtain" only a short time after Red occupation:

"Our Chinese friends have expressed happiness and satisfaction over our staying on with them during this crisis of occupation. They . . . say that our presence has a calming, stabilizing effect on the community. Certainly the faith of all of us has been strengthened, for God has been good to us these days."

They Were Asking Each Other . . .

The following is from a letter written by a young Chinese Y.M.C.A. secretary:

"More than 200,000 people went to the railway station to meet them (the Liberation Army). The people on the sidewalks were singing and waving at the soldiers manning the tanks. They were asking each other whether those tanks were not manufactured in America. After a couple of days all remarked about the good discipline of the Liberation Army . . . In our student work we face a great challenge. A Yenching student (girl) who has been an earnest inquirer for several years . . . . made a trip to Tientsin after the liberation and was impressed by the morale and the discipline of the Liberation Army. She was so moved that she said, "Formerly I believed that man can only change from evil to good with the power of Christ; but Christians can only talk and do not act, now the Communist Army has truly done it." It is really a most serious challenge to the Chinese Student Christian movement."

From a young missionary in student work:

"As to the work in the University, I think the great thing is that it is still going on. At present we are experiencing the expected lack of interest on the part of large numbers. The tasks in society and politics are so immediate and absorbing, and, on the whole, hopeful, that the whole attention of almost all the students is directed towards them."

Mass Conversion . . . Really Possible . . .

Another Missionary:

"They . . . (masses of young people) suddenly leave on invitations of high hopes but grim promises of a life of sweat and sacrifice, taking nothing with them but the clothes they wear. After a few months of indoctrination, off they go southward to help liberate the masses. The power that brings such change into life that is ripe for change, that brings so swiftly such new patterns of thought and community organization makes me realize that mass conversion and revival heights were really possible, but that it will take a church of more vigorous sacrifice and clear-cut demands than is active here at present to stir up a winged movement."

son period there is a golden opportunity to teach the Word of God in a vital way, to press the claims of Christ, and to deal with personal problems. This is evangelism at close range; it is education with a purpose. Pupils may well be in different stages of development, but the teacher should be interested in each one, follow up every case, and from time to time have someone ready to make the decision for Christ and unite with the church. During the closing period and in that time between Sunday school and church, everything should be organized to encourage all pupils who are old enough to stay for church. Efforts made throughout the morning should converge upon securing a high percentage of attendance at the morning church service. A teacher may quietly go in with a pupil who is ready and sit by him, giving an encouraging word or going forward with him when the invitation is given.

Pastoral Cooperation, A Must

Such a program, needless to say, must have the cooperation of the pastor. He must have a program of evangelism, must preach for decisions and extend invitations. Also, his program must be geared with the efforts of his Sunday-school organization so that workers will know what to expect and when to expect it. On the other hand, Sunday-school superintendents and teachers should work diligently to get people prepared and committed ahead of time, notifying the pastor when such prospects are ready or when his help is needed in any particular case. Then something will happen when an invitation is given. This program needs to be continuous throughout the year, with special promotion and emphasis at certain seasons.

During special seasons of evangelism, the Sunday-school forces should be unusually active in surveys, workers' prayer sessions, visitation and personal work, and evangelistic emphasis in departments and classes. All regular and ordinary efforts need to be intensified.

Mere Superficialities

Such a program of evangelism will make your school come alive, will save it from dabbling around in mere surface superficialities, will insure its growth, will develop effective soul-winners, and will build a great church.

Of course, evangelism is only one of our tasks in the Sunday school. We also must undertake the further education of those who are won for Christ—that second teaching emphasis in the Great Commission. They must be taught the way of the Lord and learn obedience to all of his will and commandments. Furthermore, converts need to be trained for participation in the actual work and program of the church. The Sunday school is not only a great evangelizing agency; it is also a great school of Christian living and a training school for Christian work and service.

Materialism, Our Golden Calf

by Justus Holsinger

MAN in our present world is placing his faith in three gods that may eventually bring destruction to his civilization. The first of these gods is "materialism." The god of materialism is becoming one of the strongest forces of evil in modern society. Even Christian people today are absorbing the spirit of materialism. They are camouflaging materialistic motives with religious activities and thus consoling their consciences. The god of materialism is little by little replacing the rightful place of God in our religious endeavours.

Purchased with Blood

If we would profit from the experiences of history we could foresee that the logical end of a materialistically motivated society is death. Where are the great empires today who placed their faith in their material possessions? What is happening to the British Empire, which until recent year possessed a large portion of the world's resources? Historians are well aware of the fact that materialistic interests have played a major part in causing local, national, and international conflicts. The materialistic possessions of some have been purchased with the blood of others.

Many Christian people today are asking God to bless their materialistic interests which are basically selfish. Some people accumulate their wealth selfishly and then contribute generously toward worthy causes in order to pacify their consciences. Some worship in monumental shrines, when a majority of the people of the world can say with the Master, that they do not so much as have a place to lay their heads.

Nonresistant Materialists

The American people, in the 1920's, passed through a decade characterized by its selfishness and greed. Everyone was primarily interested in getting rich quickly with little regard for others. Even those who opposed military participation adopted a philosophy of materialism. Though hesitant to contribute toward the support of war, they did not hesitate to grasp the materialistic advantages resulting from the war. The motto of the 1920's was "everyone for himself." What was the result of this spirit of greed adopted by a large part of civilization? The decade had hardly ended before we found ourselves in the worst economic depression of history. And God forbid that we should credit Him with sending the depression, which in actual fact was the result of our own selfishness and materialistic greed.

Some countries adopted a war economy in order to restore prosperity to their people. The adoption of a war economy is a certain prerequisite to war. Thus the bloody struggle of the last decade, which was a disgrace to the human family, resulted largely from the spirit of materialism of the two decades preceding it.

Remarkable Ability and Inability

Today, history is again repeating itself. We are now in a period comparable to that of the 1920's. We have adopted the same philosophy—"everyone for himself." Everyone is struggling to accumulate all the material possible before he dies a premature death of heart failure. One needs to spend only a short time in any section of the United States to discover that the central interest of almost everyone is materialistic gain. Many Christian people have demonstrated a remarkable ability in accumulating materialistic possessions, but not all have demonstrated an equal ability in knowing how to surrender them to God for the extension of His Kingdom.

The Mental Hospitals Will Be Filled

If the Christian Church places its faith and trust in the material of the world, it will perish with it. Scholars of economics are conscious of the fact that we are still inflating an economic balloon that will burst just like the one of 1929. When the balloon bursts those who have placed their faith in material will suffer. The mental hospitals will be filled with those whose sole purpose in life was to acquire wealth. Perhaps within this group will be many professing Christians who found it easy to live a Christian life so long as God blessed them with material possessions.

The Seed Bed for Communism

We hear much today about communism, and many fear that it may eventually spread to all sections of the world. The word "materialism" is perhaps much more dangerous than the word "communism"—that much closer to our everyday life. The reason that we should fear communism is largely because it is the political conclusion to extreme economic materialism So long as there is an extreme unequal distribution of wealth resulting from selfishness, the world will be endangered by some totalitarian monster similar to communism or even worse. The world is made up of those who have and those who have not. When the "have nots" become sufficiently large in numbers and the "haves" in economic resources, the evident conclusion is conflict and struggle. The logical conclusion of the struggle for materialistic possessions is a situation of exterme unequal distribution of wealth. When this situation becomes acute and people are exploited to the point where they are starving, they will follow any

Are we conscious of the fact that one human personality is worth more than all the material possessions of the world? . . . (then) why do we spend a life time in acquiring all the material possessions possible, and so little time in helping develop human personality to the level God would have it?

"ism" that offers them bread. This situation which results from the spirit of materialism is the seed bed for communism or some other type of totalitarianism. If the present materialistic conflict results in war, it may mean the complete destruction of man.

The Church Needs Purging

What can the Christian people of the world do to pervent the situation toward which we are rapidly moving? Shall we just accept what appears to be inevitable and passively wait for the outcome? No! Complacency has never been the solution to any problem. The Church needs to purge itself of the selfish spirit if materialism which is boring into the very heart of the Christian faith. All Christian peoples of the world should begin to evaluate their motives. Is our primary motive for conducting a business that of the accumulation of profits, or is it to contribute toward the economic, social, and spiritual welfare of our fellowman? Is my primary motive to accumulate wealth that, of giving me religious prestige among my fellow churchmen or among my business associates? The Christian's method of evaluating his motives is to determine whether or not his desire is for selfglorification or for the glorification of God.

Reaping the Materialistic Harvest of War

When war comes we are accustomed to attributing it to the selfishness of the world but we are perhaps too slow to admit that the same spirit of selfish materialsm is also prevalent among church people. The Church cannot hope to have very much influence in promoting the principles of the Kingdom among the people of the world if its own members possess the same materialistic motives of the people of the world. Some who ask exemption from military participation are frequently misunderstood because they as Christians do not exempt themselves from reaping the materialistic harvest of war. To be separated from world standards certainly applies as much or more to materialistic motivation as to the other standards proclaimed by the church.

God's Price on Human Personality

Those who have made studies of the world's resources tell us that the earth possess sufficient resources to enable its total population to enjoy a comfortable living if those resources were properly distributed. What then is wrong with a society in which the majority of the people live in poverty and want? Do the American Christians realize that there are far more people in the world who live below their living standards, than live above them? Do they realize that millions of the people over the world would gratefully welcome our animal houses as living dwellings? There are millions of people in China, Japan, Puerto Rico, Java, Russia, and India who would consider themselves fortunate to be able to live in an American farmer's chicken house. And yet we ask why these unfortunates of the world fall for the various "isms" which offer them bread in return for political allegiance. Many of our Christian brethren would not have fifty of their chickens in a shack that must shelter a family of twelve members. Do we as Christians overlook God's price on human personality? Are we worth more than all of the material possessions of the world? If we are conscious of this fact, why do we spend a lifetime in acquiring all of the material possessions possible, and so little time in helping to develop human personality to the level to which God would have it?

Only Stewards Not Owners

Not until God's people come to accept the philosophy that they are only stewards of God's resources and not the owners, can they have much influence within a materialistically minded society. The first principle of Christianity is the complete surrender of ALL to God. All of our spiritual, mental, and physical resources must be surrendered to Him, and we must act only as faithful stewards in utilizing them in His Kingdom.

The hope of modern civilization lies in our willingness as Christians to demonstrate our Christian love for our fellowman by sharing our God-given resources with him, and by placing our faith in a living God rather than in the material things of life.

Indiana Women Meet

The thirteenth annual session of the Indiana Mennonite Women's missionary meeting was graciously entertained by the women of the First Mennonite Church of Nappanee, Indiana, on October 6. The theme for the program of the day was "And I, if I be lifted up . . . . will draw all men unto me." The three devotional messages of the day were based on this theme. Mrs. D. K. Lippard, a former missionary to Japan, addressed the ladies at the forenoon and afternoon sessions, and very ably presented the missionary cause in Japan. Today there are no restrictions on missions and Christians are asking for missionaries. Miss Fanny Schmallenberger, missionary on furlough from the Belgian Congo, also spoke in the afternoon, and told of her experiences in women's work. The hope of the Congo is in its womanhood. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kreider, who served as relief workers in Europe, presented the program of MCC at the evening service. Mrs. Kreider discussed different types of work which have been done. Mr. Kreider in a further picture emphasized that the consideration of the spiritual problems of the people is the first concern of relief work. He showed colored slides, which in an interesting way pictured the destruction which has brought such desperate need, and the type of work which are ministering to these needs.—Mrs. H. E. Nunemaker, Recording Secretary.

Evangelism in the Sunday School . . . cont'd from p. 5.

Drop That Small Vision

Pastor, Sunday-school superintendent, teacher, drop that small vision of what can happen in your congregation and community. Unite in a determined, balanced, continuous program of evangelism. The results will surprise you. After you have crowded your walls, you will probably want to start a branch Sunday school where you can more conveniently reach new prospects and eventually establish a new church. Evangelism through the Sunday school is almost limitless in its possibilities. Try it. Advance with Christ down this path. You will find it a thrilling adventure. —Gospel Messenger

Mass Celebration Views
The Future Through the Past

by Henry D. Dyck

NORTH NEWTON, KANSAS, October 12. The large Memorial Hall was the scene of the gathering of many hundreds who came to remember their fathers, who 75 years ago came to the States and Provinces of America to make their pioneer homes there. These fathers were the hard-working, persevering, Mennonite pioneers who have left us thriving communities, educational institutions, and Christian mission and relief agencies that are noted today for their contributions to the world.

During each of the three sessions of the day, there were stirring messages, excellent singing by choirs from various Mennonite communities, and testimonies by representatives of the various groups of Mennonites relating to pioneering times.

A. J. Dyck Keynotes Day

A. J. Dyck, pastor of the Mennonite Church of Inman, Kansas, delivered the opening anniversary address. He stated that the anniversary celebration should stir the present generation with thoughts about the past and the desire for consecration to activities of the future in the spirit of the pioneers. He quoted a chancellor of the University of Kansas in the remark that "the first generation builds up, the second generation enjoys, and the third generation loses a heritage." Mennonites are in danger of forgetting their fathers, as the people of Israel were. By doing this, they may lose the principles that Mennonites always have held high. These principles are the sanctity of the home, sancity of human life demonstrated in nonresistance, separateness of church and state, nonconformity with the world, simplicity of life, and a personal experience of faith as a condition for joining the church. Mr. Dyck also emphasized the need for unity among the various divisions of the Mennonite people.

The Historian's View

C. C. Regier, retired professor of history of the State College of West Virginia, spoke on "Pioneer Experiences and the Establishment of Mennonite Communities in the Lower Prairie States." He viewed the story of the Mennonite immigration objectively and in historical perspective. He said that in the movement of people westward in America during the period from 1860-1890 the Mennonites arrived in the West hard upon the heels of those shiftless people of low reputation but who were always first to arrive in frontier areas. They did not settle to stay, and the Mennonites, who took over their land, formed a bad impression of Americans from them.

Mr. Regier listed three influences which have Americanized the Mennonite settlers in time. These were: the American land system which forced them to live scattered rather than in compact villiages as in the old country; the free public-school system which was non-sectarian and used the English language; and the English newspapers which found their way into Mennonite homes after the English language was introduced through the schools.

From the Upper Prairie States

I. J. Dick, of Mountain Lake, Minnesota, told about pioneer experiences in the Upper Prairie States. The Mennonite pioneers that came to Minnesota, he said, were poorer than those that came to Kansas and told of their hardships. The grasshopper plagues endangered the existence of the settlement. Prairie fires and snowstorms alike threatened it. Yet the settlement survived and flourishes today.

In the afternoon, representatives of the various Mennonite groups gave testimonies referring to pioneering settlements.

The Railroads Represented

The following railway representatives brought greetings of the railway companies that have been closely associated with the coming of the Mennonites: R. C. Bosworth, District Superintendent of Colonization of the Canadian Pacific Railway, at St. Paul, Minnesota spoke highly of large numbers of Mennonites when his company brought to Canada on credit during the 1920's. He expressed the wish that more Mennonites would come to the United States and Canada.

From the United States, the number sent to various countries is: Germany, 4,532; Paraguay, 1,508; Italy, 1,014; England, 69; France, 262; Belgium, 520; Japan, 498; Java, 403; Holland, 485; Austria, 997; Philippines, 500. New Testaments in the proper language were enclosed with each bundle.

Filipino Minister Expresses Appreciation

Pastor Pablo Bringas, the minister in whose church the M.C.C. had its headquarters in the Philippines for several years, and who has been particularly helpful in serving as interpreter for the unit, was able to visit the Akron M.C.C. headquarters this week. He expressed the deep appreciation of his people for the clothing, meat, and milk distribution and the teaching which were made possible through the M.C.C. His service as interpreter for the unit has been two-fold: that of translating the language itself and also expressing to the people in the Philippines the spiritual motivation of the relief.

Voluntary Service Notes

About forty American and German young people who had participated in Voluntary Service in Europe took part in a reunion held on September 25 at Ronneberg Castle, Germany, the location of one of the M.C.C.'s first Voluntary Service projects in Europe. Speakers included Guy Hershberger and Franklin Littell of the United States and Christian Schnebele and Otto Witt of Germany. There was in the meeting a strong conviction that voluntary service is making a good contribution in the total witness in Europe.

Ina Plank, R.N., and Clara Schellenberg, who have completed their terms of service in the Mexico unit are returning at the end of October. Nurses for replacement and additional work are needed by the unit in Mexico.

Brook Lane Farm News

The former C.P.S. unit of Marlboro State Hospital has raised money for landscaping the grounds for the buildings at Brook Lane Farm. Trees and ornamental shrubbery have been planted along the entire frontage of the new building.

Roy Eash who served at Brook Lane since July has transferred to the service unit at Topeka, Kansas, and Richard Richert of the recent Voluntary Service group has joined the Brook Lane staff to assist in the office and part-time in attendant work. Ethel Hershey of York, Pennsylvania, a graduate of LaJunta Nursing school, is now serving on the nursing staff.

The highest number of patients enrolled was on September 26 when there were a total of 18. The average number of patients during September was 14 which is somewhat higher than previous months. To date a total of 53 patients have been admitted. Of these, 13 were from the M.C.C. constituent groups and 40 were from other denominations. The average length of hospitalization for patients is 37 days.

Burlington Railroad, said that his company had been associated with Mennonite communities in Nebraska since the 1870's. The Mennonites, he said, have helped to make the great railway companies of today.

R. G. Dobson, Hutchinson, Kansas, Division Freight Agent of the Rock Island Railroad, said he appreciated the good relationships that exist between the Mennonites and those who, like himself, live among them.

M. M. Killen, Division Superintendent of the Santa Fe Railroad at Newton, gave an address on "The Railroads and the Coming of the Mennonites to the Prairie States and Provinces." He described the Mennonites as farmers with Bibles and plows. He paid tribute to the progress they had made in the educational field. Institutions like Bethel College make important contributions to the community, state, and national life.

Kerosene Lamps . . . Checkered Table Cloths

There were old-fashioned kerosene lamps on checkered table cloths, attendants in pioneer costumes, and dishes of pioneer days at the Bethel College Booster Banquet at 6:00 P.M. Erland Waltner, of Bethel College, spoke on "Convictions Strengthened Abroad." Dr. Waltner has recently travelled in Germany as a member of the Peace Action Committee. He said that the problem of the world is not atomic power but human nature. Secularized education cannot deal with this problem adequately. It will yield only to an education that is unapologetically Christian.

The Pendulum Is Swinging Back

At the mass-meeting in the evening David C. Wedel, Assistant to the President at Bethel College, spoke on "The Contributions of Pioneer David Goerz." David Goerz, founder of Bethel College, was born 100 years ago today. "The Present Positions and Trends" was the topic treated by Walter H. Dyck of Elbing, Kansas. He said that although a trend away from Mennonite principles has been noticeable, in the fourth generation since the pioneers the pendulum is beginning to swing back toward a rediscovery of vital Biblical theology.

Ed G. Kaufman, President of Bethel College, delivered the closing address. His topic was "Things We Have Cherished and that Remain." According to him, the unique contributions of the Mennonites have been: their impact on the larger stream of history, especially in regard to religious liberty and the abolishment of war; the Mennonite character of industry and thrift; the ethical sensitivity of the Mennonite conscience; and their Christo-centric faith.

SWISS LEADER VISITS CANADIAN BIBLE COLLEGE

The College was privileged in having a very outstanding visitor in Samuel Gerber, the chairman of the Swiss Mennonite Conference on Thursday, October 13. Rev. Gerber spoke during chapel and then had an informal meeting with the students in the afternoon. His address during the chapel included a report on the conditions in Switzerland and an inspirational message. He presented a challenge to us all to ever seek the highest wisdom—God. During the informal meeting he discussed further the various problems of the Mennonites in Switzerland, especially that of youth work.

The College was also happy to welcome another student to its present enrollment. Henry Gerbrandt, a former missionary in Mexico under the Pioneer Mission Board, has enrolled as a student here during the past week.

The Canadian Mennonite Bible College opened its doors this fall for its third year. The enrollment of students took place on September 30 and Oct. 1. The representation of the various provinces for the fall semester is as follows: British Columbia 9; Alberta 4; Saskatchewan 20; Manitoba 14, Ontario 5.

On Friday evening, September 30, the student executive welcomed the students during a fellowship supper that was enjoyed together. On Saturday a tour was conducted through the city of Winnipeg to acquain the new students with the city and its places of interest. Our first regular College prayer meeting was held Saturday evening. Also among other opening activities was an outing to the Assiniboine Park on Sunday afternoon.

The first classes began at 8:00 a.m. Monday morning. On Tuesday Rev. J. J. Thiessen was the guest speaker in Chapel. The students as well as the faculty are indeed happy and grateful to be back and are looking forward to another year of work and service.

Two of Mrs. Jantz's children have graduated from Bethel and one is attending the college now. Mr. Louis A. Janzen, Elbing Kansas, a member of the board of directors, spoke.

An airmail letter asking for a piece of equipment needed to regulate the power output of a broadcasting unit in the Chaco of Paraguay was received by N. Paul Stucky, professor of physics at Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas, last week. The equipment is to be used in the recently settled village of Vollendam.

Vollendam, Fernheim, and the M.C.C. Office at Asuncion, Paraguay are each setting up a short wave broadcasting station for inter-communication.

LAUBACH ADDRESSES BLUFFTON

Dr. Frank Laubach, recently returned from a trip through Asia, was the chapel speaker Friday, October 21. It is his belief that Communism is winning the world through the use of the pen and its claim of equality for all races. We cannot defeat communism by war. We can, however, defeat it by Christianity if we will carry out Christian teachings in relation to racial equality, help people to become literate, provide them with Christian literature on their own level, train a band of workers who will win others who will in turn win another, and if we pray. He strongly stressed the effectiveness of prayer, and stressed his belief that through prayer the communists might be won for Christ just as Paul, the strongest adversary of the Church, was won.

The students acting through the faculty-student Relief Committee cooperated with the local church in a drive for clothing from students, students canvassed the town for relief clothing.

Students and faculty participated in the annual half-day campus clean-up Thursday afternoon, October 20.

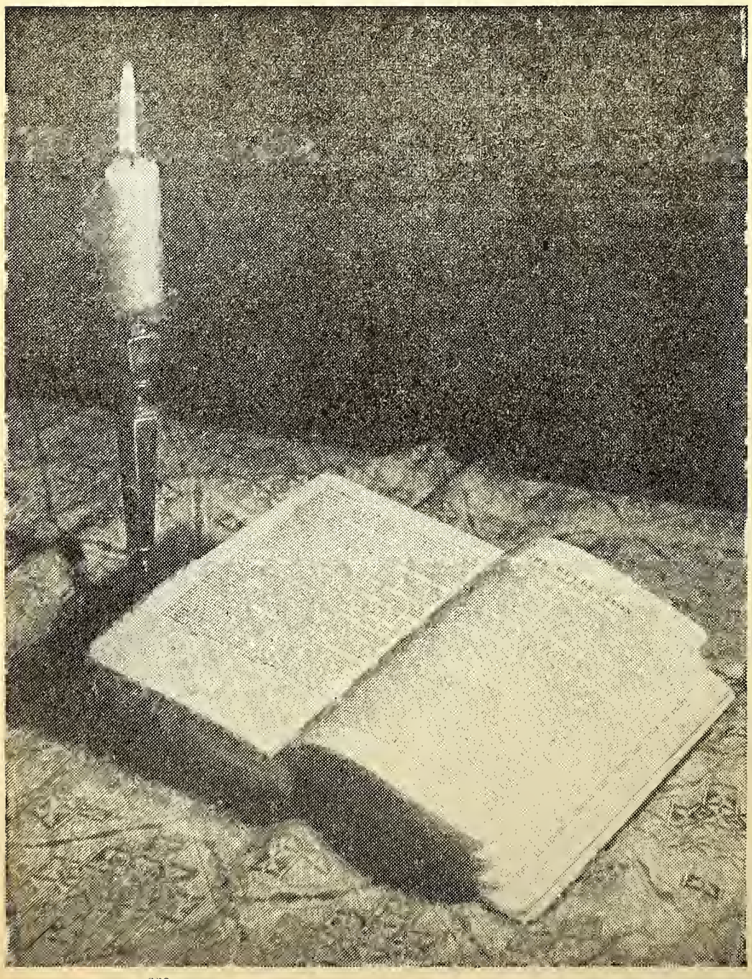
'Modern Versions' of the Bible

By Roderic Dunkerley

I HAVE put the words "modern versions" in quotes because I am thinking not just of present-day translations of the Bible, but also of similar attempts in years gone by to revise the authorized version or to render the Scriptures into the ordinary language of the times. We are all familiar with the fact that Dr. Moffatt and others have published translations in modern idiom, but it may be news to some readers that long before our day the same sort of thing took place and quite a number of "modern versions" were made.

Most of these dealt only with some part of the Bible, usually some part of the New Testament as, for example, a revision of St. John's Gospel, by five clergymen, issued in 1857, and a complete version of the New Testament issued by Dean Alford in 1869. There were more revisions containing a certain amount of correction and elaboration than entirely new translations. As an example of the former kind, we may just notice that in a New Testament published by a Dr. Conquest in 1846, in 1846, the words "and future existence" were added to I Corinthians 15:12 after "no resurrection." One of the most famous of the fresh translations of the New Testament was that of Daniel Mace in 1729. He printed the Greek in one column and his English rendering in the adjoining column. Some of his "modernizations" sound very cold to us nowadays, as for instance: The domestics slapt him on the cheeks" (Mark 14:65).

How many such revisions or new translations appeared between the time of the original Authorized Version (1611) and the official Revised Version (1881), I do not know; but I have read that in the half-century from 1800 to 1850 fresh publications of this sort, or at least new editions of them, were issued in all but nine years. And we are told of one that did not materialize. Benjamin Franklin formed a project for a new version of the Book of Job, the style of the Authorized Version having become, in his judgment, obsolete. One specimen of the kind of style he wanted has survived, and it certainly does not make us long for more: "Does your Majesty imagine that Job's good conduct is the effect of mere personal attachment and affection?" in place of the familiar and satisfying "Doth Job fear God for nought?" (Job 1:9.)



The most famous and at the same time the most ridiculous of these "modern versions" is that of Dr. Edward Harwood issued in 1768. It bears the elaborate title: "A Liberal Translation of the New Testament Being an Attempt to translate the Sacred Writings with the same Freedom, Spirit, and Elegance, with which other English Translations from the Greek Classics have lately been executed." A few samples of the ornate and exaggerated style in this quaint book must be given, but they make it very difficult to understand how even in the eighteenth century such elegance could be admired:

'Happy are those who are possessed with a mild and inoffensive disposition, for they shall be enriched with the greatest happiness this world can furnish." (Matthew 5:5)

"A gentleman of splendid family and opulent fortune had two sons." (Luke 15:11).

"Absured and preposterous conduct! Did not the Great Being, who made the external form, create the internal intellectual powers—and will he not be more solicitous for the purity of the Prison Experiences

by Charles R. Rickert

LIFE is no longer life; life is death. Initiative is unheard of; character means nothing. Despondency prevails, and monotony is the keynote of existence. What else could that describe except prison? Conditions in other parts of the world might be similar, but I haven't heard of those parts. What I have heard of in prison, and what I've seen is enough to satisfy me for the remainder of my life. I don't want to go back.

From the beginning there would have been another way out, I'll agree, and I gave that way lots of thought. I had a choice to make. My decision came after I seriously considered one large question. That was: where could I conscientiously take my stand? I chose my position because anything less would have been compromise. I knew what the road from there on would be.

On a bleak January morning I was sentenced to eighteen months for refusal to register for Selective Service. Upon entering prison, I attempted to identify myself as far as was possible with the entire body of inmates. This was not difficult. The closeness of living quarters made congeniality a requirement. The slightest pretense of superiority was always noticed and immediately denounced. One of the fellows with a commendable vocabulary was told by another prisoner, "Oh, you're so smart that you're actually dumb." Because of the inability to understand, distrust and suspicion is turned upon those who could be of the most help to the inmate population.

> Freedom is a beautiful thing. You who have had it, and I who recently had it restored ought to be conscious of our Christian heritage. There is physical freedom; we can travel, we can write, we can read, we can preach. And there is spiritual freedom; we can worship, we can think, we can chose our religion. The challenge of bringing others to Christ is still awaiting us. We must recognize our opportunity, and we must use it constantly.

For each man in prison, there was one good thing. That was food. For me, there were two good things: food and worship. The meals were alright, but that was only to feed the body. To replenish the spirit something more was needed. I looked forward to Sundays and the hour-long Church services. They were never pretentious and there were never more than twenty or thirty attending, but it was this simple contact with the Eternal that made me feel that I was free—more free than anyone else behind the walls. Often I looked out the chapel windows at the homes and highways in the distance, and at first I, too, was susceptible to the pressure of confinement. Then I would become aware of our prisoner pianist playing the hymn "Faith of Our Fathers, Living Still," and instead of being dismal, I would smile. Confinement could not last forever. My predicament was a temporary thing. The Lord was still alive, and He always will be, "in spite of dungeon, fire and sword." The song was true.

But prison was not all glory and prayer. There were long periods when my silent mood would not permit me to talk or to write or to read. There were dragging hours of walks in the evenings: walks that went for miles, yet in reality covered only a few square feet. There were tiresome, creeping days of repetitive office work. And there were the times of overwhelming loneliness.

Some may think that a penitentiary consists of striped suits and shaved heads, of marching men and armed guards on top of walls. The Federal institution of today has none of these characteristics. But even though most of the deplorable conditions are in the past, prison is still prison. Richard Lovelace, with a philosophical air, managed to write, "Stone walls do not a prison make . . . " There were many moments when I couldn't agree with his opinion. The walls, for instance, were cold. I felt them. The bars were hard and real. I watched the setting sun through them. The psychological pressure was often reaffirmed. I was frequently told where my place was by some official.

It is my hope, however, that I am not bitter as I write this, but merely critical. I would be committing a sin of omission if I did not admit that my mind was changed. A year ago I had only the sketchiest of the functions of the Justice Department. Now I have become somewhat better acquainted. I see many wrongs and I feel compelled to mention a few. The impersonal and ultra-factual atmosphere of the entire system has come to be disdainful to me. Even men need someone who is concerned and who can love them. In prison this is not to be found. I also look with disapproval at the methods used in handling various cases. There were foreign men who waited six months after making parole, because immigration authorities did not pick them up for deportation. First timers were hit with long sentences and many of them were placed in bunks immediately beside repeaters. Narcotics violators did not need to apply for parole; if they did, they received blanket denials. For myself, I have few complaints, but for others, there is much room for improvement.

My status has been changed, and I don't have to face the conscience disturbing aspect of brute force, of superiority complexes, of Negro segregation. Now, through the efforts of the Mennonite Central Committee, and the generosity of the United States Board of Parole, I have been given the privilege of spending the rest of my sentence under Voluntary Service. This is going from a wholly negative stand to one which is positive and constructive. It is a large jump, but it has created a satisfactory feeling within. I realize I am being of even greater service, both to God and to man.

One final message. I just discovered it in January, but everyone should know as soon as he can understand it. Freedom is a beautiful thing. You who have had it, and I who recently had it restored ought to be conscious of our Christian heritage. There is physical freedom; we can travel, we can write, we can read, we can preach. And there is spiritual freedom; we can worship, we can think, we can chose our religion. The challenge of bringing others to Christ is still awaiting us. We must recognize our opportunity, and we must use it constantly.

Comments by the Editor — "About the Bible"

BACK in high school, we used to have courses on literature which choked and stifled us. About the only memory of those courses is the rhyme in "The Ancient Mariner," "Water, water everywhere, and all the boards did shrink, water, water everywhere and not a drop to drink." The other memories are of forced reading of literature about which we did not care. If our literature courses had been about movie stars, football and basket ball, romance, there may have been more zip in them.

Strange, but the Bible suffers under the same attitude on the part of many a youth. What has Abraham got to do with me? What has Paul and his boat rides, David and his deeds, Peter and his impulsiveness to do with my problems and my doings? Well, strange, too, how what seemed so unrelated in our teen age has become so vivid and personal a decade later.

In reality, some of the most fascinating reading is in the Bible. Some of the most inspiring literature is to be found in the Bible. Finally, after one learns more about the Bible, there is no literature with quite the inspiration and fascination that can be found in the pages of the Bible. The Epistles of John with their admonition that "we love one another." The book of Hebrews with its brilliant arguments based on Jewish premises and thought. The drama of Luke and Acts always pointing to the triumph of the gospel. The despair of Ecclesiastes who says all of life is vanity and man's only hope is the worship of God. The debate over suffering in the book of Job. The prophetic declamations of Isaiah condemning the ways of his people. When one begins to read these accounts, he is gripped by something tremendous.

In the coming issues of "Mennonite Youth" there will appear a series of articles about the Bible, stories which reveal the weight of this book upon people through the ages and the vitality of it today. These are background articles. The more we know about the Bible, the more we shall appreciate what is written in the Bible. We need to do much reading about the Bible.

Walk in Newness of Life

By Kenneth Morse

IN one of those rich sections of Paul's letters that young readers pass over lightly because the language is theological, there is a phrase that ought to be flashed in neon signs. You can read what goes before it by turning to Romans 6:4, but here are the words to remember: "Walk in newness of life."

Does every day seem like the day before—except that you are one day nearer the final reckoning of exams and reports? Or does each new dawn find you braced for the exciting venture of living each moment as something new and thrilling? Can you predict what Harry will say when the bell rings in study hall, or do you anticipate the discovery of new friendships today? Will you be satisfied to rate a part in the spring play or will you strive for new accomplishments?

Evidently Paul had reasons to believe that a Christian's life could be a series of adventures. Not, of course, that life was a constant circus or an all-expense tour or an Arabian Nights tale. No, the newness was the dynamic of a living Christ working in a living church among Christians who walked in God's way.

There are Christian young people today, no more gifted or intelligent or pious than you, who are walking in newness of life. They have discovered that their religion can be lived moment by moment, and not merely discussed on Sunday. They are experiencing the presence of Jesus as a living person who walks with them. They are practicing the presence of God through prayer, meditation and sharing their highest moments. They are realizing what Christian fellowship can mean as they band together to witness, to serve and to share.

Our daily routine yields so little adventure because we have so little faith. We don't expect anything to happen and nothing does. But Jesus lived with great expectancy and we can share in his faith. He spoke of a new birth, a new life and a new spirit that can be ours. We can walk in newness of life.

mind than for the showy elegance of the body?" (Luke 11:40).

"Survey with attention the lilies of the field and learn how unbecoming it is for rational creatures to cherish a solicitous passion for gaiety and dress." (Matthew 6:28).

"This exalted Spirit assumed human life, and from his incarnation the most pure and sacred emanation of light were derived to illuminate mankind." (John 1:4.)

"Benevolence is unruffled, is benign. Benevolence is not ostentatious, is not inflated with insolence. It preserves a consistent decorum: is not enslaved to sordid interest: is not transported with furious passion: indulges no malevolent design." (I Corinthians 13:4, 5.)

Even Dr. Samuel Johnson himself, who certainly knew how to write in the grand style beloved of those days, could not stand Harwood. We read in Boswell that on one occasion, picking the book up, the first words that caught his eye were: "And Jesus, the Saviour of the world, burst into flood of tears"—the ridiculous version of the beautifully simple and impressive statement, "Jesus wept" (John 11:35). Boswell says, "He contemptuously threw the book aside, exclaiming 'Puppy!' "

We come now to the really modern versions—those of the present century. The earliest was "The Twentieth Century New Testament," which was published in 1901. Then followed those of Ferrar, Weymouth, Moffatt and Godspeed. In addition, there have been quite a number of version of separate books of the Bible as, for instance, several of the Old Testament prophets issued by the British Adult School Union. The editors of these last may perhaps be regarded as speaking for all such modern translators when they say that they have deliberately sacrificed literary elegance to clearness of expression and simplicity of language—"and we trust that in this way these messages of the prophets that once touched the people with such power may again reach the hearts of our own generation."

The point may be put this way. It is a striking fact that from the fourteenth to the sixteenth century a struggle took place for a people's Bible—that it should be rendered into the vernacular and every ploughboy be able to read and understand it; but in the twentieth century, because the old version has remained unchanged while the English language has been constantly altering, it has become largely unintelligible to ordinary folk and consequently many neglect it altogether. To help correct this unfortunate state of affairs has undoubtedly been the principal motive behind these modern translations, but how successful they have been is uncertain. They have undoubtedly helped many individuals to a better understanding of many passages, and their greatest value may be as simple commentaries on obscure parts of Scripture.

To solve the main problem—that of the widespread indifference to the Bible—much more vigorous steps must be taken in Christian witness and work, but it is certainly very desirable that a new "People's Bible" should be provided for this age. And a hearty welcome must be accorded to the Revised Standard Version of the New Testament, recently published in America, which is an excellent modern revision of the Authorized Version. It retains the best of the old version removes errors and obscurities, and clarifies the sense in many ways. Whether it is the last word upon the matter is, of course, another question.—Copyright, 1949

Daily Realization of God

by Glen Weimer

God is the Living Presence
Whose power upholds the universe,
Whose power continues its miracle of creation,
Whose goodness sustains the life of the world,
Whose beauty sweetens and enriches life,
Whose trust shatters the prisons of bondage.

God is greater than his wondrous works.
God is greater than human temples
God is greater than human thought of him.

As each star is a separate thought of God,
So is each life;
As each day is a fresh creation of God,
So is each breath of life his gift.
O wondrous compassion that holds, upholds, and enfolds the world—

To surrender wholly to the wonder of God's giving, is to pass into the life abundant,
to know God's shepherding presence, to live with confidence, certainty and freedom, to be nourished by life-giving bread,
to walk beside quieting waters,
to triumph in all trouble,
to pass through the dark into the eternal dawn.
O God, thy face is turned toward me— I set my face toward thee.

WHAT THEY SAY . . . . . about The Handbook to the Mennonite Hymnary

"MANY THANKS INDEED FOR YOUR generous gift of the HANDBOOK TO THE MENNONITE HYMNARY. I at once began browsing in it, and find its general resources very complete and stimulating! . . . . I have just lent the book to Reverend Emery C. Fretz, who is doing a colossal job of making a Tune Index, and has included the MENNONITE HYMNARY in the American 26, from which he has collated the materials."—HYMN SOCIETY OF AMERICA, Reginald L. McAll, Executive Secretary, New York.

Beyond Our Own

NEW YORK CITY. The church has a responsibility towards the nation's 1,500,000 migrant agricultural workers and their families—people at the bottom of the economic ladder, too seldom protected by social legislation or given the help of the communities whose crops they harvest.

How that responsibility is to be met was discussed at a conference in Chicago, last week, sponsored by the Home Missions Council of North America, which has worked with the migrants for nearly 30 years, and attended by over 100 church leaders, mission executives and representatives of such agencies as the U. S. Department of Labor, the U. S. Department of Public Health, the National Child Labor Committee, the YWCA, the New Jersey Migrant Labor Bureau and the New York State Inter-Departmental Migrant Committee.

NEW YORK CITY. Greater opportunities for African students in American colleges and universities and more American missionary specialists to help in African educational and literature projects were the chief requests made by three Englishmen, two Africans and an African woman at a meeting here sponsored by the Africa Committee of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America.

The six, all educators and administrators from British territory in Africa, were part of a group who attended a conference on education at Teachers' College, New York, and visited a number of American colleges and universities elsewhere.

NEW YORK CITY. The place of the Christian churches in revolutionary East Asia will be marked out over 65 top-ranking Christian leaders from sixteen countries of the Orient meeting at Bangkok, Siam, from December 4 to 11.

Scheduled for discussion at the meeting will be the relations of the Christian churches with the other religions of the Orient, problems of religious liberty, and the task of the churches in Communist-dominated and other areas.

NEW YORK. More than a billion dollars' worth of new Protestant church buildings and improvements are now being planned by architects throughout the country, according to Dr. Elbert M. Conover, director of the Interdenominational Bureau of Architecture here.—United Evangelical Action.

WASHINGTON.—A House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee has approved a bill to make $1,250,000 available for the distribution of American books in Europe. These educational, technical, and scientific books are to be distributed through CARE, Inc. The money was earned during the war by conscientious objectors working for the Government, and was paid directly into the United States Treasury.

ELGIN, ILLINOIS. The first 47 German high-school students being brought to America for a one-year stay by the Brethren Service Commission, relief agency of the Church of the Brethren, arrived in New York, Saturday, September, 24.

A total of 90 boys and girls between 16 and 19, all refugees, will be brought to this country and placed with Brethren families living on farms. The young people will live as members of the sponsoring families, help on the farm, go to school, and participate in community affairs.

GERMANY. The president of the Evangelical Church in Westphalia and the Roman Catholic Bishop of Muenster joined recently in appealing to the U.S. Senate foreign relations committee to use its influence to stop the dismantling by the British of the Gelsenberg oil refinery. Their action followed the dismantling order which came after the U.S. committee had announced a resolution to re-examine the entire dismantling problem in Germany. The church officers pointed out in their message to Washington that the 10,000 members of their churches who are dependent on the refinery for jobs had heard with thankfulness of the committee's resolution, but had been plunged into despair when the British ordered dismantling to begin Aug. 16. They said: "If this order should be carried through, your investigation would be fruitless, and we are highly alarmed because of the far-reaching social, economic and political consequences that would arise."—Christian Century

PHILADELPHIA. Beginning October 9th at 10:30 P.M. (E.S.T.) Rev. Percy Crawford, famed youth speaker, will be seen and heard in the first Gospel program over televised on a National network. The broadcast will originate in Philadelphia over The American Broadcasting Company and its affiliated stations. The broadcast is interdenominational in scope and is designed to reach "The Youth with the Truth." This new television program will be called "YOUTH ON THE MARCH" where the listeners will both hear and see the Living Word of God.

WASHINGTON In states with segregated schools, white children get an education almost twice as expensive as that for Negroes, according to the Office of Education.

The agency released July 29 a study of 1945-46 enrollments in the 17 states and the District of Columbia, where segregation of white and Negro pupils is practiced.

It said the average expense for each white pupil in daily attendance was $104.66 a year, and each Negro pupil, $57.57.—C. S. Monitor

The Reader Says

Dear Editor:

The editorial in the October 25 issue of the MENNONITE on four century half-truth should help us all see non-resistance as an essential element of faith and salvation.

Dear Editor:

I appreciated very much the article in the October II issue on "cooperative lay evangelism" by Walter McDowell. I am not writing critically, but in the true spirit of Christian love. We need to have more on evangelism and revival, discussions on "eternal security," "marriage and divorce," and other vital subjects.

Official Announcement

Many members of the Conference are wondering why the Orlando Waltners have not been returned to India. They had planned to sail August 26, when it was discovered at the last moment that the visa to enter India would not be granted. Since India is now independent and forming its future policy, no one can enter the Central Province as an Evangelist at this time. The Secretary will attend a special called meeting in New York, November 3, at which time all the secretaries of boards having work in the Central Province are urged to attend. We hope that this matter can be cleared shortly.—Howard G. Nyce, Secretary Foreign Mission Board.

"IF HE BECOMES A MARTYR, that would make his cause all the more potent." With these words an article in a recent issue of Look explores the possibilities of the impact of Marshall Tito upon the Communist world at large. The world at large s recognizing more and more the tremendous impact of a life laid down for a cause. This is a basic principle in life—the greater one's devotion to a cause the greater the impact of his death, particularly if death comes in the process of the work connected with the cause. Of course this principle has ts positive and negative possibilities. If one is deeply devoted to and iving by a false or wicked cause, there will be the result of driving that cause deeper into the hearts of people as well as converting people to it especially if one should die or be killed while living by that cause. On the other hand there is a similar drawing power in a pure ife that is laid down while seek- ng to help people to find God and His will for their lives. We are iving in a time when more and more people must choose, not whether they will lay down their ife or not, but rather, for what cause, yes, for what god they will ay down their lives. If we lay down our lives on the altar of Mars and nationalism, we only drive the satanic faith deeper into he hearts of people. Just witness how difficult it is for families who have lost sons in the war to accept God's way of ove in all things. On the other hand we have the opportunity to "know Christ in the fellowship of his ufferings being made conformable unto his death." We may lay down our lives for Christ and open the doors of the hearts of people to accept the savlation n Christ.

All are called for a holy vocation by virtue of being Christians, but there are diversities of gifts within the band of recruits. There are not differencs of honor within the Christian army, but there are differences of function. That is why we are not to be called, "Rabbi, Rabbi," and why we must let no man call us "Father" when One is our Father, as Jesus said, but there can be a division of labor without any difference of higher and lower. One of our worst heresies has been the introduction of differences of honor along with division of labor, but this only demonstrates a radical inability to understand the revolutionary significance of the Gospel.—Elton Trueblood.

THE THIRTY-SECOND SESSION of the General Conference to be held at Freeman, South Dakota, s less than ten months away. The local community s busily engaged in rushing to completion a new uilding, "Pioneer Hall," to house this session of Conference. Already some preliminary plans have een made. The approaching meeting of the Gen- ral Conference Council of Boards to be held at Mountain Lake, Minnesota, November 29 to Decem- er 1, will undoubtedly serve to further outline the lans and major concerns of next Conference. But a Conference if it is to be a success in God's sight must have more than outward preparation. If it is not oo early to begin outward preparation it is surely ot too early to begin the inner preparation of prayer nd soul-searching with regard to our entire Conference enterprise. So, keep the Conference officers, boards, and committees on your prayer lists, especially as they prepare to gather at Mountain Lake this month.

MISSIONS IN CHINA are not dead. That is the unanimous testimony of our missionaries in that country. At the same time many here at home are evaluating the status of missionary work there on the basis of the headlines depicting the outcome of a military struggle. What an unfounded materialistic deduction! One of our missionaries from South America said recently that the criteria for an open door is a hunger for the Gospel irrespective of closed political doors. On this basis, judging from the response reported in the China area, the doors are wide open. But we are failing in this opportunity. The new movements in China are captivating the youth. To meet a future in China that is in the hands of youth we are represented by three women and two men, none of whom are in the younger age brackets. Futhermore, mission boards are being compelled to retrench due to decreasing incomes. This means that they must concentrate upon support of those now on the field. If young people were ready it would be difficult if not impossible to send them. Here is a two-fold Macedonian Call. One is to eager youth who are ready to give their lives and if necessary to lay them down for Christ. The other is to people, who cannot go, to devote themselves to sacrificial giving and intercessary praying.

THE DARKENING PICTURE of world events is calling for radical solutions to the world's deep problems. Our leaders of state are leading us into policies of foreign entanglements heretofore unknown as their radical answers. The world again needs an Amos, an Isaiah, and a Jeremiah to stand up and speak to his country concerning the inevitable doom that will come when we trust in man and his reliance upon treaties and covenants with man apart from God. At this point the idea of "the universal prophethood of believers" ought to come into play. This will be an extremely costly process as is evidenced by some few who have chosen the method of refusing to pay part or all their income tax the larger portion of which goes for war. Most people reject this method, but one inevitably hastens to raise the question as to where and how we should take our stand and say "no further!" Is it enough to send resolutions and letters to Congress and preach and talk against a system to whose continued operations we contribute.—J.J.E.

The False Worship of Race

by Justus Holsinger

THE second false God of our present civilization is that of racial superiority. The spirit of racial superiority in our modern world. This god, as materialism, has crept into the Christian church and is eating at the very roots which secure the Church to God.

An Old God

There are many examples in history where the spirit of racial superiority has helped bring about the downfall of a society. The Jews interpreted "God's Chosen People" as implying a superior race, and as a result suffered persecution for centuries. Had they thought of the Jewish race as chosen of God for a particular commission—that of bringing God to all races—the history of the Jewish people would probably be quite different today. Perhaps they would have avoided much of the suffering of centuries if they had accepted God's mission for them, rather than to have thought of themselves as a superior race.

There are many other instances of history where the spirit of racial superiority has resulted in bloodshed and conflict. One of the major points of Hitler's program to unite the German people was to emphasize the superiority of the German people. They were taught that they were the superior people of Europe, and by right should control Europe. Even the lowest German beggar or drunkard of the street could look upon the highest cultured Jew as inferior to himself. Though building upon racial superiority may help unite a people, it tends to segregate them from other peoples.

Within Minutes, Repercussions

Winston Churchill once insinuated that the English speaking peoples were the superior people of the world and this remark reverberated to all corners of the earth and within minutes repercussions were forthcoming. This statement was perhaps a confirmation of the attitude which the English and Americans have possessed for years and which has contributed toward conflicts with peoples of other tongues.

The war with Japan did not originate with Pearl Harbor. Any student of history could forsee a major conflict between the American and Japanese people because of the American discrimination against the Japanese along our west coast. Oriental immigration was encouraged so long as the exploitation of cheap labor worked to our economic advantage, but when we no longer needed this labor then we began to discriminate against the oriental race. Each incident of discrimination from 1900 to Pearl Harbor helped to build up ill feeling on the part of the Japanese toward the Americans. Pearl Harbor could have been prevented, had we started in time to replace racial discrimination with Christian love.

We are frequently inclined to think of these as world problems and not problems among Christian people. One has to associate with church people only a short time until he hears such terms as "Japs," "niggers," "wops," "natives," all of which indicate an improper attitude toward others, and the lack of Christian respect for human personality. We can never hope to convert others to Christ so long as we do not have the proper respect for them as members of the human race.

No Other Country . . .

There is probably no other country in the world where the feeling of racial supriority is so strong as in America. Americanism as an ideal and Americanism in reality are not the same. We as Americans are quick to set up Americanism as an ideal to the rest of the world, but peoples of the world are not willing to overlook the racial discrimination which exists in our country.

It is not uncommon today to hear professing Christians make unchristian remarks about peoples of other races. Many professing Christians show in their attitudes that they feel themselves superior to peoples of other races. Scholars of psychology have not been able to prove that some races are superior to others. If all peoples were given equal opportunity there would be little difference in accomplishments. What often appear to be inferior racial characteristics are results of inequality of opportunity. Where a race claims to be superior to others, that race usually judges other races on its own criteria.

Where Feeling Runs High . . .

Where the feeling of racial superiority runs high, it usually results in resentment and bitterness. Those who work among people of other races encounter serious difficulties if they themselves possess the attitude of racial superiority. A person may possess that attitude and be unconscious of it, but it is usually reflected in his attitudes as he works with others.

The Christian who possesses the love of Christ cannot hate his fellowman. All of God's human creatures have personalities and are potential saints for the kingdom. Whether a human being be Negro, Chinese, German, Puerto Rican, Russian, Japanese, he possesses a human personality given to him by the creator of the universe. Human personality which reflects the glory of God is the highest of God's creation and no natural beauty on earth can compare with it.

The Lowest White Man

To look down upon, or to hate, another race does not bring reproach upon the hated, but rather the hater. The feeling of racial superiority frequently results from an inferiority complex of the race which assumes itself to be superior. The lowest white man with an inferiority complex receives a great feeling of satisfaction when he thinks of himself as above the most intellectual Negro.

From the Mission Front

Quite Committed to Stay

by Wilhelmina Kuyf

WE hear that some people at home think missionary work in China is finished—done for! Listen while I tell you what happened in our church here in Chengtu this morning. Twenty-two people were baptized and gave evidence that they had accepted Christ as their own Saviour and they were received into the church fellowship. Our Chinese co-workers and we four missionaries felt both humble and grateful. This is what we are here for—to see people turn from darkness to the light that is Christ. "The Lord has done great things for us, whereof we are glad." Psalm 126:3.

> "Lord, you know those 22 are all different, in age, in character, in occupation, in intelligence, in education, in size, in comprehension of Thy way, but that is the way the Church is made up. They have started out with Thee; keep them close, guard them, and may we all, with them, grow in grace, and in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ."—A prayer offered by a Chinese Christian the day after the baptism of 22 souls at our China mission in Chen'gtu on September 25.

Two College Freshmen . . .

The only child in the baptismal group is a boy of 13 who was so clear in his statement that Jesus had died on the cross for him, that the examining committee rejoiced and remembered Paul's word to Timothy, "Let no man despise thy youth." Others are two college freshmen who are the only Christians in their families. One of them, an 18 year-old, spoke briefly at an outdoor meeting we had last Monday, near a famous park, giving his reason for being a Christian. Another girl who is studying to be an athletic coach, has heard the Gospel only recently, but she had a praying Christian friend. This girl has a very attractive personality, and we know that God can use her among her school mates. Two instructors in the military academy, men of 26, have been looking for some power to tie their lives to, and have found it in Christ. One older woman was told by her husband that she could go to the chapel and listen to the Christian teachings. However, when she came home and said that she believed in Jesus as her Redeemer, her husband said, "Who told you to believe? I said you could go and listen!" Now this woman is praying for her husband. One peppy, high school student heard some Salvation Army preaching some time ago, and it prepared him to accept the message when he heard it again. He is remarkable in his enthusiasm. He used a lot of his summer vacation to study more of his Bible and almost each night he goes to our tea house preaching place and helps there, sometimes with the singing, or greeting people, or by "saying a good word for Jesus Christ." Some of the women, who aren't so quick at reading, are very sure of their salvation, they remember remarkably well what they have heard and been taught. Three of them have come under Christian influence in their youth, but have never come to a clear-cut decision. One other girl stands out, her younger sister has been a Christian for four years, and is such a happy, helpful person around the home and at school (they are both school teachers) that everyone comments on it, and they know it isn't a matter of disposition, because she wasn't always that way. The older sister realized that the secret was that her mei-mei (younger sister) was a real Christian.

The Outcome of Intensive Instruction

Most of the group have already given their testimony in public meetings, or been active in tract distribution. This all seems the natural outcome of two weeks of intensive instruction or what we call at home, catechism call. We called it instruction class and had two going, one in the daytime for those who read easily, and the other at night for people like the bicycle repair man, and the other lad who is employed in an iron-worker's shop, the housewives, and others who could not read so quickly. We had half hour each of music, the important teachings of the church, Gospel of Mark, catechism, and the duties of church members. A different person taught each subject. All of us worked much with the Bible and those who had to fumble around at first when someone mentioned I Peter, or Hebrews, or Isaiah, at the end of the time knew their way around in the Scriptures. Of course, most of our teaching is from the Gospels.

These twenty-two new members have come out of those who heard the regular Gospel preaching in the tea shop, or came to services in the West Street Chapel, or who have been in the English or Bible classes.

Not all those who came to the instruction classes were accepted for baptism, and several of them commented that that didn't stop them from loving and believing in Jesus. Some said they wanted to study more. Some wanted the spirit in their home to be different before they were called Christians. Young people are asking for another instruction class, soon.

A Lot of Laying of Foundations

Preaching is not the only item on our program. The clinic has from 40 to 90 patients a day, where the love of God is shown by the doctor, nurses, and other employees. Miss Goertz had to take care of three confinements in one night. Children's work, mostly in Sunday school and through a small library, and both summer and winter vacation Bible school, is a very interesting part of our activities. It has many small, as well as large, compensations, as when children call out to us in friendly fashion when we ride along on our bicycles, or when we hear the sound of small groups of youngsters singing the Christian songs they have learned. Other worthwhile results are that parents come to see what interests their children so, and the youngsters themselves say they want to be Christians. However, in

The Challenge of the Exceptional

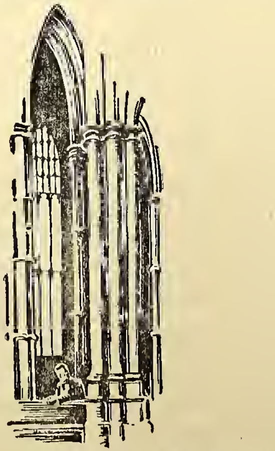
by L. R. Amstutz

MOST of us are familiar with the chapter after chapter of what appears to be endless genealogies in I Chronicles. No doubt many times we have thumbed over the pages to get to something more interesting. We may have even reasoned in our minds that while Scriptures are equally inspired they are not of equal importance. Thus we may have missed this brief biography of an exceptional life. I refer here to the "thumbnail" sketch of a man by the name of Jabez. Listen to the account as it is bounded on either side by long lists of ancestry: "And Jabez was more honourable than his brethren: and his mother called his name Jabez, saying, because I bare him with sorrow. And Jabez called on the God of Israel, saying, Oh that thou wouldest bless me indeed, and enlarge my coast, and that thine hand might be with me, and that thou wouldest keep me from evil, that it may not grieve me! And God granted him that which he requested." (I Chron. 4:9,10.)

The Sin of Being Ordinary

Certainly this is a challenge to live an exceptional life. We should be willing to let God make of us that exceptional person. Someone has written a book entitled "The Sin of Being Ordinary." The Christian should always be set apart from the masses of unsaved people. Jabez was more honourable, a word which is higher than any of the demands of public opinion. To be God-honored is to be honourable—always!

Jabez was born when the waves of sorrow overwhelmed his mother. This must have been more than just the normal sorrow at child birth. The name Jabez means "he causes pain." What the circumstances of life were that caused such pain, we are not told. Nevertheless, there must have been more than adequate compensation for the mother of Jabez in this record of his life. How true it is that some of the most significant things of life arise out of painful experiences. We are always greatly encouraged as we read the biographies of God's great men and see how the early life of testing and trial have been instrumental in producing a great life. Out of the crucible of life must come forth the pure gold.



There is no burden of the spirit but is lightened by kneeling under it.

The Dividing Point Was Prayer

The dividing point in this life was a prayer which God heard and answered. This prayer also "doubles" as a biography of this life. This prayer wrought a transformation. Jewish tradition states that he was an eminent doctor in the law, whose reputation drew so many Scribes around him that a town was called by his name. (I-Chron. 2:55) The secret of this success was a prayer. No doubt he was a man of prayer but here is the prayer which covered a whole life.

By this prayer, Jabez acknowledged that he needed help from God. Jabez saw that he was not sufficient in himself. The quicker we come to the end of ourselves, the quicker we may come to God It was Lincoln who said, "I have been driven many times to my knees by the overwhelming conviction that I had nowhere else to go; my own wisdom and that all around me seemed insufficient for the day."

Let us briefly consider the various parts of this prayer: "Oh that thou wouldest bless me indeed. . . .' This prayer is very personal but it is not selfish. The petition recognizes the truth in the Doxology "praise God from whom all blessing flow." In the creation of man, God blessed man by making him in God's own image. That image was marred and so it is in returning to God that His blessings will be personal in our lives "Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of Hosts." Malachi 3:7.

Extra-Territorial in Our Spiritual Outlook

The second petition is a request for growth, ". . . . and enlarge my coast . . " This may have been a request for territorial growth but it certainly included spiritual growth too. As a civic leader he was anxious that there should be expansion. How we need to pray thus for ourselves. We need broader and higher horizons. We are too content to be hedged in. We are to look upon the fields white unto harvest. God promised Joshua that every place where the sole of his foot would touch, the land would be his. We need to be extra-territorial in our spiritual outlook.

This biographical prayer enlightens us further, ". . . and that thine hand might be with me . . ." This is similar to what we read of John the Baptist of whom we read in Luke 1:66 ". . . and the hand of the Lord was with him." The "hand" in Scripture is the symbol of power. It also stands for the complete person. How can one explain a life like Jabez or John the Baptist? Only that a higher power rested upon them. Natural events and circumstances can never be a sufficient explanation. The exceptional life is the God-controlled life! Oh, that the hand of God may be upon us.

The Folly of Self-Reliance

Jabez recognized that God alone could keep him from the pit falls of life, ". . . and that thou wouldest keep me from evil that it may not grieve me!" What utter folly to attempt to be self-reliant as we go thru life. The enemy of men's souls is far stronger and wiser than the strongest and wisest man. Only the power of God can keep us from sin. "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations . . . ." II Peter 2:9. This is one place where Jabez did not wish to live up to the meaning in his name for he prays to be kept from evil that he might not suffer its pain.

Bluffton College

Cornerstone of Founders Hall Laid

BLUFFTON, OHIO, October 30th. The laying of the cornerstone of Founders Hall, new auditorium-gymnasium of Bluffton College, marked another step in the fulfillment of a dream many years old. The cornerstone laying was the chief event of a day in which Bluffton College welcomed to its campus the parents of the students. Among the speakers of the day were J. N. Smucker, pastor of the First Church of Bluffton and President of the General Conference, and George Stoneback, alumnus of the college, and pastor of the Mennonite Church, Fairfield, Pennsylvania.

Wide Interest Centers in College

The program of the laying of the cornerstone was distinctive in its portrayal of the wide representation of interest centering in the college. Among those participating were V. C. Oppermann, President of the Bluffton Ministerial Association, who gave the invocation; Hiram Diller, representative of the Pandora community and of the Bluffton College Alumni Association, who gave greetings from Pandora; Arden Baker, Mayor of the Bluffton City; J. S. Slabaugh, a physician of Nappanee, Indiana, representing the College Board of Trustees who also laid the stone; E. J. Bohn, President of the Middle District Conference and pastor of the Grace Church, Pandora, who gave the prayer of dedication; and Howard Landis, pastor of the Ebenezer Mennonite Church near Bluffton, who gave the benediction.

Men's Groups Furnish Music

A brass quartet consisting of Richard Hostetler, Stanley Bohn, Kenneth Harris, and Arden Slotter, and the Bluffton College Men's Glee Club presented the special music in connection with the program of the cornerstone laying.

The Parents' Day Vesper Service immediately followed the program of the cornerstone laying, taking place in Ramseyer Chapel at 3:00 P. M. George Stoneback delivered the message entitled "Peace of Mind and Soul." The Vesper Choir of Bluffton College presented three numbers of music.

A reception followed the Vesper Service in Musselman Library.

Twenty-two individuals who attended the cornerstone laying in 1900 attended this service.

The history of the college was emphasized at the homecoming activities on Saturday, Oct. 29. Floats during the half-time intermission of the football game represented the five ten-year periods. In the evening after the homecoming luncheon the history of the five ten-year periods was again reviewed by five different speakers who attended the College during those intervals.

At the semi-annual meeting of the Board of Trustees on Friday, October 28, reports were heard from the chief administrative officers of the College. The annual audit was presented, which showed that the college had completed the last fiscal year with a balanced budget for the tenth consecutive year. All but two of the Board members were present for the meeting.

By the championing of racial superiority the lowest individual can still find someone below himself.

Within our present civilization there is racial conflict on every hand, which has resulted from the feeling of racial superiority of many. The arrogant attitude of many American soldiers in foreign lands was quite noticeable and was resented by the peoples of those lands. The attitude of many toward the Jews may someday cause an explosion and result in bloodshed. The present attitude of the American people toward the Russians is building up a situation which will result in conflict. The attitude in our country toward the Mexican, Japanese, Negro, and Italian may someday reach a climax and result in armed conflict.

We Can Never Hope to Convert

We are frequently inclined to think of these as world problems and not problems among Christian people. One has to associate with church people only a short time until he hears such terms as "Japs," "niggers," "wops," "natives," all of which indicate an improper attitude toward others, and the lack of Christian respect for human personality. We can never hope to convert others to Christ so long as we do not have the proper respect for them as members of the human race. A false faith based on racial heredity, rather than in a living God, cannot stand.

To the Negro Jesus is a Negro, to the Japanese a Japanese, to the Indian an Indian, to the white race a white man. No race should attempt to exclude Christ from other races because His love can know no racial boundaries.

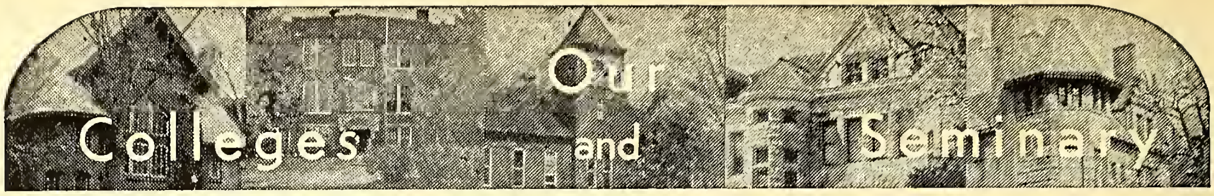
We need not taste of the bitterness of sin in order to stay away from evil. It is prevention that he prays for.

In conclusion, I would like to draw a comparison between this prayer and the prayer which Jesus taught His disciples to pray. "Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name" may be compared with "And Jabez called on the God of Israel." "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven," with "Oh that thou wouldest bless me indeed." "Give us this day our daily bread," with "And that thy hand might be with me" "And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil," with "And that thou wouldest keep me from evil, that it may not grieve me!" "For thine is the kingdom, the power, the glory, forever," with "And God granted him that which he requested."

Here are two brief prayers with points of similarity. If we earnestly voice such a prayer (not merely say it) the result will be like that of Jabez who was the exceptional man for God.



BETHEL'S ALL SCHOOL PLAY NOVEMBER 11, 12

The hit drama "All My Sons" by Arthur Miller will be presented by Bethel College in Memorial Hall, North Newton, on the nights of November 11th and 12th at 8:30 p.m. This is the play which gripped Broadway audiences for nearly a year and won the New York Critic's Circle Award as the best play of its season. It is the story of a group of people beset by guilts and divided loyalties as a result of a manufacturer's wartime swindle.

"All My Sons" is the major play put on by the college during the first half of the school year. Ferd Ediger plays the role of Joe Keller, the manufacturer who sends twenty-one pilots to their death by knowingly shipping defective engine parts to the army. The rest of the cast consists of Harland Pankratz, Nellie Schmidt, Lorraine Galle, Milt Tieszen, Irving Faust, Irma Jahnke, Gilbert Goering, and Luella Zerger. Professor W. Wilkoff directs the play.

The combined student body and faculty held a meeting after one of the chapel periods recently to discuss this year's Bethel Family Project. By the latter is meant some such work as the improvement of the parks and paths on the campus which is paid for by voluntary contributions from students and staff members. The building up of a track on the athletics grounds was chosen as this year's project. The possibility of contributing work hours instead of money is being considered.

The Bethel College A Cappella Choir and the Dramatics Club each furnished half an hour's entertainment at the convention of the Kansas Association of Mutual Insurance Companies which was held recently at the Allis Hotel, Wichita.

Following the recent two day's convention of the Wichita Division of the Kansas State Teachers Association, there was held in the Lorraine Avenue Mennonite Church a reunion banquet for teachers who have received their training at Bethel College. The program dealt with "Mennonite Contributions to Education."

Bethel College began its inter-collegiate debate season with a practice tournament at Emporia State Teachers' College on Saturday, October 29. The national topic for debate this year is, Resolved: That the United States should nationalize all basic non-agricultural industries.

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

The highlight of the past week were the E. B. Hoff Memorial Lectures delivered by Nels F. S. Ferre of Andover-Newton Theological School in Massachusetts. The core of his emphasis was on God's love as revealed in Jesus Christ which should result in a Christian fellowship which is world-transcending, world-affirming, world-transforming, and world-renouncing. He described his conversion to Christian non-resistance on 1942, fundamental point of which was his belief that the Christian fellowship as established by Jesus Christ an unbreakable fellowship which cannot and should not be broken by war. Dr. Ferre himself was of draft age and registered as a conscientious objector.

We were happy to have Walter H. Dyck, secretary of the General Conference and pastor of the Emmaus Church Whitewater, Kansas, with us during the week of these lectures.

The Women's Fellowship in its November meeting featured an address by Frances B. Snow. She is a medical doctor with deep spiritual convictions and was formerly associated with Alexis Carrel, a famous doctor who wrote the book, Man the Unknown, and affirmed his faith in the role of prayer in medical practice.

Missionary Orlando Waltner and family are changing their residence to North Newton, Kansas, where they will wait for a visa to India. He will itinerate in various churches while negotiations continue to have the doors opened to India. Incidentally, both Missionary Waltner and Missionary Ratzlaff heard Pandit Nehru here for the first time when he gave his address in the city on Thursday, October 27. They had not heard him speak in India since the Mennonite mission there is far in the interior of the central province.

DEDICATION AND FORMAL OPENING AT C.M.B.C.

Sunday, October 23, was the day of the dedication of the new Canadian Mennonite Bible College building. Together with the dedication services the College had its formal opening. On the evening before during the regular Saturday evening prayer meeting, a special emphasis was made that not only should the College building be dedicated to the Lord, but that we as Christians should also dedicate ourselves to the Lord.

Three services were held on the Dedication day. In the morning the service was conducted by J. J. Thiessen, president of the College Board. A. J. Regier, President of the College, D. D. Klassen, and P. J. Schaefer were the speakers. In the afternoon J. J. Thiessen and Benno Toews were the speakers. Toews reviewed the history of the College, the many attempts that had been made to start a college in Canada and then how it was finally founded in 1947. The students gave the evening program. Their program was centered around the theme, "Mennonites in the World Today." The College choir and octet rendered special numbers during the day as well as in the evening.

Jottings

—Hopefield Church, Moundridge, Kansas: Our Annual Harvest Festival was held on October 16. Our speakers were Mr. Jess Christensen, Mr. Worling, and Miss Floreine Dirks, from the Sudan Interior Mission. The Lord blessed us with a fine day filled with wonderful messages, fellowship, and praises to His name. The Ladies Missionary Society recently sent seven packages to the David Schrags in Asuncion, Paraguay. Some of the contents were for their personal needs and the remainder is to be distributed to alleviate a small amount of need among the refugees. The beef canning project resulted in 780 cans of beef now ready to be given to the M.C.C. for shipment for relief.—Corr.

—Busby, Montana: A baby girl was born on October 24 to Rev. and Mrs. David Habegger,, missionaries to the Northern Cheyenne Indians. The baby's name is Rachel Karina.

—Friedenstal Church, Tampa, Kansas: Our church had their annual Mission and Harvest Festival on Sunday, November 6. This was followed by the ordination of our brother Harvey Jantz into the ministry during the afternoon program.—Corr.

—Bethel Church, Waka, Texas: On Sunday, October 2, we had baptism and communion services. Rev. J. J. Voth, Goessel, Kansas, had charge of the services. There were two candidates for baptism. Five members from here attended the Western District Conference. Our monthly Sunday evening services are as follows: First Sunday, Community Christian Fellowship with a neighboring church; Second Sunday, Bible Study; Third Sunday, Christian Endeavor; Fourth Sunday, Religious films of various nature. The last film was on "Life in China."—Mrs. Herman Wiebe, Corr.

—First Church, Allentown, Pennsylvania: October has been an important month in the life of our church. On October 2 the Visitation Evangelistic Campaign was initiated, and a service of consecration was held for the workers who participated. On October 9 we had our annual Rally Day, and during the morning worship service we had Infant Consecration. On the afternoon of October 16 Rev. Maynard Shelly was ordained to the eldership and installed to be ministry of our church. The fourth Sunday nineteen new members were received into the fellowship of our congregation. Rev. Shelly's message, "The Christian's Task," was a challenge to all of us. At this same service our Sunday School teachers and officers were consecrated to their tasks for the new year of Sunday School work. The fifth Sunday, October, 30 was the climax of our church program for the month when we all partook of the Lord's Supper.—Mrs. LeRoy K. Weidner, Corr.

—Johannestal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: The Friedenstal Christian Endeavor gave us an exchange program on October 23. Their main topic was "Let us Worship Together." We sent 30 Christmas bundles and 15 mending kits this year.—Mrs. Arnold A. Plenert, Corr.

—Johannestal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: We have just had a week of wonderful meetings as Rev. D. C. Wedel was the speaker. His topics were respectively "The Meaning of Forgiveness," "The Need for Forgiveness," "The Human Element in Forgiveness," "The Cost of Forgiveness," "Forgiving and Forgetting." We climaxed the week with the Harvest Thank Festival on Sunday as Rev. Erland Waltner related his experiences in Germany of last summer in relief work. We could sum up his sermon in saying "What so-ever a man soweth that also shall he reap." We cannot sow hatred or sin and reap "love or salvation." Then he concluded in saying "Let us not grow weary in well-doing for we shall reap in due season, if we faint not." We had our noon meal together. In the afternoon Marie J. Regier, a missionary to China, spoke to us on the theme "The Work is Thine, O Lord." Among other things she gave us a few reasons why the missionaries should go back to the mission field, namely (1) God calls them, (2) Practice what they preach. The missionaries teach the native Christians to trust God and suffer and die for Christ if necessary and they go home to safety when staying on the mission field meant suffering and maybe death? That is no witness for Christ.—Mrs. Arnold A. Plenert, Corr.

—Bethel Church, Inman, Kansas: Our annual Mission Festival was held October 23. The forenoon speakers, speaking on Home Missions, were Rev. A. J. Dyck, Inman, Rev. John Thiessen, India, and Mrs. Frank J. Enns, Africa. The speakers on Foreign Missions in the afternoon were Miss Agnes Harder, Africa, Rev. H. J. Brown, China, and Rev. and Mrs. John Thiessen, India. Special music was furnished by the choir and men's chorus. In the evening Rev. John E. Kaufman showed pictures and spoke of their work in South America. Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Neufeld spoke and showed pictures of their work in Chicago teaching Bible School and in Plymouth, Indiana, with the Mexican migrants.—Corr.

—First Church, Fredonia, Kansas: On October 2 Gordon Neuenschwander returned as pastor for our church. Sunday School officers elected were Alfred Thiessen, superintendent; Mrs. Alvin Schmidt, secretary; Henry Thiessen, adult teacher; Gordon Neuenschwander, Y. P. teacher; Mrs. Sam Harms, primary teacher. A new cement sidewalk was laid from the street to the church, which is a big improvement. All expenses and labor were free will and volunteer. On October 21 Elfrieda Thiessen and Bennie Corly were united in marriage by Rev. Henry Thiessen at the Church of the Brethren in Independence, Kansas.—Mrs. Sam Harms, Corr.

—First Church, Halstead, Kansas: The Christian Endeavor was in charge of the Sunday evening services October 23. The film "The Calling of Matthew" was shown. It indicated the conditions of the time of Christ, depicting Matthew's contact with the Saviour and coming under His influence. In place of the regular Thursday Bible Study and Prayer Service in October 27, associate workers of Miss Florine Dirks on the African mission field told of their experiences. The Children's Bible Hour also convened.—Betty Jean Franz, Corr.

—Excerpt from a letter by Becky Hughes, former State Superintendent of the Pennsylvania Junior Christian Endeavor Union: I meant to write immediately after visiting your wonderful camp Men-O-Lan. I have seen camps for children of every type but I was deeply impressed with your chapel including cozy fireplaces, your fine cabins and ball field, but most of all, the fact that husbands of Christian character had actually done physical hard labor, intelligently planned and skillfully directed to back up their prayers for the church.—Written to Mrs. LeRoy K. Weidner.

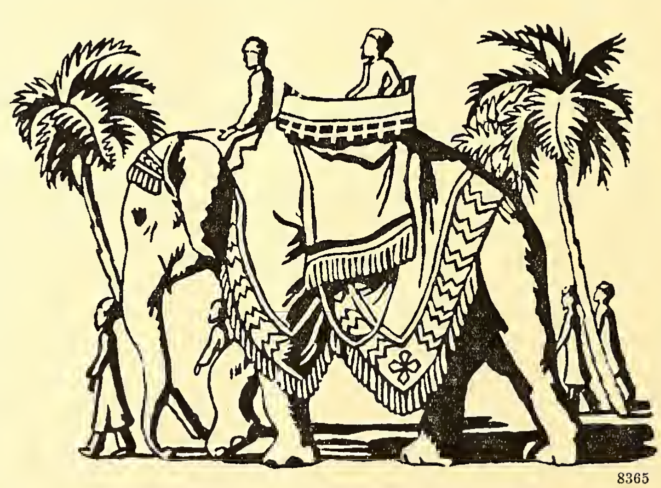
What Shall I do With my Life

On Being a Missionary

Harold Ratzlaff

One of the things which ordinarily challenges a person to work is the good which can be accomplished by working. There is something about work that challenges a person. Perhaps it is an opportunity to overcome some undesirable situation. Perhaps it is an opportunity to help someone. Or it might be a chance to join hands with the other members of the church in putting a new roof on the church building. Whatever the occasion, there is that urge to do a job well, for when a job is well done one experiences that feeling of satisfaction which comes from having accomplished something.

This is true of work on the mission field too. The mission field affords even more than ample opportunity to use all the resources that you can possibly call to your command. There is no limit of opportunity for work by which to show forth the love and grace of God, and God does give strength, courage and enthusiasm to keep right on working no matter how difficult it may be. There are many undesirable situations and many other situations which need to be improved. There is no lack of oppportuuntiy to use your talents in the interests of God's Kingdom and the more talents you have, the better. To see these situations is to be challenged to give all that you have and, with God's help and by His guidance, do something about it. When you give your whole self in an honest effort to do a given piece of work, then somehow, in His own way, God brings it to fruition and you come to know that you are a "Labourer together with God."



One time in India one of our Christian homes was on the verge of being permanently broken up. The wife and mother in this home had very foolishly fallen into adultery and as a result her husband, with the help of his older brothers, chased her out of his house. Well, it was a bad situation. There was no doubt about the fact that she had sinned, and that badly too. But it was also evident that she was partly the victim of circumstances. Then there was a still greater consideration, namely, a little son who was about four years old at the time. As far as the little boy was concerned there was nothing more needful than to reunite his parents so that his home would remain in tact. Then, too, the Pastor and the other church leaders all felt that if these two people could be reunited it would be best for both of them. Well, when we first talked to this woman's husband he was reluctant. His wife had dishonoured him as well as herself and he wasn't very happy at the thought of taking her back, although he said he was willing to do what was right and best. The woman soon realized what a terrible thing she had done and said that she would go back to her husband under any circumstances—even if it be as his slave. Well, after sometime it became apparent that these two people could be reunited but just then the husband's older brothers stepped into the scene and objected. (In India the oldest brother of the family has authority over the younger ones even though the younger ones are full-grown adults.) The older brothers felt that this woman had disgraced the whole family, and they did not want her reenstated as a member of the family.

For a long time it appeared that these men would make it impossible to ever reunite the husband and wife but prayer, patience and persuasion finally won.

However, when the older brothers consented to let this woman come back to her husband and son, they asked that the actual reunion be affected in the presence of the church council so that everything about it would be above board and thus make sure that no one would be able to bring in some belated complaint whereby the family might again be brought into disrepute.

That day, when the brethren of the Church Council were assembled for the purpose of reuniting that husband and wife, is a day which I will long remember. We thought that everything was pretty well settled before that meeting was called but we soon learned otherwise. Pros and cons came from everywhere, and during the course of the discussion many little insignificant, but related, incidents were also aired thoroughly. Consequently, the discussion went on and on, but we were determined to see the thing through. We had started the meeting at 8:30 in the morning; we stayed right through the noon hour, and finally at 3:30 P. M. everything was settled and that family was reunited.

By that time we were all very, very tired but we were happy. The meal which we then ate had been waiting since noon and so it was cold. But even so we all enjoyed that meal thoroughly because two people had been reclaimed for the Kingdom of God and, at the same time, a home had been saved. That was more than sufficient reason to rejoice, and we were rejoicing! We realized that we had laboured together with God and He had crowned our labours with success.

Aghore became a Christian in the face of great opposition. He had known for years that Christ was his Saviour, but his father and other family members were so utterly opposed to his becoming a Christian that for about 20 years he was either directly hindered from taking baptism or circumstances were set up which would make him decide for himself to wait a while longer. But finally he determined to have done with all this undecisiveness, and he was baptized.

Thereupon his father disinherited him, and that even though he was the older of the two sons. And, of course, by becoming a Christian he had broken caste so he was even put out his own home. His wife was very reluctant to leave their home. It was all she had which she might call her own. But finally, after about a week, she decided it would be best to leave the house and go along with her husband. So after sometime she too became a Christian.

These two people, together with their little nine-months-old son, were then called upon to suffer great privation. They were bereft of all their worldly goods, which were considerable, and it was only by the help of Christian friends that they were able to build a little 9 x 12 ft. hut. The roof was of straw and it leaked during the rains. At best it was very poor shelter but they endured all this always looking to Him who is the Author and Finisher of their faith.

Aghore's father now willed his entire estate over to the younger son so as to make sure that Aghore would never be able to claim any of it. Even so, Aghore and his wife endured his privation and all the shame that was thus being heaped upon them. As it says in Hebrews 11:25-26 they chose to "suffer affliction . . . . . Esteeming the reproach of Christ's greater riches than the treasures in Egypt."

After two years Aghore's younger brother died of typhoid fever. Soon after that Aghore's father changed his attitude and willed his entire estate to Aghore. Furthermore, the father was getting old so he asked Aghore to take over right away. Thus, Aghore got not only his own share of his father's property but all of it. His experience was somewhat like Abraham's experience in Genesis 13:14, where God said to Abraham, "Lift up now thine eyes."

Much prayer and hard work was spent in bringing Aghore and his family to Christ. Since many years the missionaries and evangelistic workers of the Champa mission station have prayed for and worked with Aghore. After he and his wife were baptized and so much trouble arose, many trips had to be made in the midst of the hot season to his village thirteen miles away to visit and encourage them and try to help them wherever it was in order and possible. In all of it God's hand was evident and we saw again that "all things work together for good to those who love God" (Romans 8:28). God Himself caused it all to work out so gloriously. The last time I spoke to Aghore, he was a happy man and could not refrain from expressing his joy and gratitude to God for this entire experience.

to the

Hymnary

"I am greatly impressed with its thoroughness, its wealth of information and its helpful interpretations of the great hymns. The biographical sketches, interesting side-lights, and historical settings of the various hymns will tend to enrich their value to us.

"For the author to be able to give us something definite on eevery hymn of the HYMNARY is a real accomplishment. Here is a book that we can all appreciate, and which will indeed enable us all to 'sing with the understanding also.' "—J. N. SMUCKER, Bluffton, Ohio.

Thus we see that God used the missionaries and Indian Christians as instruments by which to bring souls into His saving grace. In order to be so used, all of us had to work hard. The situation challenged every resource of strength and ingenuity that we could muster and, having thus given our all, God was strong in our weakness and He won the day. It is truly a privilege to be a co-worker with God on the mission-field! It is a calling to which you can give the very best that you have. It is a calling that can be answered only by complete consecration of self and will to God, but when that consecration is made it becomes a calling in which God utilizes every talent that you have. Therefore, it behooves us to undergo the best preparation possible in order to be fit vessels for His grace. "For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord, and ourselves your servants for Jesus sake. For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us." (II Cor. 4:5 to 7).

Reaching Tomorrow's America Today

by Lillian Lehman and Marie Liechty

"WIN a child and you win a life." This is the motto of the Children's Bible Mission (C.B.M.) which has its headquarters in Lakeland, Florida. The C.B.M. is operating in ten southern states and is a non-denominational organization (necessarily so because it is carried on in the public schools). Thousands of school children are reached with the gospel each month. Their hearts are receptive and tender. Adults are hardened to the gospel. The C.B.M. is reaching tomorrow's America today.

For the past six years we have been visiting the public schools in Greene County and encouraging the children to memorize Scripture verses. They are given awards as follows: for memorizing John 3:16 they receive a Gospel of John. For a specific list of 25 verses a New Testament, 25 more a wall motto, 50 more a Christian story book, 100 more a Bible, 100 more a week at a Bible Camp. This is a total of 300 verses. The school teachers listen to the recitation of the verses and as we visit each school once a month we present the awards to the children during the chapel period. It is our privilege to hold chapel services in the schools, telling Bible stories and teaching songs and memory verses. The greatest joy comes at camp, when we eat, sleep, and live with the children and have an opportunity to lead them to a saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ. After one year at camp each child can return for three more years by completing a correspondence course each year. In this way each camper is followed up and we keep in contact with them, and the Bible study course helps them to grow in their Christian lives.

If any readers of Der Bote and The Mennonite are interested in receiving the Children's Bible Mission Quarterly which will give current information about the work among school children in the south, send your name and address to us and we will put you on the mailing list.

NOTE: Miss Lillian Lehman, Miss Marie Liechty and Miss Lorraine Burkhalter are three girls who worked independently under the Children's Bible Mission for some time in Tennessee. They received their support from their home church, First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana. However, in June of this year, by agreement with the home church and the mission committee of the Middle District Conference, it is agreed that the girls come under the Board of Home Missions. The home church is still continuing the support for these girls but we want them to be introduced, hereby, to all Home Missions friends and invite individuals, Sunday school classes, or mission assistants to get in touch with them personally and thus enlarge the field of interest in this important evangelistic work. The girls are at the following address, Miss Lillian Lehman, Box 293, Greenville, Tenn.—Miss Marie Liechty, Box 293, Greenville, Tenn.—and Miss Lorraine Burkhalter, Box 122, Newport, Tenn.—A. J. Neuenschwander, Board of Home Missions Secretary.

a completely non-Christian background that takes a lot of laying of foundations.

It is a joy to me when students who come for English find that the gospel means more to them than the English.

There is a class in the prison that is being prepared for baptism too, and Mr. and Mrs. Boehr and Chinese co-workers go there faithfully each week.

Would Have Missed Ten Precious Months

In spite of the upset conditions of China, we here are free to carry on all angles of our work. In the constant rise of prices, the instability of money, and a certain tenseness, we see the uncertainty that is so common in China today. We are quite committed to stay, come what may and are grateful for each peaceful day. Just think, if we had gone when the first consular warning came, we would have missed ten precious months of work.

This is now Monday morning, the day after the baptisms and a fine Chinese brother prayed something like this in our devotions. "Lord, you know those 22 are all different, in age, in character, in occupation, in intelligence, in education, in size, in comprehension of Thy way, but that is the way the Church is made up. They have started out with Thee, keep them close, guard them, and may we all, with them, grow in grace, and in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ."

What better thought to show that the work here is not finished—this evidence of growth. Pray for these new Christians.

and also a literary organization was formed by the students. It is hoped that these organizations, too, will add to the college life and will be a means of promoting interest in these fields.

The week of October 16th to 19th was Decision Week at the Canadian Mennonite Bible College. Dr. H. A. Fast of Bethel College was the speaker for this occasion. He presented a series of six addresses during his visit here.

Dr. Fast's first address to the College family was on Sunday afternoon, October 16th. He pointed out the need of acquiring inner spiritual reserves to meet the world conditions of today in his very challenging message. A fellowship supper was enjoyed together by the students and the faculty and their families after the service.

During the week Dr. Fast spoke during three chapel periods and also during two meetings held on Monday and Tuesday evenings. In each of his inspiring messages the call to a more dedicated and consecrated Christian walk was emphasized. The College family is grateful for this Decision Week each year. It has again been a rich experience to all of this year..

Christian Love in Action

Robert W. Hartzler

ONE of the young women from our church who spent the past summer in Voluntary Service work at the London, Ontario, mental hospital told our congregation something of the experiences which she had there. This girl is one who has grown up at the heart of the life of our church, attended a Mennonite college, and is typical of the best Mennonite youth to be found in all of our churches. I think she was quite an accurate reflection of the spirit and value of the Voluntary Service vision.

A Bad Conscience Anywhere Else

She didn't tell us what her reasons were for giving her summer to helping those baffled and baffling people at the London mental hospital but I know why she went. She felt within her the same stirrings which have been experienced all across the church as we have looked upon the world's need in the compelling light of the gospel of love. This was an intelligent and responsible girl, and she went to London because she would have had a bad conscience had she done anything else.

> She felt that in doing this work in this way she was at the center of God's will for herself and her church.

What She Did There

She did tell us in some detail what she and the others did at this mental hospital. Here the story is a familiar one and, if seen only on the prosaic level of feeding, bathing and entertaining those who were confined to the institution it is a somewhat routine and unmoving thing. People could do that with no more commanding purpose than the pay-check on Saturday night. But it was abundantly evident from the tone and spirit of her address that what she was really doing, along with the others, was to mediate the spirit of Christ to the people there. These never glamorous and frequently repulsive tasks were not done for pay; she received none beyond her keep. Nor was there any other necessity which compelled this girl to be there; she might have spent the summer doing any number of other things. This was Christian love in action. But it was not only that of the girl herself but also of the church which envisioned the program and sent her there. For she recognized that she was at London as a representative of a larger group and that her spirit and work would be taken as typical of the larger group. And in the spiritual fellowship of the Voluntary Service unit there she found the strength and renewal to do and be her best.

I have no way of knowing what this girl and others of the unit left at London felt after they departed, but I imagine that there lingered there a glow and radiance which spoke of Life and that there was made a profound Christian witness which cannot even yet be easily brushed aside.

What She Brought Back

One of the concluding observations which this girl made was, "This has been the best summer of my life." This was doubly interesting since she has had some notable summers, including once a trip to Europe. While she had told us what went on in her daily schedule at London she didn't outline just why she judged this to be a high point in her life, but again I knew what she meant. She felt that in doing this work in this way she was at the center of God's will for herself and her church. She felt that helping the helpless was related to the will of God and hence had a dignity and worth which might have been lacking from any other effort. Through this past summer she has been confirmed in her allegiance to Christ and is a permanently better Christian for the experience. Moreover, she has helped many of us here at home to a more sensitive conscience in the matter of our relation to human need.

Some Thoughts That Come to Me

As I heard this girl speak I was deeply thankful that our church has a Voluntary Service program. What a pity it would have been if this girl and scores of other young people like her had missed "the best summer of my life"! How great would have been the loss if our church had failed to make the past summer's Christian witness among the mental patients at London, Ontario, and at dozens of other places across the continent! And how much the poorer would have been our own local congregationi if we did not have among us one who can serve as an example and inspiration to us all in this matter!

As far as we at Goshen are concerned, the Voluntary Service program cannot be esteemed too highly.

NEW YORK CITY, October 18—Five new films are being released by the Protestant Film Commission this fall and winter. One of the five, KENJI COMES HOME, is a film on Christianity in Japan. Another is PREJUDICE, a study of the Christian approach to racial and religious intolerance. This film is being distributed commercially as well as in 16 mm. prints for church and other groups. The remaining three are the first of a series of dramatic films interpreting basic Christian principles for children and young people. They are BIRTHDAY PARTY, WHAT HAPPENED TO JO JO, and THE RIGHT JOB FOR BOB.

NEW YORK.—In a resolution on federal aid to education, adopted unanimously by the Executive Committee, at its Fall meeting here, September 20, the Federal Council expressed belief that "the sound and practicable" solution would be to treat aid to schools, on the one hand, and the supplying of welfare services such as free transportation and health services, on the other, as separate projects. Each should be decided on its own merits, it declared.

"In accordance with previous statements of the Council, we urge that prompt provision be made for federal aid, for the maintenance of public schools, with assurance that in its administration there be no discrimination on account of race.

"We further urge that, as a separate matter unconnected with grants for schools, open-minded consideration be given by Congress to the need of all children of school age for certain welfare services. We believe that if federal aid is made available for such services they should be administered and supervised by a public agency."

GENEVA, SWITZERLAND. The Red Cross and the American Quakers have signed agreements to continue to look after Arab refugees from Palestine until next October at least. The estimated numbed of refugees in their care is 940,000; it is planned to continue supplying each of them with a daily ration equivalent to 1,500 calories.

An Urgent Appeal

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE TREASURY needs an income of $10,350 during 1949. By September 30 only about one-third of this amount had come in. We feel confident that churches and individuals do respond when needs are clearly presented.

Our Budget requests include $6,000 needed for Aid to Ministers who have already retired. The remaining $4,350 is for necessary expenses of the Executive Committee ($1,000); the Historical Committee ($1,750); the Pension and Ministers' Aid Committee ($600); the Church unity Committee ($500); and the Minister's Placement Committee ($500), for travel, secretarial materials and help, etc.

During 1949 the Council of Boards session is being shifted from February to November, hence, for this year our Boards will be meeting twice and the expenses for 1949 will be doubled on this account.

Gifts by individuals and churches for the General Treasury are hereby sincerely solicited before the end of the year. A gift or an offering for the General Conference Treasury will be sincerely appreciated. God bless you in this token of your love for the Lord's work.

The Executive Committee also urges careful study of the needs of other Conference Boards and Committees as presented in the "Conference Stewardship Thermometer" on page 16 of the October 18 issue of the MENNONITE

We are confident that our prayer: "Thou hast, Oh Savior, led the way through agony and death: O give, we pray, yet more and more Thy spirit's living breath!" will make us willing to share more generously in the work and service of love which is at our very door.

Editorials

OUR MODERN ENLIGHTENED AGE was ushered in with the help of three great discoveries—gunpowder, the compass, and the printing press. All three came into wide use in Europe about the middle of the fifteenth century, A. D. Gunpowder made it possible to penetrate the walls of a medieval castle with a ball of steel and thus put an end to feudalism. The compass enabled men to sail the seas and discover new worlds. The printing press pushed open the doors of knowledge and flooded the common life with secrets which had for centuries remained the exclusive possession of the few.

All three discoveries are usually credited to the ingenuity of western man, though as a matter of fact, if we are humble enough to admit it, the Chinese were the real inventors of them. Printing from wooden blocks (and tea drinking) began in China as early as the sixth century A.D. Gutenberg demonstrated the success of movable type, in Mainz, 900 years later, about 1450. China also invented paper without which the printing press would have been useless.

Publishing Christian Literature is a part of our responsibility and we cannot evade it. We owe it to ourselves, to oncoming generations, and to God. Our prayers and our money must be directed to the strengthening of the work of our Board of Publications.—L. H.

The effect of the printing press was revolutionary. For one thing, it resulted in an abundance of Bibles. They now became so numerous and so cheap that the common man, for the first time in history, would afford to own one. When printing had to be done by hand, books were few and expensive and their value was so great that churches had to chain their Bibles to reading desks, lest they be stolen. Today the Bible is the most widely distributed book in the world. Would that it were read and obeyed wherever it is found!

With the printing of the Bible came text books for schools and papers and magazines. The new means of travel and the printed page became powerful helps in the spread of the gospel. How could our mission work proceed today without the printed page? The Bible is published in part or in whole in more than one thousand languages and dialects. An important part of the work of missionaries has been to reduce the spoken word to a written language and to teach people to read. The printed word has been the means, on every mission field, to bring the Word of God, and its interpretation, to those whom we seek to win for Christ.

OUR PROBLEM TODAY arises out of the large flood of printed material that seeks the attention of readers. Daily papers, weekly news magazines, trade journals, monthly and quarterly magazines, books of every description, are bidding for admission to our homes. They seek the time and attention of parents and children. Some of this material is of a very high grade but on the other hand much of it is worthless and unwholesome and has no legitimate place in the mental diet of a Christian household. The situation poses a serious problem, the problem of selection. Today no one can read but a small fraction of the printed matter that is available. There is no great hunger for lack of reading matter. A nickel will buy an unbelievable amount of news print at the news stand. Books are offered in cheap editions, and are readily available at public libraries without cost. The problem is not to find reading material but to select, out of the mass of books and papers published, something that is worth one's time and that will serve a useful purpose in the Christian home.

Our church publications come into competition with this flood of other publications. Financially they are nearly always handicapped in the race because they carry little or no advertising. Christian publications set for themselves certain standards from which they cannot depart. They are not primarily commercial undertakings and therefore cannot follow the example of secular papers which advertise anything and everything for the revenue it brings.

Furthermore, religious publications are nearly always handicapped by a relatively small circulation. The cost per unit of production, as every one knows, is governed by the volume of output. Because of this fact, often overlooked, some of our Conference publications are higher in price than the general market would indicate. Most people like bargains, and for this reason they by-pass a church publication if they find that an equal quantity of material can be had elsewhere for less money. Church publications are expensive and no one has come forward with a solution for this problem. Paper, ink, and labor, for the most part must be bought on the open market. And the fact that they are used for religious ends does not make them less expensive. Publication Board members are constantly struggling with the practical problem of a balanced budget, and facing this problem month by month, they need our prayers.

We need good religious literature, today more than ever. The flood of secular literature only emphasizes this need. Our thinking and our attitudes towards the social and religious questions that meet us daily are governed to a considerable degree by the printed page. The Mennonite church needs to be in the publishing business. It could hardly survive otherwise. Our teachings need exposition and dissemination. Our church paper serves as a bond of unity. It is a weekly, friendly visitor, bringing news of the brotherhood, keeping us up-to-date on church activities, confirming us in the faith, and stimulating us to good works.

Publishing Christian literature is a part of our responsibility and we cannot evade it. We owe it to ourselves, to oncoming generations, and to God. Our prayers and our money must be directed to the strengthening of the work of our Board of Publications.—L.H.

For eight years he was a member of the Crops and Soils Advisory Committee of the College of Agriculture at Urbana, Illinois. Some of O. J.'s numerous other activities were: member of the Publication Board of the Central Conference of Mennonites and (incidentally, he has been superintendent or teacher of the Bethel Mennonite Sunday School for 42 years) Treasurer of the Central Conference of Mennonites for fifteen years; member of the Board of Directors of both the Peoria Fair Association and the Tazewell County Soil Conservation; he was instrumental in the organization of the Illinois Crop Improvement Association and served as its first president. There was a time when the people of God were called "the quiet in the land." But that was over 1900 years ago!

In the Scandinavian countries there was a time when the people of God were called "the readers," but I am not certain that the believing Christians of those countries rightly bear that name any longer.

These Have Served

by Walter H. Dyck

From its beginning our General Conference Fellowship has had men as leaders who have felt a responsibility in the area of Christian publications. In the minutes of our first official Conference session held at West Point, Iowa, in 1860, encouragement is given for contributions to missions, home and foreign, and tract distribution. The brethren, J. H. Oberholzer and Christian Schowalter, served as president and secretary, respectively, of the above-mentioned Conference.

At the General Conference session held at Berne, Indiana, in the fall of 1884 the following five men were elected, who as it seems, constituted the first Publication Board: S. F. Sprunger, D. Goerz, A. B. Shelly, Christian Schowalter, and Christian Krehbiel. Other board members elected, at subsequent conferences up to 1914 include N. B. Grubb, C. H. A. van der Smissen, D. Gaeddert, William J. Ewert, H. Regier, H. J. Krehbiel, J. S. Hirschler, J. F. Lehman, John Janzen, J. H. von Steen, and H. P. Goertz.

In 1917 the brethren, J. R. Thierstein and G. N. Harms, were elected. Others sharing Board responsibilities for shorter or longer periods, preceding those at present on the Board, are E. J. Neuenschwander, C. E. Krehbiel, M. J. Galle, J. M. Suderman, J. H. Janzen, A. J. Richert, A. A. Penner, and C. Henry Smith.

The brethren, H. J. Krehbiel and J. F. Lehman, served on the Publication Board for over forty years. The brethren, N. B. Grubb, William J. Ewert, J. R. Thierstein, and J. M. Suderman, each served about twenty-five years.

We are grateful to God for the devoted interest and leadership our Publication Board members of the past and the present have given our churches during the brief but decisive ninety years of our Conference history.

ONE HALF CENT TUITION

These days when our colleges are getting us adjusted to the idea of "tuition $7.50 per credit hour," we pause for station identification to tell you that when you buy a HANDBOOK TO THE MENNONITE HYMNARY, the tuition is exactly "one-half cent per hymn."

Had to smile at Muriel Lester the other day: handed a copy for persual, she remarked defensively: "I don't believe I would have time to read it." A few minutes later, looking through it, her eyes lighted up as she stumbled across one thing and then another. Presently she exclaimed: "I would just love to have one of these books!"

We figured she would!

But coming back to our thesis: tuition, one-half cent per hymn—can you beat that for real value? That is education at rock-bottom cost.

"Faith is not a way of talking; faith is a way of walking. It is a determination of the will, a loyalty of life, a great adventure of the spirit. To go forward in the dark—that is evidence of a practical and rational religious faith."—Louis Pitt

A New Era in Conference Publications

by Ellis Graber

A new emphasis is mushrooming with ever increasing velocity within the Protestant churches and may usher in a new era in inter-denominational activity. Many denominations are finding it better to cooperate than to compete with one another. Christians of many church bodies are striving to find more areas in which they can work together in a Christ-like spirit. Especially is this emphasis making rapid gains in the area of denominational or conference publications.

Facing the Facts

Perhaps this trend toward cooperative endeavor has been accelerated because denominations have learned, or are learning, that frequently, in issuing publications, they cannot do as well alone as when working with one another. There are just too many handicaps that must be overcome when each works independently, especially in smaller denominations. The facts must be faced honestly. (1) Publication costs are high. There must be money and plenty of it, to publish books, pamphlets, tracts and the like. (2) There must be editors with time on their hands. Full-time, qualified writers and editors seem a rarity in small denominations. (3) A large circulation is usually a necessity. This is a simple but foreboding fact. Prohibitive costs often confront us because a small denomination prints a few hundred, a few thousand copies rather than many thousands or hundred thousands. (4) In light of the above facts, it is all too often true that the quality of publications is affected adversely.

Interdenominational Relationships in Publications

A frank and honest consideration of such realities has increased cooperation between boards of various denominations. For instance, the board of education of one denomination will keep in touch with the corresponding board of another denomination by keeping informed of its activities, by exchanging materials and ideas, and by engaging in joint ventures wherever advisable. Likewise, a board of missions, a stewardship committee, or a peace committee will follow a similar procedure.

An outstanding example of such cooperation is revealed in the publication of the Church School Curriculum of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. These materials are now used in 34 countries and by churches of 32 denominations. Where other denominations as such have used them permission has been given to re-edit the materials so that they may be suited to the emphasis of that particular denomination. In fact, any article, mission story, denominational history, or the like may be re-written, deleted, or another article substituted in its stead. The attitude of the editor, Dr. James D. Smart, was expressed to the writer when he said, "We will go to great lengths to cooperate with any denomination." These words have already been demonstrated in action. In preparing some of this curriculum, cooperating bodies are represented on the editorial board. The result has been a course of study, high in quality, moderate in cost, with a large circulation. The interdenominational cooperation in this endeavor has been astounding! In one particular Church School publication, for instance, no less than four major denominations are using the same basic materials.

Another simple, impressive example is seen in an effective tract-folder, "Last . . . or First?" It is being distributed by the Lutheran Laymen's Movement for Stewardship. Permission for reprinting and distribution was granted by the United Promotion Committee, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the original publishers. Illustrations of this type covering missions, stewardship, church-school curriculum and the like could be repeated again and again. [Our Summer Bible School series, perhaps also?—Ed.]

Systematic Distribution Continues

Such interdenominational cooperation enriches the periodic mailings made by many denominations to ministers, superintendents and deacons of each congregation. Whether the mailings are made by conference headquarters staff, the publication board acting as a coordinating body, or the respective board, seemingly depends on the denominational organization and for our purpose is not important. The important thing is that plans for such mailings are carefully made in advance. The plan whereby executive secretaries or some representative of each board meet to coordinate their plans for the coming year and to submit their schedule for yearly periodic mailings has in many instances worked out satisfactorily. If there is interdenominational cooperation such mailings will then include: (1) Conference publications consisting of samples, charts, tracts and other denominational program helps. (2) Re-edited materials of other denominations, perhaps including imprinted materials of the Interdenominational Council of Religious Education or of another denomination. (3) Materials of other church bodies recommended by the respective denominational board responsible for the mailing. This might include recommended reading materials, audio-visual aids, and other information pertaining to recent developments related to the work of the board.

Through such a plan members of conference boards

We have a contribution to make to world Christianity—a light that dare not be hid under a bushel. Would not some publication on our peace testimony, edited for world-wide circulation be welcomed by most Protestant bodies? Or perhaps a well-written, carefully illustrated book on our Leper work in Champa India? A book or a motion picture telling of the extensive Relief program carried on by so small a denomination could serve as a challenge and inspiration to larger groups. Surely we have some doctrines, beliefs, customs, accomplishments which can serve as a testimony to the entire world reminding them of our faith in Chrit.

The Mennonite Encyclopedia

by H. J. Andres

For sometime, the need for a complete and comprehensive Mennonite encyclopedia had been felt. The idea that something tangible be done in the matter was agitated until early in 1946 when representatives of the publishing boards of the various Mennonite branches met to form a Publishing Committee to take the matter in hand.

Plans were completed for the publication of the MENNONITE ENCYCLOPEDIA as a joint enterprise of the three larger Mennonite publishing agencies, The Mennonite Publishing House of Scottdale, Pennsylvania, the Mennonite Brethren Publishing House of Hillsboro, and the Publication Board of our General Conference, with the other Mennonite groups taking such part as they deemed advisable.

Editors and an editorial staff were appointed who have worked diligently gathering and translating materials. Also an Editorial Council of Mennonite scholars and leaders from all branches of Mennonites from every part of the world where there are Mennonites have been appointed to make their contributions.

Present plans call for an historical encyclopedia of three volumes of approximately one thousand pages each with complete coverage of all essential information of world Mennonitism past and present. It is to be an historical encyclopedia of the Anabaptist-Mennonite movements as well as an exhaustive reference work on contemporary world Mennonitism. An atlas volume is to be added later.

To date the manuscript for Volume One is almost completed and is to be printed in 1950. It is expected that the total work will be completed in five years.

In this connection it should be stated that efforts are also being put forth to give assistance to the completion of the German Mennonitisches Lexicon.

The publishing of the MENNONITE ENCYCLOPEDIA is a large undertaking, and your Board of Publication agreed to join in the project only after considering and evaluating the matter fully with the officers and Executive Committee of the Conference. Further developments in this matter will bear watching, and announcements will be made from time to time as the work progresses.

The Hundred Per Cent Plan

What It Is

THE HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN of church subscriptions makes it possible for a church, as a church, to place a copy of our Conference publications into each Mennonite home each week. Those who prefer the English language may receive each week THE MENNONITE; those who prefer German may receive DER BOTE UND DER CHRISTLICHER BUNDESBOTE.

THE HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN is also used in connection with the children's papers—JUNIOR MESSENGER and the KINDERBOTE (German). By THE HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN, the church acts as the subscriber rather than the individual reader.

What It Does

By THE HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN, the circulation of our church papers has increased within a few years from about three thousand to almost nine thousand readers. The greater the number of readers, the greater enthusiasm there is for the work of the Conference.

THE HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN brings ALL the Conference news to ALL the churches EVERY week. It unites our people in our common undertakings. It reduces the cost of publications by enlarging the number of readers and securing better prices on printing. It brings the church paper to the absentee members of the church and keeps them informed as to what the home-church and other churches of the Conference are doing. It binds them to the home church with cords of love.

It brings to the pastor (or to the church secretary) each month the new addresses of members of your congregation who have moved during the month. Thus, it enables you to serve your absentee members more effectively.

THE PLAN gives each of the Conference boards an effective outlet for publicity. Are there a thousand refugees to be moved to Paraguay? Quickly the Mennonite Central Committee gets its news to the churches through the papers and Lo! it is done. Is there starvation in China? The Emergency Relief Board makes its appeals through the church papers, knowing that THE PLAN brings its news into every home and Lo! there is bread! So, every Conference board or committee uses the columns of the church papers freely. It is for them and it is for you!

Finally, it assists those who would like to have the paper, but who cannot afford it, to have the fellowship of reading just as other more fortunate brethren.

On January 1 the bill for the following year is mailed to the church secretary and can be paid at any time thereafter. The invoice is always calculated on the average number of names on the mailing list during the previous twelve months.

Unity Through Song

by John G. Rempel

I have at hand that number of THE MENNONITE which places heartfelt emphasis upon World Communion Sunday. At dusk in my northern home I am meditating upon this great Fellowship of a World Communion. What can I do?

My attention has been drawn to a letter from Newton which reminds me to write something about the Musical Publications of the General Conference. What can our Board of Publication do there?

Recent experiences offer good advice. At present I am serving Holy Communion at the various districts of our large Rosenort congregation. Our forefathers in Russia called communion "Unity" (Concord). In this connection the singing of hymns during the commemoration this fall has especially impressed me. One cannot underestimate the sermon and prayer, but it takes the hymns to achieve and retain the feeling of unity at the Lord's Supper. The spirit of "oneness" becomes very evident after two or three songs have been sung by the congregation. We can not think of our communion or our church service without hymns. The hymn unites the people.

A Letter From Another World

Our conference realized very early the importance of congregational singing. Some time in the past the old brother C. v. d. Smissen wrote me about his experiences as a member of the first Gesangbuchkomission of the General Conference. This was as though someone from the other world had written a letter to me. At that time I was assisting him with the work of the German Lektionshefte and thus he was aware that I was busily working at the manuscript of the new German Hymnary. The GESANGBUCH MIT NOTEN has experienced a number of reprints and a sale of approximately 40,000 copies. That was a great work! Both homes and churches in Canada and United States have been and are still being blessed through it.

Those immigrants who came here during 1923-1927, (numbering approximately 21,000) settled largely in already established settlements, many, however, organized separate districts. Here the Home Mission Board did a remarkable work in view of the fact that at least 125 churches were built in cooperation with these settlers. In all these churches the hymns are still mostly in German.

They Missed Certain Songs

Most of these newcomers seemed to prefer the GESANGBUCH MIT NOTEN, but they missed certain songs which had become very dear to them during the time of stress and strife. They were unwilling to part with these. Here then one thing aided the other. A new hymn book was desired and the old plates were worn out (40,000 times paper had passed over them).

Thus the work for a new hymn book began. Even though it took years, yet the venture was a success. The committee selected the best hymns from the GESANGBUCH MIT NOTEN and combined them with the best hymns from the hymnary from Russia besides other good hymns. The result was the present GESANGBUCH. The responsibility for the financial obligations of this work was taken by the Board of Publications.

The dear, late brother J. R. Thierstein, then the Chairman of this Board, wrote me, "Why do you wish a German Hymnary in Canada, you will soon want an English one anyway." However, when this idea persisted brother Thierstein gladly consented. The first printing of the GESANGBUCH was 6,000. In less than a decade three issues of a total of 18,000 books have been sold. The requirements for more books will necessitate a fourth reprint as soon as possible. I am confident the Board of Publications will see to it.

That's the Way Things Happen

At the time when I had completed the manuscript for the new GESANGBUCH and forwarded it to Thierstein, I waited patiently as to what would happen next. Perhaps to ease my waiting the dear doctor sent me a copy of the English HYMNARY, just off the press. with my name neatly engraved on the cover. On paging through it I could only form one conclusion! Well done! "That will be a worthy partner to our GESANGBUCH." When the manuscript for the German Hymnary, which was now in Newton, was handed to the late C. E. Krehbiel for his inspection he made the remarks (according to what he then wrote in the BUNDESBOTE) "This will be a worthy partner to the Hymnary." That's the way things happen.

However, the hymnary is an excellent book. We in Rosthern have a good supply of both the GESANGBUCH and the HYMNARY. The German hymns are used Sunday morning and the English ones largely on Sunday evenings during our English services and Christian Endeavors. Thousands of copies of the HYMNARY have been sold and it would be very commendable if our General Conference churches would all use this book. Here in Canada wherever the necessity for English hymns is felt we encourage the people to buy the HYMNARY.

And Now . . .

And now the HANDBOOK TO THE HYMNARY has become the worthy companion of the Hymnary. I have been approached by our Canadian conference to write a similar book for our GESANGBUCH—UNSER GESANGBUCH UND SEINE LIEDER. Now I have an excellent model that will ease my task considerably. I only fear that my work will not nearly measure up to the quality of the HANDBOOK TO THE HYMNARY. However, the Board of Publications has placed its confidence in me and declared itself willing to have this book published. In view of this we may proceed, with the help of God.

On my desk, too, is the German song book for children. This contains many of the precious children's

by B. Bargen

Frankly, this article is going to require a little thinking—don't be afraid.

We cannot summarize the financial affairs of the Board of Publication in one statement which shows clearly "where it hurts." Sometimes our good friends in the Conference want to know why we don't do this and why we don't do that. This statement shows why—look at it.

Here you have the major publications of our General Conference group under three heads—"weeklies," "quarterlies," and "specialties."

To the right of each one, you read, across: what it costs to put it out, what the income is derived from it since January 1 of this year, and, finally, whether there was a loss or a saving.

Note that as a general rule our weeklies are a money-losing proposition, but our quarterlies "save" money for the Conference.

Remember the story of the dream of Pharaoh? Remember how the lean years ate up the fat years? That's where it hurts. In our Conference publications our weekly publications eat up all the savings of our quarterly publications, and there is nothing left for those fine "specialties" which are always coming along saying, "Please publish me" or "Why don't you put us into print?" Splendid publications—fine manuscripts—but what can we tell them if the "lean years swallowed up the fat years"?

The long and the short of it is simply this: granted sufficient working capital to put out some of these fine manuscripts, the sales would soon "earn their own way"—but that working capital is just what we don't have—and there is no way to get it except by gifts or loans. Note that in the statement above if it were not for the gifts from the Sunday schools and the churches, as well as some helpful individuals, the Board of Publication would soon have to go "out of business." Not even the Sunday school services (merchandising services) pay for themselves—not quite!

Perhaps it is not to be expected that every "child" of the Conference publications family must "pay for itself," and yet taken as a whole it does seem only reasonable and logical that the selling price of all of our Conference publications taken as a group should be sufficient to pay for all the costs, taken as a group.

We believe that in the long run—over the years—these publications will sell out and will earn their own way; but during cycles when prices are very high, as at present, it is extremely difficult to come out even. Amidst the flood of filth and trash on the literature market, there must be islands of solid, good reading. There lies the hope of our whole General Conference program—help us to put real quality into every publication and in the long run it will win out. Books like C. H. Wedel's writings on church history, written in 1900 are even now going through reprinting after reprinting—they had quality and quality always tells.

What's New in Publications?

The evidence is quite clear that our General Conference people want good books.

Of the publication of many books, there is no end, someone has said, but the publication of good books is no easy matter. It is easy to publish new books, but to publish new good ones is another matter.

Here are a few of the books which were born during the recent months:

1. OUR SUMMER BIBLE SCHOOL SERIES—rather, the first half of the series—of six graded volumes designed mainly for the so-called Vacation Bible School needs. Really, we should say twelve, not six, because for each pupil's book there is the corresponding teacher's handbook. This series is being piloted by Mrs. H. J. Andres, editor-in-chief of this series, cooperating very closely with the Old Mennonites, this part being a part of their so-called Herald Summer Bible School Series.

2. THE MASTER CALLETH FOR THEE—piloted by the various boards of our Conference, but mainly the Board of Education, with the thought of giving our young people some idea of the "call" of our various Conference fields of work for youth today. There are rumors abroad that that book is now going to be translated into the German to help our South American brethren.

> It is easy to publish new books, but to publish new good ones is another matter.

3. HANDBOOK TO THE MENNONITE HYMNARY—we have said so much about this book and so have many others that we'll pass it up here except just to surpise you by telling you that the first edition is about half gone, within five months of the publication, and it begins to look like it is going to be a repeater. We don't mind.

4. FROM THE STEPPES TO THE PRAIRIES, prepared by the Historical Committee of the General Conference—must we say it again—to celebrate the Diamond Anniversary of the coming of the Mennonites to the Prairie states, both here and in Canada. Canadians, please note!

5. New editions—that is, additional printings—perhaps are worthy of mention at least; surely, here they are: the CATECHISM, the GESANGBUCH, the MENNONITE HYMNARY, the HISTORY OF THE MENNONITES, and the 101 HYMNS FROM THE MENNONITE HYMNARY—all of these are either already being reprinted or up for reprinting very soon.

6. Now on the press, so to speak: the MINISTERS' HANDBOOK is now at least, being placed for bids with various printers—and the bidders are plenty active. Look for it; it's going to be a beauty.

7. Layman's Organization is putting out a splendid new pamphlet for promotional work, telling about the opportunities of men in the work of the church. It is being put out by such men as John E. Fretz, Walter Temple, and J. S. Schultz, with lots of color and zip to it. It will get the men over their feelings of inferiority —of which they may well have a little considering how much the women in the Conference are doing. Watch for this splendid little poster—and then do what it says.

8. REALLY new—the Young People's Union of the General Conference is putting out some program helps—a monthly mailing of special helps for special purposes. October issue, for instance, is on "Missions," and the November issue is on "Stewardship and Thanksgiving." This is a good beginning which holds promise of really helping your young people's meetings.

9. JUNIOR HYMNAL is now in the process of editing—so it can hardly be called one of the "new publications," yet, can it—but it's definitely on the way and it will be something! Tentative plans have been endorsed by some of the highest musical experts in hymnody.

10. While we are mentioning some that are "in process" we might as well mention the MENNONITE ENCYCLOPEDIA—first volume scheduled sometime in 1950 (we hope, we hope). Also we might mention the German translation of the HISTORY OF THE MENNONITES—but we better not tell you about that, not yet. There is a real story connected with that which we'll tell you later.

Looks like the General Conference Board of Publication has some work ahead, doesn't it?

Jottings will be found on page 19

PRE-WAR Prices

By and large the prices of our General Conference Publications have not increased. And that, while printing costs have increased more than 100 per cent!

Increasing prices is not a cure-all for the difficulties which beset any publisher. Increasing the price does not necessarily increase sales. Increasing the price may, actually, decrease the use of our Conference publications among our people. Just increasing the price is a dangerous business.

The alternative is to increase the use of our publications through making them better publications, more worthy, at the same time getting a larger circulation and making up whatever deficit this policy may cause through direct contributions from our churches as well as from individuals.

Improving the quality of our production does not necessarily increase the cost, but usually it does. Improving the quality often means more time given to editorship, more time given to the form and arrangement, and often better quality of materials such as paper, binding, etc.

We cannot win our children nor adults into the kingdom of God with poor workmanship—sound materials and sound service are basic!

From Writer to Reader

A Pilgrimag

"Where the pilgrimage begins" the acting Editor at his desk.

8739

"Words gather words" in research by men like Cornelius Krahn, Assistant Editor of DER BOTE 8741

"Back to Headquarters" 860

When the average reader picks up the issue of THE MENNONITE just left by the postman and gleans an idea here or there, he stands at the end of a long process by which the words that convey the idea, flow out of the mind and pen of the writer, later to be typed, mailed, edited, molded into type, placed in the page, corrected, printed, cut and stapled into magazine form, addressed, mailed again many times multiplied, and finally received and read.

A "Slow-Motion" Review

To get a "slow-motion" review of this process, suppose we take the idea expressed in the words "justification by faith" and see what happens to them as they make their journey from writer to reader. The whole pilgrimage starts in the master folder of the Editor which contains blank forms called master sheets for the plans of every issue of THE MENNONITE for a six-months period. Weeks and sometimes even months in advance, the Editor looks through these sheets and comes to the master sheet for the issue to come out for the week just before Reformation Sunday. On the master sheet are listed the various types of articles that should appear regularly in a church weekly such as "missions," "church problems," "personal spiritual problems," "church year," and others. Since Reformation Sunday follows the publication date of this issue, "justification by faith" is jotted down as a subject for the "church year" article of that issue, together with a possible writer for such an article.

Jump to Life Again

The next step in the pilgrimage of the words is from the master sheet to the Ediphone cylinder. The Ediphone is an instrument into which the Editor speaks and which records the letter requesting the writer to prepare the article. The words lie quiet and hidden for several hours on the cylinder until the secretary slips the cylinder onto the machine that "plays" the letter back into sound by way of earphones at her ears. Thus, the words "justification by faith" jump to life again from the cylinder into sound waves and before the sound waves are gone the words are already being typed on the letter which is later signed and sealed and off to the potential writer.

Assuming that the writer responds, which sometimes is not the case, a wholly new and different process begins. Using the words "justification by faith" the writer begins a long process of research that often includes the Bible, concordances, dictionaries, encyclopedias, church histories, and other books. Soon these three words have gathered to themselves a thousand or more other words to make them more meaningful.

In this large new environment our "three words" find themselves tucked in an envelope and on their journey, sometimes by air, back to "Headquarters" at 722 Main. Here the article is read and corrected to make it grammaticaly uniform with the rest of the paper. For most people know that grammar is inflexible in some of its rules and flexible in others. Many articles need corrections of the first kind and most need corrections of the second.

Giving the Idea Hands

To provide the hand by which the idea reaches out and introduces itself to the reader and wins his attention, is the important task of the Editor as he furnishes the title or heading for the article. Then the article receives a number of sub-heads which break up the material, give the hurried reader an opportunity for more efficient scanning, and may serve to attract readers to certain parts and thus to the whole article. A further step may be to select a crucial statement in which the idea speaks in trumpet-like clarity and set it off in a special box for those who don't even have time to scan. Then again the idea may also be introduced by a suitable photograph or drawing.

But this is only one of a family of articles being planned for the Reformation Sunday issue. This makes it necessary to decide on the particular page on which the article is to appear. The title together with the titles of the other articles is then copied for the table of contents and for the man at the print shop whose special duty is to set the larger type headings. A brief identification of each of the writers is formulated for the "Of Your Pen Acquaintance" column. This is what the printer and editor call the "copy" stage—the materials from which the printer works in setting up the type.

Another Crew of Workmen

Now another crew of workman, the printers, help our three words along their pilgrimage through print. There is the foreman who gives all the specifications for setting up of all type whether it be heads, body, or inserts; the linotypist puts the bulk of the standard reading material on slugs of lead, the length of the column-width—thick slugs for the usual reading matter and thin slugs for the "Jottings" (so that we can get all the jottings received in one week into the paper if at all possible). Only the man setting the heads sets each letter separately.

"The Earnest of Things to Come"

After the three words have found their way onto the lead, they make a brief trip back to the Editor in the form of long columns of material called "galley" proofs. All the materials are carefully cut out of the long sheets on which they are printed and then pasted on pages the exact size of the MENNONITE as it is to come to the reader. This then becomes the master-issue for thousands of copies—the "earnest of things to come."

Back to the printer our words go to find themselves in the proper space on the proper page in their lead form. Another of the printers has the duty of blocking together the type for the sixteen pages. Then he makes a copy of each page as it is set up. Our words find themselves shuttling back to the Editor and his helpers in the form of "page-proofs." Here the last proof-reading is done. (If there is a mistake in any regular line of print, the whole line, of course, must be pulled out of the form and reset.) After all the pages are carefully corrected the material goes back to the printer again who in turn makes the correction.

From the table the "three words" in leaden form with all their companion words are now placed in the big press where a final copy called the "press-proof" is made. In this form the three words make their last visit to the Editor before they impress themselves 8,000 times on clean white newsprint; the editor scans for any errors made while correcting the earlier mistakes. With the Editor's "go" signal the press man takes over.

Now the pilgrimage of words is a rather varied one. Sheets large enough for two copies of THE MENNONITE are run through the press once—4,000 of them. They are run through again to print the other side being cut in two at the same time. Then the man in charge of the folding and stapling takes the large sheets, each of which is one whole MENNONITE, from the press man to his machines. When he is through, the cutter trims large stacks of the paper and they are ready to go back to "Headquarters" again, not to the Editor but to the mailing department.

"Personalize" Treatment

Here our "three words" receive more individual and "personalized" treatment again as each issue receives a different address from the Addressograph. This unusual machine makes it possible to group papers going to the same town, together and yet address many thousands in one day. The groups are rolled into bundles; (if your last name starts with A, B, or C, your paper may often come to you torn as the result of your post-office clerks opening a bundle with your paper on the outside.) Then the bundles are dropped into one or the other of some thirty mail sacks to be taken to the post office scattered via train, auto, ship, and plane to the far corners of the earth and to you.

Thus our three words "justification by faith" come under your eye via the printed page not only pleading that their pilgrimage may not stop leaving them in cold lifeless form on paper, but rather that they may continue their pilgrimage by being taken to heart with "the word becoming flesh" and published abroad by your lives.

and committees can find an open door to new opportunities and greater responsiblities. The cooperative relationship with corresponding boards is a challenge and stimulus toward being better equipped and informed. All this should enable them to be of greater service to their constituency. Those who have the opportunity of seeing what is accomplished through such well-planned periodic mailings in larger denominations will heartily welcome such valuable helps, especially when they reflect the enriching quality that can come from interdenominational cooperation.

A Respect for Denominations

One should not infer from the above that all this means a merger of denominations, or that any implication is being made that denominations as such have no place. To the exact contrary, the emphasis is on "inter-denomination" rather than "non-denomination." Each denomination may keep its identity and can make its desired emphasis. There is a respect for denominations. Yet without carrying a chip on its shoulder, the particular church body need not be apologetic for its name or for the good it embodies. We rest upon the conviction that the things a church body stands for must be Christian; that being a Mennonite, a Methodist or a Baptist ought to be synoymous with being a Christian. As such we can join in a united front.

Mennonites Have a Contribution to Make

Those denominations willing to share, to give, to receive, to cooperate will receive benefits in return. Large denminations can learn from the small and the small from the large. Mennonites should not only receive, they can also give. We have a contribution to make to world Christianity—a light that dare not be hid under a bushel. Would not some publication on our peace testimony, edited for world-wide circulation, be welcomed by most Protestant bodies? Or perhaps a well-written, carefully illustrated book on our Leper work in Champa, India? A book or a motion picture telling of the extensive Relief program carried on by so small a denomination could serve as a challenge and inspiration to larger groups. Surely we have some doctrines, beliefs, customs, accomplishments which can serve as a testimony to the entire world reminding them of our faith in Christ.

An Urgent Matter

We can not waste time or effort. With the clever forces of evil becoming stronger and the secular world competing against Christianity the church of Jesus Christ faces a tremendous, overwhelming task. We need to find the quickest way, use the best materials, and apply the most effective methods for spreading the gospel. To do this Christians will have to stand together under the banner of their Lord. But standing together, face to face, and working together is not always easy. Cooperation is seldom easy. It means taking as well as giving, sharing, tolerance and patience! But with faith, much prayer, a great deal of planning, and real promotion the day will come. Our Lord's prayer, ". . . that they all may be one," shall be answered. Independently, and yet dependent on one another, Christians of all denominations should and will work together. There is no better time to begin than now.

The Annual Index

Each year for three years, the Board of Publication has issued an index to THE MENNONITE. In the past this has been one of the regular issues of THE MENNONITE. In the future it will be a separate publication.

Not everyone needs or appreciates the "Index." Those who do need it appreciate it tremendously. In this index every article or subject treated in the columns of our church paper, THE MENNONITE, are arranged in one continuous, alphabetical index. With an index in hand, program committees can find materials on a moment's notice. Churches looking for historical matter on a given movement—of their own church, for instance—can trace the recorded events without difficulty.

An index like that to be of real value must be thoroughgoing. It is no off-hand affair. All year the editor in charge of the work scans every article and makes individual slips of every name, every place, every idea or topic discussed and indicates on each slip the issue number and the page on which the reference occurs. Toward the end of the year these thousands of slips are sorted alphabetically so that when the last issue is complete the final slips can be made and the entire batch of slips arranged in exact alphabetical order.

These slips are now typed in list form, on sheets of paper ready for the printer, thus placing on permanent record a thoroughly usable tool for research and effective study.

Many ministers appreciate this index to assist them in finding sermon materials or authentic information to stop false rumors, give accurate information, etc.

The index is available to all who call for it—but, of course, only a limited edition is available—the quantity printed having been determined by the number of requests received.

Do you want a copy of the 1949 Index? Better say so, NOW—while it is in the process of preparation.

UNITY THROUGH SONG . . . Continued from p. 9.

songs which I frequently quote in the KINDERBOTE. A similar English children's song book is to follow.

A Union of Two Worlds

While I was looking for an article in my files I happened to get hold of the song "Wo du hingehst." This was sung beautifully to us at Rosthern by the Bethel College choir. But the main thing was this, that that song united America and Europe. It was originated in Europe as an acknowledgement of aid received from America. That's how the links in a chain are forged; from World Communion Sunday mentioned at the outset we have come to a song printed by our Publication Board that has served the idealistic thought of a union of two worlds; worlds that only yesterday were submerged in the bitterest bloodshed, but today clasp the hand of brotherhood through material aid and song.

Let us by all means continue to sing. But let us also continue to support this worthy branch of General Conference mission endeavors for which the Board of Publications is responsible.

The Bookstores

AT ROSTHERN, SASKETCHEWAN

There is a Mennonite Book Store at Rosthern, Saskatchewan that has been functioning since July 1947. This is what so many of our Canadian Mennonites do not know as yet, but we are happy to notice that we are continually adding new names to our order list.

From this store we have the pleasure of sending many books as far west as British Columbia and as far east as Ontario, although the names of the local customers are the most familiar. Sunday schools and church libraries obtain their material regularly from here, as does the Rosthern Junior College and Rosthern Bible School. Our distant mail orders are practically all of Mennonite origin, while we serve members of various demoninations over the counter. It is to this latter customer that our store is of special value and fills of greater need. Why? Because I believe that we sell about 40% of our religious books to people who come in with the intention of buying only a notebook, pen or the like. We believe that serving this, shall we say, "impulsive buyer" goes a long way towards fulfilling the evangelistic purpose of this store.

In retrospect of the many books of religious nature we have sold, be it one of our Mennonite Publications, M.C.C. booklets, biographies of great men or women, daily readings, evangelistic or fiction, we cannot help believing that these writings are of vital importance in the forming of Christian character and consequently in making this a more pleasant and satisfying world to live in.

Let us not under-estimate the efforts of the written word to mankind. We particularly enjoy selling various books by Mennonite writers from the comedies of Arnold Dyck to the Mennonite Lexion. Let us write, publish and read only that which is wholesome and pure and abstain from all degrading literature. And let more of our intelligent young Mennonite people try their hand at writing, especially here in Canada.

AT NEWTON, KANSAS

The Mennonite Book Store in Newton is cramped in space but not in outlook. A large part of the daily business consists in filling orders that come in by mail. The Newton store specializes in filling requests, and has been successful in locating out-of-print books. The store does not limit itself to those who seek it out. On every occasion the store personnel attends conferences, rallies, institutes with a full display of available materials on the subject under consideration. Five large display parcels of books were prepared for the various retreats of Mennonite young people. In every case the display resulted in new mail orders.

Fraternal relations with the other Mennonite bookstores make possible the filling of orders even when temporarily out of stock. The store is increasing its emphasis on religious articles and is gradually leaving the field of secular materials to secular stores with room to display them.

The stock has been rearranged to allow for browsing centers, better location for important items such as Bibles, and logical grouping by subject matter.

Two Unexpected Blessings

by Mrs. Malcolm Wenger

"For thou, Lord, hast made me glad through thy work." Psalm 92:4.

There is joy not only in contemplating the works of God in nature but also in sharing in His work of spreading the Gospel to every creature. Mission work has its share of difficulties and disappointments, but there are often unexpected joys which our loving Heavenly Father permits us to enjoy. Here are two of the blessings that have come to us in our service for Him.

One day as we were playing with the Cheyenne children during recess at Summer Bible School a lady who was looking in commented just a bit wistfully, "I wish my husband and I could work together as you are doing." That had never occurred to us before but as we thought about it we realized that we did indeed have a rare privilege in working together. So many husbands are away in the field, factory or office most of the time but the missionary and his wife can often work together at their tasks. It is just one of the little extra blessings that God has permitted to those in this work.

Yesterday a letter arrived from the opposite end of our country. It was from some young people whom we had come to know through our service for the Lord. He has given us a multitude of friends whom we would never have known if we had not been in this work. How unworthy we often feel as we receive a greeting or gift from some friend whom we perhaps have not even seen and yet who is showing love to us in Christ Jesus.

We have our Lord's promise of ". . . manifold more in this present time . ." Luke 18:30. Do we ever really forfeit anything worthwhile by giving our lives in service for Him?

M. C. C. Reports Clothing Contributions Falling Off

AKRON, PENNSYLVANIA.—Recent clothing receipts have fallen off somewhat, particularly in comparison with records at corresponding times in past years. Returning relief workers confirm that clothing and shoes are still needed by many people who cannot afford to buy needed items at the high prices, or in some cases are unable to find any to buy.

Mennonite Aid Notes

Two Mennonite refugees are scheduled to arrive in New York aboard the "General Steward" on about November 4. These ladies will go to Bethel Hospital in Kansas where they will be employed.

Hospital Workers Take Training

Seven present or former Voluntary Service workers were accepted for enrollment in the training course given at the Topeka State Hospital under the auspices of the Menninger Foundation. Those enrolled are: Margaret Federau, Menno Ediger, Esther Wiens, Willard Hooge, Charlotte Regier, Georgia Sommer, and Clarence Hiebert. The course began on October 3.

Brook Lane Completes First Year

The first anniversary of the dedication of Brook Lane Farm, was observed as the Advisory Committee for this M.C.C. mental hospital met recently to review the program and make plans for the coming months. To date, 68 patients have been served, of whom 16 were from M.C.C. constituent church groups. The present total enrollment is 14.

It is anticipated that as Brook Lane becomes widely known among physicians, ministers and laity, it may be able to serve more effectively within the brotherhood. The hospital aims to serve primarily in the treatment of cases requiring hospitalization for a relatively short period of time.

Immigration Notes

Recent information from Brother C. F. Klassen states that another group of perhaps 200 Russian Mennonite refugees will be included among passengers aboard the "Samaria" which is scheduled to sail from Bremerhaven for Canada on November 14.

Immigration to Canada under the plan to provide laborers for agriculture and industry will be suspended during the months from November 1 to April 1, since during this season Canadian labor needs are least acute. It is primarily during the spring and summer that Canada can absorb additional immigrant laborers. This means that the group of Mennonite refugees leaving early in November for Canada under the labor plan will probably be the last such group for this year. This however does not affect the immigration under the close-relative plan, which continues in the usual way.

A favorable decision by the I.R.O. has cleared the eligibility problem which had delayed Mennonite immigration to the United States and Canada for a time. The eligibilty of Mennonite refugees for I.R.O. assistance had been challenged because many of the people at one time were given German citizenship. The new ruling issued on October 3 by the Geneva office of I.R.O. interprets the situation more accurately.

It is hoped that United States immigration of Mennonite D.P.s which was halted for a time will again be resumed, by again presenting the cases which had been turned down under the old ruling.

Since United States immigration had been delayed, some individuals in the United States who had offered to serve as sponsors, have continued to hold the employment and housing facilities open. In a few other instances these facilities have been made available to Ukranian families whose sponsors, arranged for by another organization, were not able to actually receive them when they arived. It is hoped that the number of Mennonite as well as non-Mennonite refugees entering the United States may be increased during the coming months. Additional persons interested in sponsoring a D.P. family should contact the M.C.C. office at Akron, Pennsylvania.

Workers Teach in Japan

Ruth and Rhoda Ressler give interesting reports on the teaching activities in which they are both engaged in Japan. During several afternoons and evenings each week English classes of various age levels are taught. Worthwhile contacts are also made with child welfare organizations and institutions for physically and mentally handicapped children. There is also an evident need for education along the lines of food preservation, general sanitation and health.

Personnel Notes

Sailing on October 28 for relief service in Europe were the following: Lucinda Snyder of Waterloo, Ontario; Martha Thiessen, R.N., Abbotsford, British Columbia; Dorothy Swartzendruber, Breslau, Ontario; Wilma Hostetler, Beaver Crossing Nebraska; and Gustave and Sarah Gaeddert of Silver Spring, Maryland.

Also sailing on the same day was Henry Schrock of Kalona, Iowa, for a Voluntary Service assignment at Espelkamp, Germany.

Much Need Observed in Formosa

Taking part in a medical survey of the Island of Formosa (Tiawan), the M.C.C. workers have made observations of much disease among the mountain people. Daniel Stoltzfus reports, for instance, that in one village nearly every person had malaria and most of them some kind or several kinds of worms. Trachoma, bronchitis and skin diseases were also found to be common. These diseases can be treated, and the medical team in this case was able to use its clinic facilities to this end. However, to provide effective treatment, a continuing contact must be maintained to help the people develop sanitation and living habits that prevent the recurrence of disease. There is also an evident basic need for spiritual enlightenment. One of the doctors said, "They first need a spiritual awakening so the people themselves will want to improve their condition, then material help coupled with education in hygiene would have some lasting effects." It is in such a setting that the relief unit is endeavoring to give a witness "In the Name of Christ."

Relief Canner Begins Season's Work

The portable canner in the Kansas area has begun operation and is available for use in communities where relief canning is to be done this year. The canning of meat and other concentrated foods for relief is being encouraged again this year by the M.C.C. in view of the continuing need for foods in the foreign relief program. Information from additional western communities where plans are being made for relief canning, should be sent to Jess Kauffman of Hesston, Kansas, in order that the activity of the canner may be scheduled efficiently.

Continued Need for Nurses in Mexico

The Voluntary Service unit in Mexico has need for several nurses to work in the regional hospital in Cuauhtemoc and Mennonite clinic at Santa Clara. Two of the nurses are needed immediately to fill vacancies of workers recently completing service terms.

Southern Notes

A quarterly publication entitled SOUTHERN NOTES has recently been initiated which will carry information on the M.C.C. work in Paraguay, Uruguay and Brazil. This will be sent free upon request to those interested particularly in this area of the M.C.C. work. Address Publicity Department, M.C.C., Akron, Pensylvania.

Jottings

—Grace Church, Enid, Oklahoma: Sunday, October 23, a 25th wedding anniversary was celebrated in honor of our minister, Rev. and Mrs. A. J. Unruh. After morning services and a fellowship dinner in the basement, invited guests had a part of this. After the meal, in the auditorium a program of two hours was rendered. Three visiting ministers took part. Arnold Epp, Meno, and Jacob T. Friesen, Beatrice, Nebraska spoke brief but to-the-point messages. Rev. Unruh closed the program with remarks and a prayer. It was a memorable, joyous day for all who took part. Even the rainy day and slushy streets did not make any interference at all.—Corr.

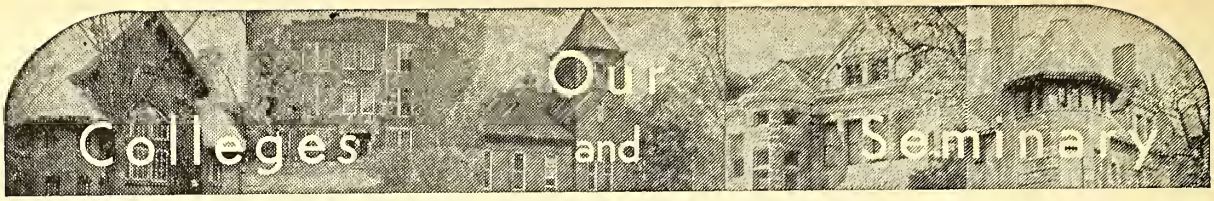
—Topeka Church, Topeka, Indiana: We were very glad to have S. F. Pannabecker, President of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary, present for a week of special meetings Sunday morning, October 30, and continuing through Friday, November 4. On several evenings he showed slides of Palestine and other places in his travels. During the Sunday School hour October 30, Ellis Hargrave spoke representing the Anti-Saloon League. A number from this congregation attended the home-coming activities at Bluffton College. A son Theodore Wayne, came to join the Esko Loewen family on October 7. Twenty-four men from this church attended a Men's Brotherhood meeting of the five churches in this area at the Eighth Street Church, Goshen, Indiana, on October 24. H. S. Bender of Goshen College was the speaker.—Opal King, Corr.

MENNONITE MEN FOR CHRIST

GOSHEN, INDIANA.—A drive for relief funds is being conducted in the five Central Conference churches of northern Indiana by the inter-church men's brotherhood.

The money will go toward the $750,000 relief budget of the M.C.C. for the current year, of which the General Conference share is $160,000.

The drive is to close November 15.



CHRISTIAN STUDENT GROUPS ACTIVE AT BETHEL

The Student Christian Association at Bethel College is quite active. The organization consists of four commissions and three committees. These are the social service. Christian Faith and Fellowship, campus life, and recreation commissions, and the membership, worship, and publicity committees. October 26, the social service commission had a halloween party for the Children's Home in Newton. The children were entertained with singing, a story, outside games and refreshments. The students pay for the expenses of such a service as the children's party out of their own funds which they establish by dues and various drives during the year. The S. C. A. organization as a whole was represented at a recent, so-called cluster conference on the McPherson College campus. Representatives of Christian student associations from the following four colleges were present: Tabor, Kansas Wesleyan, McPherson, and Bethel.

The Student Volunteers, another college organization is also active. It sponsored a Mission Rally in cooperation with the Western District Young People's Union. Leland Brubaker who has just returned from a ten months' tour in China, India, and Europe, and is Foreign Mission Secretary of the Church of the Brethren, was the speaker.

The reunion banquet in the Mennonite Church at Wichita, Friday, November 4th, was a happy occasion for about 85 Bethel alumni teachers. An excellent supper was served by the ladies of the church.

Dr. Walter Hohmann, professor of music, left for Canada on a two weeks' lecture tour November 2d, Wednesday. He will speak on hymnology and history of music and will also help choirs in the communities of Alberta—Coaldale, Rosemary, Calgary, Tofield, and Didsbury.

The welfare activities program of the Mennonite peace group was reviewed at Bethel College by the secretary of the peace section of the Mennonite Central Committee this week, J. Harold Sherk.

MISSION SECRETARY VISITS BLUFFTON

Howard Nyce, Executive Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, was a campus visitor November 1-2. He spoke in chapel on both of those days, held personal conferences with students interested in mission work, and met with the full-time Christian service group of students.

Harry Rimmer, Christian minister and scientist, spoke in the Chapel service Thursday, Nov. 3. He was holding a week of meetings at the Ebenezer Mennonite Church.

Dr. Sherwood Eddy lectured at the college November 3. He has recently returned from Asia. He described conditions there, especially with relation to the spread of communism. He urged the necessity of Christian nations practicing racial equality and social justice if the forces of communism are to be overcome by peaceful means. At the close he urged students to fully consecrate themselves to the cause of Christ, saying that in the last analysis the important thing is not what is happening in Asia, but what is happening in the hearts of American students.

Pres. Ramseyer spoke on visual education before a group of education students at Ohio Northern University, November 4.

Carl Lehman and members of the peace club attended a meeting on peace at Wilberforce University, Saturday, November 5.

SEMINARY IN UNIQUE TEACHING TECHNIQUE

A unique feature of the educational methods of this term is a series of evaluations of lectures delivered here by Nels F. S. Ferré. The evaluations are taking place on the bus as it returns from the Bethany Biblical Seminary to Mennonite Biblical Seminary. Despite some distraction from traffic as the bus weaves its way through the heart of Chicago's loop, it is possible to have discussion among the students as they are seated in the bus. Melvin Funk, president of the student body, is arranging this series which seeks critically to evaluate the presentation of Ferré.

John T. Neufeld recently wrote a long article explaining the development of Mennonite Biblical Seminary to the people in this immediate section of Chicago. The article appeared in a neighborhood newspaper called the Kenwood Outlook. Some of us here from small towns are discovering that huge cities naturally divide themselves into smaller neighborhood areas in which a greater feeling of neighborliness is possible. These areas have their own newspapers, schools, shopping centers, churches, and service clubs. Needless to say, the people in this area have been wondering about the Mennonite people who have been developing the Seminary center, and just what our background and purposes and convictions are. In this article, John Neufeld sought to interpret the Seminary to this community and to explain the Christian convictions which bring us here.

The Vesper speaker on November 20 will be Ernst Crous, visiting lecturer at Goshen College, speaking on the topic, "The Present Situation in the Protestant Churches of Germany."

Habit is a means, not of delivering us from choices but releasing us for higher choices.—Ed. G. Kaufman

What Shall I Do with My Life?

The Godly Task of the Housewife

Helene Wiens Dick

After being graduated from high-school, Esther wanted to get married instead of taking in a year at the church college as her parents wished. After seeing Melvin almost every day for four years and going steady for the past few months, she couldn't bear the thought of being apart from him for so long.

Melvin planned to work in partnership with his dad on the farm. And when he presented Esther with a diamond, that settled it for her.

"I'm promised to Melvin now, and I want to plan ahead with him instead of going to college," she explained to her mother.

Although Esther was a Christian, she wasn't so sure about Melvin. When she asked him, he replied, "I'm as good as the next fellow." It was hard to talk about things like that to him, so the subject was dropped.

She prayed about Melvin. She wanted to do God's will, but surely Melvin was her man.

They were married a few months later. They might as well be, thought the parents, for all they seemed to think about was each other.

Esther enjoyed her housewifely duties. She enjoyed working in the garden. And she loved Melvin. She tried to do everything to please him.

For Sunday dinners she invited her folks over, or his, or some other relatives, or dear friends. At other times they returned the visits.

Then one spring Esther felt played out all the time. In fact she had not felt good all winter. When she said something to Melvin about it, he simply said, "Go see a docter," and dropped the subject. He began complaining about her cooking, that it wasn't up to par.

Melvin's indifference to her ailments hurt her, so she told him no more about them.

"Why do you look so grouchy all the time?" he asked one day. Esther did not answer, but a little later went into the bedroom and shut the door. She began to pray. She had to tell some one about it all. Where was Melvin's love, and where was her love? It seemed all gone. She poured out her grievances to Him.

When she got up from her knees she felt a little better. Maybe things would not get any better, but He knew all about them and would lead her through.

Things did not get any better. In fact, the doctor was very grave after the examination. "After the test we'll know whether the tumor is malignant or not," he quietly told them.

Then came long hospital days—days of pain and thinking. At first everything seemed futile. "O God, what am I here for?" she cried.

She remembered the happy years with Melvin. But God had seldom been brought into the picture. She had not tried to help Melvin find the Christian way. In fact she had slipped back to where he was.

Whenever she felt strong enough, she took her New Testament from under her pillow and read a few verses. When she came to Luke, chapter fourteen, she thought to herself, "I'm like that Pharisee, inviting my friends and relatives for meals who'll invite me back, rather than the poor and weak. But the Pharisee at least invited Jesus also. I can't say as much."

With prayer and confession a new resolve formed in Esther's mind. If God should give back her health, she would not merely live for herself and Melvin, but for Him.

It was months before she felt strong enough to invite some one over.

"Let's have the Smiths over Sunday," Esther suggested one day. "They don't go to church, but we could tell them we are going, so maybe they'll go too, and all come here after the service is over."

Melvin didn't seem to mind. "But aren't you afraid those kids'll break something or scratch the floor?"

"No," Esther could say honestly. "Mrs. Smith has more to do than she can handle, and if I can help her a little, I want to. Maybe I can keep her younger children some time when they go to town."

Melvin looked at Esther in surprise. "What's the idea? I never heard you talk that way before."

It was hard for Esther to explain. She put her hand on Melvin's arm. "I haven't been the kind of Christian I should, Melvin," haltingly she answered, "but from now on, with His help, I want to obey Him and be the housewife He wants me to be."

"You've got something here," Melvin admitted.

"And you, Melvin," Esther went on hopefully. "Wouldn't you want to become a Christian?"

"Well," he shrugged, "I'll think about it."

Melvin did think about it. For one Sunday morning as he sat in the pew listening to the sermon, some months later, he bowed his head and shut his eyes. Some may have thought he was snoozing. But he was making the decision of his life—he asked God, through His Son, if he could belong to Him. He too wanted God's will to be accomplished in his life.

The definition of a missionary has been given in these words by Hudson Taylor:

God's man
In God's Place
Doing God's work
At God's time
In God's way.

Can this be said of you?

Literature for Youth

This is a Publications issue. In this day of an overabundance of literature, the need is to seek constantly to pick out the most useful material from the stock available. There should be some recommendations for the youth in the light of this.

Our recommendations and discussion will center on materials having to do with church youth groups. To recommend specific literature for general reading is beyond the scope of our task. There are certain materials usable by local youth groups which they should know about.

First of all, the materials published by our own presses need to be used. The four-page section of The Mennonite called "Mennonite Youth" seeks to keep youth informed concerning their part in the life of the church and what they may do in the life of the church. By reading this section faithfully, you will have good general information concerning the church of which you are a member. For in these pages are the stories of youth carrying on projects at home, serving in service units, facing life's choices and the issues of the day about which they must decide, seeking inspiration in material of an inspirational type. By keeping up on what is written in "Mennonite Youth," you may broaden yourself and feel yourself a part of a larger fellowship. Both are important.

A second effort undertaken this Fall by the Young People's Union is to publish monthly program materials. These materials are designed for use by local societies and youth groups. Each month has a special theme to be followed. For instance, the month of November is stressing Stewardship and December will deal with the Christmas and New Year themes. This literature is being published and sent to all local societies for the present to inform them of this new endeavor. It is hoped this material will prove useful in the giving of programs by local groups. An evaluation of these materials will be made as this project gets a little older.

And do not overlook district publications. The Northern District publishes the Northern Light; a Canadian youth paper is being printed with Rev. Isaac Epp of Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, as editor; the Ontario churches publish Die Vereinsglocke, and the Middle District publishes The Vine Press. These publications seek to keep the local churches informed about District activity.

There are many other publications which might be mentioned. The Christian Endeavor material is being changed and an effort is being made to improve it. Local districts of the C. E. can give information on that. If you are thinking of an effective organization of your youth as a distinct youth group, the "Mennonite Youth Fellowship Manual" is excellent. It is available from the Mennonite Publishing House, Scottdale, Pennsylvania. Here is a manual that very carefully and thoroughly presents the goals, the organization, and the program of a church youth fellowship.

Finally one book might be suggested for leaders of youth. This one presents the general picture of the place and work of youth in the church. It is called Youth Work in the Church, by Nevin C. Harner, Abingdon Cokesbury Press. This book has many valuable suggestions and ideas in it giving an over-all view of the work of youth in the church. Leaders should read it to give them ideas as to the nature of their task.

POVERTY

There are very few poor people in this country, but there are many who think they are poor.

In pioneer days, people considered themselves poor if they could not buy coffee; later they thought they were poor if they could not own a parlor organ.

A decade or so ago, every young married couple considered themselves poor if they could not furnish their new home with a davenport and chair to match.

Now we are poor if we cannot drive the latest model car.

Poverty is largely a state of mind. It consists in wanting something we cannot get. The poverty which a man resents is his particular degree of poverty; the cause of his resentment is not actual need, but the fact that other people have more.—Telescope-Messenger.

GOD'S WISDOM

"For this reason did God create only one original man, Adam . . . that men might dwell together in peace. One cannot say to his neighbor, 'My ancestor was nobler than thine' . . . for the Holy One, Blessed Be He, fashioned every man in the stamp of the first one . . . " Sanhedrin, 37a

THE SERPENT'S SERMON

Sons of men once set upon the serpent accusing him of possessing various evil and unseemly ways unlike those of other more amiable beasts. "Why is it," they demanded, "that a bite from thee in one member of the body causeth thy poison to penetrate into every part?"

"Why do ye take me to task?" the serpent replied in righteous indignation. "Ask your question rather of the slanderer. He speaks in one city of the world and his words cause destruction in another; he may dwell in the West and wreak havoc in the East; or in the East and by his evil tongue cause death in the West." . . . Adapted from Midrash Tanhuma.

Live Up to Your Name

By M. L. Holfcraft

Do you know the meaning of your name? Or have your friends dubbed you with a nickname more suitable to your personality?

Most of our common names, except those that are "coined" by actors and writers, came originally from words and phrases of ancient language. Perhaps no one source has furnished so many names for American boys as the Bible has—Hebrew names from the Old Testament, Latin and Greek names from the New Testament.

Many of the Old Hebrew names are not so popular today as in the days of our Colonial forefathers, but a few of the more common ones and their meanings are:

John	Grace of God
Matthew	reward or recompense
Adam	formed of red earth
Asa	a physician
Reuben	Behold, a son!
Michael	he who is like God
David	the beloved
Manuel	God with us!

From the ancient Greeks and Romans come such names as:

George	a farmer
Miles	a soldier
Martin	warlike, strong, fearless
Colin	victory of the people
Peter	a rock or stone
Paul	small or gentle
Gregory	a watchman

Many familiar names have come down to us from the Teutonic tribes that roamed over northern and western Europe during the Middle Ages. A few of these are:

Edward	a guardian of happiness
Hugh	mighty, thoughtful, wise
Geoffrey or Jeff	one who loves peace
Francis	one who is free
Franklin	a freeholder (Who owns the land he works)

Many of our favorite names of today have been adapted from the old languages of Scotland, Ireland, and Wales.

For example:

Keith	a windy place
Douglas	dark, swarthy
Boyd	yellow-haired
Craig	a rock or stone
Donald	a proud chief
Alan	one who is fast, majestic, graceful
Morton	a great hill
Lincoln	a steep place in a river
Lynn	a lake or pool
Lloyd	brown or gray

Most of our common names have worthwhile meanings, so live up to your name! If you were called Philip after a favorite uncle, somewhere in the dim past of your ancestry, there probably was a Philip who a lover of horses, for that is what the word means. If your name is Russell, there is nothing you can do about your brown or black hair, even if Russell does mean red-headed.

On the other hand, if your name is Emmett, which in the Saxon tongue meant ant, don't think you are doomed to be small and insignificant, for does not the ant signify industry, thrift, and cooperation?

So, why not live up to your name?

"God's Answer to Life's Need"

by Glen Weimer

God unceasingly upholds life.
God faithfully gives good to each life.
God's willingness to give good is exhaustless.
God gives to the weak—the wonder of endurance;
God gives to the suffering the jewel of patience;
God gives to the aspiring—the glory of an eternal purpose;
God gives to the bewildered—an unfailing beacon light.
God speaks the needed word to each quiet soul.
God's wisdom continues to mould each willing life.
God's creativeness continues to set new stars in their courses.
God's creativeness continues to rebuild the wasted tissues of the body.
God's creativeness continues to bring new life upon the earth.
God's creativeness continues to renew the mind of man with new truth.
God is the great revealer:
 Showing life in the midst of death;
 Showing good in the midst of evil;
 Showing the diamond in the rock;
 Showing the gold in the mountain;
 Showing the rainbow in the rain;
 Showing the glory in the cross;
 Showing the victory in life's crisis.
God is the secret of spring's return to man's soul.
O Arm of God, upholder of the soul in weakness;
O Love of God, refuge of the love-hungry spirit;
O Heart of God, rest of the wearied heart;
O Will of God, restorer of life to new integrity;
O Hand of God, moulder of the Christlike countenance;
Spirit of God, here is my heart, make it thine—
 Here is my mind, make it thy dwelling place—
 Here is my body, make it thy temple.

Beyond Our Own

AFRICA. Missionaries may have less than ten years left in which to carry the Gospel to Africa, according to Dr. Raymond Buker, foreign secretary of the Conservative Baptist Foreign Mission Society. Dr. Buker has indicated the belief of government officials in Africa that whites have less than ten years to remain in Africa. "The rising tide of nationalism and communism may soon drive out all foreigners, and, since missionaries are associated with foreign ruling powers, they probably will be forced out in the general exodus. Of course, God can overrule in the matter and keep the doors open, but at the same time, we should be prepared for the natural trends and plan accordingly." —Gospel Herald

JAPAN. Lutheran World Relief shipped 839,807 pounds of relief supplies to Japan through Licensed Agencies for Relief in Asia as of July 31. Nearly 6,000 gallons of cod liver oil valued at $15,000, sent to Japan by LWR this year, was used in a campaign for the prevention of rickets in small children. —American Lutheran

GERMANY. German church bells will ring again soon because ingenious church members have found that discarded horse shoes can be cast into satisfactory bells. During the war the majority of German church bells and chimes were taken from the church towers. One bell, usually the smallest one, was left for each church, except in rare instances when for aesthetic reasons a large one was permitted to remain.

Now that churches are able to replace their bells, the bronze from which they were formerly cast is not available. The solution was to use horse shoes, of which sufficient quantities can be found in each village smithy.—American Lutheran MEXICO. The campaign against illiteracy in Mexico has been pushed by the present government of that country. In the last three years 1,300,000 Mexicans have learned to read and write.—Gospel Messenger

OKLAHOMANS rejected for the fifth time since 1907 a proposal to repeal the constitutional ban on hard liquor. As a result of the vote Oklahoma and Mississippi are the only two states banning liquor.—Gospel Messenger

LUTHERAN RESETTLEMENT SERVICE has processed its 10,000 assurance for displaced persons. Each home and job assurance covers 2.38 persons as a worker normally brings his family to America with him. This means that at least 23,800 displaced European Lutherans would become "New Neighbors" in the U.S. before next summer.

About 4,700 additional assurances for approximately 11,200 more DP's are still being sought by the NLC office in order to bring the Lutheran-sponsored DP total to the "fairshare" Lutheran goal of 35,000.—American Lutheran

A BIOGRAPHY of Martin Luther, HERE I STAND, has won the Abingdon-Cokesbury Award of $7,500. Its author is Dr. Roland H. Bainton of the Yale University Divinity School Faculty. Illustrated with dozens of rare woodcuts from medieval and Reneaissance books, the manuscript approaches the story of Luther's life from both a theological and historical viewpoint. Included are many quotations from Luther's writings and sermons, hitherto unpublished in the English language.—American Lutheran

THE MISSOURI SYNOD of the Lutheran Church reports that 1,700 Roman Catholics took instruction and united with its churches this past year.—The Watchman Examiner

SWEDEN. Dagens Nyheter, leading Swedish newspaper, recently made a study of 20 stenographic records of sermons preached in churches selected at random in order to find out what basis there is for the widespread criticism of Swedish church services. The paper printed parts of the sermons and commented on them. It points out that the sermons have certain obvious merits: they show a spirit of tolerance, they contain no propaganda, they do not attack persons holding opposite points of view, and they are reserved, with no note of condemnation or threat. But, says the newspaper, they are as a whole "dull, indifferent and obscure." It concludes that the preachers are so apprehensive of giving offense that they say nothing at all!—The Christian Century.

Gil Dodds, famous American miler, is traveling through Scandinavia for the Youth for Christ movement. In Sweden, he ran a tremendous 1,000-yard race against the Swedish runner Arne Anderson, then preached a sermon to the 4,500 persons gathered for the race.

"Reader Says"

Dear Editor:

I am a senior at Wheaton College and chanced to run across THE MENNONITE and read the article on the coming of the Mennonites seventy-five years ago. That was the time that my Grandfather Jacob L. Thomas and my Great-grandfather Derk Tieszen came to Marion, South Dakota. So the article was of considerable interest to me. My Grandfather built a large sod house and barn that year and it was a land mark of the community till it was torn down several years ago.

I am well acquainted with a number of students in Freeman, Bethel, and the Seminary here in Chicago and information concerning the schools was very welcome.

I especially enjoyed the editorials and will look forward to interesting reading material. Enclosed find $1.25 for 6 months subscription to the MENNONITE.

Sincerely yours,

THANKSGIVING OUGHT to be an extremely painful experience for Americans this year. Why? Because we shall be giving thanks for things that don't belong to us. Leland Brubaker, Executive Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Church of the Brethren has stated that there are more hungry people in China alone than in all Europe. (Has even our relief enterprises a color line?) While we feast at Thanksgiving we take the food out of the mouths of hungry people around the world. While we thank God for our land and its rich bounties, we ought to be conscious of the fact that the recent adjournment of Congress with the accompanying failure to act toward the breaking down of restrictions to certain groups of D. P.'s has slammed the door shut on the opportunity to lift up the downtrodden. Furthermore, Thanksgiving just doesn't make sense while we channel resources and riches into intoxicating liquors, worldly pleasures, and military machines at the very time that spiritual and physical want are stalking the world. The poem on page 4 suggests the only possible way of experiencing a satisfying Thanksgiving this year.

"COMMUNITY ACQUAINTANCE PROGRAM" is the name that has been given to the new phase of the annual meeting of the General Conference Council of Boards and Committees. The Council of Boards, which is meeting now for the fifth time in its comparatively brief history, was created by Conference action. Since all boards and committees must convene annually anyway and in view of the fact that there are a number of concerns involving several boards, it was decided that all boards plan their annual meeting at one time. On the surface this may seem like unwarranted expense. But when it is considered that most boards and committees must meet once in the course of a year anyway, it will become apparent that this may in reality be a means of implementing Conference action. Especially is this true when it is remembered that Conference meets only once in three years. It is at this point that the Community Acquaintance Program takes on significance. One of the chief values of a General Conference is its promotion of missions, relief, education, etc., in the immediate area where the Conference is held. But obviously, General Conferences are few in number and only certain large, well-equipped communities are in the position to entertain them. This means that most communities and therefore most people miss this opportunity. However, the Community Acquaintance Program has the effect of bringing many of the qualities of a General Conference to some of our smaller communities. In this program the community has the opportunity of a first-hand acquaintance with Conference leaders; furthermore, it hears from the lips of the leaders the most recent developments within the Conference work; and finally, it is the first to hear of the plans for the future. While it is true that the meetings will be exclusively of an informative and inspirational nature, and not involving public deliberation of Conference business, it is nevertheless true that the Conference Community Acquaintance program to be held in Mountain Lake, Minnesota, November 27 to December 1, marks a significant step forward for the General Conference. Perhaps some of our readers in Mountain Lake may wish to give their reaction to the Community Acquaintance Program after it is held.

THE ADVENT SEASON BEGINS with Sunday, November 27. It is uniquely fitting that our Sunday school lessons deal with the prophets in these Sundays that lead up to Christmas. However, there are several dangers always involved in the study of the prophets especially as we see them in relation to Jesus Christ, the fulfillment of prophecy. One of these dangers is that of focusing attention on the specific prophet in such a restricted way that we fail to see their full significance as revealed by the Lord Jesus Christ. While it is true that the prophets give us the highest Old Testament conception of both personal salvation as well as the ultimate triumph of the Kingdom in the Old Testament, it, nevertheless, remains true that their task was more negative than positive. They persistently condemned the sins of the nation and the people. They proclaimed God's inevitable judgment upon sin. They explained to the nation why they were experiencing catastrophe. And, they called individuals and the nation to repentance. But in the midst of this they never forgot the love of God as manifested in the Covenant; they were so convinced of God's convenant-faithfulness to man and they lived so close to God that they could speak a clear and assuring message concerning God's coming work through the Messiah. This is needed today, especially among those who have borne the brunt of suffering in the world's conflicts. We must not stop with our pronouncements of doom upon a sinful world or our extensive diagnoses as to why the world is going through suffering. If we do only that, we are not preaching the whole Gospel. God does not want us to hold up sin. It is rather the Son of Man, if He be lifted up, that "will draw all men" unto himself. Effective Advent teaching and preaching will let all the light and saving power of Jesus Christ be brought to bear upon our lives as individuals and as nations; otherwise, it is not true to the biblical revelation.

THE OTHER DANGER in the study of the prophets is no less disastrous, spiritually speaking. The danger consists in concentrating, more or less, on the Messianic passages in the prophets, and even lifting them clear out of their context; such a procedure is concerned primarily with finding verses in the prophets that can be

by Erland Waltner

"Come, ye thankful people, come,
Raise the song of harvest home:"

IN SOME of our churches throughout the country, this hymn, or some similar invitation to praise the Giver of all good gifts, is used to open harvest festival services in this season of the year. Churches are decorated with the fruit of the field and garden. The atmosphere and aroma of God's out-of-doors pervade His holy sanctuary. Faces tanned by a harvest sun gratefully turn toward their Provider. Toil-hardened and calloused hands are folded reverently in prayer. Hearts, long anxious about the ingathering of the summer's crops, now relax in the realization that "All is safely gathered in,

Ere the winter storms begin."

Voices of young and old, of men and women, of parents and children, are joined harmoniously and vigorously in song, filling the courts of the Lord with a paean of praise,

"God our Maker doth provide
For our wants to be supplied:"
Come to God's own temple, come,
Raise the song of harvest home."

THANKSGIVING PRAYER

I do not thank Thee, Lord,
That I have bread to eat
While others starve;
Nor yet for work to do
While empty hands solicit heaven;
Nor for a body strong
While other bodies flatten beds of pain.
No, not for these do I give thanks.

But I am grateful, Lord,
Because my ample loaf
I may divide;
Because my busy hands
May move to meet another's need;
Because my doubled strength
I may expend to steady one who faints.
Yes, for all these do I give thanks!

—Alliance Weekly

The custom of holding annual harvest festivals has its Biblical precedents. The Feast of Weeks, also called the Feast of Pentecost, was actually a harvest festival. It was usually considered a supplement to the Passover. William Smith says: "The people, having at the Passover presented before God the first sheaf of the harvest, departed to their homes to gather it in, and then returned to keep the harvest feast before Jehovah." For this occasion the people were enjoined: "And thou shalt rejoice before the Lord thy God, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maidservant, and the Levite that is within thy gates, and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, that are among you." Moreover, they were exhorted to bring "a tribute of a freewill offering of thine hand, which thou shalt give unto the Lord thy God, according as the Lord thy God hath blessed thee." Thus, the harvest feast became for them not only an occasion of rejoicing and thanksgiving, but also of dedicating and offering to the Lord a portion of that which he had given them.

Following the ancient pattern, our harvest festivals are also, primarily, occasions for corporate expression of praise to God for his gracious providence. Though men have labored in the sowing, in the cultivation, and in the ingathering of the crops, it is God who has given the increase.

"We plow the fields and scatter
The good seed on the land,
But it is fed and watered
By God's almighty hand."

Thoughtless, indeed, is that soul which becomes so absorbed with the gift of God that it is unmindful of the Giver. What an ungrateful wretch is he who takes good things out of God's palm year after year, yet never looks up into His face to say thanks. "O that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men."

Harvest festivals, which do express sincere gratitude to the Lord, are monuments of thoughtfulness in a busy thoughtless world. They are oases of true gratitude in a generation which is a desert of self-satisfaction and unthankfulness. Here people still gather to acknowledge their dependence upon Providence, to express their thanks to a beneficient, heavenly Father, but also to say: "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift."

According to the scriptural pattern, our harvest festivals are also occasions for giving. Shallow, indeed, is a thanksgiving for material blessings, which is unmindful of the needs of fellow human beings. The realization that a loving, heavenly Father has given bountifully and graciously, prompts grateful souls. to share these gifts. Especially is this true when the inequalities among men are recognized. While some receive of the Lord more than bins and barns can hold, others in this world languish in poverty and want. Whether the material or the spiritual blessings of life are considered, the only proper response to a bounteous, God-given harvest is to share it.

Our harvest festivals, therefore, place a considerable emphasis upon the bringing of offerings. Thankful hearts are reminded to consider the Psalmist's question: "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me?" The appalling needs of the world are graphically pictured to the worshipping congregations. Relief workers, home from the battle fronts of the war against starvation, tell of multitudes without the necessities of life while we are in the FREEMAN, S. D., Nov. 2—The year 1949 marks the diamond jubilee anniversary year of the coming of Russian Mennonite religious group to America. Although some of the immigrant families remained in the east, for the most part they settled in the prairie states and in Canada.

Throughout the summer and fall of this year, celebrations commemorating the event have been held in the Mennonite communities. Last Sunday was the date set for the commemoration services for the Mennonite community in the Freeman-Marion area. Afternoon and evening programs were held in the Freeman College auditorium.

The afternoon's program, attended by about 600, featured recognition of and reminiscences of some of the few old pioneers who remain.

Of the approximately 1,700 who originally came to this section, about 100 are still living, many of whom have now passed their 80th birthday. Among those pioneers who attended the Freeman celebration, six or seven recalled plowing with oxen.

These old folks can recall many interesting experiences — prairie fires, sod shanties and dugouts, the big blizzard—experiences which required much patience and fortitude.

The first schools were held in the homes of the teacher and were of a boarding nature. The pupils remained for the week, and at bedtime the schoolroom was cleared and straw and hay spread on the floor for sleeping.

Worked to Pay Taxes

Because the settlers had little money, the government allowed them to pay their land tax by doing two days' work on the road, so runs the story told by one of the pioneers. For the most part, the workers were young men, but one old gentleman also was present to do his share. It seems that he was not able to do too much work but he was a wonderful entertainer and kept all of the younger men interested. The difficulty was that the young men found it hard to pay strict attention to their work and still get the complete gist of the old man's stories.

Though the government overseer fidgeted, he said nothing until evening. Then he told the young men that they should return on the morrow for their second day's work. To the old gentleman, however, he said that he need not return. In spite of the oldster's protest that he had not yet paid his taxes in full, the overseer insisted in considering his debt paid.

The well-attended evening program featured an illustrated lecture by Cornelius Krahn of North Newton, Kans. Slides were shown of some of the pioneer implements which are at present in the Bethel college muesum. A second address of he evening given by J. D. Unruh of Freeman, who has recently returned from a year of service in Holland doing relief work. The subject of Unruh's address was the present status of the Mennonite people and their place in the future of our country.

Two Branches of Mennonites

Although the Mennonites who came to this country in 1874 came directly from Russia, originally they were of two branches, the Swiss and Dutch Mennonites. Of the Dutch, some had settled in Prussia. These folks were, for the most part, farmers and soon improved the land which they worked. About the middle of the 18th century, Catherine II of Russia, was looking for settlers for the vast agricultural regions of her country. The thrifty Mennonite farmers of Prussia seemed to be the ideal type, so she had her personal representative visit them. Special inducements were offered to get them to come to Russia. They were offered free land, they were to be allowed to handle their own civil government, and they were to be exempt from military service.

In 1786 the first of the Mennonites went to Russia. For about a century the Mennonites remained

From Behind the Bamboo Curtain

collected by Mrs. P. J. Boehr

A young American missionary in Hopei to her parents:

"I'm hibernating in the kitchen so I can't hear our soldier friends trying the door . . . poor souls-some of them never saw a lock before. There must be a new group in the village for yesterday they came in droves and more wide-eyed than I had ever seen before. At this point I have five soldiers standing at my shoulders watching me type . . . tonight A has his usual session called self-criticism meetings. These meetings are one of the more popular inventions of Communism. It assumes that by publicly announcing in a meeting that you've been naughty and forgot to brush your teeth you will have some new power to correct your sin . . . Sometimes I feel terribly sorry for the old timers here . . . We're young . . . and have no past record to warrant special or even normal courtesies. The old missionaries would just shudder to see what goes on here. No privacy whatever . . . . D. is 66 years old and not well, and all hours of the night she gets out the bed to let the young rascals plow through the house supposedly to count the 'number of mouths' . . . . For me—tied down to the house—the hardest thing to adjust to is the knowledge that the best thing for our friends to do at this time is to ignore us . . . ."

A Few Other Excerpts

"We all expect the struggle to grow more intense. The bright sunshine to-day has not dispelled the clouds gathering on the horizon. The hard core at the center of this movement is materialistic and anti-Christian. Toleration is a matter of present policy, not a principle."

"There have been great opportunities for service. I have just had an all-day meeting with 12 of our pastors, at their suggestion—splendid fellowship . . . Of course no one knows what is ahead for the Chinese church . . . ."

Liberated for a Slightly Longer Time

From missionaries and other foreigners in areas that have been "liberated" for a slightly longer time than those quoted before (from widely scattered areas).

"The main news is that things have turned out better than the most optimistic dared to hope. The food situation is good, also the supply of cash. The folks (evidentally Chinese) sound in wonderful spirits in spite of all the changes that have taken place. What they are finding hardest is being cut off from the home folks and also waiting to see if they can be of any use in the new set-up. Teachers of all kinds are in tremendous demand but what foreigners can contribute remains to be seen." (This from Manchuria.)

"Although our friends may blow and seem terribly nationalistic and anti-foreign at times, we all have the wonderfully stable feeling that when it comes to a show-down they think nothing of risking their lives to us . . . coffee is very expensive, and tea is practically unobtainable . . . . Rice and flour are very high, but local foodstuffs like vegetables, eggs, corn, and millet are low, and the food prices have remained stable for almost a month. . . . the best way to get their loyalty. (Same writer a week later.) Everything is so uncertain that one feels a bit baffled about making any plans.

"Things are as tight as ever and Christianity seems to be crowded out. We plan one thing after another and always the others stick some meeting of theirs over the same time so we have to call ours off. It's certainly disheartening, though I feel we still can help and we are glad to be on deck . . . . I understand it's not too hard to get a permit to leave the country but almost impossible to get one to come in, so we'll just stay put till we decide to go for good . . . . The turn-over where the under class has the say is very noticeable and the assurance that one is strong enough in one's human strength to carry the high ideals the party has. They are so sure they are equal to it and that God is not needed. I think many of our very enthusiastic students will wake up disillusioned eventually. You can't tell them anything now.

"Conditions seem stable in P. The church has regular services each Sunday but that is the extent of permitted activity at present. Evangelization of all kinds is out. The seven residences are now being used for a new hospital . . . .

"I had a fine student who I thought was a real pal and devoted friend. But just after Chinese New Year I had the experience referred to in Psalm 55:12-13 . . . . 'For it was not an enemy that reproached me; then could I have borne it. . . . but it was thou, a man mine equal, my guide and mine acquaintance.'" He was coming frequently to our house merely to get our point of view. He has it, and now all students have been warned it would be unwise for them to come to our home . . . . The only thing that has not changed is the mountain range that still stands majestically to the south and is a constant source of inspiration for we look to the mountains from which cometh our strength.

"This is the way our moods go here—up and down—of late each "down" has been a little lower than the last one, but we will stick until we are convinced that no other way is possible than going.

"The prospects grow more discouraging as the days pass. I have a report from a friend (evidently Chinese) who has taken the special 40 days' training courses concerning the attitude of the new regine to the church and to foreigners. It is said that they do not expect to close the doors of the church but to starve it out by making it difficult for the people to belong to it, and in that way it will naturally close. Likewise foreigners in general and Americans in particular are not to be driven out now, but life is to be made inconvenient for them, so they will gradually leave of their own accord."

Our Sunday School and the United Evangelistic Advance

(To be read on Sunday, November 27, 1949)

"Ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." (Acts 1:8.) As we come to the end of this month of Evangelism through the Sunday School, We do well to link our thought with the total program of evangelism which our Conference is promoting together with other Protestant churches from October 1949 to December 1950. This total program is known as the United Evangelistic Advance. This Advance calls for "a revival of genuine Christianity on a national and world-scale. The churches need to be saved from their complacency and importance and empowered and inspired to do their appointed tasks."

"AMERICA FOR CHRIST" is the banner under which the crusade is being launched. "Every worthwhile method is to be used to witness and to bring the gospel of Jesus Christ to all men and to assist the denominations in strengthening their churches and their membership both spiritually and numerically.

This Advance is to achieve a five-fold objective:

1. The spiritual renewal of the ministry and membership of the churches.
2. The reaching and winning of the unchurched multitude for Christ.
3. Careful instruction of every new member who is brought into the Church.
4. The enlisting of all members who have moved to new communities.
5. The vital transformation of persons through Christ, so that Christian personalities shall be developed in the home, business, and in all other human relationships in order that these new persons may produce a more Christian society. (Taken from Program of U.E.A. Pamphlet.)

The evangelistic effort through the Sunday School has opened the door for a forward movement with the United Advance. Continue to work and pray for a genuine spiritual revival that will rekindle the fire of religious enthusiasm and zeal. The work of evangelism through the Sunday school is not finished until we have carried the message of the gospel "unto the uttermost part of the earth."—The Evangelism Committee.

So Far the Quotations

So far the quotations: and the picture is truly a dark picture humanly speaking. As we think of the many thousands of precious souls, the promising young student lives that seem to become prey to these circumstances, the many trying to find escape from the very trying conditions by accepting hopefully the new regime, that would bar them from the only real hope, and of the vast areas in this great land, where these situations are or promise to be taking control, we would confess with Jehoshaphat of old, "We have no might against this great company . . . but our eyes are upon Thee." To the Church of the living God the Lord says also, we believe, "Ye shall not need to fight this battle; set yourselves . . . . and see the salvation of the Lord with you, ... fear not nor be dismayed, for the Lord will be with you."

mechanically matched with certain events in the life of Jesus. The rest of what the prophet wrote becomes a matter, therefore, of little concern and consequently little known to most people. This cannot be "rightly dividing the word of truth" by any stretch of the imagination. Even in the time of the prophets God was working out His way of Salvation in the very midst of the world's great troubles. Grace came in direct contact with all the sins of that day—national and international as well as personal, sins of the body as well as sins of the spirit. Grace, as someone has put it, has always made it hot for sin of every kind wherever it is found. Let us therefore stop restricting and crippling the Gospel by our methods of Biblical interpretation.—J.J.E.

"IN EVERYTHING GIVE THANKS"

I Thessalonians 5:18

Praise God for every twinge of pain;
Praise God for loneliness and sorrow;
For buried griefs that rise again;
For haunting past and dread tomorrow.
Must we give thanks? Can it be true?
"This is God's will concerning you."

Thank God for all the little stings;
The angry scowl, the spiteful letter;
Thank God for all frustrated things—
The love resigned, the hopeless fetter.
To Thee for these all praise is due.
"This is God's will concerning you."

We know that we must patient be,
And bear the cross without repining,
But this is hard—too hard—and we Shrink, sore afraid, from such refining.
O Christ, this thing we cannot do!
"This is God's will concerning you."

Dear Father, this is Thy command,
We will obey. 'Tis Thine appointing.
It is not ours to understand
This test supreme, this high anointing.
Hear, sons of God, this message new—
"This is God's will concerning you."

WHO'S "FIRST"?

Counting all the "First" Mennonite Sunday Schools and the "First" Mennonite Churches it is surprising how many "firsts" there really are. Guess how many!

The trouble comes when a person like the treasurer or Sunday School secretary writes us and signs the letter or the check and does not indicate for what account it is. He may just sign his own, personal name. Now to what account should that payment go? To his personal account? To the account of the Sunday School? Or to the account of the church? Much precious time is spent identifying letters and remittances without proper designation of the official name of the church or Sunday school.

How simple it would be if anyone writing in the name of the Sunday school or in the name of the church would indicate clearly the name of the church or the name of the Sunday school as follows:

First Mennonite Sunday School (town in which church is located)
Name of the individual (Will Sign here)
Town (May be other than town where church is located)

Young People's Unions, Christian Endeavors, Women's Missionary Associations, and so forth, may well identify themselves in connection with their churches. This is often very helpful in locating them.

Oh yes—you wanted to know how many "firsts" there were, didn't you? The total is: 62.

In South America

Spiritual Intercommunication

by Heinrich Martins

We had the agreeable surprise on August 21 to have dear guests in our home: Brother David Nikkel and his wife who both were on the way back to their home at Witmarsum.

Brother Nikkel has been on a visiting tour in Paraguay, together with Elder David Koop and Rev. Kornelius Janzen, both from Curitiba. They also had attended a ministers conference there. After an absence of one month and a half, Brother Nikkel now was returning. His wife had been going to meet him at Curitiba. After heading the Witmarsum settlement for 12 years, Brother Nikkel had been privileged to see Paraguay with his own eyes. He has been visiting all settlements, and contacting all former or present leaders in the Paraguayan settlements and congregations, and thus was able to form a complete opinion on the economic and spiritual life in the colonies. We listened to his reports with highest interest feeling that the time we could be together was too short. The next morning they continued their way to Witmarsum.

On April 29, we enjoyed the visit of Brother C. J. Dyck, M.C.C. Director for Paraguay. He came from a visit at Witmarsum. Soon the inner contact was found, and discussing the manifold actual problems in the Mennonite colonies the evening hours went by too quickly. The exchange of experiences and expressions proved to us how we are involved in all the events and happenings which affect our colonies in South America. Early the next morning Brother Dyck continued his trip to Paraguay via Curitiba. May God bless this worker and also, through him, the work of the MCC in Paraguay.

Brother and Sister Frank Wiens had announced their arrival for August 31. They also were on their way back from Witmarsum, where they had been visiting for several days. Succeeding Brother and Sister John Kaufman they will be the house parents of the M.C.C. home at Sao Paulo. We were glad to hear that at same they will be the official M.C.C. representatives in Brazil, and that, together with the M.C.C. representatives in Paraguay, they are in charge of representing the interests of the M.C.C. in South America. Soon our conversation turned to the main problems concerning the future existence of our Mennonite settlements in South America, and to what is needed in order to keep and preserve the spiritual values inherited from our forefathers.

When Brother and Sister Wiens left for Sao Paulo that following morning, where they are going to continue their work for the welfare of our Mennonite people, we promised each other to stay in mutual contact. God's blessing be with all workers.

Elwood S. Shelly

One of the "unforgettable characters, that do not appear in the popular magazines is Elwood Shelly.

Brother Shelly was born with an infirmity of the flesh. In childhood he never could see when it was dark. His school teacher placed him in the front row so he could read what was written on the blackboard. Soon his sight was gone except for large objects. His adult life was lived in physical darkness. He never saw his beloved wife and four children.

He possessed and enjoyed a deep spiritual experience and answered the call to become a minister of the Gospel. For his preparation for this task his faithful wife became his "eyes." She was his reader and tutor and "seminary professor." After his ordination to the gospel ministry by the Eastern District Conference he became a supply and itinerant preacher, in the German and English languages, throughout the churches of the Eastern District Conference, as well as in the pulpits of other denominations in the surrounding area of Pennsburg, Pennsylvania. For extended periods he was the stated supply pastor of various churches of the Conference.

For a period of twenty-five years he was the night operator in the Pennsburg Exchange of the Bell Telephone Company. The most unforgettable observation, as far as the writer is concerned, was his handling of the switchboard depending entirely on his sensitive and trained fingers. When a number rang he located it with his finger-tips. Likewise he also plugged in the connection by locating the proper one with his finger-tips. That he was efficient is attested to by his twenty-five years of employment by the Bell Telephone Company. In this employment he "made expenses" to provide for his family and rear the children. The two sons are ordained ministers of the General Conference. Andrew of Kitchener, Ontario and Paul of Bluffton, Ohio.

Brother Shelly was only physically blind. Spiritually he possessed abundant vision and devotion. He bore his cross in complete faith that "the Lord knew best." He was convinced that "the Lord had need of him" and in that conviction he was willing to labor in the Lord's vineyard till evening came.

Other physical ailments caused him to relinguish both his preaching and his telephone employment about eleven years ago. Total paralysis rendered his body completely helpless from December 27, 1947 till his death, October 18, 1949. Always he possessed inner peace because his mind was stayed on his Lord.

midst of plenty. Missionaries, home from the battle fronts of the war against heathen darkness, tell of millions of benighted souls for whom Christ also died but who have none to tell them of this salvation. Then, as ushers wait upon thankful worshippers, now stirred with compassion toward a world in need, they respond in a spirit of gratitude and generosity with what is often the largest church offering of the year.

After the benediction has been pronounced, in some churches it is customary for the people to remain for a fellowship meal. People, thus, not only have the opportunity to worship together, but also to work, to eat, and to visit together. Thus the bond of fellowship in Christ and the sense of Christian community is strengthened.

We might thus think of an ideal harvest festival observance. How important it is to keep the emphasis where it belongs! That emphasis must be upon what the Lord has done, not upon what men can do. Tithes and offerings must be brought humbly in His name, not to parade men's generosity. Fellowship meals must honor the Unseen Guest, and not be only eating and drinking. Yet wherever God is truly honored, there He truly blesses. Such harvest festivals are like cathedral spires pointing a godless world to a loving God and a Christ who saves.

"Thank the Lord! With bounteous measure
He does fill our fruitful land!
All we own and all we treasure
Is the gift of His good hand."

CANADIAN MENNONITE BIBLE COLLEGE

On Sunday November 6th, the College Octet visited the Mennonite churches in Gruenthal and Steinbach, Manitoba. A program of sacred music and an address based on Joshua 24:15, "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve" was rendered.

The Missionary Fellowship Band of the student body has begun to sponsor two noonday prayer meetings weekly. These short prayer meetings are held on Tuesday and Thursday noon during which the work of missions of our General Conference is remembered. The two fields of Montana and Arizona were prayed for this week.

On Tuesday, November 8th, Rev. Herman Neufeld, the former editor of the Rundschau a Mennonite paper, was the guest speaker in Chapel.

President A. J. Regier left on Thursday to attend the Manitoba Minister's Conference. The Conference was held on November 10th and 11th at Whitewater, Manitoba.

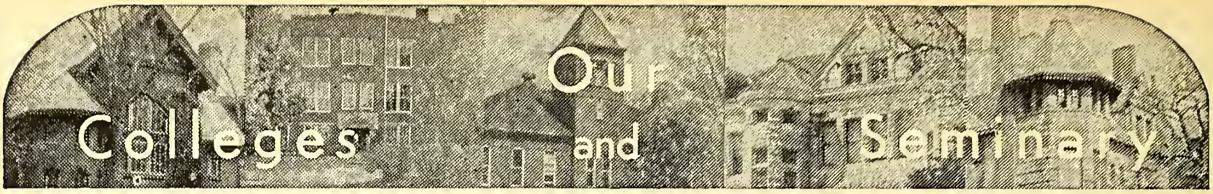
in Russia, but various problems presented themselves. The colonies kept growing and there was not enough land available for all. Then, in 1870 a universal military training act was passed which no longer exempted them. In 1874 about one-third of them came to the United States and Canada.

During the 75 years that the Mennonites have been in America, they have tripled their original number. Although the majority are still farmers, some have taken up other occupations, in the business world, the field of education and other fields. They are still, for the most part, in the midwestern states and in Canada, where their forefathers originally settled.



C. M. B. C. ANNOUNCES WINTER TERM

The Canadian Mennonite Bible College is announcing its work for the winter term. The winter quarter will begin Tuesday, January 3, and will continue till March 24. The work that will be offered is designed especially so that those who do not have the opportunity of attending college the whole year can come and benefit from these courses. It is hoped that ministers, Sunday-school teachers, choir leaders and other church workers will take advantage of the courses offered. One of the outstanding features of the winter term is the Bible Week in College. It is planned to be held during the week of March 12th to 17th. The speakers for this occasion will be announced later.

During the student prayer meeting on October 29th, the Missionary Fellowship Band, a missionary organization within the student body, gave a program on missions. After the meeting the Missionary Fellowship Band was re-organized for the school year of 1949-1950. Henry Gerbrandt was elected chairman to the committee and Benno Toews the faculty advisor.

LAUBACH ADDRESSES SEMINARY

Frank Laubach, well-known throughout the Chistian world for his outstanding experiments in teaching common people to read and write, spoke at the Seminary chapel service this week. Literally millions of people have learned to read as the result of the simple pictorial methods of teaching language which Laubach has perfected. His career illustrates very well the fact that wherever people have loved the Holy Scriptures, there has been an immediate interest and concern for the educational development of people in order to permit them to read the Word of God and to better understand it.

Several women from here are attending the Women's Conference scheduled for November 16 and 17 at Bluffton College in connection with the annual Bible Lectures and Ministers' Conference.

Don E. Smucker addressed a missionary rally held at the Calvary Mennonite Church, Washington, Illinois, on November 3, speaking at both the morning and evening services.

We were happy to have Cornelius Krahn of Bethel College with us last Sunday on his return from his lectures at Goshen College in connection with their celebration of the 75th anniversary of the coming of the Russian Mennonites.

BETHEL OBSERVES HOMECOMING

Saturday, November 12, was Homecoming at Bethel College. With the weather chilly and cloudy and the Bethany team a formidable opponent, the prospects for a cheery day were not as good as they could have been. Then, in the afternoon, the sun came from behind the clouds, and the Bethel football team defeated the Bethany College team 13 to 6, and everything was right for the homecoming celebration.

The homecoming parade consisted of a procession of very attractive floats contributed by the various dorms of the campus. Among the floats there were a horse-drawn covered wagon and one on which Nurse Brown posed ready to administer pep serum to the Bethel football team.

Shortly before 2:00 o'clock, the coronation of the homecoming queen, Catherine Regier, took place, followed by the football game.

At 5:45, the homecoming banquet began. There were more than 500 guests. Delbert Preheim gave an informal dinner speech, followed by the Campus Quartet and the student-organized male chorus under the direction of the John Gaeddert. The toastmaster of the banquet was the president of the student council, Gilbert Goering. Mrs. Anna Baumgartner, Secretary of the Alumni Association, was in charge of the general arrangements for the homecoming day.

At 8:30 p. m., the homecoming guests attended the senior play, "All My Sons," given under the direction of W. T. Wilkoff. The actors brought the message of the play, the selfishness of war, home to the audience very well.

J. W. Fretz and C. Krahn both took part in the first meeting this year of the Mennonite Historical Society at Goshen College. Both Fretz and Krahn are editors of the Mennonite Quarterly Review, published by the Society. Krahn is also an editor of the new Mennonite Encyclopedia now in the process of being published.

Mr. Willis Rich, Public Relations manager of Bethel College, returned from the longest trip he ever made in the interest in Bethel College, he says. He passed through the states of Minnesota, Montana, Washington, California, and Idaho.

Dr. M. S. Harder, head of the Bethel College Education Department, will instruct in two evening courses during the coming months. The courses are child psychology and advanced grammar. One of these courses is required for the 60-hour teaching certificate in 1952.

MISSIONARY VISITS BLUFFTON

Rev. John Thiessen was a visitor in the Bluffton community during the week of November 6. In addition to speaking in the Mennonite churches of this area, he spoke in chapel on the morning of the 10th and met with students planning to go into some

This system will also include large amplifiers in the belfry so that chime music can be played as a public service feature.—Corr.

—Salem Church, Freeman, South Dakota: Robert Waltner, who has spent the past three years in China as a relief worker, returned home on October 23. The seventy-fifth anniversary of the Mennonites coming to the Freeman vicinity was celebrated on October 30 with afternoon and evening meetinge. Highlights on the programs were reminiscences by several older persons, historical facts by J. M. Hofer, and an illustrated talk by C. Krahn of North Newton, Kansas. "We Are Thankful"

Author: Bertha Millar

AT this season especially, these three words are heard again and again. We experience a certain activating joy in expressing a part of that thankfulness which we feel. Let us now consider a few of those gifts for which we are thankful.

We are thankful for life! We're glad to be alive! We are thankful that God breathed into the nostrils of man the breath of life and man became a living soul.

I thank Thee just for life
The chance to live,
To be alive! So great thy gift,
If thou dost nothing give
Beside, it is enough,
To breathe Thy air,
To walk this mountain sod,
To feel the play of mighty winds,
To look Thee in the face,
And call Thee God.

—R. S. Cushman

But we are not merely alive. We are alive for something. Different persons are more alive to different aspects of life but there are those fundamental areas to which we all can, and should be alive.

We are thankful we are alive to beauty. Not as alive to beauty as we should be, perhaps, but a fuller awareness of beauty can be developed.

Somehow our thoughts carry us away when the last strand of sunset enhanced by the night's first star, lifts our eyes upward. Somehow when we inhale the mysterious beauty of a flower or follow the fluttering beauty of a butterfly, we experience a new gaity ourselves. We appreciate the stately beauty of the soaring eagle, the home beauty of the cricket's song. But if we are truly alive to beauty we will see her, not only in the fine tracery of spider webs like old lace held in the hands of two red roses, not only in trees sheeted up in frosty snow, not only in these which beauty paints so vividly we cannot overlook them, but are stirred and filled with admiration and gratitude each time we step into nature's wonderland—if we are truly alive to beauty we will be aware of her presence in all. Wordsworth stood on London Bridge and saw the great smoke-covered city. Some would have seen bold ugliness but Wordsworth's soul was tuned to beauty and he wrote: "The city now doth like a garment wear the beauty of the morning."

If we tune our lives to beauty we shall be aware of beauty in all things. We shall have within our reach unbought satisfaction beyond all value of money. We have deliverance from materialism when we are sensitive to beauty. To some the splendor of a falls is blotted out by calculated kilowatt hours. To some a tree is just so much potential lumber; they do not see it as with "leafy arms lifted to pray."

Thank God we can be sensitive to beauty, experience the pleasure sensations it gives—be set free from the bonds of materialism. Thank God that in the beauty we see the work of His hand.

Thank God we are alive to people. Someone has said that the worst kind of shallowness is self-absorption. Unhappiness and disappointment are written in the life and even in the face of those who are so absorbed in self that they are dead to others. They miss the joy of helping others. They miss the joy of sharing: sharing of possessions and sharing experience. How often have you discovered a rainbow and called to someone else to come and view it, too? You appreciated it far more when you knew that someone else was enjoying it with you.

We are alive to people—alive to their needs. We know that their primary need is God. Thank God we are alive enough to people to know that they are looking at us to see a partial revelation of God there.

We are alive to people we have never met. We are stirred to new loyalties by the saints of old and we desire to leave our best for those who are yet to come.

We are alive to books. Books are free tickets to many lands: to foreign countries, the land of the microscope, to the land of fiction or make-believe. Let us express our thankfulness for books by being more alive to them, more alive especially to the Book of which God himself is the author.

We are alive to poetry. Anatole France has written: "A beautiful poem is like a violin bow drawn across the fibres of our soul, setting not only the thoughts of the poet but our own souls singing." The poetic psalms express these things which we feel and would like to express. Through poetry we see new, fresh beauty where we have overlooked it before. We realize that in the midst of the same environment we can learn to feel as the poets have felt. Poetry quickens our imagination, helps us to think loftily (for poetry is the language of quality not of quantity); poetry reads the face of beauty.

Often these songs of the poets are enhanced by the beauty of music. Thank God we can be alive to music, not to the hearing of it alone but to the making of it also.

"Music is the most perfect symbol of life,
God is its author, and not man, He laid
The keynote of all harmonies; He planned
All perfect combinations, and He made
Us so that we could hear and understand."

Music:

"Tis not in the high stars alone
Nor in the red-breast's mellow tone,
Nor in the bow that smiles in showers,
But in the mud and scum of things,
There alway, alway something sings."

Through music we express ourselves. There is music for every mood. Music lifts our thoughts upward. It is "the incense which carries our prayers up to God." The Great Composer of all harmonies speaks to us through music.

Thank God we can hear music in the birds of the air, the insects of the fields, "the crash of the waters on the rock-ribbed shores" and even in the clatter on the city streets. Yes, God is everywhere and if we allow this Master Musician to tune us we will hear his voice through all.

Thank God that we can be alive to truth. Alive to the truth about ourselves: we need not rationalize, alive to the truths that science reveals. We are thankful that we have been given discerning minds to seek out truth. It is the coward mind that will not seek for truth. Some men would side-step and pass by those truths they are not brave enough to meet. When they pass by such truths as: "All men have sinned and come short of the glory of God" they are left dead to the greatest area of their lives. They are left dead to God.

We are thankful that we are alive to God. Our awareness of God is difficult to analyze. Isaiah was aware of Him as high and lifted up surrounded by six-winged seraphim. Ezekiel had visions of moving wheels with rings. We are aware of him in reborn people. We are aware of potential divineness in all people. What does it mean to us to be alive to God? It means that we know we have been redeemed and thus alive to God. And we are grateful. We are conscious of God's direction in all that we do and we submit ourselves actively to his will.

We are filled with a passion that others might be alive to Him, too. We are aware of God's nearness. We worship him as the Great Creator and yet we are so intimate that we talk with each other as closest friends.

We love Him. We put Him first: before all else, before all others.

Sometime during this thanksgiving season, will you visualize in-so-far as is possible, just what your life would be if you were not alive to God. When I see the utter emptiness of my life if I did not know God I wonder how people who do not know Him have anything to live for at all.

God gives life-purpose, happiness, meaning. He is present in every detail of it.

This thanksgiving season we are thankful anew that we have been redeemed: made alive to God. Our thankfulness awakens within us a desire that others too may know God, that they may be personally alive to Him.

Sometimes when I come bursting into God's presence like a child greets his mother when school is let ut, I am sobered when I think of the Old Testament high priests who, alone, could enter this Holy of Holies and commune with God there. Sobered?—Yes. But joyfully thankful also, because of God's great goodness we can come into His presence and talk with Him as friend with friend.

Our priesthood—our invitation to intercede for others—is not only a responsibility. It is something for which to be thankful. We are thankful that we are alive to God that we can come to God through Jesus Christ and plead for others.

Alive to God! I cannot express what it means to me. I cannot even fully fathom it. The words which come to me are those which came to you: "I am thankful." We are thankful—thankful that we are alive, alive to beauty, alive to people, alive to books, alive to poetry, alive to music, alive to truth. And most of all we are thankful we are alive to God. May our lives so radiantly express this thankfulness that others may desire to be alive to God also.

VOLUNTARY SERVICE NOTES

About forty American and German young people who had participated in voluntary service in Europe took part in a reunion held on September 25 at Ronneberg Castle, Germany, the location of one of the M.C.C.'s first volnntary service projects in Europe. Speakers included Guy Hershberger and Franklin Littell of the United States and Christian Schnebele and Otto Witt of Germany. There was in the meeting a strong conviction that voluntary service is making a good contribution in the total witness in Europe.

Ina Plank, R.N., and Clara Schellenberg who have completed their terms of service in the Mexico unit are returning at the end of October. Nurses for replacement and additional work are needed by the unit of Mexico.

CORRESPONDENCE OPPORTUNITY

We have a number of requests from persons in Germany and other countries who wish to correspond with a friend in America. Anyone interested in such a foreign correspondent should write to the M.C.C. office, Akron, Pennsylvania, giving personal information such as age, interests and occupation. Such correspondence should be entered into seriously and not merely for curiosity reasons.

type of full-time Christian service. At the later meeting he spoke on how to know God's will in our lives. In the chapel service he stressed the need for Christian helpers in India of various types, not only of the evangelistic type, but also those with a knowledge of social and political science as well as agricultural and scientific leaders. These can all make their contribution to the Christian emphasis in India.

Larry Gara, a teacher in Bluffton College last year who was sent to prison for advising a student who had refused to register to follow his conscience, it to be released on parole December 6. His case has been heard by the appeals court in Cincinnati but no decision has been announced. One wonders at the fact that top-ranking communists have been granted bail pending their appeal from conviction, but Gara was denied bail during the appeal period and had to spend his time in prison.

We're So Comfortable

By Martha Kennedy

THOSE three words have been haunting me ever since last summer when we took a Polish friend to visit one of our boys' camps. In chatting with the leader, he said, "I don't think you people can realize the conditions in Europe today." And the young man said, "No, I don't think we can. We're so comfortable here."

Ever since I've known that particular boys' leader, he has gone "all out" for boys' work. Nobody could accuse him of resting comfortably while others did the hard things. He wasn't defending us, he was apologizing for us.

Granted that a great many people have spent long hours packing and sorting bales for overseas, the majority of us have just hunted something out of the attic that we didn't need or want, anyway. It is that way with so much of our giving. Sometimes I think we haven't touched the fringes of real sacrifice for the work of the Kingdom and for world brotherhood. Years ago Dr. John R. Mott said in effect that if we didn't leave our comfortable homes and go over as missionaries, the day would come when our boys would go over as soldiers, and how true it was! We are beginning to realize now that it is a great deal better to be a missionary than to be a soldier, but we had to learn our lesson the hard way.

The first half of my life was spent "just around the corner from the church." Then we moved into a suburban area, where the minister had to travel several miles in all kinds of weather to three outside charges, where the young people and the C.G.I.T. and the Sunday School and members of all other organizations had to walk some distance unless they were fortunate enough to get a drive, and where a bad storm canceled everything. It wasn't quite so comfortable. In the winter every bit of church work was an effort. I began to realize how much had been done and how very much more could be done by big churches for little, isolated churches. I thought of the young man who could have sung in one of the big comfortable city churches but who preferred to drive out into the country to help the little country choir. One of the finest bits of service I ever heard of was done by a Men's Brotherhood who doubtless would have enjoyed a comfortable Sunday-afternoon nap, but instead got into their cars, and drove to different little fishing villages along the coast, taking to them a bright, friendly service of inspiration and song. I once listened in on a conversation about it. The visiting minister who was supplying the regular minister's vacation said, "They gave me ten dollars. I preached both morning and evening and then," he chuckled in warm approval of what happened, "they dragged me out in the afternoon to give an address with their brotherhood down along the coast somewhere."

Another minister, listening in, who knew the congregation well, laughed as he said, "Brother, you weren't working for an easy church; you were working for an active church."

"Woe to them that are at ease in Zion."

"Did I Say Thanks?"

YOU have been visiting in a friend's home. They have been treating you with the finest hospitality going out of their way to make you feel welcome and at home. Your every need and comfort has been provided for. If you stayed over night, the best room and the best of everything is provided. At meal time, the best food is served in the best manner. A special treat is provided in the evening before retiring. Your host and hostess has shown real concern for you.

Then you leave all a-thrill over your specially lovely visit. And suddenly the horrible thought comes to you, "Did I say thanks?" One of the basic social requirements is to express gratefulness. Thank-you-notes are standard. Social expressions of thanks-giving are a natural part of our vocabulary. After such lovely hospitality, it would be a major blunder to have failed to say thanks.

You have grown up in a kindly, considerate home. Devotion to God and Christian virtues have been standard fare in the family and in the church. That has been your atmosphere in which you grew. You have received good training, have had opportunity to develop yourself, to use the abundance of things society has developed and offers you. You have had good friends, places to go, a great variety of entertainments to enjoy, a work to do, just about everything a person would want to ask for. And all this has been yours without your asking while your brother in another land grovels in a makeshift room in the rubble of a once noble city. It all has come so easily. It comes without our asking.

And for all this, did you give thanks? If the Christian gospel is anything, it is a Gospel of gratefulness. Thanksgiving is at the heart of the Christian gospel. Only when we find it possible to be deeply and genuinely grateful for our every gift can we begin to catch the spirit of Christ. By cultivating a Gospel of Gratefulness in our souls, we need not be horrified at the thought, "Did I say thanks?" E. L.

By-ways of Bible Knowledge

Some famous Bible Manuscripts

by Roderic Dunkerley

IT WAS, of course, not until the fifteenth century that printing was invented and that the first printed Bibles were made. That means that for much the longer part of its existence the Bible has been written by hand. Many thousands of these manuscript Bibles have survived to our day and the study of them is a most interesting and important business though intricate and highly technical.

Quite naturally they are found to differ in various respects. It is very difficult to copy out any fairly long piece of writing without making any mistakes. Anyone may test this for himself by writing out one or more chapters of the Bible and then getting someone else to check it over. Even if great care is taken, some errors will almost certainly be detected. And the copyists of the Bible manuscripts were after all only human. Tired monks who had had bad nights or who suffered from indigestion or who were cold and hungry and wanted their dinner! It is no wonder that sometimes they spelled words wrong or left out a line or tripped up in some other way. There are thousands of such differences in the manuscripts, and students have to sift these out and assess the worth of different manuscripts and endeavor to trace back the text toward the original writings. For, of course, none of the "autographs," as they are called, or primitive books written by the authors themselves are now extant. They have long ago disappeared through the ravages of time.

Generally speaking it is the oldest manuscripts that are the best and least corrupted by these errors, because, of course, mistakes tended to persist, being copied and handed on from manuscript to manuscript. There are some exceptions to this rule, because, for example, a tenth-century copyist might use a fourth-century manuscript from which to make his copy, and it might, therefore, preserve a better and purer text than a ninth-century copy made from a seventh-century book. But broadly speaking, the older the manuscript the better. New discoveries of very ancient manuscripts are, therefore, exciting events for Bible scholars, and they may help us materially to get back to the oldest and most original version. And this may be important, for though as I have suggested many of the differences between manuscripts are merely trivial mistakes there are others which are of real importance.

Even in the Authorized Version we occasionally find notes in the margin which tell of uncertainty about the text owing to differences in the manuscripts. See, for example, Luke 17:36, where a note informs us that "This verse is wanting in many Greek copies." But between the time of the Authorized Version (1611) and the Revised (1881) a great many more and earlier manscripts were discovered, and the science of assessing their various readings made great progress. As a result we have in the Revised Version many such marginal notes—in fact, it may be thought too many of them, for constant references of that kind are rather bewildering to the ordinary reader. At times, however, the points raised are of importance and do help to an appreciation of the original form of Bible documents.

Probably the most startling of these notes is the one at the end of Mark's Gospel—"The two oldest Greek manuscripts and some other authorities omit from verse 9 to the end. Some other authorities have a different ending to the Gospel." The two manuscripts referred to are those known as the "Vatican" because it is in the Vatican Library at Rome, and the "Sinaiticus" because it was found in the monastery of St. Catherine on Mt. Sinai. The story of how it was discovered there in 1844 by the great scholar, Tischendorf, and some years later acquired by him and deposited in the Library of St. Petersburg is one of the romances of Bible scholarship. It will be remembered that some years ago it was sold by the Soviet government to the British Museum. Perhaps it should be remarked that the omission of the last twelve verses of Mark in these manuscripts does not prove that the Gospel originally ended without any story of the resurrection. It is much more probable either that the original ending was lost—perhaps because the end of the manuscript was torn off, or that Mark never finished his work—perhaps because he was hauled off to prison at the time of Nero's persecution.

Another famous manuscript of the New Testament is known as Codex Bezae. Codex means a book with pages in contrast to the old type of roll-book. This manuscript was given by Theodore Beza, the friend of Calvin, to the University of Cambridge in 1581. It is in both Greek and Latin, and it contains some remarkable readings, as, for instance, the strange little tale of the man working on the Sabbath, to which I referred in an earlier article.

This manuscript was probably written in the sixth century and so is not as old as the two mentioned above, the Vatican and the Sinaiticus, which belong to the fourth century, probably about A.D. 325. At the date when the Revised Version was being made these two were, as already stated, the two oldest known copies of the New Testament. Since then, however, other discoveries have been made. In 1892, two remarkable sisters, Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Gibson, visited the same Mt. Sinai monastery and found some palimpsest leaves of a fifth-century Gospel manuscript in Syriac, containing the earliest known rendering of the Gospels into Syriac and including some strange readings. A palimpsest, by the by, is a twice-written manuscript; the original writing has been more or less erased and another written on top of it, some homily or life of a saint; the task of deciphering the underlying script is, of course, very difficult and highly technical.

Finally, in 1931, a very important group of eleven papyri was published, which are called the "Chester Beatty papyri" after the purchaser and owner of them. These contain considerable portions of the Bible, and

IT'S YOUR MOVE

Lots of people are moving around these days. One way to help everybody is to secure from your local post office a supply of cards giving both your old and new address and send them to every magazine to which you subscribe.

Beyond Our Own

CHINA.—Seventy American Protestant missionaries resident in Shanghai have signed a petition urging "positive steps" toward restoring normal trade relations between the United States and China. The petition also called for "the continuation of friendly relations between the American and Chinese people." The petition, which was also signed by thirty-four other American residents, including business and professional men, was handed to the American Consulate here for transmission to the State Department in Washington.—The Watchman-Examiner.

INDIA.—Before India attained her independence, there were 601 states. There are today only some 25, and they will be units in the Union of India. The majority of them have merged. The bigger states, like Mysore, Travancore, Cochin, and Baroda, retain their individuality.—The Watchman-Examiner.

The Seventh Day Adventists sent 267 missionaries overseas during 1948. In addition, the General Conference returned 168 missionaries who had been on furlough to their mission stations. The Conference designated for overseas work $8,731,024 of its 1949 budget of $13,446,801.—The Watchman-Examiner

OTTAWA, CANADA.—Before the end of the current session, the Canadian Parliament is almost certain to plan the end of circulation in this country of crime comic magazines.—Christian Science Monitor.

GERMANY.—Further demolition of churches has been ordered by occupation authorities in the Soviet Zone of Germany, according to church sources in Berlin. The sources said that instructions have been issued for the immediate razing of 7 churches in Alt-Landsberg, Bucholz, Strehlow, Bliesdorf, Muenchsberg, Kottbus, and Seelow. Reason given for the demolitions, according to the church authorities, is the urgent need of building material for living quarters on new farms established under orders of the Soviet Military Administration. Already 14 churches are said to have been pulled down to supply material for the new construction. Twelve of these churches were described as being in perfect condition, and the other 2 as having suffered only minor damage during the war. —The Watchman-Examiner

CONFERENCE STEWARDSHIP THERMOMETER

As the conference year is nearing the end more and more of our church members show an increased interest in the progress being made to meet the budgets of the conference boards. I shall, therefore, give the following information to show the relation of the receipts to the budgets as of October 21 instead of waiting until the end of the last quarter of this year.

Board or Committee	Budget	Receipts to 10-31-49	Per Cent of Budget Received
Emergency Relief Board	$293,250	$ 95,729	33
Foreign Mission Board	260,000	171,429	66
Home Mission Board	60,800	39,374	65
Biblical Seminary	56,000	39,051	70
Peace Committee	35,000	4,862	14
Board of Education	17,250	11,937	69
Board of Publication	10,666	5,720	54
General Treasury	10,350*	3,734	36
Young People's Union	4,000	3,149	79
Women's Missionary Association	2,825	1,658	60
Mutual Aid Board	1,125	1,194	106
Laymen's Bible Fund	1,000	2	-
Doctrine and Conduct Committee	500	725	145
	$752,760	$378,564	50

After the report was printed last month a good number of indivduals asked the question: Why is our giving for conference purposes so far below the budget needs? Please take this question to our Lord in prayer. You will notice that while ten months of the year have passed, we have met only 50% of our budget needs.

As the conference boards and committees meet in a Council of Boards at Mt. Lake, Minnesota on November 29 and 30 and December 1 to discuss the needs of our conference and to plan the work for the coming year, we ask for your earnest and sincere prayers that all plans for the coming year will be directed by God's Holy Spirit.

Sincerely,
A. Theodore Mueller, Office Manager

BIBLE KNOWLEDGE

as scholars date them from the second and third centuries it will readily be seen that they are deemed of very great value. One manuscript has about a quarter of the Gospels and is assigned to the first half of the third century—a hundred years earlier than the two great codices, the Vatican and the Sinaiticus. Another has nearly the whole of the Pauline Epistles, written about A.D. 200. Some of the Old Testament fragments are older still. All this is of immense importance in providing very ancient evidence regarding the way in which the Bible and, particularly the Gospels, were first written. Sir Frederic Kenyon says, "No other ancient book has anything like such early and plentiful testimony to its text." (Copyright—1949)

"Reader Says"

Dear Editor:

I would like to add my echo to what Harold Regier wrote recently in "The Reader Says" column (October 11th issue) regarding the reprint out of the "Covenant Weekly" referring to our grain marketing system.

It is regrettable that the author in the "Covenant Weekly" would put out such misleading information regarding the grain and milling industries. The editor of "The Mennonite" undoubtedly reprinted the article in good faith by assuming that the other author knew what he was talking about. Such is not the case, however.

I know nothing about the bakery business, but I have been in the grain business over fourteen years, and have done business with a number of mills. I'm sure you will find that the grain and milling industries operate on one of the smallest margins of profit of any business in the country. This is possible largely because grain firms and mills can hedge the grain which they buy on the Board of Trade. If it were not for the Board of Trade, farmers would get a good deal less for their grain and consumers would have to pay more for their flour. By hedging their grain, the grain and milling industries do not have to take the risk of losing money on a rising or falling market. They can then follow the market either up or down without loss, and, of course, without additional profit above their regular margin. You will find that elevators and mills follow the Board of Trade markets up or down very closely on grain that is hedged.

There is a booklet entitled "Grain Marketing Efficiency, the story of The Kansas City Board of Trade" put out by that organization, which explains the operations of the Board of Trade very well. Anyone interested can undoubtedly get a free copy of it by writing the Educational Committee, Kansas City Board of Trade, 10th and Wyandotte Streets, Kansas City, Missouri.

(One question still left in the minds of many despite the seeming benefits rendered to society by the Board of Trade is whether any institution is to be evaluated primarily by its results; when it is known that thousands of people in many walks of life are gambling their money through this institution one is inclined to wonder whether the price that is paid in terms of character is worth the seeming benefits derived. Editorials

IN LAST WEEK'S ISSUE of the MENNONITE, an item in the Bluffton College news raised a basic question about the quality of American freedom as of today. Larry Gara, a teacher at Bluffton, who was imprisoned for influencing a non-resistant who had already made up his mind not to register long before he met Gara, was denied bail while awaiting a hearing in the Federal Court of Appeals. At the same time outspoken communists in New York are released on bail. The inference that might be drawn from this is that it is a worse crime to have a godly conscience than it is to be an atheistic Communist. It is interesting to note that Father James M. Gillis, C.P.S., a Catholic columnist writing in the Catholic Chronicle (incidentally, the judge who sentenced Gara is Catholic) says:

"The idea of the court that sentenced him seems to be that you may follow conscience if you feel that you must, but that if you do, you must be punished. Which, to say the least, is a queer interpretation of the natural and constitutional right to freedom of conscience. It seems to be on a level with the Communist position that a citizen may practice religion if he wishes, but that if he does, he must starve . . . .

> In Christian work one's words have the amount of weight that our lives give them.—Milo Kaufman.

"The newspapers, like the White House and the Department of Justic, are embarassed. They don't know what to say, so they say foolish things. One of the most ambitious and pretentious of them, The York Times says with incredible fatuity, 'the laws of a community, or a state or a nation are, in a democracy, the collective conscience of the people.'

"There is, of course, no such thing as a collective conscience. If anything is the world is individual it is conscience. It is a basic principle of Christian ethics that a man's conscience is strictly his own. On his fidelity to his own conscience he stands or falls. By it he is to be judged. By it he is to be saved or lost. He must not abandon his own conscience and substitute some other man's. He cannot, when conscience speaks, turn a deaf ear to it and take refuge in public opinion.

"The Rev. Donald Harrington, minister-elect of the Community Church in New York City, reminds the Times that what it calls the "collective conscience" has been guilty historically of vast crimes such as lynching, slavery, war, imperial exploitation and conquest. Also he says: 'Our civilization is dying because the individual conscience has surrendered its integrity and responsibility to the collective institutions of the state which are guided more by expediency than by moral principles.' The reverend gentleman is, in those two statements, correct."

SPEAKING OF MISSIONS, Time recently called attention to a Welsh missionary who went to China to share the good news of the Gospel. Before she went she instructed her parents never to pay a cent of ransom in case she were taken; "God is sufficient," said she. Then she found that as long as she had a British passport she had a certain sense of pride. Finally she tore it up and became a citizen of China. Having returned to England for a visit she has remarked that though China may throw out all foreigners, she will always go back because she is Chinese now. One has the feeling that if large areas of the world that seem to be slipping back into the hand of Satan are to be won back to Jesus Christ, more of the spirit and action of the above disciple of Christ must be manifest. If Christians enjoy privileges not known by those they are seeking to win to Christ there will be an inevitable barrier. This applies to Christians in the homeland as well as those on the foreign field. The above individual was simply acting like Jesus Christ did who, though he was God, identified himself with sinful man in order to lift man out of his sin to sonship. But somehow we have fallen for the deadly heresy of making Christ all Saviour and not example. We say it is presumptious for sinful man to try to imitate Christ. But unless we insist upon taking seriously the matter of discipleship we make the very salvation which He wrought for us "in his own body on the tree" a farce to the world.

AN UNHERALDED NEWS ITEM appearing in an insignificant place in an internationally known paper called attention to the fact that the followers of Ghandi have interceded in behalf of the assassin. They stated that Ghandi would not have wanted his assassin executed—therefore their plea. We are not here trying to put Ghandi on a level with Jesus Christ who was God as well as man. In fact, while Ghandi had a high regard for Jesus Christ, he never became a Christian. But isn't it a terrifyingly sad state of affairs when men in non-Christian lands act more like Jesus Christ than so-called Christians who in their self-righteousness have their emenies—the so-called war-criminals—executed for wrongs of which they themselves are guilty? We shouldn't be surprised to find India closing doors to our evangelists if our own expression of the Gospel is unchristian. Let us pray that the doors may be opened to our evangelists but, by all means, let us repent and confess our sins in associating ourselves with systems that destroy the very life we are seeking to redeem. Only then will the Gospel of our evangelists make sense to non-Christian peoples.—J.J.E.

The State

Third of the Pagan Trinity

by Justus Holsinger

The third god of our present civilization is that of "nationalism." During the 19th century there arose a strong spirit of nationalism closely coupled with the spirit of materialism and racial superiority. By nationalism we mean the spirit of devotion and worship of the national state. Man is endowed with the capacity to worship and some will choose to worship the state rather than the true God. Some prefer to worship their material possessions, others their racial heritage, and others the national state.

When the spirit of patriotism becomes so high that a man will put the state above God, this constitutes worship of the state and is termed nationalism. It seems absurd in peacetime to think that one would worship the state and yet we know from recent experience that in time of war there are many who put their devotion to the state ahead of their devotion to God.

> It would appear, therefore, that when man permits the state to conscript his human energy for the defense of the state, he is recognizing the state as sovereign rather than God.

Began with Divine Rights of Kings

The spirit of nationalism seems to have developed from the idea of divine right of Kings. According to the divine right theory the king was God's lieutenant on earth and being thus he could do no wrong. Thus the king took on a semi-divine character and any subject who would dare to disobey his order was in theory and fact disobeying God. As the national state grew and republics replaced monarchies the divine right theory was carried over and the national states assumed a divine character and demanded allegiance from their subjects.

The State Cannot Be Sovereign

The question of reconciling state sovereignty with individual liberty is an-age old question and is yet debated among political scientists. The state is not a creation of God but of man and can therefore be no more divine than man himself is divine. The state is a human, rather than a divine institution. If God is sovereign, which we believe him to be, the state cannot be sovereign because two sovereign powers could not exist side by side, if the term sovereign means "supreme." The state has assumed its sovereignty for the sake of expediting its law among its subjects. If we concede that the state is sovereign and can exercise its power at will upon its subjects, then we can only conclude that a subject of the state cannot refuse to answer the call of the state, regardless of his relationship to God. If we accept God as the sovereign power of the universe and the state as a human institution, then our supreme allegiance is to God rather than to the state. When we disobey laws of the state we are disobeying rules of human conduct made by man. We are obligated to comply with those rules unless they are counter to the laws of God. When they are counter to the rules of human conduct as set by Jesus in the Sermon on the Mount, then it is within the rights of man to abide by the laws of God, since God alone is sovereign.

Whether Capitalistic or Communistic

The spirit of nationalism is quite strong in the world today. In all totalitarian states whether capitalistic or communistic, the subjects are required to worship the state. They are not permitted to recognize a power above the state. The subjects of a totalitarian state put their complete faith and trust in the state and depend upon it for personal security backed by material force. Rather than to place their faith in a living God who created the material resources, they choose to place their faith in a human institution which claims possession of those resources. Man prefers material security offered by the state of spiritual peace offered by God. There are many examples of history to prove that faith in the national state is a futile faith since national states decline in power as their material resources decline.

The State Did Not Create Man

Jesus in a few words established the principle of the Christian's relationship to the state and to God. When he was confronted with the question of paying taxes to the state he said that the individual should render to the state the things which belong to the state and to God the things which are His. Since the coin was created by the state, it should be returned to the state. God alone can create human life, therefore human life should be returned to God. The state places the value upon the coin, but only God can place a value upon human personality. Thus the state has no right to conscript human life for the purpose of protecting its material resources against other states. It would appear, therefore, that when man permits the state to conscript his human energy for the defense of the state he is recognizing the state as sovereign rather than God. He is giving his allegiance to man and his institution rather than to the Creator of man. This constitutes placing one's faith in nationalism rather than in God. Not until a great portion of the world's population places its faith in a living God as the sovereign power of the universe, and accepts the principles of human conduct as taught by His Son rather than place its faith in man, his institutions, and his resources, can peace and happiness come to the human family. Any civilization which places its faith in the creation rather than the creator is comparable to the man who built his house upon the sand.

The Gospel of Jesus Christ is not only a gospel for all men, but it is a gospel for the whole man.—Evangelical Visitor

Mountain Workers Fellowship Conference

collected by A. J. Neuenschwander

AFTER much hoping, dreaming, and praying the Board of Home Missions was able to inaugurate a new chapter in our Southern Mountain Mission Work, the Mountain Mission Workers Fellowship held at Pine Mountain School, Incline Kentucky, August 29-31. John J. Plenert, Acting Secretary of the Board for three months, formulated the program and secured the speakers in cooperation with the workers.

Bible study, evangelism and music, were the three assigned topics, but the program provided for some recreation, fellowship, and leisure. In the information sheet sent out inviting the workers to the conference, they were told to "bring nature study books if interested in birds, trees, and flowers."

Walter J. Dick, Pastor of the Second Mennonite Church, Philadelphia served as Bible Teacher and leader of music, while Rev. Solomon Mouttet, director of the "Go Ye Mission," taught the Evangelism Course and Rev. Plenert acted as director for the Conference.

It was our plan to share one or two pictures of the group, but those that had cameras took only colored pictures, therefore we must let word pictures suffice.

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

It is with great joy and praise in our hearts that we write this report on our time spent at the fellowship of the Mountain Home Mission Workers. We had not realized how much our souls were hungering for such a spiritual treat until we arrived at the lovely place chosen for the conference and fellowshiped together in the Lord. No lovelier place could have been chosen than the Pine Mountain settlement school. The hospitality was wonderful. It was such a joy to meet the Plenerts and to receive the blessings of studying the book of II Timothy with Walter Dick. How this encouraged us with new zeal to be "good soldiers of the Lord Jesus Christ."

S. Mouttet highlighted the days spent at Incline, by encouraging us to go on to do greater things for the Lord expecting greater things from Him. How we praise Him for what He is able to do for His honor and glory, if we are but willing to yield fully to Him. We realize more than ever before that God cannot use His all-mighty power unless we permit Him to do so by faith and yieldedness. He can only use us as we yield to Him. We have yet to see what great things He can do through His own who are willing to burn out for Christ.

The time spent together in prayer and testimony —what a joy to the heart! Then, too, knowing some of the problems that confront each one, gives us a greater interest and effectiveness in praying for one another.

How we praise the Lord for the wonderful privilege of such a spiritual treat as we had together in His Name. May the Lord greatly bless those who made it possible. Joyfully in Christ,—The Carl O. Wahlstedts.

From Greeneville, Tennessee

The time spent at the conference at Pine Mountain School in Kentucky was by no means lost, but was well worth while. It was an inspiration to find all present interested in using every opportunity to win souls for Christ and to learn of the work in the various fields where others of the General Conference are laboring. I was glad for the opportunity to meet fellow-workers.

My personal testimony is that I was weary after 13 weeks of camp this summer—blessed weeks with 1,069 boys and girls attending. Then another week of our own worker's conference with business sessions and also spiritual food and fellowship was enjoyed. But I went to Pine Mountain with some reluctance, feeling rather like just relaxing at home. I am so glad I didn't miss it, for the weariness was forgotten in the rich spiritual fellowship with others attending the conference, and the blessings received through the Bible Study given by Walter Dick and the messages on Evangelization by Mouttet. The personal testimonies from the workers were a spiritual uplift.

I am happy that it was possible for me to attend and grateful to those who arranged the conference and made it possible for us to have this time of refreshing together in such a beautiful, comfortable location.—Marie Liechty.

"Thy Name is as ointment poured forth." (Song of Solomon 1:3). Those two days spent apart from every-day activities brought to me much of the cleansing and strengthening ministry of God's Word, which is always as "ointment" to our minds and hearts, also something of the fragrance of the Person of our Lord Jesus Christ and the sweetness of Christian fellowship. "What of the Night" in Colombia?

The following letter was sent to all missionaries in Colombia by a fellow missionary of the Inter-American Missionary Society. At our station meeting last night it was decided I was to mail you a copy and ask you to publish a call to prayer in THE MENNONITE, if there is still time, or possibly let the churches know somehow or other to pray for Colombia on Sunday, November 27. Signed, Mary Becker.

(This letter reached the Editor too late to be printed prior to November 27; but the need for prayer prevails. J.J.E.)

Medellin
October 20, 1948

Dear Fellow-Missionary:

This morning in a time of prayer, the Lord impressed upon me the idea of writing you about a leading which seems to be of divine guidance.

All of us are deeply conscious of the tragic hours through which our beloved adopted country is passing. Yesterday a headline in one of the Medellin dailies put it this way: "Choose on November 27 between a battle or one hundred years of slavery." Perhaps that is too sharply defined, in a sectarian political spirit.

However, many of our beloved missionaries and national workers do not need to read in the newspaper of the violent conditions which reign throughout the length and breadth of this Republic. Many of you have been in the midst of it. Some of you have suffered personal injuries. All of our fields are threatened by the enemy of God's work. Others have had to be closed due to impossible situations.

Is it not true that most of us have had to confess that ONLY GOD IS SUFFICIENT FOR THIS HOUR? Can we fail to comprehend the tremendous issues at stake, and what will be the tomorrow of Gospel work in Colombia?

It may well be that November 27 will be but another stage in a continued series of crises. But, at least it is a most important one.

None of us can ever know the pattern of the future, but we can cry unto the God of all grace who has designed that pattern and who knows the "end from the beginning." Would not our UNITED PRAYER, sincere, fervent, and persevering, be pleasing to our God at this time?

Some of us will be declaring a Day of Prayer on November 26 or 27. Others will be uniting in mission fellowship, others in the native church groups. There will be fastings and nights of prayer no doubt.

But, there has come to my mind this morning in the quiet hour, another thought. All of us are backed in the homeland by a gratifying number of Prayer Warriors, those precious ones who remember us at the Throne of Grace. Perhaps it would amaze us if we could tally the number of those who are praying for ALL OF OUR WORKS. We have prayer circle bands, missionary prayer bands, days of prayer, etc., in the States, groups which are anxious to have "something definite" to pray for.

Would it not be of spiritual value in our crisis here in Colombia, to suggest to each of our home boards that our praying constituency be invited to participate with us in this challenge? Could not November 26, perhaps, or some other day near the elections, be declared as a day of UNITED MISSIONARY PRAYER FOR COLOMBIA?

May God lead us all. Our prayer may make the difference between a Colombia still bound by her centuries-old traditions and a NEW COLOMBIA FREED BY OUR LIBERATING CHRIST and the power of His glorious gospel!

In His fellowship,

William Gillam

PRAYER REQUEST

The Board of Foreign Missions asks the Conference to remember them in prayer while they are in session at the Council of Boards, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, November 29 to December 2.

Mountain Workers Conference . . Cont'd from p. 5

by Walter Dick were helpful and interesting. The special musical numbers were not only enjoyable but gave me a real lift spiritually. Prayer fellowship with fellow-workers from different parts of our country and Canada was refreshing. As we shared our privileges, responsibilities, problems, encouragements in prayer and discussion, the Lord reminded me again that as Christians we are about a sacred business, seeking to win souls to the Lord Jesus. How watchful we must be lest anything of ourselves give a false impression of Him Whom we represent! It is after all, not so much our job to get souls out of sin as it is to get them to see JESUS. That Name must be preached but if there is anything "big" about this business of Christian service it is that practicing of the sweetness and power of the Name in all things, places and circumstances; and this includes all Christians and not just a few ear-marked "missionaries." This responsibility calls for much prayer help one for another. Let us be faithful.

Personally, I want to thank members of the Home Mission Board and all who had a share in making such a conference possible—your prayer help, time spent in planning it, gifts to support it, some of you giving of yourselves to be used in a "little" conference with a few of God's "little" children who want to fill the "little" place He has chosen for us faithfully, victoriously, and joyously that souls might be saved.—Margaret Slotter.

From Incline, Kentucky

"Come ye yourselves apart and rest awhile." This invitation of the Lord Jesus to His disciples can as profitably be heeded today. They had been with Christ as He so continually ministered to the multitudes, but He very likely saw heart needs in them, as well as in the multitudes. To meet these needs He invited them to come, as a group of His own, apart with Him for awhile. While to gather may have

America for Christ

by John Sutherland Bonnell

THE United Evangelistic Advance, which is launched today in all parts of this nation, represents one of the most significant happenings in the church life of America during this century. It is supported by almost the whole of Protestant Christianity in this country. Thirty-eight major denominations are behind it, eleven more than the twenty-seven included in the membership of the Federal Council of Churches. Before this movement will have reached its climax fifteen months from now we confidently hope that forty-seven million Protestants will be caught up in the onward sweep of this spiritual advance. Even the slogan adopted for this nation-wide mission is significant: "America for Christ." You will note that it does not say "America for Methodism," or "Lutheranism," or "Episcopalianism," or Presbyterianism" or "Catholicism," but "America for Christ."

Our Lord said: "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." This spiritual advance will seek to exalt Christ, and the attractive power of this supreme Personality of the ages and the eternities will draw all men to Him.

Our Hope in the Man Christ Jesus

Our world has reached a dreadful impasse. It is rent asunder. One half of the world is arrayed against the other half, and these two segments of humanity are eyeing each other with suspicion and hate and fear. If the tension continues to mount it will take only a spark to kindle a conflagration that may well consume civilization. No nation or people will be exempt. In the words of the spiritual "There's no hiding down here." We have developed comprehensive methods for settling international disputes by arbitration. The United Nations Organization is an effective political instrument IF IT CAN BE MADE TO WORK. So also was the League of Nations. We have the machinery for peace, but we lack mutual understanding and trust and good will. There never can be peace in the world until the will to peace exists in the hearts of men.

Did we say, "There's no hiding place down here"? The Bible says there is:

"A man shall be as a hiding place from the wind and a covert from the tempest . . . . As the shadow of a great rock in a weary land." (Isaiah 32:2).

For Whom Christ Died

He is the man Christ Jesus. His personality alone is great enough to unite people of all classes and races and creeds. We must cease to think that any segment of humanity is beyond the reach of His power. For instance, even devout Christians of the Western world think of the people of Russia and her satellites as enemies to be feared and hated and opposed. Isn't it passing strange that we haven't thought of them as persons for whom Christ died? If the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation why shouldn't it save the Communists, too? Dare we pray for this? Is this too hard a task for Christ? Did not the risen Saviour lay hold of Saul of Tarsus on the road to Damascus, the ablest and bitterest enemy of the early Church and transform him so that the savage persecutor became the greatest of the Apostles, and at last laid down his life in the service of the Gospel he had blasphemed?

Here is the promise of God:

"If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land." (II Chronicles 7:14.)

From Every Pulpit — A Call to Prayer

From every pulpit in America let us hear a call to prayer. Prayer prepares the hearts of men and women for the Divine visitation. It releases God's power.

Let us form prayer groups in our churches, with business and professional associates. A prayer group may start with just two persons. Let every Christian who is a shut-in dedicate himself and herself to a ministry of intercession for this great evangelistic advance and for the conversion of America.

One of the most notable revivals in the history of modern England began through humble intercession. When Dwight L. Moody made his first visit to England he found that the man who had invited him there had died while Moody was crossing the Atlantic. He was almost on the point of returning discouraged to America when the Reverend Mr. Lessey of North London invited him to preach on the following Sunday. At the morning service Moody experienced a sense of futility and felt as though he were beating the air, but at the evening service everything was changed. The hush of God descended upon the congregation, and when the service ended hundreds crowded forward asking: "How may we find Christ?" This was the beginning of a mighty revival that shook the British Isles.

The Power of God Fell

Mr. Moody was amazed to discover that this great awakening had its origin in the prayers of an invalid woman in Mr. Lessey's congregation. Almost a year earlier she had seen an item in a newspaper that a Mr. Moody had been holding successful meetings in America. From that moment she made it her daily prayer: "O God, send this man Moody to our church in London." When she learned to her astonishment that Mr. Moody had preached at the morning service in her church she and her sister spent all of Sunday afternoon in prayer. At the evening service the power of God fell, and the revival began.

Let Christians of every denomination join their hearts and voices in a mighty volume of intercession to the Throne of Grace that God will manifest Himself in this nation with Pentecostal power. Then in truth shall we win America for Christ.—A radio address delivered on Ocober 2, 1949 and printed by permission of John Sutherland Bonnell.

Paraguayan Colonists Hopefully Planting Crops

AKRON, PENNSYLVANIA.—"Paraguay has had exceptionally fine weather the past several months with temperatures ranging from 60 to 90 degrees during most days. The rainy season has finally come and all Mennonite colonists are busy and hopefully planting. Several areas in the Neuland colony of the Chaco have received as much as eight inches of rain. The corn in Friesland and Volendam already looks very promising and most people will also be able to enjoy watermeloms by Christmas time. Grasshopper poison has been sent to the Chaco early to enable control, should they again make their appearance this year. This poison is being made available to the colonies free of charge by the government.

"The seasonal drop of the water level of the Paraguay River has come very suddenly this year and the larger boats no longer go up the river from Asuncion. This has created a serious shipping bottleneck, also affecting our colonies. However, since many items had been stockpiled by the colonies in anticipation of the shipping shortage, we are confident that no undue hardships will result. The river usually rises considerably by Christmas and becomes normal by January.

"The brethren C. N. Hiebert, J. W. Nickel, C. C. Peters, and Peter Klassen, Brazil, are proving a great blessing to many as they carry on their spiritual ministry among all colonists, for they not only preach the Word of God, but also give friendship and understanding, uniting brethren here with our North American brotherhood."—Cornelius J. Dyck.

Recent word from Paraguay states that the official currency exchange rate has been changed from 3.67 to 7.99. This step of devaluation is similar to that taken recently by England and Argentina. The extent to which this will affect the colonies and the M.C.C. work there, is not known as yet.

New Relief Center is Located in Vienna

A recent development in the relief program in Austria is the acquistion of a large house to serve as unit headquarters, and center from which to carry on the program. Until now the unit members have lived in various locations in Vienna, making it difficult to organize coordinated unit activities through which contact could be maintained with people of the area. This center, with adequate room for community services as well as office and rooming space, will make a good contribution to the life and work of the Unit. It represents another step in the direction of the spiritual "plus" service in the relief program in Austria.

Children's Home in Germany Opens

Bad Duerkheim Children's Home is a new relief project in Germany. Since October 15, forty undernourished and underprivileged children from various South German cities have been cared for. It is planned that each group of children will be served for a three-month period, then return to their homes so that other groups may be similarly served. This is the first children's home of this type to be opened in Germany by the M. C. C. Bad Duerkheim is located near Neustadt, in the French Zone.

Samuel Gerber Itinerary in the United States

After spending some time visiting Mennonite churches in Canada, Brother Samuel Gerber will contact numerous Mennonite communities and churches in the United States. During the period of November 9 to 16 he will be in California and Colorado; November 16 to 24 in Newton, Kansas; November 25 and 26, Chicago, Illinois; November 26 to December 3, Goshen, Indiana; December 3 and 4, Orrville, Ohio; December 4 and 5, Scottdale, Pennsylvania; December 5 and 6, Akron, Pennsylvania; December 7 and 8, Harrisonburg, Virginia. Brother Gerber, an active evangelist and president of the Mennonite Conference in Switzerland, is visiting the churches in the U. S. and Canada upon invitation of the Mennonite Central Committee. According to present plans, he will leave for Europe on December 10.

Mennonite Aid Notes

It was recently announced that Mennonite Central Relief Committee (Western Canada) desires to make a special plus contribution to the Mennonite immigrants in Paraguay, and for this purpose is collecting funds to purchase needed machine tools for Neuland and Volendam colonies. C. T. DeFehr will assist in the selection of the tools.

Recent mention was made of the currency devaluation in Paraguay, making 7.99 the present official exchange rate. Indications are that the government now intends to enforce the handling of all foreign exchange through the bank, with severe penalities for violation of the new regulations. The country of Paraguay has taken this measure in order to help stabilize its economy.

On November 18 Jacob and Maria Guenther and their six children ranging in age from 3 to 12, arrived in New York. This Mennonite family is formerly from the Ukraine, later was located in Bachnang Camp, and now upon their arrival in the United States will be at home at Mechanicsville, Md., where their sponsor, Samuel Stoltzfus, has provided employment and housing for the family. The parents of Mrs. Guenther came to the United States with another group of refugees early this year.

Favorable reports have been received from sponsors of non-Mennonite DP's whose coming has been arranged through the MCC. Indications are that most of these people are making satisfactory adjustment to their new circumstances.

Address for Clothing Gifts

Persons in the eastern area sending clothing contributions by freight or express should use the address, "Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Penna." rather than Ephrata, Pennsylvania, since an additional delivery charge is made by the Ephrata station for parcels delivered by them. Parcel post articles may be addressed to either place as in the past.

Our Colleges and Seminary

SEMINARY HEARS CROUS

The Vesper address of Dr. Ernest Crous of Goettingen Germany, was deeply appreciated. To those of us who have grown up under the separation of church and state in America, his message clearly seemed to reveal the superiority of this system as over against the state church. It also showed that despite the great weaknesses of the church in Europe, it still was the only institution to survive and it was the first institution to survive and it was the first institution to bring help to people in need. For those of us here at the Seminary it was interesting for him to raise questions about the training of ministers in the state universities of Germany and the fact that there will be fewer trained ministers available for the church now. The message concluded by showing the revival of biblical reading in Germany and the much closer bond of fellowship among all Christians who have suffered, both Protestants and Catholic.

At the Bluffton College Bible Lectures, President S. F. Pannabecker read a paper on "The Meaning of Church Discipline for our Conference Churches," and John T. Neufeld discussed the problem of "Evangelism in the City Church."

Walter Gering of the Eden Church at Moundridge, Kansas, has concluded his work here as visiting lecturer in Bible and the Rural Church. We deeply appreciated his contribution in teaching, in leadership at prayer meetings and in the chapel services, and in the fellowship which he was able to have in a more intimate way with the students.

The next speaker will be Robert Kreider who will discuss the spiritual meaning of relief work.

BLUFFTON BIBLE LECTURES WELL ATTENDED

The series of Bible Lectures by Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen was well attended and very much appreciated. He spoke in simple terms of some of the common problems of religious life. The Women's and Ministers' conferences were also well supported, the attendance at the women's meeting reaching a new high this year.

Laurence Burkhalter, teacher of band and orchestral instruments, gave a concert in Ramseyer Chapel the evening of November 21. Mr. Burkhalter is an accomplished violinist. Last year he was concert master of the Northwestern University Symphony Orchestra.

Faculty members attending the meeting of the Council of Church Boards at Mountain Lake, Minnesota include J. S. Schultz, Harry Yoder, Paul Shelly, E. J. Bohn, and Lloyd L. Ramseyer.

Pres. Ramseyer is to be one of the speakers at a college visual-aids conference at Oberlin College December 3.

The Messiah is to be given in the high school gymnasium at 8:00 p.m. December 11. Soloists for the occasion are Beulah Temple Nietz, Wallridge, Ohio, soprano; Marion Blakeman, Toledo, Ohio, contralto; Carlton Eldridge, Springfield, Illinois, tenor; and, Samuel T. Burkhard, Columbus, Ohio, bass. Mrs. Nietz and Mr. Burkhard are Bluffton College graduates. This will be Mr. Eldridge's third appearance here as Messiah soloist.

SHIRER ON BETHEL MEMORIAL HALL SERIES

William L. Shirer, noted author and radio commentator, will be the speaker at the Bethel College Memorial Hall Series, December 6, in the Memorial Hall, North Newton, Kansas. Mr. Shirer has chosen as the subject of his lecture "The State of World Affairs."

Sunday, Nov. 13, students and other residents of the Bethel College campus had the choice of attending two events. Dr. Charles Clayton Morrison, fomer editor of the noted CHRISTIAN CENTURY (Interdenominational magazine) spoke in a Newton church under the auspices of the ministerial alliance of Newton. A Mission Rally, sponsored jointly by the Student Volunteers of Bethel College and the Youth Section of the Western District Conference, was held in Memorial Hall. Rev. D. J. Unruh of the First Mennonite Church in Newton, spoke on the challenge of missions at the fellowship hour. The main speaker in the evening was Dr. Leland Brubaker, of the Mission Board of the Church of the Brethren, who had for his topic "Fearless, Happy, Trouble Makers."

At Friday morning's chapel hour, Miss Waltner of the Bethel College Art Department oriented students concerning this department. Miss Waltner exhibited beautiful rugs, plastic products, and pottery made by her classes.

The greatest attraction of all events during the week was the Hungarian String Quartet which gave the opening concert of the Bethel College Memorial Hall series, November 17. More than 2000 attended the evening concert.

The 52d regular Annual Meeting of the Bethel College Corporation convened November 25, 1949, in the Memorial Hall.

Two courses that will appeal especially to those interested in agriculture are given by Bethel College during the winter quarter beginning November 29th. The courses are: Fundamentals of Animal Husbandry and Agricultural Economics.

For the benefit of those engaged in work that affords that spare time only during the winter months. Bethel College offers the following courses in the evenings:

On Monday and Wednesday evenings. Woodworking and Welding. On Tuesday and Thursday evenings Practical Electricity. The time for the night courses is 7:00 to 9:30 p.m.

At present the basement and foundation of the parsonage and half of the walls of the church are completed. Until the basement of the church is completed. our services are held in the auditorium of the Oklahoma Bible Academy.—August Schmidt, Corr.

Mountain Workers Conference . . . Cont'd from p. 6

involved effort, yet it meant rest in that their thoughts were centered in Him with the purpose of fellowship for the good of their own souls, rather than the immediate good of others.

That is the experience that seemed to be unanimously ours as the Home Mission Workers met at Pine Mountain School in Eastern Kentucky. Some traveled far to have the fellowship of two days but found it a very profitable time. We trust this may be our experience again and that a bit longer time together may be possible.

For us, the conference came at the beginning of our school work for this year and meeting others in similar work was helpful and encouraging. As we begin to face, publicly, the opposition of Satan through anti-Christian officials we ask your prayer help for us all that children be reached with the gospel. Just last evening a school boy on the road asked when the Bible teacher was coming back, saying, "We miss the Bible stories." Pray that as we teach they may be as eager for the Saviour as for the stories of Him.—Elsie Pfister.

From East Freedom Pennsylvania

We had been looking forward with great anticipation to this time of fellowship and relaxation. So when the time finally came for us to attend the conference, we went expecting the Lord to do something for us and He has proven faithful again. One of the things that impressed me was the fact that all the workers seemed to have been looking for a time of spiritual refreshing so the unity of purpose was evident. Since most of us never, or hardly ever, get an opportunity to hear other preachers and teachers, we all received a great deal of help from the Bible study especially since the book discussion dealt with the problems that we all have in our fields.

Our personal contacts with the workers and the times of prayer fellowship served to strengthen each one of us and we went home feeling better fitted to cope with our problems as we find them in our respective fields. Mouttet's lectures proved to us that people still want the truth and that men and women will respond when the gospel is presented to them in love.

Our only criticism is that of the little boy who said that his piece of cake had a taint: "T'aint long enough." We hope that this can be made an annual conference. We do not consider it a luxury but rather a necessary time of revitalization.—Very sincerely, Randall A. Heinrichs.

From Greenville, Tennessee

As we drove up to Pine Mountain School on the evening of August 29, it was with a feeling of not knowing just what to expect, yet anticipating a time of blessing in the Lord as we would have our first Mountain Workers' Mission Fellowship Conference. In the short interval of about fifteen minutes between our arrival and supper, we had already spoken with workers from Canada, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, and Kentucky, all of whom were strangers to us except the Hollimans of North Carolina and Miss Pfister, whom we had the pleasure

Odd Egyptian and Biblical Cures

If you lived in Egypt at about the time of Moses, and you developed spots before your eyes, and your eyes, ached so that you were going blind, you would have gone to an Eye Specialist. He probably would have given you a poultice of powdered onions.

For way back those many centuries ago, the "Medical Profession" was at such a high state of specialization that even then certain doctors treated nothing but specific ailments, even as modern specialists do today.

The eye specialist would very likely have given you first a lotion made of dried myrrh crushed in sour milk. Then the powdered onion poultice. Remembering how our eyes water when we cut onions, the powdering certainly would have started the tears to flow, which is exactly what the doctor wanted.

But—suppose this failed to help. The third step was even a queerer one. He would remove the water from the two eyes of a pig, mix collyrium (a medicated eye-wash used today) and redlead and wild honey with this water, crush it all into a paste and inject it into your ear. How would you like to put all that into your ear to help your eye?

We know these unusual practices about the ancient medical arts of the Egyptians because of a book that was discovered about 75 years ago. This book which is really like a collection of odd facts and folk lore something like our cook-books, is now known as the Papyrus Ebers, because it was translated by a German named Ebers. Some authorities call it the oldest book in the world, as they say it was written about 1500 B.C.

The Papyrus Ebers contains all the medical lore that was practiced by the Egyptians and which had been passed down traditionally from the earliest wisemen. It contains some most unusual "cures."

At that time the Egyptians obviously believed that it was not a natural thing to be sick and to die. If you become ill or a tooth ached, they thought an evil spirit had entered into your system, or some enemy had put a hex on you. Thus it was up to their physicians to drive out this evil by harsh methods.

They believed that if a human's parts became old or diseased, they could be helped by animal remedies. You could inherit certain virtues of the animal. Reverently, in a special ceremony, they would eat bear-fat to prevent baldness; or rub their bodies with snake-oil to cure bronchitis or to make muscles limber for athletic contests. Or they would eat the raw pancreas of a sacred goat, believing that the gods would bestow good luck—and lo! modern doctors use raw pancreas for insulin in Diabetes!

They also used parts of elephants, lions, camels, crocodiles, and particularly the hyena, for in the Papyrus Ebers the hyena is used in 79 different prescriptions.

Yet in many ways we use some of the same ingredients today. All our comic-strip characters place a hunk of raw meat on their eyes when they have a black eye. Little do they realize they are following a time-honored custom of the Egyptians who officially were told to put a "baked ox-liver" to "cool a hot eye."

Also they knew the correct values of opium, copper-salts, and one of their simplest purgatives was castor-oil. They used gargles, salves and inhalations, and even had some rough idea of the surgical use of the knife.

The Egyptians' ideas spread, and became the foundation for many of the Roman and Greek medicines. Yet Pliny had his own unique version. He told the Romans that ground-up mummies were excellent to soothe a tooth-ache, and that radishes were wonderful to cure "ulcers of the lungs." The next time your lungs ache, grab a radish and see if Pliny was right!

The learned men in the cities of the Bible lands copied freely from Egyptian lore. Many took their training in Egypt and absorbed all the theories and practices taught there. Remember that Moses learned from the Royal Court Teachers, who copied from the clay-tablets of those like the Papyrus Ebers.

But the common people were apt to shy away from these new-fangled notions. When they were sick, many more times they turned to their religion with presents to their gods rather than to their physicians. In Rome, if a young mother fell ill, she prayed and offered sacrifices to the fourteen special gods and goddesses who must be appeased before she could be well. Each had a temple erected to him or her alone, beside general temples like the one erected to the God of Fever!

One of the worries of the Old Testament times was: Should the people take their ills to the doctors, or should they heed the new teachings of the Prophets of the Lord, or should they pray to their old gods? Even kings were enticed by Moses' teachings, but not always enough to put their trust in the Lord. The Bible tells us that King Asa "was diseased in his feet until his disease was exceeding great, yet in his disease he sought not to the Lord, but to the physicians."

The Prophet Isaiah warned the people against placing confidence in Egyptian medicine. He said: "Woe to them that go to Egypt for help."

And Jeremiah quotes that the Lord as saying: "Cursed be the man that trusteth in man and maketh flesh his arm and whose heart departeth from the Lord."

The Old Testament is concerned mostly with the hygiene of the times. Sir William Osler says that the Old Testament betrays both Egyptian and Babylonian influence, particularly in connection with social medicine. Little is mentioned about cures in the Bible, except the miraculous ones of Our Lord, when even the dead were raised!

So, if your eyes burn now, and you are tempted to try hog's eye-wash, remember Isaiah's warning,—and don't try Egyptian cures!—Courtesy of Pilot, youth journal of United Presbyterian Church.

Comments by the Editor—"Whose Birthday Is It?"

WE ARE entering the Christmas season these days. The Christmas season seems to get earlier each year. This is particularly true during and since the war. The "Shop Early for Christmas" slogan became a necessity during the war to make any contacts across seas by Christmas season. Business is loathe to permit that season to be any shorter—say, for instance, from Thanksgiving to Christmas!

But, with Christmas upon us, one is brought to raise the question, "Whose birthday is it we are celebrating?" On Christmas day, we exchange gifts; dad gives gifts to mother and the parents give gifts to the children, and Johnny gives a gift to his latest girl friend. Cousins remember cousins, grandmothers remember grandchildren. It is all a very nice custom. But, we are driven to raise the question, "Whose birthday is it?"

In a time when commercialization has practically "taken over" the Christmas season, it at times becomes difficult to plumb the deeper significance of the day. But many of the customs and practices which are gathered around the day, we would be loathe to give up. Exchanging gifts, decorating trees, singing carols, the Christmas shopping rush, the buying of a tree, candy, nuts, the Christmas program at church—who would want to give all that up?

Amidst all the fun and bustle, there may be a few moments for quiet thought, the reading of the Christmas story, the realization of the keen joy of having a Christ come to earth. When that note has rung in our hearts, we will know whose birthday it is.—E.L.

Emotionalism

by Robert G. Millar, Kitchener, Ontario

I would that thou wert cold or hot. Rev. 3:15

MANY Christian youth are in a quandry over the question of the relationship of emotion to religion. This is to be understood. There are many denominations or religious groups that stress emotionalism which are no doubt accomplishing great things in the work of God's kingdom. Yet there are many emotional groups that contain certain factors that are rather disagreeable to the greater portion of orthodox Christianity. What place has emotion in our Christian attitudes, worship and congregational fellowship?

Perhaps it would be profitable to examine the place that emotions play in every day life. Psychologists tell us that during highly emotional states there is a rise in blood pressure, an improvement in muscle tone throughout the whole body, an increase in the number of red corpuscles, a reduction of conscious fatigue, and if the body is wounded, a more rapid coagulation of blood than what is normally experienced! Truly desirable in critical circumstances. Everyone knows instances where the impossible has been accomplished by individuals in a moment of crisis. The extra power, drive, strength or impetus is provided by strong emotion! Yes, emotions play an important part in the drama of secular activity. Perhaps the three strongest emotions are anger, fear, and love.

The Bible frequently refers to the emotions. The word compassion appears about thirty-seven times. The word love appears at least two hundred and fifty times, and most of the other emotions are referred to, such as hate, joy, yearning, envy, jealousy, pride, humility, etc. Christ is referred to by Isaiah as the "Man of Sorrows." Christ is spoken of as visibly weeping on more than one occasion. The whole Bible is, in fact, a revelation of an emotion—the love of God!

Now emotion is not to be reserved for rare or exceptional occasions in relation to our spiritual life. Rather it should be present and assisting in all phases and aspects of our spiritual activity.

In our church, each Sunday morning, service is accompanied by a great deal of emotion. To begin, the minister, the choir, the entire congregation stand to their feet. The organ swells out the majestic strains of "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." The congregation and choir join in a great ovation to the Almighty God. Our hearts are lifted on wings of praise before the Omnipotent. The atmosphere is pregnant with a sense of reverence, awe and majesty! Emotion? Certainly! And providing the very core and essence of that initial part of the service.

There should also be a certain amount of emotion present when we give. "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." Joy should accompany our giving. There should be a spirit of magnanimity and love for fellowman, of loyalty to our faith, a sense of duty towards God. An offering should never be taken in a church but what these emotions are present.

There should also be, in the life of every individual that is born again, a time when he surrenders fully to his Maker. This requires something more than intellectual assent. This requires a fervor, an enthusiasm, yes, an emotionalism that is above and beyond mere intellectualism. There must be a decrease in love for self. There must be an increase in aversion to sin. There must be larger and purer love for God! This will put a person on fire for God! This will produce results in the work of the kingdom. The meager missionary efforts of those educated to modernistic theology and intellectualism stand in sharp contrast to the vigorous and effective efforts of those who have based their faith in experiential Christianity. Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. No emotion—no abundance of the heart. No abundance of the heart—no ability to speak of salvation effectually!

We must admit, however, that there can be excess of emotions. Fire is desirable, but not wild-fire. Harm can be done by zeal without direction. God is a God of order. Our services should be orderly. God is also a God of reason. Yet, even here, while very particular about our own group, we should be very slow to disparage the efforts of other groups. If God hath blessed, who are we to question? If some of their converts do lose their experience, we must remember that perhaps the same individuals would never have come to any decision otherwise, in the first place. Seek not to reveal the differences of others, but rather seek to work toward the common upbuilding of His eternal kingdom.

Finally, having realized the advisability and necessity of emotion, let us proceed to establish, a positive method of approach.

First, let our hearts be clean toward God. Let us have the work of the kingdom foremost in our thinking.

Second, let us not seek great emotional blessings. They are the gift of God. They are not to be sought after, but to be humbly received.

Third, let us not quench the Spirit. If we are moved to shout—shout; To rejoice—rejoice: To sorrow—then let us sorrow! Seek ye first the kingdom of God and let the emotions take care of themselves.

Let our impetuosity be seasoned with deliberation; the intensity of our fervour regulated by reason; our ardor tempered with the wisdom of past experiences.

Nevertheless, may He never spue us from His mouth because we are lukewarm. Let us rather be hot with the fire of His love within and burning with a desire to present and to serve our risen Lord!

Mountain Workers Conference . . . Cont'd from p. 11

of meeting at the General Conference held at Berne, Indiana.

Supper the first evening already was a pleasant experience. It seemed good to be able to compare experiences with others engaged in similar work. The round tables at which the meals were served were ideal for round-table discussions!

Approaching the beautiful stone chapel for the evening services we could scarcely believe it was not a dream when we heard the sound of a well-played pipe organ. Back there surrounded with native forest and mountains! This was really a wonderful place to "come apart and rest awhile."

The first evening's service of testimonies was very refreshing. It was soon evident that we were one in Christ although we had come from places far apart. The songs and messages of all the sessions were a blessing and an inspiration. We also enjoyed the pleasant associations with the John Plenerts, the Walter J. Dicks, S. Mouttet and the other mission workers and were impressed by their spirituality, zeal, and love for Christ.

Those few days were a time very profitably spent and we shall be looking forward to a similar conference in the future.

As a result of the conference we shall naturally be more interested in the work of those whom we met there. Already we have noticed a picture, overlooked before, of the Frank P. Dycks of Toronto, which appeared in the MISSIONARY NEWS AND NOTES some months ago.—Lillian Lehman.

There Is A Difference

Some folks would say that a Christian is one who "doesn't." He doesn't drink. He doesn't dance. He doesn't swear. He doesn't work on Sunday. He doesn't go to movies. He doesn't cheat. He doesn't lie, etc.

Others would rather say that a Christian is one who "does." He does go to church. He does read the Bible. He does pray. He does take an interest in his community. He does give to benevolent causes. He does speak the truth. He does give you an honest deal etc.

Still others might suggest that a Christian is one who "is." He is honest. He is truthful. He is just. He is kind. He is considerate of others. He is temperate, etc.

There is a difference between doing a particular act of kindness and being a kind of man. Someone who is not a good tennis player may now and then make a good shot. What we mean by a good tennis player is the man whose eye and muscle and nerves have been so trained that you can rely on him to make good shots almost all the time. A poor tennis player may make a particularly good stroke because he lost his temper and hit very hard. He is still not a good tennis player. So we can not say that a good tennis player is one who makes a good shot.*

A Christian is not one who "does" or "doesn't" but one who "is." He is so changed on the inside that he is basically an honest man, a loving man, a sacrificing man and a worshiping man. He may play a wrong stroke once in awhile but you can rely on him because he is fundamentally a "good player."

To have that inner core changed is a miracle. Jesus called it being "born again." Paul put it like this, "Therefore, if any one is in Christ, he is a new creation; the old has passed away, behold, the new has come." (II Corinthians 5:17 R.S.V.).—Editorial The Workers' Exchange.

Mountain Workers Conference . . . Cont'd from p. 14

in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." (Matthew 24:14).

In the light of the glorious Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and for a greater vision of Mountain Work, especially that of personal evangelism, and to meet our fellow-workers who are laboring in other parts of the mountains, we had the privilege as a group of workers to meet for a three day Conference at Pine Mountain School, Incline, Kentucky. Praise be to Him, and a hearty "Thank you" to our Home Mission Board and others that had a part in making such a Conference possible.

Speaking in our own behalf, we will try and share some of the joy received, although it seems to be greater than could be emphasized or expressed by words. The Gospel songs were made real again, wonderful testimonies were given, Bible study and messages on evangelism given by real men of God. Many prayers went up to the throne of Grace. The fellowship of Christians made our hearts burn within us. To sum it all up, we would be forced to say there was "joy unspeakable and full of glory." Truly it was a real time of fellowship.

For several months we had been looking foreward to our first Mountain Workers' Conference, not giving it much thought as to what kind of a place back in the mountains would be the most suitable place to meet to our surprise upon arrival at Pine Mountain School. We found plenty of room for every one, good conveniences, and an ideal place to look forward to for another year. We trust that these Conferences may be able to continue.—Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Holliman

SAN FRANCISCO—Eight thousand persons attended the opening session of the 56th triennial general convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church here and heard President Bishop Henry Knox Sherrill declare that "today's tragedy" is that "we have forgotten our dependence on God."—The Protestant Voice

NEW YORK CITY.—The World-wide Bible Reading program, promoted each year by the American Bible Society from Thanksgiving to Christmas, is sponsored by a Laymen's Committee headed by President Truman. This group gives national sponsorship to the movement in cooperation with the American Bible Society and state and local Bible Societies. The program enjoys active assistance by church people and denominations in the United States and countries overseas, and by community and civic groups, service clubs and societies. Ministerial executives, governors of states and leaders in other walks of life give it unqualified endorsement. More than 14,000,000 copies of the lists of readings have been prepared by the Society this year for use in following the program.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oklahoma—Protestant forces in Oklahoma won a resounding victory as voters crushed the latest attempt to repeal the state's prohibition laws. The victory climaxed one of the most aggressive drives to influence state legislation ever conducted by religious groups.—The Protestant Voice

TOKYO—The United Church of Christ in Japan (Kyodan) has 129,102 members, according to its official Year Book for 1949, which has just been published here.—The Protestant Voice

BUNKER HILL, West Virginia — Bunker Hill Methodist church has adopted a new way to raise money for mission work.

Each person who attended Sunday school early in the summer was given a baby chick The Sunday school members brought back to church, three months later, the grown chickens—and sale of the poultry netted $140 for a tuberculosis hospital in India.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa (RNS)—Forty-one floats—each representing a Christian hymn—highlighted the annual Theme of the community religious festival which was "Sing Unto the Lord."—The Protestant Voice

IT'S YOUR MOVE

Lots of people are moving around these days. One way to help everybody is to secure from your local post office a supply of cards giving both your old and new address and send them to every magazine to which you subscribe.

NEW YORK—The East Harlem Protestant Parish, which operates in one of the world's worst slums, takes the view that whatever happens in its teeming and highly explosive area is the church's business.

That is why its four pastors summoned East Harlem residents through a loud speaker mounted on the steps of the Church of the Saviour to a mass rally, where they signed a petition to the Mayor, demanding speedy inspection of the tenements in their district.

The incident which touched off the mass gathering occurred when Mrs. Mary Garcia, an 18-year-old, expectant mother was severely injured in her apartment house. She was on her way to a clinic when the third floor landing suddenly collapsed, carrying her through two stories to the first floor.—The Protestant Voice

Levi Jackson, a Negro, was elected captain of the Yale football team about a year ago. Much newspaper comment followed. Recently, three of Yale's six senior societies voted him eligible for membership. This is a step even more significant than to elect a Negro as captain of a football team or president of a senior class as was done in another leading college.—Gospel Messenger

ELGIN, ILL. The Brethren Service Commission has arranged a series of one-month tours for members of the church who want to visit and live with the "common people" of Europe, it was announced here today by W. Harold Rowe, the commission's secretary.

The first tour party left New York on September 25, and was under the direction of L. W. Shultz, a former representative of the commission in Europe.

"The tour will be a 'mission of fellowship and goodwill,'" said Shultz before sailing. "We shall visit the common people in their homes, in their fields, and in their shops. We shall witness the effect of our relief program by visiting with those who have received our cattle and our commodities. We shall expect to bear a message and testimony of interest and goodwill from America."

Official Annoncement

TO THE MINISTERS OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE

Dear Brethren:

About a year ago I wrote a little article in The Mennonite entitled, "Do Mennonites Keep Their Promises." It dealt with the commitment that we as a General Conference made to our C.P.S. boys regarding help in financing their education. I must confess now that at the time I wrote that little article I felt that here was one instance where Mennonites will not keep their promise.

But I was wrong and, in this instance, very glad to have been wrong. We have kept our commitment to these boys and now have only about $4,200 left to complete the CPS Educational Rehabilitation program. In view of the fact that this originally represented a project of more than $50,000 and that we have now reduced this to the relatively small figure of $4,200, it would seem regrettable to default at this time.

Calling the above fact to the attention of all our congregations will, I believe, suffice in meeting our remaining obligation and I am writing, therefore, to ask that each of you kindly do this with his particular congregation. Contributions may be sent to: General Conference Headquarters; 722 North Main Street; Newton, Kansas.

Thanking you for your cooperation now, as also in the past, I remain

Sincerely yours,
R. C. Kauffman

When we left Philadelphia on August 17 the foundation of the new church was about complete. Another church in Neuhalbstadt in the new settlement is something that should be thought of in the near future. When we left it was very dry. No rain since April, and a letter from the Chaco informs us that they had a light rain in September. They planted watermelons and a few other things, but that has since dried up again. Volendam and Friesland fared better. Corn was knee high when we left in September. Also the orange and lemon groves had an abundance of fruit. Efforts were made to find a market for some of their large logs. The group in Buenos Aires is settled to a good extent, and all have found work in the city. They have rented a small Baptist Church which they can

IS YOUR BIBLE STUDY Bible-centered or Christ-centered? This may seem like a very queer question to ask, but it is one that is far reaching in its implications. The question that is raised is this. Does your concern with the Bible end with understanding and harmonizing its various parts into a consistent whole? Or is your concern with the Bible also directed by such questions as how does this or that passage help me more fully to accept Jesus Christ and be obedient to His will? After all, the New Testament was written because Jesus Christ lived, died, and lives again, and the Old Testament has its large significance because of the Messiah who came as its fulfillment. Christ was sent into the world to save men and to show them the way to live. He was not sent just to provide another character for the Bible. There is a danger of substituting an understanding of the Bible for true Christlikeness, the very end for which God has given us the Bible. Furthermore, if Christ is the true fulfillment of the Old Testament, then surely all parts of the Old Testament as well as the New Testament are to be understood in the light of the life, teachings, and death of Christ. As someone has stated, if we are truly Christian we will interpret the Bible by Christ, not Christ by the Bible. We cannot live on the ethical or ritual levels of the Old Testament because Christ has risen above them and asks us to live above them because we are "risen with Christ." Let us not make the mistake of those of Jesus' day who were so concerned about the record that they failed to recognize Him of whom the record spoke. To these Jesus had to say, "You search the scriptures, because you think that in them you have eternal life; and it is they that bear witness to me; yet you refuse to come to me that you may have life." (John 5:39, 40 R.S.V.)

> Therefore I deem it needful and willwell, sincerely to warn and admonish my beloved readers, not to accept my doctrine as the Gospel of Jesus Christ until they have investigated for themselves and found it to agree with the Spirit and Word of the Lord, that their faith may not be founded on me nor on any other teacher or writer, but solely on Jesus Christ. (II:248b).—Menno Simons.

THE RACE TO CAPITALIZE on the spirit of good will and benevolence characteristic of most people at Christmas time is on! Undoubtedly, most readers of these lines have already been contacted by at least a half a dozen worthy appeals and possibly one or two of not so worthy a nature. This is the time not to put the clamp on our desire to share as the appeals grow in number. Our concern ought to be o give more and more; for the Christmas Gospel ells us that God gave all, not for the deserving, but or the undeserving. But with the repetition of the ppeals there is a correspondingly growing need for discerning mind. No one can give substantially to ll appeals that come. It is very possible that many n trying to do so will find themselves in one of two ositions. Either they run out of resources by the time the church makes its strong appeals in the holiday season or else their benevolent spirit has been exhausted after having responded so many times already, and they turn on the church in criticism saying that the church is always after money when the church makes its Christmas appeal. How shall we determine, then, to what causes we shall give and how much we shall give? In this as in the allocating of the rest of our income the key word is responsibility! What is God holding me responsible for? If by choice I am a member of a certain church family, or if by choice a congregation is a member of a given group of congregations with a definite missionary, relief, and educational responsibility, it would be as morally wrong for me as an individual or for my congregation to withdraw support from this immediate responsibility in favor of something that seems to have more of an appeal—this, we say, would be as morally wrong as a father's suddenly providing the bread and butter of another family. In common language this is called desertion. Of course, every family has also an obligation to the society which provides certain blessings; so, too, every Christian and every congregation will feel this larger responsibility. Each will be deeply aware of the fact that if all gifts are for the group itself it will lose vision; if all gifts are for outside purposes one's own household becomes a liability to society and all benefits of the gifts going elsewhere are cancelled out by the condition at home. One leader, who has studied the matter of stewardship exhaustively, has said that a Christian ought to give 85% of his tithe or gift to the church leaving the other 15% for community charities. It is not too much to say that not less than 85% of all gifts to the cause of Christ should go to the local church with not more than half going to home needs of the church and the rest to the work of the Kingdom for which the larger organization, of which this church is a member, is responsible. If some such plan based squarely on responsibility as understood under the guidance of God is decided upon, then we will give with discernment and to the glory of God!—J.J.E.

A PRESS report in the New York Times for August 21 stated that because there had been no indication that the Communist government in Hungary would hold the traditional ceremonies in honor of St. Stephen, patron saint of the country, the Voice of America would broadcast observances that day. The material to be broadcast, it was reported, would include recordings of a mass in honor of St. Stephen, celebrated in St. Pat-

COME with me on a tour of the Junior Memorial Middle and High School.

The cold season is on. The sun has just arisen. I wish you could see those little fellows scamper back to their Boarding Home. They have just finished their daily setting-up physical training period. Three groups have had this drill this morning, one of girls, one of about 70 big boys, one of about 70 little boys. It is a great thing to build the body.

How would you like to get up on a chilly morning, before sunrise, and get off to distant spot, for group calisthenics? It is a part of the daily program for the students. "Know ye not that the body is the temple of the Holy Spirit?" (I Corinthians 6:19).

Snapshot Number Two: Bible is Taught

Do you see that young Indian woman going there? She is carrying in her arms some materials to give a flannelgraph Bible lesson. She is one of our teachers, Miss S. Asna, daughter of a former preacher and evangelist. For two reasons she has attended a summer retreat on child evangelism. The Bible is taught in all classes. All students attend these classes, which always open with prayer. "Thy Word have I hid in my heart that I might not sin against Thee." (Psalms 119:11).

Number Three: Morning Chapel

I believe you would be thrilled seeing 189 youth of India, 90% of them representing our churches in India, march in for morning chapel. To work with them is a unique opportunity.

First is inspection in their class rooms. Are the hands and finger nails clean? Hair combed? Clothes properly adjusted? Desks clean and in order?

The gong sounds. In they come. Before the class period, daily chapel brings them first of all into the presence of God, His will, His revelation through His Word and His Son. We believed that "The fear of Jehovah is the chief part of knowledge." (Proverbs 1:7. R.V.).

Number Four: Manual Labor

It is the hot season, before the rains really break. School has begun for a new school year. Every student takes part in some form of manual labor. There is one group carrying out manure from pits in baskets for the rice fields. Another group is digging and sweating, digging like North Americans did when I was young, and sweating only like one can sweat in the hot season in India. Rice fields are prepared. Gardens are dug, planted, and weeded. Fruit trees receive attention. Cloth is woven from thread. Sewing classes turn the woven cloth into clothing. Poultry house is kept clean and in order. Furniture is made in carpentry shop for class rooms. "We exhort you to work with your own hands;" "If any will not work, neither let them eat." (II Thess. 3:16; I Thess. 4:10,11).

Number Five: "Floored"

Sometimes they almost "floor me in my Bible class. Here is a sample. "Why does the Apostles' Creed state that Christ died, was buried, descended into hell, when He told the thief on the cross that 'this day thou shalt be with me in paradise'?"

Number Six: Permanent Recognition

We are happy to report that permanent recognition has been granted by the government, as a recognized high school. Though this is explicitly thus stated, it is also stated that it will be conditioned on fulfilling the recommendations of the report of the last school inspector. Nevertheless this means much in this day when so many cross currents are blowing in India. "Moses was instructed in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and he was mighty in words and deeds." (Acts 7:22).

Number Seven: Evangelistic Effort

The government holidays are on. All boys who did not go home are out in two camps headed by two of the masters, out in an evangelistic effort. I think you would have been more than thrilled, if you had walked home that night after an open air meeting in a village some distance from camp and had heard the group sing lustily as they walked through the night.

To get to this distant village they had to go on empty stomachs and then eat when they returned. Their bed was a blanket spread over a sprinkling of straw on the mud floor of a village church. Another day one of the boys was working and teaching a backslider, the latter was so deeply moved that tears came into the eyes of the old grey head. Jesus was twelve years old when He said, "Know ye not that I must be about my Father's business?"

The Greatest Letters Ever Written

by Francis C. Stifler

Secretary for Public Relations American Bible Society

MOST people, I have discovered, do not like to write letters but everybody likes to read them. Personal letters, not written for publication, are the clearest reflection of the writer's mind and heart and are the most trustworthy kind of historical evidence. There is something peculiarly precious about a personal letter from one you love. And when, as it happens now and then, some one becomes famous and his biography is being written, his letters prove invaluable for they let us into the very inner chambers of the great man's soul.

The New Testament is rich in original letters—letters that were, for the most part, written with not the slightest idea of their ever being published. Letters comprising almost one-fourth of the New Testament came from the pen of one man, the Apostle Paul. A recent writer has described him as a human tornado. He wrote with veritable gusts of argument and passion; he traveled with a feverish zeal that brought upon him enough calamity to have killed a dozen men; he challenged the current religious cults of his time with a courage that seemed foolhardy. He was a frail man with some chronic physical limitation but he drove on to accomplish maybe more than any other man who ever gave himself in complete surrender to the Lordship of Christ.

> You cannot read anywhere in Paul's letters for half an hour without feeling that Jesus Christ was to him really alive—the same yesterday, today and forever; that nothing has ever touched or altered, or can touch or alter the person of Christ.

This vivid spirit left us thirteen of his personal letters, long for letters but for the most part constituting the shorter books of the Bible. It is not an exaggeration to say that these spontaneous, informal writings have had more to do with the shaping of human history than any other writings, except the four Gospels, that have ever been penned. Paul's are not light reading, but they are so important that an honest man ought to make a special effort to master them as he does the technical books he studies to gain his livelihood.

Here are two suggestions that will help anyone. First read at one sitting the Book of Acts, especially from the beginning of the eighth chapter. This much of the book compromises only about 50 pages of ordinary size and gives you the picture of the beginnings of the Christian movement with Paul as the chief actor. You can read these chapters in about an hour.

My other suggestion is that you invest in what is called the Parallel New Testament. There are two books with this title, alike in that they represent on each page in one column the familiar King James text, and in the other, one of the modern English versions. My point is this—that not a few of the difficulties you have with Paul lie in the archaic English of the King James version—and by looking across the column the modern translation may clear up your difficulty.

But whether you read Paul's letters in modern English or not, you will find yourself reading them to immense profit if you will be on the lookout for his great thoughts which keep recurring again and again.

Look for Paul's confident affirmations of faith. Paul was sure of himself because he was sure of Christ. He did not just drift into his surrender to Christ. For him it came only after a major battle. You cannot read anywhere in Paul's letters for half an hour without feeling that Jesus Christ was to him really alive—the same yesterday, today and forever; that nothing has ever touched or altered, or can touch or alter the person of Christ.

Paul keeps saying in one way or another that in Christ we are more than conquerors. To him the overpowering idea is that Christ lives. The inexhaustible source of such conviction is Paul's experience on the Damascus road. Luke tells the story in his ninth chapter and reports Paul's telling it twice more, once in Jerusalem where he spoke in Hebrew, and again before the Roman King Agrippa at Caesarea, where he spoke in Greek.

For us the conversion of Paul is one of the greatest facts in history. Let the psychologist call it whatever he wants to. We must judge it by its results. From that moment on one of the most brilliant well-balanced scholars in history drove himself back and forth over the Roman Empire, determined to know nothing but Christ crucified as his emancipator. If Paul had been some deranged neurotic that would have been the end of the story—but see what has come of it. Out of this liberation of Paul's spirit came the Book of Galatians, which has rightly been called the Charter of Freedom and the basis of real democracy. Out of Paul's conversion came the Book of Romans which gave us both the Reformation under Luther and the Great Revival under Wesley. The day Paul met Christ on the Damascus road was Emancipation Day for every Christian. So I say read Paul looking for his great affirmations.

Then, read him for one other thing. Look for this toward the close of most of his letters.

In these concluding exhortations he invariably exhorts his readers to lead good lives. He out-does himself in this, not only in the matchless 13th of First Corinthians, but in the 12th to the 15th chapters of Romans. Get out your Bible and read the 12th

BETHEL CONSIDERS TWO-YEAR DEGREE

The Bethel College Corporation meeting was held in the Memorial Hall, Friday, November 25.

Then President Ed. G. Kaufman introduced his report for Bethel College for the year 1948-49.

Arnold Funk of the Bruderthal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas, was re-elected as a Western District Conference representative on the Bethel College Board of Directors. Gerhard Zerger of the Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, was re-elected as the representative of the Corporation on the College Board.

The last part of the afternoon session was devoted to discussion of the following issues:

1. A proposed plan to introduce an Associate Arts degree, to be given after a two year's course at Bethel.
2. The problem of how many and what kind of students Bethel College should have.
3. A new building and finance program. Besides the new library which is only partly completed, the following new buildings are needed: a men's dormitory, and a girls' dormitory.
4. Plans for raising money for the college were discussed. These included a long term campaigning plan for funds, extending over six years and eliminating the present sporadic campaigns.

Samuel Gerber, pastor of a Mennonite church in Switzerland and president of the Conference of Swiss Mennonites, spoke in chapel Monday morning, November 21st. The redemption through Christ, he said, is a wonderful opportunity for young people to make much of their lives.

After his speech the students had the novel experience of hearing a real Swiss yodel.

Dr. J. W. Fretz, head of the Social Science Department, was a speaker at a meeting of the south-central association of Social Services at the Allis Hotel at Wichita, Friday, November 18, 1949.

Walter H. Hohmann returned from his two-week Canadian tour last week. Dr. Hohmann worked with choirs in six different places in the province of Alberta, giving each group a few days, three at the most. The work consisted in instruction in hymnology and in choir practice. At the request of the people, he prepared a choir program given at each place on the concluding evening.

Dr. H. A. Fast, who has spent more than a month on a lecture tour in Canada, is scheduled to return this week.

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

Pastor Samuel Gerber of Switzerland arrived on Friday, November 25. John T. Neufeld, our Business Manager, met him at the station and then took him on a tour of the city. Following this he came over to the Seminary Headquarters where the German speaking students and staff members enjoyed his rich fellowship. Hanno Klassen of Heidelberg, Germany, was among the group having a visit with Pastor Gerber. This was particularly interesting to Hanno because he had just received word that his father had gone through Switzerland from Germany and visited in the Mennonite congregations there.

The second term started Tuesday, November 29. The present student body will remain for the second term and, in addition, it is expected that several new students will enroll.

Among our visitors during the week end of November 19-20 were the parents of Delbert Schrag, Marion, South Dakota. From Meno, Oklahoma, came Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Ratzlaff, parents of Missionary Harold Ratzlaff who is studying here this year, and his brother Mr. and Mrs. Norman Ratzlaff and their two children.

Among our visitors during the Thanksgiving period were Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Claassen of Newton, Kansas, visiting here with Mr. and Mrs. Don E. Smucker and family. Mrs. Mary J. Waltner, and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Waltner and children of Freeman, South Dakota were visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Schrag.

A number from here have left for the Council of Boards meeting in Mountain Lake, Minnesota. Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, Wadsworth, Ohio, and Dr. J. S. Schultz, Bluffton, Ohio, stopped at the Seminary for a short visit before going on to Mountain Lake where they were going to attend the meetings.

With thankful hearts for the goodness of the Lord, with expectancy for the special blessings coming during the Christmas season, and with a sense of progress as each new term goes by, we look forward to the beginning of our next quarter's work.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Miss Brenneman, professor of English, attended the National Council of the Teachers of English meeting in Buffalo, November 24, 25. She is a regional director of this association, a position which she has held for several years. Dr. J. S. Schultz attended the meeting of the National Institutional Teacher Placement Association in Chicago during the Thanksgiving vacation period.

A lecture was given in the Chapel Wednesday evening, November 30, by Karl H. Maslowski. This lecture was illustrated by the use of motion color film, showing birds, mammals, and scenics. Mr. Maslowski is on an Audubon screen tour.

Three Gospel Team groups will travel during the Christmas vacation period. Two men's teams will go West and a women's team will travel in Pennsylvania. The women's team is composed of Vernieta Conrad, Doris Roberts, Claire Landis, Muriel Ross, and a speaker still to be selected. One of the men's groups consists of Donald Yaussy, Robert Riley, Donald Wismer, and Ralph Weber, with Dale Dickey as the speaker. The other consists of Darrell Sellers, Claude Boyer, George Eicher, and Samuel Buhler, with Robert Ramseyer as the speaker.

CHRISTIAN education has something special to accomplish in its total program, along with the adaption of the individual and the educational process to Christ. Yet perhaps it is at this point where Christian institutions fail.

If the Christian educational institution fails to develop intellectual sympathy in its students—i.e., an appreciation for varying points of view, within the framework of secure personal Christian convictions—it has indeed failed miserably. The primary purpose of such institutions is not to pigeonhole "facts" in a student's mind. It is rather first to inculcate a Christian point of view under the searchlight of its critical, yet sympathetic scrutiny.

Struggle of Beliefs for Supremacy

A great part of the history of civilization, and especially that aspect which might be designated Christian, has been concerned with the struggle for supremacy of ideas and beliefs. The pages of Christian history are stained with the blood of those who had personal convictions and who stood by them. In many instances their blood was shed not by pagan persecutors but by other Christians who in this struggle of beliefs desired to dictate to the consciences of these martyrs their own interpretation of Christian revelation.

Impatience at Sinai

In a striking manner this struggle and the many unfortunate detours which Christian civilization has had to take along the way toward realization of God's Kingdom on earth are exemplified in the movement of the Hebrews toward the Promised Land. You will recall the vivid account, given in Exodus and Deuteronomy especially, of the long trek which these great people made and the circuitous route which they followed. From the bondage of their Egyptian taskmasters they marched through difficult terrain until they came at last to Mount Sinai, where in an illuminating series of experiences, through the instrumentality of Moses, God sought to reveal to them the basic principles of their law. While Moses tarried in the mountain, the people became impatient with the seemingly slow method which God was using to reveal his mind to them. The record tells us the infamous story of how, inspired by this impatience, the people persuaded Aaron to let them build a golden calf—a human device designed to bring God down to them and simplify the process of revelation.

As we of the twentieth century view this amazing history in retrospection, we recognize the folly of Moses' people along with the limitations of religion based upon law alone. In our minds we criticize the Hebrews for their disobedience to God and their impatience with His method of revelation. We today like to differentiate between the incomplete revelation of God in Moses' time and our own full revelation through Christ and our Scriptures. And well we might! However, in this we tend to overlook the fact that God's revelation to man still proceeds at God's own pace and not at our confused, impatient rate.

I. The Mountain of Weak Religion: Sinai

As Mount Sinai stands historically as a mountain of weak religion because of the powerlessness of the law by itself to save the Hebrews from themselves, likewise it symbolizes something real in our own experience today. In many respects we as Christians have not advanced beyond a point in our experience comparable to the Sinai experience of the people of Moses' day. In our impatience with God's mysterious revelation of himself to us, and in our failure to admit the limitations of the human mind and of language, we also construct an idol. This idol is the HUMAN WORD, at whose shrine we worship in our attempt to make God's revelation fuller and more in keeping with our earth-bound prejudices. We worship this idol until our worship is of the latter and not of the Spirit. There is none of us who does not at some time worship at the shrine of this god.

There exists the confused notion in the minds of many of us that conviction in our own beliefs necessitates utter militant antagonism against those who differ with us relatively or even radically. This confusion manifests itself both in one's relation to individuals and to groups other than his own. In this attitude are implied at least two notions. On the one hand, there is a manifest exaggeration of our sense of our own importance and the superiority of our own mental and spiritual capacity as over against, on the other hand, the implied inferiority, mentally and spiritually, of those convictions do not coincide exactly with our own. At least momentarily we forget that we are all under the judgment of God and have no right to exercise spiritual or intellectual dominion over another. Our sin is the intellectual pretension to having absolute knowledge of God's mind. We forget that the greatest of our minds are limited in their capacity to understand and define what is true in all matters of human interest. We overlook the patent fact that our minds are as much corrupted by sin as any part of our being and that all of our utterances, therefore, need to be viewed in the light of God's condemnation upon all human sin. The return to Sinai in our day is an oft-made excursion in which all of us at one time or another have participated.

We might well give ear to the admonition which God pronounced to Moses' people at Sinai when he declared: "You have dwelt long enough in this mount: turn you and take your journey." The admonition would advocate for us a renunciation of our worship of the human word and would appeal to us to return to the worship of Christ "in spirit and in truth."

The evacuation of the Israelites from the region of Sinai and their journey to Kadesh Barnea was considerably retarded, as we all know, by circuitous wanderings in the mountainous region of the Seir highlands. The distance to the edge of Kadesh Barnea ordinarily consumed eleven days, but Israel, retracing her steps many times, stretched this relatively brief period of travel into confused wanderings of many years duration. One cannot help noting at this point the possible comparison of this slow progress of Israel in reaching the Promised Land with our equally slow pace at permitting God to bring us into the Kingdom of His Son. Secularists today put many of us Christians to shame in their frank recognition of the limitations of human reason and the "conditioned" nature of all of our thinking. Even Marxism, the basis of modern Communism, realized this, while 19th and 20th century Christians have tended to create the impression that human language is a perfect vehicle for the conveyance of divine truth.

II. Mountain Range of Confused Wanderings: Seir

The Seir region where Israel camped for so many years is really not a single mountain but a range in which it was quite easy to wander and lose one's way. Moses and his people, according to the record, "compassed Mount Seir many days." (Deut. 2:1). Finally God spoke through Moses to the people, saying: "Ye have compassed this mount long enough: turn you northward." Seir stands out in the experience of the Hebrews as the locality of repetitious wanderings and confusion. Vicious circles—which are circles without a tangent—were made by them until only a stern command from God could break the inertia of their wanderings.

1. Mountain of Religious Prejudice

Our journey to the Kingdom of God has been disrupted considerably by our encirclement of at last three mountains in the modern counterpart of the Seir highlands. The first mountain which we have been encircling for too long a time is the mountain of religious prejudice. It is well recognized in our day that prejudice of various kinds constitutes one of the cancerous sores in modern society. Usually we hesitate mentioning religious prejudice for fear of being misunderstood. But the opposite of religious prejudice does not constitute superficial "toleration" of any and all religious beliefs. It rather recognizes the fact that much religious sectarianism masquerades under the banner of Christianity while actually it constitutes an effort to impose a narrow, limited human system of ideas on a particular group or segment of society.

Religious prejudice becomes manifest in at least two forms. In the one case it is the prejudice of one religious group against another group. Israel believed, under the influence of its henotheistic idea of God, that it carried Jehovah with it in the Ark, taking Him through the lands of other gods as the sole custodian of Him. It is possible that we today as sectarians are under the illusion that God can be enclosed in our human creeds and carried about with us, as we oppose Catholics and Jews who presumably are to be verbally (if not actually) slaughtered like the Amalekites? As a result of our particular prejudices we concoct terms of derision by which we stereotype people by assuming that they all fall into neat classes, such as "Catholics," "Jews," "Communists," etc. In opposing such tactics let us not be accused of declaring as true all that the Catholics or Jews teach. We are simply denouncing a practice and method for which we believe there is no scriptural basis. Such stereotyping is not borne of love and compassion toward those whom we consider to be outside the true Christian fold.

> to be central to our understanding of the > th the sword and killing with the word?

The second type of religious prejudice is manifested in the relations between individuals within single groups. It arises from the failure to recognize the fact that, in as much as no two people have exactly the same background of personal experience, differences in belief necessarily arise even within the bounds of a single Christian group. It is superficially easy to stereotype someone with whom I might disagree on particular issues as being either a "Fundamentalist" or a "Modernist," or even an "Atheist." Irreparable harm has been done to the character of innocent Christians who, having been misunderstood or misinterpreted, have been neatly thrown into the classification of one group or another.

Let us not forget that Paul recognizes in I Corinthians 14 that there are variations in human experience and gifts. There apparently are "tongues" (i.e., expressions of experiences) which are not easily conveyed in human language. Our creeds are but partial manifestations of what divine truth is. The true, final test of religion is not absoluteness of creed nor even correctness of doctrine but rather something which mere words can neither camouflage nor reveal: namely, reflected Divine Love.

We Mennonites consider the matter of conscience to be central to our understanding of the Gospel. Yet what is the difference between killing with the sword and killing with the word? Amazingly enough, we can be extremely tolerant and loving when it comes to respecting the conscience of one who disagrees with us in the matter of participation in carnal warfare. But it is also strikingly true that we can be extremely intolerant and unloving when it comes to respecting the conscience of another person on matters of religious belief outside of the scope of the war issue. But this makes a farce of conscience, since respect for conscience if applied to one issue in the Christian life must necessarily apply to all differences of belief. This is something which we as Mennonites have too consistently not practiced. How, for instance, can I condone and justify the right of a Mennonite or a non-Mennonite to bear arms and continue my fellowship with such a person while, on the other hand, I break fellowship with another individual who refuses to bear arms but whose theology disagrees with mine to one degree or another. This is manifest inconsistency in the practice of respect for conscience. Let us repeat, respect for conscience applies in principle to all matters of Christian belief. (Continued on next page.)

2. The Mountain of Racial and Social Prejudice

A second mountain around which a vicious circle is being perpetuated is the mountain of racial and social prejudice. Presumably no Christian, especially not a Mennonite, believes in the racial and social superiority of one group over against another. However, the facts would seem to indicate otherwise. There are prejudices against Negroes and between groups of different cultural backgrounds in Christian—yes, Mennonite—communities. While such individuals would openly confess adherence to no doctrine of racial or social superiority, yet there are definite prejudices of this sort perhaps unconsciously adhered to by people who call themselves Christians. What is the reason for this? Let us recall our assertion earlier that the cause of modern idol worship is two-fold: namely, (1) the exaggeration of our own importance, and (2) the insinuated mental and spiritual inferiority of others. We submit that racial and social prejudice in Christian communities can be at least in part attributed to that aspect of original sin to which all of us are prone: namely, the pretension of our own importance. My prejudice against those of other races and social groups is at least the partial result of my pretension—unconscious desire—to be God. Christians do not like to admit their susceptibility to this, but even this refusal partially substantiates the point. It is quite natural for us, as ministers or laymen, to want to suppose that our point of view is the absolute one. And a mere denial of this in theory does not cover its prevalent practice among Christians. We know how modern psychology has unearthed the fact that more of our action comes from unconscious motivation than we care to admit. Christians should be first to recognize this form of sin.

3. The Mountain of War

Finally, the vicious circle of vicious circles is that which is perpetuated around the mountain of carnal warfare. Lest we as Mennonites come to believe (in our admittedly perfectionist ethic) that because we refuse to participate in actual military operations, we therefore typify the Christian way of life, let us recognize the main point of our sermon. War as we know it today is in fact the culmination of the prejudices and pretensions which we have been discussing—and in which all of us participate at least to some degree. Therefore, there will be a glaring inconsistency in our thinking and living unless we attack this vulnerable point in our Christian thinking and practice. We need to say, as the spirit of Christ must eventually lead us to understand, that "war and fightings" among us come from such lusts in our members. (James 4:1).

III. The Mountain of Decision: Calvary

There is another mountain which we need to stop circling in order to ascend. This is the mountain of necessitated decision: Calvary. In fact, ascent to the summit of this mountain will render well nigh impossible our encirclement of the mountains of Seir. For Mount Calvary is the mount of the crucifixion of our wrong prejudices and ungodly pretensions. It is the mount where cross-bearing makes impossible the peacock-like pose of pride and self-importance.

If we must tred in circles, if we must draw circles, let them be circles of loving inclusion rather than hateful exclusion. The lines of Edwin Markham express our thought:

> He drew a circle that shut me out—
> Heretic, rebel, a thing to flout.
> But love and I had a wit to win:
> We drew a circle that took him in!

We have encircled the mountains of religious, racial, and social prejudice long enough. Let us turn and take our journey.

Emory Lengyel were also to be beamed to Hungary during the 3 p.m. broadcasting period. St. Stephen is reported to have "ruled Hungary as its first Christian king for thirty-eight years, beginning in A.D. 1000." The Voice of America radio broadcast is paid for by the United States State Department, whose expenses come from the taxes of the American people. Undoubtedly, many would like to ask under what power or authority the State Department authorizes the beaming of a Roman Catholic mass into a foreign country whose domestic politics are in confusion at the present time because of political and social strife between the government and the Roman Catholic hierarchy.—The Watchman-Examiner

MENNONITE MEN FOR CHRIST

MEN'S BROTHERHOODS

LIND

The Men's Brotherhood at a recent meeting accepted the project of providing a small house for one of the aged women of the church. The men now plan to build a two-room house doing all the work themselves.

NEWPORT

Two weeks ago the men replenished the wood supply for the furnace in the church. A number of our men are at Wenatchee working in the apple harvest.—Workers' Exchange, Pacific District.

On September 25 a reception was given in honor of the Albert Neufelts who were married September 6 in South Dakota. They have started a Bible class in the public school every Friday evening for one hour. May this be a blessing to the parents, teachers, and children. The Ladies Society sent 58 pounds of clothing for relief in our November meeting. Mission Festival and an offering was held on Thanksgiving Day. Albert Neufelt brought the message.—Mrs. Bernard Deckert, Corr.

—Gospel Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: All day services were observed on Thanksgiving Day. Rev. Suderman gave the Harvest Festival message, and Frank S. Harder and August Ewert brought messages on Foreign Missions in the morning service. At noon a fellowship lunch was enjoyed by all. In the afternoon the Cornerstone Laying Service of the new church building took place. Frank S. Harder gave a Home Mission message based on John 4:4, and August Ewert based the Cornerstone Laying message on I Cor. 3:11 and I Peter 2:7, 8. The Heavenly Father gave us favorable weather for the day, although some rain and snow fell the night before. Greetings from Miss Renetta Penner, exchange student from Germany attending Tabor College, Hillsboro, Kansas.—Elizabeth Lohrenz, Corr.

—First Church, Hutchinson, Kansas: The annual Homecoming-Missionary Festival was observed November 27. At the morning services three new members were received by letter. Special offerings were taken for missions, relief, and local work which amounted to nearly $300. Mrs. Orlando Waltner was guest speaker in the afternoon. A number of improvements to the church building have been made recently. The Home Builder's Class put a ceiling in the basement. This work was done by members of the Class. New carpets have been laid in the auditorium —Mrs. Victor Sawatzky, Corr.

—Johannestal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: Menno Fast who has done relief work in Poland for about three years spoke and showed pictures of the same in our church on November 20. One of our brethren, namely Wm. Ratzlaff, saw the picture of his sister whom he had not seen since he came to this country about forty years ago. On Thanksgiving Day morning Ferd Ediger from Bethel College, orginally from Canada, gave a good Thanksgiving Day sermon. Harley Stucky, professor of history at Bethel College, gave us the message on November 27. He spoke on "Keeping the Faith," with his text being "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept my faith." He illustrated the governing of our lives with three types of navigation. (1) Dead reckoning (self sufficient living), (2) Piloting (never losing sight of familiarities, therefore, never venturing out into the deep), (3) Celestial navigation, (a) having the mind on God, (b) having our own experiences with God, (c) using the Bible.—Mrs. Arnold A. Plenert, Corr.

Prayer Meetings Plus

By Don Snider
Youth Director, Church of the Brethren

THE best and only way to learn to swim is to get into the water and practice regularly. Reading and watching others does not help you much. Fast growth comes by continuing in the water each day, trying different strokes, learning to relax, and adding distance each day.

It is similar with prayer. Reading about prayer and listening to others pray is helpful but there is no substitute for regular praying on your part. As you continue each day you add new concepts, feel fresh power, learn to offer flash prayers at spare moments and gradually learn the true meaning of Paul's advice, "Pray without ceasing."

After you learn to swim there is the urge to do more difficult things in the water. The graceful springboard diver intrigues you. It looks like an individual achievement but very few divers have mastered the art without the pressure or approval of a group of divers. "Let's play follow-the-leader." "I'll try if you do." "Tell me what's wrong with this one." These are the cries which start you out. It would be little fun learning alone. It is much easier to achieve the difficult by learning together.

Compare this with prayer. Few people go far in prayer alone. To deepen the prayer life most of us need to join with others, not however on the competitive "I-dare-you" basis, but from a more humble "I-need-your-help, join-with-me" challenge. Those who have been a part of prayer training cells testify repeatedly that they never know true Christian living until they joined with others in such an intimate, sharing fellowship.

Prayer cells are not new in Christendom. Jesus developed the most powerful prayer cell with some Galilean laymen. Prayer meetings through the years have been a vital part of the life of the church. But the word cell has recently been attached to the word prayer. Why has this come about?

In many places prayer meetings fail to go far enough. Youth are not interested because prayers are sterotype and the approach is unimaginative and limited. Spiritual life deepens to a degree, then stops. Certain areas in the lives of some Christians fail to get redeemed. Some participants become self-righteous, and others detour life's realities.

Prayer cells have been born because Christians have available "the mightiest force in the world," and prayer meetings have not used prayer as such. Prayer cells are prayer meetings plus. Here are some of the plus elements. The groups are kept small so that everyone feels free to participate. Individual growth is a major concern. Various techniques are used: much use of silence where everyone is equal, everyone praying silently for the one who is praying aloud, the use of prayer magnets and prayer horseshoes (special seating arrangements). Disciplines are worked out to help measure each one's spiritual growth. Specific action is expected between meetings. No leader dominates the experience. The Bible plus much additional excellent literature is used for resource and study. Group singing and manual labor help unite the group. The total job of Christian thinking and acting is met head-on in the prayer cell training fellowship.

Christianity needs "teeth" in it. One of the best ways for Christians to get beyond the milk-toast stage of religion is to start a prayer cell. Join with a few other Christians who are concerned because they do not know how to pray either and feel utterly incapable and unworthy of winning others to Christ, and start training one another to be strong where you are weak. Spend a dollar and ten cents for first step literature by buying Alternative to Futility, by Trueblood, and The Why and How of Christian Training Cells, by Don Royer. If you have only ten cents buy the last mentioned. In it you will read: "It is very likely that trained fellowship groups will be the nucleus, the core, of the ongoing church in the event that a severe crisis, such as atomic war or prolonged depression, undermines the church as we know it today."—The Gospel Messenger

Comments by the Editor -- "Things to Do in December"

JUST today I read an article criticizing the secularism and the materialism of today's Christmas. There is obviously an uneasy Christian conscience over the pomp, display, and business connected with Christmas. Retail merchants gird themselves for the biggest spending spree of the year. Advertizers put out their best lures to weaken a weary consuming public. Postmen brace themselves to the crushing load of mail. The Christmas festival has become the great splurge of the year.

How may we rescue some of the great eternal things of Christmas, the things of real spiritual significance? There are several suggestions one might make.

1. Go caroling not for the treats, but in remembrance of and to honor people of your community. There are shut-ins, old people, lonely people. Pick them out and sing with spirit and zest for them.

2. Have a Christmas party for poor children. If your community has an "across the tracks" community, seek out some of the poorest of the families and give their children a party as a Christian gesture. Such seeds once planted grow like the mustard seed of Scripture.

3. Participate in or attend great musical festivals such as "The Messiah." Once you have attended such an oratorio ten years, you will never want to miss hearing it again and it will be a great spiritual treat.

4. Make your "White Gift" a really special one that will in a particular way remember "one of the least of these." Make your "white gift" a personal gift, not a mere reaching in the pocket and "shelling out."

5. Read the Christmas story from the Gospel of Luke. Do this at a Christmas party. Another suggestion is to read Dicken's "A Christmas Carol." We don't read to each other much any more and it is sad to see such a grand thing fading out. There are untold treasures in the experience of reading to one another in a group. Make an evening of it.

6. Attend Christmas services in other churches including the Catholic church which holds High Mass on Christmas Eve at midnight. The Catholic Mass will look strange, but recall that this mass has been said on a thousand Christmas Eves before this one and you are witnessing a historic celebration—whether you agree with it or not.

7. Plan for a Watch Night Service on New Year's Eve at which, as the bell brings in the 50th year of this century, you and your group may be on their knees praying to God—for the 50 years that have passed have been the most destructive and the bloodiest of all time.

8. Welcome folk home to your church and community with a banquet or party during Christmas week. It may be called a Homecoming banquet at which you can make them feel their church is concerned and gladly welcomes them.

Christmas may be secular, but it needn't. You are the one who decides what Christmas is. You have your choice.—E.L.

Young People's Union Council Meets at Mountain Lake, Minn.

THE annual Council meeting of the Young People's Union was held November 28 and 29 at Mountain Lake, Minnesota. On Saturday evening, November 26, and Sunday evening, November 27, a community-wide youth rally was held at which the youth work of the church was emphasized and inspirational addresses were given.

The annual Council meeting consists of representatives of each District of the General Conference and representatives from the church schools. These representatives come to discuss the program of the Young People's Union and to map its future development and work. This year's meeting was of significance being the first Council meeting held in a church community. The previous meetings have always been held at schools and on campuses.

This year's Council meetings was one of major importance because it discussed some new plans and developments under consideration in regard to the Young People's Union. For one thing, the Young People's Union has to the present been essentially a project-sponsoring organization. Discussed at this meeting was the proposal of entering the program field and the matter of making a more direct service to local organizations and societies.

Program Materials Issued by the Y.P.U.

DURING the past six weeks, the Young People's Union of the General Conference has issued program materials designed to be used by local youth societies and fellowship groups. The first such packet of material issued was on "Missions" and consisted of six studies of General Conference mission fields. This work was in the hands of Rev. Verney Unruh of Pulaski, Iowa. The programs are made up in a manner that local socieites may file them away and keep them for future reference and use. Thus, if a study of missions is not appropriate at the present time, they may be held for the time when that subject is appropriate.

The November materials has as its subject "Stewardship." The Thanksgiving season is unusually appropriate for a study of stewardship and the materials were designed with that in mind. Because of production difficulties, these materials were late in appearing so that the Thanksgiving emphasis may not apply aptly. However, the "Stewardship" theme is always usable.

December materials are in the process of being issued. These materials will deal with the Christmas and New Year themes. They will be suggestive of what may be done among youth in the church during the Christmas holiday season.

The program materials are not being designed to be followed slavishly. Rather, they are suggestive and intended to be guides so that each local group may be creative in developing what would be peculiarly appropriate to their own situation.

This is a new service being rendered by the Young People's Union. The response received on them so far indicates that it is a much-needed service. If local groups do feel this way and encourage this effort, there will be additional services developed along this line. As it now stands, plans are to issue ten program packets during the present year—September to July. Each packet will deal with a special subject. The local leader can use this file for gathering additional materials on this particular subject. For instance, stewardship notes may be collected in the Stewardship folder. Thus, an ever-growing repository of materials may be collected locally.

The Young People's Union has issued this material to all the churches making no charge for them as a service on their part. If local churches are appreciative of this service, they may express their appreciation by supporting the Young People's Union General Fund through their District Conference treasurer.

Stories of the Apostles

IN the first centuries after Christ there was a very considerable literary activity in the Church, and a great number of apocryphal Gospels and Acts and other similar documents have come down to us. In the main they are of no value historically, their main interest for us being in the idea and beliefs which they shew to have been popular amongst Christians in those early days, and the strange lapses from the high and holy teaching of the Gospels.

We have seen in previous articles that there are, however, a few stories and sayings of Jesus to be culled from such sources, and the same is true regarding the apostles. I propose to narrate three such tales here—about Paul, Thomas, and John. It should perhaps just be said that it is uncertain whether the John in the third of these stories was the disciple or another of the same name, commonly called "the Elder," who makes an occasional appearance in the records of those days.

There is first of all the famous story of Paul and Thecla, which has often been thought to have been based on an actual happening. Sir William Ramsay, the well-known New Testament scholar, believed that internal evidence in the narrative as we have it proved that it contained material dating from the middle of the first century—that is to say, contemporaneous with Paul's visit to Iconium in Asia Minor (Acts 14:51).

He is depicted as being the guest of a citizen of Iconium, by name Onesiphorus (II Timothy 1:16; 4:19), and to have preached and taught in the courtyard of his house. The burden of his message is given as "the word of God concerning abstinence and resurrection." In the window of a house near by sat Thecla, who listened entranced and "rejoiced exceedingly." Now Thecla was betrothed to a young man named Thamyris, and when her mother saw how fascinated she was by what she heard she sent for him in great concern. "My daughter, like a spider at the window, bound by his words, is held by a new desire and a fearful passion." And she told how Thecla was eating and drinking nothing.

Thamyris went in to speak with Thecla but she ignored him and all his pleading was of no avail. In great anger he went out and conferred with others in the city who were equally disturbed by the effects of Paul's preaching on their wives and daughters. As a result Paul was charged before the governor and thrown into prison. Thecla, however, visited him there, bribing the jailers with her braclets and a silver mirror. When her absence from home was discovered, there was much consternation, and when at last she was found with Paul, he was expelled from the city. Thecla resisted all efforts made to turn her from the Christian faith, and had a marvelous escape from wild beasts in the amphitheater. She was helped by a certain rich queen, Tryphaena—a historical personage well known in Asia Minor in the first century, and was the means of converting her to Christ.

Next we have the tale of Thomas and the Royal Palace— a kind of parable or allegory. As stated in a previous article, a good case can be made out for the view that Thomas did actually visit and evangelize part of the Indus Valley, and in this story a king of that region appears whose name is Gundaphorus. It is interesting to know that coins bearing this name has been unearthed there.

When Thomas arrived, we read, and the king learned that he was a builder, he commissioned him to erect a royal palace. Thomas promised to do so and was given much money by the king who then departed and was absent for a long time. Instead of setting to work Thomas went about doing good, distributing the money to the poor and afflicted, preaching the gospel and healing the sick. When the king returned and found no palace he was very angry and Thomas was thrown into prison. But the same night the king's brother died and was taken to heaven, where he saw a beautiful palace in which he asked permission to dwell. He was told, however, that it had been built by Thomas for the king—" a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

The brother was then permitted to return to earth in order to purchase this lovely house, and when he appeared to the king with his request, the king's heart was touched and he became converted to Christ.

The last story is the most beautiful of the three—John and the Robber. It is found in a book by Clement of Alexandria, one of the most famous of early Christian writers, and is in all probability founded on fact.

In the course of his missionary travels, John met a youth of fine appearance and good character, and was enabled to bring about his conversion to Christ. He commended him to the elders of the Church in that place where he had met him, and on departing elsewhere urged them to watch with care his progress and to train him in the right way of life.

Some years later, John again passed that way and made inquiries regarding the youth; he searched for him in vain amongst the congregation of the Church, and presently was told that he had fallen away from the faith and had joined a band of robbers and bandits who infested the hills and were causing much trouble round about. This news made the apostle very sad, and without a moment's hesitation he bade farewell to his friends and set out in search of the young man.

Up into the hills he went, alone and unarmed, seeking everywhere for tidings of the robber band. At last he finds traces of them and presently is himself waylaid and taken prisoner by them. Led into the presence of the robber chief he sees there his young friend and convert standing as one of the chief's bodyguard. Boldly he called to him, asked what he was doing in such company, reminded him of Christ and his former faith in him, pleaded with him to think again and to yield himself in penitence.

The young man was deeply affected, and soon repented of his sin and renounced his evil ways. Not only so, but the robber band itself was affected by these strange happenings, and chief and men alike listened to the gospel and presently gave their allegience to Christ.

The absence from this beautiful tale of anything fantastic or miraculous and its fine moral challenge commend it to us. Probably true in actual fact, it is certainly true in spiritual significance and teaching.

"Can These Bones Live?" A Vision of Voluntary Service in Europe

"We weren't Germans or Americans in this camp; we were just people." ...."In my circle of acquaintances everyone had become mercenary and selfish. I thought that there were hardly any people left who do good without expecting something in return." ... "What I like about this camp is that we say less about religion, but do more about it." ... "I have just had some sad experiences and no longer cared to live. Now my whole life has been changed." ... "You don't know how hard it is for us to believe. We must see and feel again and again the demonstration of the simple, vital faith that we experienced here." ... "The time I spent in the camp enriched my inner life and brought me nearer to God." ... "I gained an insight into a joyful, unselfish service for the Lord."

"Son of man, can these bones live?" This question posed by God to Ezekiel in the valley of dry bones might well be asked regarding much of Europe's Christendom today. Can the skelton of lifeless faith in hazy, impotent creedal concepts be reinfused with a new living and acting belief in a living Christ? According to these few random testimonials from participants in several of our voluntary service camps, one can say, "Yes, these dry bones can live."

To attribute this much effectiveness to voluntary service is not to claim that a whole continent can be transformed by a few small camps, but these statements to indicate that there is a response to a Christianity that is genuinely realistic and tangible. Voluntary service is a demonstration in Christian living and community, and in certain respects, a logical sequence of the relief program. In relief there was a demonstration—Christian love ministering to human need with the demonstration incidental to the ministry. But in a sense this demonstration was only an exhibition because it was viewed from without by the beneficiary. It did not imply his participation. The automobile was in the show window where it could be seen at will, but voluntary service can say, "Come in and drive it yourself."

At a certain point this illustration breaks down because faith is not acquired as one acquires an automobile. On the other hand, voluntary service actually goes much further. Here people of all types are welcomed, regardless of nationality or politics. There is a balanced program of camp life where every aspect —physical, social, cultural, recreational, spiritual—is held in its proper proportion. But the basic pattern and atmosphere, the major premise, of the camp life is Christian. Here is the world in miniature in a little circle of 15 or 30 young people, where all the problems of man's relationship to God and to his fellow man arise. There is work to be done, decisions to be made, opinions of others must be respected. In other words, a harmonious community must be achieved. The camp leadership rests on a core of Christians who seek to fulfill the principles of the Gospel in every respect—in worship, work, and fellowship. In this atmosphere the agnostic finds the veneer on his unbelief grows thin, the sincere doubter and seeker may take his first step of faith, the inexperienced Christian finds joy and growth in service, the lonely finds friendship, the embittered soul from whom the war has taken everything again can feel something of the goodness of God, the skeptic who had been alienated from the church by her inconsistencies sees that there can be and is a genuine Christianity, and the militaristic see the Christian way of peace.

Voluntary Service? Yes. We need to continue and increase it.

—Paul Peachey.

Beyond Our Own

ISRAEL.—Israel's Ministry of Religion has announced that the country's non-Jewish population includes 62,000 Moslems, 14,000 Druzes, and 31,000 Christians. It was said that the Christian population had increased by nearly 15,000 during the last few months.—The Watchman-Examiner.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA.—Reestablishment of Israel as a nation is the outstanding sign that the "end of the age is near" and that "Christ will return to earth soon," speakers told the 30th annual convention of the World Christian Fundamentals Association here. — The Protestant Voice

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA. Crowds, including many seemingly hungry for the gospel, forced the Christ for Greater Los Angeles union evangelistic campaign to continue beyond the scheduled closing date of October 17.

Cancelling other engagements, Evangelist Billy Graham acquiesced to the demands of the Los Angeles committee to continue the campaign at least until the end of the month. Preliminary reports indicated that some 3,000 had made public confessions of Christ. A popular radio newscaster was included in the list of converts, Graham reported.—Christian Life

JAPAN.—Some 2,000 ministers and laymen attended a special ceremony in Tokyo marking 90 years of Protestant mission work in Japan. The ceremony was held in connection with an all-Japan Christian Workers' Conference to rally support for the 5-year evangelism drive launched by the United Church of Christ in Japan (Kyodan) last April. Dr. Michio Kozaki, moderator of the Kyodan, presented citations to clergymen and missionaries who have worked in Japan for over 40 years. He also awarded certificates of commendation to 1,089 Japanese lay men and women who have been Christians for more than 50 years. Rev. Zentaro Ono, who has been a minister for 52 years, accepted the citations for the clergymen, and Dr. William Axling, of the Baptist Mission, represented the missionaries. The laymen's certificates were accepted by the heads of the 18 dioceses into which Japan is divided.—The Watchman-Examiner.

TIBET. In recent months the Bible in the Tibetan language has at last been completed. Tibetan is the 188th language to receive the whole Bible. Its capital, Lhasa, is known as the "Forbidden City," and throughout the nineteenth century no European was allowed to go there, or, if he got there by stealth, he was exiled as soon as he was discovered.

use on Saturdays. In Uruguay the Danziger group was still in two camps. Most of the men and many girls were working at various places. A group of five families were on a modern dairy farm which they had rented on shares. To my estimation these in Uruguay will get along well without much help, but the Chaco will need help for some time yet. Rev. Litwiler of the Old Mennonite Conference in Buenos Aires is doing much to help the Mennonites there. We left Montevideo, Uruguay, on October 1 and landed in New York on October 17. A fine trip, only the last two days we were caught in a hurricane which delayed our landing nine hours.

At present we are recuperating from some of the effects of our stay in the tropical climate. THE MENNONITE was a welcome paper in South America, although it took from four to six weeks befor it reached us. For November 13 we are scheduled to be in Beatrice, Nebraska, to give a report of the work in general in South America. Next Tuesday we will speak to the Men's Brotherhood of the English Lutheran Church in York, Nebraska. Thank you for your fine editorials which I read with great interest.

"Reader Says"

Dear Editor:

I would like to commend you on your first editorial which appears in the October 25, 1949, The Mennonite. The statement by Brother Lehman is also to the point. I am filing these two items for possible future use or reference.

Your picture of the church on page ten reminds me of what the pastor of one of your churches said about the architecture of certain of your churches, particularly in the Middle West. He called to our attention the forts rigged on the front or side of many of these nonresistant churches. Being sort of a architectural fan, he traced the reason for this back to the days of the Minute Men, and to the Medieval days in Europe when watchmen stood on the towers (the church towers where the highest things then) and let out notes of warning when approaching armies appeared. He then ridiculed, as only this man could, the idea that Mennonite Churches would still have "forts" on them. Ever since that day, whenever I see a picture or actually see one of these churches, I am surprised at the incongruity of the thing. (Of course, in saying this, I recognize that perhaps some of our "barns" could perhaps use a decorative feature or two.) This obviously does not mean that you should not have printed the picture of the church building or that you should start a tirade to eliminate these; I am simply expressing my amusement, chagrin, disappointment, or whatever, when I see churches of this sort.

I enjoy reading your paper and can say that I generally always read an article or two and scan the rest rather closely.

Sincerely

THE CONFERENCE BUSINESS COMMITTEE is to be commended for the excellent program that they have outlined for the coming General Conference in Freeman, South Dakota, next August 23-30. (Have you reserved these days on your calendar?) Using Acts 22:15 as the Conference verse, "For thou shalt be a witness for him unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard," and "Witnessing unto all men," as the Conference motto, the Committee suggests a program that follows the true logic of the gospel. Gearing in with the Conference-wide and nation-wide emphasis on evangelism the program proposes to build up to a great evangelistic service appealing for decision and renewed decision on the fourth day of Conference. Then the emphasis shifts to the consequent responsibility in Christian service building up to Foreign Missions day with the Conference India Jubilee program and a great missionary rally climaxing the eighth day of Conference. Decision based on the exposure of the whole man to the redeeming gospel and consecration to service in witnessing to the whole gospel to all men has the possibilities of sending any body of believers to new heights of accomplishment in response to the challenge of the Master as He sends us forth with the saving Gospel.

> The outreach of our concern for our fellowmen measures rather accurately the depth of our own experience.
> —Selected.

THERE IS ONLY ONE RESORT in seeking the true sense of balance in our Christian witness—that is to measure it always by the person and work of our Lord Jesus Christ. Our various boards and committees are intended to assist us in giving a corporate and personal witness to all that we "have heard, which we have seen with our eyes . . . and our hands handled concerning the Word of life." To leave out anything is to distort the gospel and hinder its full effectiveness. To make any particular application of the gospel a substitute for the gospel is to fall into dangerous heresy. In Jesus Christ we have not only the ground of our salvation but the pattern for our life after we have been converted. In Him we see various methods geared to one ultimate objective and permeated by one supreme passion—to cleanse men from all sin through the atoning love of God as manifest at Calvary. Whatever the nature of our ministry, then, whether it be teaching, healing, helping, counseling, preaching or any of a host of other methods—unless it is permeated with the persuasive love of Christ that makes men uncomfortable in the presence of any sin and woos them to the Saviour, it is not presenting the full Gospel of salvation.—J.J.E.

The Blessed Advent

by Benjamin Ewert

THE present time, the four weeks before Christmas, is called and is known in Christendom as "The Blessed Advent." The expectation is that during this time special emphasis is to be put on the theme of Christ's coming to us by sermons, articles in periodicals, by song and recitations, and otherwise declaring with the words of the prophet Zachariah: "Rejoice greatly, for behold the King cometh unto thee!" or as is stated in Psalm 24:11: "Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors, that the King of Glory may come in!" Thus we shall be in full expectation of the visit of the Lord Jesus Christ and give him a hearty welcome—yes, even give him a sincere invitation. We have in German a well-known prayer which is often spoken at the partaking of our meals—namely, "Komm, Herr Jesu, sei unser Gast, und segne was du uns bescheret hast!" I wonder whether we sincerely mean it, when we pray thus; whether that really is our desire?

We welcome visits of our own people and enjoy their presence. We surely will also enjoy the visit of the Lord Jesus by having devout conversations together, in meditation and prayer, receiving spiritual blessings, joy through the holy spirit, peace, contentment, comfort, and enlightenment as was the case of His visit in the home of Mary, Martha, and Lazareth. Or we may also receive reproach or correction, as was the case when He once was in the house of that man Simon or during the conversation with Nicodemus. Then it must also be known, what is stated John 1:12: "As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the Sons of God, even to them that believe on his name." Note therefore of what great importance the visits of Jesus with us and the conversations together is in different respects.

In addition to what has been said there is another thought regarding the expected and welcome visit of Jesus: Namely the future return of Him in Glory. As he has stated John 14:3: "I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also," Regarding which event numerous Scripture passages are given. We are told and admonished to expect and welcome him at his future coming. As stated in Matthew 24:44: "Therefore be ye also ready; for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." And in Matthew 28:20 we have the Lord's promise: "And lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world!" Do we expect him? Are we ready to receive him? Will he be welcome to us when he comes?

The Lost Gospel

by Ronald von Riesen

A message delivered at the Christian Education Rally held in connection with the Council of Boards.

SOMEWHERE—something, seems to have been lost by the Christian church which has seemingly brought it much dishonor. We live in an age where to a large extent the essence of the gospel has been lost. It has become for many a sealed book.

I would like to suggest three things that have to a large extent been lost to our living.

Lost: The Gospel of Conviction

For one thing, we have lost the gospel of conviction and belief. If we would have asked the question, "What difference do beliefs make?" before the second World War, a majority of people would have answered, "Very little difference." They would have said, "What matters is not what you believe but what you do." People had grown weary of doctrine. They had seen so much inconsistency on the part of believers, so many church people who were ready to recite the apostle's creed but whose lives showed little more honesty or kindness than the mass of men, that they lost respect for beliefs. They had seen religious doctrines beget so much intolerance and cause so much controversy that they had come to the conclusion that a definite system of beliefs was not only unnecessary but harmful. Consequently, men were trying to build up a Christianity without a creed, a vague sort of religion of mere goodwill.

> Is not this, perhaps, our greatest need—a genuine experience that will interpret both the sinful state of our hearts and the glorious news of the redeeming Saviour.

However, if we asked this same question today, I have a feeling that it would not be answered so glibly. The scheme of living without knowing what one believes has not been too successful. A religion of mere sentiment is no real protection against an aggressive secularism nor has it enough backbone to carry men far and courageously into tasks that call for real sacrifice and devotion.

We are beginning to see that the trouble was not and is not with our beliefs but with the superficiality of our profession. Wherever young people gather today to talk about Christianity, a new interest in beliefs is appearing. People, both young and old, are no longer satisfied to talk simply about what should be done in the world; they want to know what is back of it all, what is the meaning of life, what supports there are for our service. We are beginning to see that beliefs do matter, that they are the mainspring of our actions.

The Moulding Power of the Invisible

William Beebe, in his book on the Bermudas, speaks of the moulding power of the invisible. He speaks of the cedars that grow on the island. They are all bent to the northwest, away from the force of the winds. In the forests back inland, where they are protected, they stand upright, but the nearer the beach you go, the more are they bent. At the shore, where they feel the full power of the blast, they lie almost flat, only lifted enough from the ground to escape the rubbing of the sand. By looking at these cedars one can see the direction of the prevailing winds. The wind, unseen and yet powerful, is the moulding influence of their growth. Similarly, our beliefs, hidden deep in our minds and apparently so unimportant, are the factors that shape our lives.

Christianity has always tied faith and action together. The Apostle Paul has given us an excellent example of this truth in most of his writings. In Romans, for example, he sets forth the doctrine of being justified by faith—that in all ages, men were and always shall be justified by faith. He devotes the entire first eleven chapters to this major thesis. Then he comes to the pivot of his epistle in chapter 12:1, which reads, "Therefore, brethren, I appeal to you by the mercies of God, that you present your bodies a living sacrifice, wholly and acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." The key rests in the little Greek word, "oun." It is the connecting link. All that preceded is of no avail unless it issues forth in that which follows after, namely, a consecrated life. And all that follows after, or a good life, is useless unless it is founded on that which goes before.

Our generation needs to rediscover the significance of having a belief to serve as a basis of our actions. It is still true that what we profess and really believe in will determine our course of action.

Lost: Our Sense of Evangelism

Again, I would like to suggest, that we have lost our sense of evangelism in winning people about us, to a saving relationship with Jesus Christ.

The word, "evangelism" is one of those words that seems to have lost caste. It once had a glorious meaning. Then the time came when it did not move us at all. In some instances it even came to be looked down upon. Unfortunately, the years brought numerous abuses on the part of the unwise leaders. Some of these actually created an aversion on the part of those they professed to help.

There is something tragic about this, because evangelism is at the very heart of Christianity. The two can never be separated. If we abandon evangelism, we lose the gospel itself, for evangelism is the gospel being proclaimed and lived. If we outgrow evangelism, we do not grow. We are dwarfed. We retreat. We lose life.

If we look at the early church, it was this very thing that made it grow. Read again the thrilling story as recorded in Acts 2. Just a few weeks before there were twelve in the upper room; then one-hundred-and-twenty; then Pentecost with three thousand souls and mention is made of the enthusiastic fellowship that surrounded all their acts, "And the Lord added to their number day by day those who were being saved." Acts 2:47.

Community Acquaintance Program

Earlier in the week representatives of various boards and committees participated in a Mission Rally, a Youth and Christian Education Rally, and a Christian Service Rally held on Sunday afternoon and evening, and Monday evening respectively, which in addition to Thursday night's program made up the Community Acquaintance phase of the Council of Boards meeting.

Among those speaking at these various public meetings, were Mrs. P. W. Penner, returned missionary from India, A. J. Neuenschwander, secretary of the Home Mission Board, Gerald Studer, president of the (Old) Mennonite Youth Fellowship, Erland Waltner, board advisor to the Y.P.U., Ronald von Riesen, executive secretary of the Board of Education (see message in this issue, page 4), Bennie Bargen, manager of the Conference Publication Office, J. Winfield Fretz, secretary of the Mutual Aid Board, Elmer Ediger, associated with M.C.C. Voluntary Service, Erna Fast, recently returning from serving as a relief worker in Hamburg, and J. N. Smucker, president of the Conference.

Council of Boards Sidelights

Mountain Lake, Minnesota, is a community of 1,800 people situated about 125 miles southwest of the Twin Cities.

More than a hundred Conference officers, board and committee members and others associated with the above were graciously provided with lodging by members of the three Conference churches in Mountain Lake—First, Bethel, and Gospel Churches. An average of fifty meals were served at the Bethel Church by the Bethel women at lunch and dinner each of the three days. You see, this is a friendly town; many were invited to homes.

Various Conference churches of the area participated in the Community Acquaintance Program by furnishing special music.

Among the hundred or so officers, board and committee members, were represented some 70 family names with 8 Millers, 6 Friesens, 5 Kaufmans, 5 Unruhs, etc. They came from twelve states and Canada: 39 from Kansas, 10 from Ohio, 8 from Pennsylvania, 8 from Ohio, etc.

It was a witness that grew out of a great spiritual experience and issued forth in a victorious life.

Look at Paul. It was Christ's Spirit that laid hold of Paul and after that experience he was not content unless he was bringing others into that glorious fellowship. In the face of death or trials, he was never discouraged. He had been redeemed from a spiritual desperation. "The good that I would I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do . . . Evil is present with me . . . Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" Paul's sense of need was so great that only God in Christ could meet it.

We Have Never Dared . .

Perhaps one of the reasons that many of us do not have a yearning to see others transformed into Christlikeness is that we have never dared to look into our own hearts. We have failed to realize our own deep need of the redeeming Christ. Paul well knew that the good news of the gospel meant most to those who are spiritually desperate and mortally ill. That is one reason why we need a recovery of the sense of sin. Christ took it for granted that all men are sinners. The Bible assumes it throughout.

C. S. Lewis says, "until we become conscious of this fact, though we are a part of the world He came to save, we are not part of the audience to whom His words are addressed." Too often we have examined only our outward circumstances of life, and thus have been misled into feeling that they are the accurate indications of our spiritual state. Such was the case of Nicodemus, but the words of Jesus still stand, "Except ye be born again, ye cannot enter into the Kingdom of Heaven." It is absolutely essential that we have a thorough-going experience that grows out of a spiritual desperation before we will ever be in a position to share with others. It is only after we have truly experienced the redemptive power of Christ, that we will have an inner compulsion to share.

The story is told of a Russian girl who had suffered cruelly. One day she conducts around the Louvre in Paris a young man from a very comfortable English home. The two of them stop before a picture of a loaf of bread and a flagon of wine. But the sight of it nearly breaks the girl's heart, while the Englishman is seemingly unaffected. She turns to him in desperation, and says vehemently, "The trouble with you is that you have never been poor, never been hungry, never been lonely. If you had, this picture would break your heart too. You would see it as the cry of the despised and the rejected, the mystery of man's lot on earth." You see, the trouble with that young man was that he had not had enough experience to understand the meaning of that picture. Is not this, perhaps, our greatest need—a genuine experience that will interpret both the sinful state of our hearts and the glorious news of the redeeming Saviour. When we experience that, we will share because we care. Someone has said that the outreach of our concern for our fellowmen measures rather accurately the depth of our experience.

Lost: The Gospel of Divine Urgency

Finally, we have lost the gospel of divine urgency. We have lost the burning sense of commission in favor of complacency and indifference. The first impression one gets from reading Luke and John is this overwhelming sense of urgency about the teachings of Jesus. In John, Jesus speaks to the people saying, "My time is not yet come: but your time is always here." In Luke, Jesus came preaching "This is the acceptable year of our Lord." These words are seemingly the tone of the gospels and that sense is repeated over and over again. It appears in the parable of the friend at midnight; the wise and foolish virgins; and, the banquet to which the

Europe's Greatest Needs This Winter

An M. C. C. Roundup

The great overall need in Germany has passed, but there continue to be certain sectors of population which are in need of assistance. Among the greatest of these is the refugees. There are approximately 8,000,000 refugees in the Western Zones, 1,000 arriving daily. Their needs: warm winter clothing, men's clothing being urgent. Shoes are needed for children; work shoes for men. Bedding, and food are needed. (2) Old people whose savings have been wiped out, who are unable to find employment are found in every city of Germany. Their needs: clothing, bedding, food, medicine. (3) Children with TB. Needs: nutritional food, medicine, clothing. (4) Delinquent and wandering youth, students and orphans. Estimated that there are 650,000 wandering youth in the British and American Zones, 60 per cent of whom have no parents or cannot locate them. The North Rhine Westphalia area has 5,000 youth under 21 in prison. Needs: clothing, food, recreational and rehabilitative material. Students require supplementary feeding and financial assistance. (3) Prisoners of war are in need of high protein foods, clothing and medical supplies.—Walter Eicher, European M.C.C. Director

In Germany

It is hard to state in a short article the needs of the British Zone of Germany but if it must be in short, it is clothing, clothing, and more clothing. We have seen too many families of refugees who have nothing. Especially is this true concerning their bedding and linen. It is also to be noted that there is need among the old people, the sick, the bombed out families, the returned prisoners of war and such groups who have suffered directly from the war, but again I must repeat the need is primarily for clothing without exception of perhaps the old people who have no money to buy food so we are going to concentrate on that area among refugees and other people in the British Zone this winter.—Howard Blosser.

In Berlin

West Berlin's most urgent need is hope—hope for the future—hope in the face of winter and the surrounding Russian Zone. With one in four able workers unemployed, many homes will remain unheated while children and adults go seriously underclad and underfed. The thirty D-marks given to the aged per month have much less purchasing power in Germany than thirty dollars have in America. Fifteen to twenty of these D-marks are paid out for rent while the rest must go for food as well as clothing, fuel, light bills, carfare, and any number of essential items. Thousands can only starve. While our Neighborhood Center cannot feed and clothe all the multitude, it can present the fact that Christians care.—Harold Buller Donations Can Be Used!

A recent inquiry as to "whether there might be a need for a donation for Foreign Relief" might be indicative of similar question in the minds of others also.

Although the conditions in Europe and elsewhere have improved much through the relief of past years and the United States Government's program of aid, it is found that there still are many people whose circumstances are particularly unfortunate and who suffer very definite need unless aid is given them on an individual basis. The M.C.C. endeavors to seek out such needy individuals and helps them as may be necessary.

In some places the primary emphasis of relief work has shifted from distribution of supplies alone to what is often called rehabilitation, in which the purpose is that of not merely meeting immediate food and clothing need, but helping people to become established spiritually as well as physically and economically.

As the relief program continues in accordance with the wishes that have been expressed by the Mennonite church groups, all the money and material gifts that our churches have to give this year, can be effectively used in helping truly needy people.

In Italy

In many places in the world the need for material aid has been greatly decreased and people are better able to care for themselves. In Naples the situation has not yet reached that point and probably will not for some time to come. The poverty and physical suffering in Naples has existed for a long time and was only agitated by the past war. Of course most of the debris, as a result of the war, has been cleaned away and many buildings and housing projects are under construction. However, the need is one of long term continuing until something is done about the greatly overcrowded slum areas. The needs then include food, clothing (especially for the winter months) and free medical aid and medicines. Certainly all the material aid that could be given would not be long in finding a needy recipient and would very soon be absorbed.—Ross Goldfus.

In Austria

The economic situation in Vienna and in all of Austria has developed so that food is no longer the problem that it once was. Understanding that many will have great difficulty buying enough for their use, it is still true that food is available once more and will shortly be completely ration-free. Certain areas and groups will still require help but not in the quantities previously needed. We feel the special need to emphasize the clothing situation. A study of average wage earners and their needs has shown that it is possible to purchase food and lodging but that there is left absolutely nothing for clothing. The need is acute in many places. We feel that we have only touched the surface of this need thus far. We should also mention the refugees. They will need continual support for some time until the present turmoil settles. Some are doing fairly well but all are uncertain about the morrow. We feel a call to work among them with material aid (clothing, shoes, some special food distributions) and such spiritual witness as we can give.—Howard Blosser.

Our Colleges and Seminary

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

Ernst Crous and wife who shepherd the Mennonite Church in Goettingen, Germany, were visitors at the Seminary during the past week. Crous was the former head of the State Library in Berlin; Mrs. Crous was also a librarian there. They were especially interested in the outstanding libraries in the city of Chicago,

Students of the Seminary attending the Council of Board meetings of the General Conference in Mountain Lake, Minnesota, during the past week were Elmer Ediger, Ronald von Riesen, and Erna Friesen. Dr. S. F. Pannabecker also attended the meetings.

Alcohol Education was the discussion topic on Forum Day at Bethany Seminary this week. James Renz, director of temperance for the Church of the Brethren led the discussions.

Among the interesting practical work jobs by the Seminary students this year is that of Helmuth Dyck, student from Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ontario, Canada. Helmuth is one of twelve student assistant pastors at the First Baptist Church of Chicago. The pastor of the church is Rev. J. Morikawa, who was released several years ago from a Japanese Relocation Camp, to serve as assistant in the church. Later he became the full-time pastor. The church is inter-racial in membership and has an active educational program.

Marvin Dirks returned from Beatrice, Nebraska, where he had been holding a week of services sponsored jointly by the Beatrice Mennonite and the First Mennonite Church. These meetings were held November 21 to 25.

CANADIAN MENNONITE BIBLE COLLEGE

The evangelism class of the Canadian Mennonite Bible College has recently begun a project which consists of a city-wide survey of Mennonites. There are many Mennonite people living in the city of Winnipeg who have lost contact with our church or do not attend church at all anymore. The evangelism class has taken up this religious census in an effort to reach out and contact all such people and invite them to our churches. There are, in all, nine Mennonite churches in the city of Winnipeg and its surrounding suburbs.

Another effort that is being made again this school year is that of visiting and singing for the sick and invalid in the various hospitals and old-folk's institutions of the city. This work is sponsored by the Deputational Committee of the student body. Just north of Winnipeg the Mennonite Old-Folk's Home, "Bethania," is situated, and students have frequently sung for the patients here. Also at various other such places arrangements have been made for such visitation work. The students feel grateful for this opportunity of serving in this way for it provides many opportunities for practical service!

Katherine Klippenstein, Rush Lake, Sask. has been elected to represent the College student body at the annual Y. P. meeting this year. The Y. P. meeting will be held during the regular General Conference Board Member's meeting on November 26th to 29th, at Mountain Lake, Minnesota. I. I. Friesen, instructor at the College, will also attend this meeting as a member of the Board of Education. Missionary Jacob Dick, India, was a guest speaker in chapel on Thursday, November 17th. Missionary Dick based his message on John 5:2-9. In presenting this message about the 38-year-old infirm man he especially emphasized the verse, "I have no one that will help me." He then compared the pagans to this infirm man who also cry out to the Christian world today, "We have no one that will help us." Missionary Dick also related some of his personal experiences. He fled from Russia in 1933 and crossed into China. From there he passed over the mountains by foot into India where he received his call to mission work.

G. G. Epp, Eigenheim, Saskatchewan, addressed the student body with a brief message during the prayer meeting on Saturday night, November 26th. Epp is a member of the Home Mission Board and was traveling en route to the General Conference Board meeting in Mountain Lake, Minnesota.

BETHEL COLLEGE

The following faculty members of Bethel College attended the meetings of the Council of Boards of the General Conference which were held November 26th through November 29th at Mountain Lake, Minn. Eldon Graber, J. J. Enz, J. W. Fretz, President Ed. G. Kaufman, Erland Waltner, H. A. Fast, R. C. Kauffman, and C. Krahn.

The following Bethel College representatives attended the Young People's Union executive meeting of the General Conference at Mountain Lake: Henry Claassen, Public Relations Assistant at Bethel College and president of the Western District Y. P. U.; Henry Schrag, vice-president; Leo Miller, representative of the Y. P. U. of the Northern District Conference and of Bethel College; and Erland Waltner, adviser to the executive committee of the Y. P. U.

H. A. Fast, professor of Bible at Bethel College, returned from his Canadian speaking tour. During the six-week tour, Dr. Fast visited many places, starting in Winnipeg, Manitoba, and ending in Vancouver, British Columbia.

Two interesting addresses were given during chapel hours this week: On Tuesday, Miss Honora Becker, Professor of English, spoke about present trends in literature.

The other chapel speaker was J. Hoffman Cohn, of the American Board of Missions to the Jews. He gave an interesting account of the origin, growth, and significance of the Jewish Zionist movement.

The Newton Community Chorus rendered its 22nd Annual performance of Handel's Messiah, in Memorial Hall, on Sunday, December 11th.

MOUNTAIN LAKE, MINNESOTA, December 1, 1949. "Witnessing unto all men" is the theme that will keynote the 1950 General Conference Sessions to be held at Freeman, South Dakota, August 23 to 30, according to an announcement made at the closing session of the Council of Boards here tonight (Thursday).

Several hundred members of the six General Conference Churches of this area who took advantage of the closing program of the newly inaugurated Community Acquaintance Program held in connection with the Council of Boards meeting heard representatives of the various boards and committees report on their work and plans for the ensuing Conference year.

Business Committee Outlines Coming General Conference Program

Announcement was made by Walter Gering, member of the Business Committee, of plans for a Conference Evangelistic Service to gear in with the United Evangelistic Advance to be held on Saturday night of the Conference to be followed on Wednesday night by a challenging missionary rally. Contrary to the usual schedule, the closing day will feature foreign missions with the India Golden Jubilee program scheduled for the afternoon. Other days of Conference will feature "Our Witness through Education . . . Relief . . . Home Missions, etc."

At the End of a Half-Century in Missions

In this home-town of the late P. A. Penner, founder of our mission in India, the Foreign Mission Board laid plans for next year's celebration of the Golden Jubilee of the establishment of the India Mission. Howard Nyce, Pretty Prairie, Kansas, spoke for the Board. The Board is suggesting that the Conference appoint an official delegate to represent the churches at the Jubilee celebration in India to be held between Christmas and New Year's Day in 1950. It was further suggested that one Sunday late next year we set aside as India Jubilee Sunday.

With reference to the work of Foreign Missions as a whole, the plan is to keep the personnel at the same level in number replacing those who may retire. Difficulties in the political situation in China and Colombia make the work of this board complicated.

Consideration is being given to the expansion of the work among the American Indians.

The Foreign Mission Board is the only major board to step up its budget. The Board has raised its budget to $265,000 from a figure of $260,000 for 1949.

spiritually-needy communities of Mennonites as well as city and mountain missions. In the United States the Board cooperates with the various districts. The Board also assists some 27 ministers in Canada. Significant was the report that there are more Mennonites in Mexico than in South America.

In South America the Board has assisted in the building of church buildings as well as in the support of pastors. Through the visit of A. J. Neuenschwander and others, the Board has kept in touch with the needs there.

It was also reported that the Board supports with loans college students planning to enter the ministry as well as seminary students.

Serving under the Home Mission Board is the Evangelism Committee. Jacob T. Friesen of Beatrice spoke of the United Evangelical Advance in which our churches are encouraged to participate.

Emergency Relief—Ministry of Mercy

Reflecting a receding need for large-scale Relief operations, the Emergency Relief budget was slashed by more than $110,000 according to John C. Mueller, Freeman, South Dakota. However, it was pointedly brought out that while the need for food is no longer the major item there is still a heavy need for clothing and shoes (see "M.C.C. Roundup" in this issue).

Mountain Lake's Community Old People's Home under Construction.

Furthermore, the food for the body has served to reveal a much deeper need in war-torn countries—namely, an intense hunger of the soul. In this need as well as in the great task of finishing the resettlement of the refugees in the Americas, the Emergency Relief Board must plan for some distance into the future.

Finally, this Board is responsible for the interests of the Conference in the building of mental hospitals in connection with the Mennonite Central Committee.

Voluntary Service Program Endangered

Due to insufficient contributions to Voluntary Service, Albert Gaeddert, secretary of the Peace Committee, pointed out that this phase of our peace witness may need to be curtailed. This witness, for which the Peace Committee and the Young People's Union are jointly responsible, sponsors the General Conference Voluntary Service projects such as the youth groups that assist in our home mission work, our foreign work among the American Indians, and in our churches as youth teams. There is also cooperation with the M. C. C. Voluntary Service program on such projects as the Gulfport, Mississippi, rehabilitation work as well as European and Mexico Voluntary Service. The European work emphasizes especially rehabilitation of young people, both so-

From the Steppes to the Prairies

Readers of our church papers will be interested, we feel sure, on a brief report on the sales on the little book FROM THE STEPPES TO THE PRAIRIES.

Reviewers, public libraries, museum collectors, as well as individual readers in our Mennonite constituency have said some very nice things about this book and what is more than just fine words—they have bought it.

Total sales to October 31, 1949 were 627 copies. This gives us the opportunity to point out that the total edition of this little booklet, which we consider one of the most readable accounts of this nature, amounted to only 1,500 copies and when the first edition is sold out no additional copies will be available. Therefore, if you have not ordered your copy may we suggest you write to nearest book store (Yes, Rosthern, Sask.; Newton, Kansas; or Berne, Indiana), price $1.50.

Now we know you would be disappointed if we did not include in this little report a suggestion that this little booklet makes a very nice Christmas gift for young and old alike and it takes just a little checkmark on your check to change your 1 to a 4 which will bring you three copies instead of one.

So that's that for your gift problem this Christmas!

cially and spirtually, and so much is it being appreciated that German Evangelisches Hilfswerk has asked the M. C. C. Voluntary Service to go into the young peoples work of the churches.

In addition to witnessing through Voluntary Service, the Peace Committee has the objective of peace education. In line with this the Committee has plans for a peace oratorical contest to be held in our Conference. The Committee has ready for publication a 300-page book by H. A. Fast entitled "Jesus and Human Conflict." Provision is also being made for tracts and teaching helps on peace.

The Committee called on our colleges to send representatives to the Detroit Conference on Church and War to be held in Detroit, May 8-11. The Conference is sponsored by peace organizations within the Protestant churches; the Historic Peace Churches are included in these organizations, and it promises to be a far-reaching conference taking particularly the Biblical basis both for its study program and its program of suggested activity.

The Committee cut its annual budget from $35,000 to $10,500.

The Board of Education—Custodian of Our Future

Wide variation marks the ministry of the Conference Board of Education according to Erland Waltner, North Newton, Kansas. Through its subsidiary Curriculum Committee such new projects as the JUNIOR HYMNAL, a handbook to the CATECHISM edited by Walter Gering, a junior graded series for Sunday school, and a leadership training school are either being worked on or planned for. Through its Interschool Committee, arrangements are being made to have a choir at General Conference at Freeman consisting of singers representing all the Conference schools. Through its Ministers, retreat committee plans are underway to have the 1950 retreat near Freeman, August 18-23.

The Young People's Union, for whom this Board provides an adviser and which is under the general responsibility of this Board, reached a new high in interest and enthusiasm at its own Council meeting also held in Mountain Lake, November 26-29. Reports will be found in the "Mennonite Youth" section of this paper.

The concern of foreign-student exchange continues while the C.P.S. Educational Rehabilitation program is tapering off.

This Board cut its budget from over $24,000 to $18,500.

LAYMEN, THE "LAST-COMERS"

Terming themselves the "last-comers" as far as conference organizations go the Laymen, as represented by J. S. Shultz, Bluffton, Ohio, reported that they are working on a constitution and promoting the establishment of church and district brotherhoods many of which have already been established.

WOMEN PIONEER IN MIGRANT WORK

In addition to serving as an auxiliary to the Home and Foreign Mission Boards by taking up mission projects of particular interest to women, the Women's Missionary Association as represented by Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz, McPherson, Kansas, reported that they are sponsoring the first conference work among migrants. The Association is also assisting with the Foreign-Student Aid program.

(Reports to be continued next week)

Orlando Waltner, missionary to India, was the special speaker at the four meetings. During November 285 pounds of new and used clothing was packed and sent by the Mission Society to the General Conference Headquarters, and also a hundred pounds of home-made soap. A child consecration service was held on November 27. The parents of the five baby boys were Davis Bauers, Robert Franzes, Herbert Janztens, Lawrence Whitesides, and Leo Dycks. Janet Soldner, missionary to Colombia, South America, was guest speaker on October 16.—Mrs. C. C. Claassen, Corr.

—West Zion Church, Moundridge, Kansas: The Come-Join-Us Sunday School class sponsored a Fun Night on Friday, November 25. The high school gymnasium was rented and the evening was spent playing basketball. Refreshments were sold to defray expenses. Our church celebrated its annual Harvest Festival on Sunday, November 27. At the morning service Howard G. Nyce of Pretty Prairie spoke on missions. In the evening Menno Fast, a relief worker in Poland, talked about and showed pictures of his work. The morning offering went for missions and the evening offering for relief.—Mrs. L. L. Lehmberg, Corr.

—First Church, Reedley, California: Two events of importance have taken place here recently. The first was the dedication. The first was the dedication, on November 6, of our enlarged church auditorium. The seating capacity has been increased from about 250 to almost 500, and the choir loft was moved and enlarged. Work is continuing on the basement. The second event was the ground breaking services on November 20, for the New Kings View Homes mental hospital. Speakers were P. C. Hiebert of the Mennonite Central Committee, and Frank Tallman, Director of California State Department of Mental Hygiene. Several thousand persons attended these services, showing that there is considerable interest in this project. —Corr.

UNDER ORDERS

The ordination of Roy Henry, who has been called as pastor of the Burrton Mennonite church, took place Sunday, December 4, at the Bethel College Mennonite Church, North Newton, Kansas. Rev. Lester Hostetler was in charge. The Burrton congregation joined in the service.

—West Swamp Church, Quakertown, Pennsylvania: This fall in connection with the weekly Bible study we are having a helpful study on "How to teach in the Church School," taught by Rev. Wilmer S. Shelly. The first Sunday in November the entire Sunday School started the offerings for the White Gift. The Anniversary and Mite-Box service of the Young Women's Missionary Society was held Thanksgiving Day evening. Speakers were Mr. and Mrs. Ely Fretz who told us of the many places of Mennonite interest in our country which they had visited. Recently 587 pounds of clothing for relief were taken to Akron, Pennsylvania.—Corr.

—First Church, Upland, California: We observed the annual Thanksgiving and Home-Coming day with a dinner served by the "Menno-Knights" Sunday School Class. D. D. Eitzen of Los Angeles was the afternoon speaker. The freewill offering was for an outdoor bulletin board. Our Christmas program will include the consecration of babies. Two displaced Estonia families arrived through a Farm-Labor program. The men are picking lemons and oranges. They attend our church services, but do not understand our language; one member speaks some German. Some German families are expected soon at the same camp.—Metta Niswander, Corr.

—Meadow Church, Colby, Kansas: We had as visiting minister for Friday morning, November 25, and Sunday morning and evening, November 27, C. H. Suckau from Omaha, Nebraska; who brought inspiring messages. He also visited at the different homes. Sunday morning, November 27, six members were added to our church by letter and vote. We observed Holy Communion on December 4. On December 18 a Christmas program will be given by the Christian Endeavor and on December 24 our Sunday Schools will give their Christmas program.—Mrs. Peter J. Franz, Corr.

Christmas vs. Yuletide

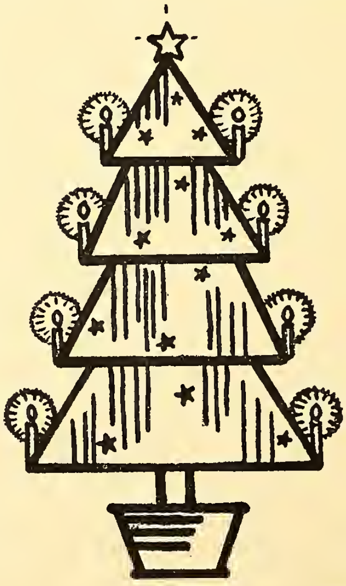
By Matilda Rose McLaren

From whence came the many Christmas customs of caroling, the Christmas tree, the yule log, the Epiphany season, the exchanging of gifts? If you have wondered about Christmas customs, read this story of their origins.—Ed.

EDUCATORS TELL US in order to teach we must lead students from "the known to the unknown." Many hundreds of years ago the early Christian missionary in northern Europe knew the only way to lead our forebears, the Germanic and Celtic people, to Christianity, to teach them of Jesus' coming to shed light on the world—of which they knew nothing—was through the sun's annual return, following weeks of darkness—of which they knew something. By using their superstitious customs as "visual aids," the pioneer shepherds followed a modern educational principle.

Since Jesus' birth occurred during Yuletide which these non-Christians had celebrated for many centuries, it was not difficult to help them understand his mission of hope when it was correlated with the coming of the sun.

Thus, history records the words Yuletide and Christmas are not synonymous. When the angels sang, "Peace on earth, good will toward men," it was not a premier, it was the theme song of the season.



Because, apparently, the sun threatened each year to go down and never come back, people of northern Europe, subjected to the long winter nights, lived in awe of it. They believed the sun ran its course across the sky each day and descended into hel at night. (Hel and grave were synonymous.) Each night they worried: Since the sun had grown so weak, would it have strength to return in the morning?

Based on their observation of the midnight sun, a great many people were sure it stood still for forty nights when Yule logs were burned for light as well as heat. Later, oldtimers observed that while they went regularly through seasons of dread, eventually the sun never failed to return. There was a definite day, December 24, when you could notice "the days begin to lengthen, and the cold begin to strengthen." By January 6, there was no doubt about it. So January 6, twelve days after December 24, became Twelfth Night, or Epiphany which means appearance. This twelve-day period was called Hweol-tid, or Yuletide, meaning turning point.

DURING YULETIDE only the necessary chores were performed. Since the sun was considered to be a huge wheel, farm machinery and spinning wheels stood still in mute respect. To work with them would have been foolhardy, lest through the power of suggestion the Great Wheel should feel itself coerced. When on Twelfth Night these Northerners were sure they were again in the good graces of the sun, their first activity was to roll huge wagon wheels from farm to farm, as a symbol that now the wheels of the world could again be set into motion.

During Hweol-tid it was also considered wrong to harm animals. Fishing nets were hauled in, traps sprung, and hunting clubs hung up. There simply had to be "Peace on earth," lest the sun become angry and refuse to return.

An old legend says that once a farmer took refuge from severe weather in a bear's den. Since it was Yuletide, he knew the bear would not harm him. But when, next day, the farmer returned to the den, club in hand, the bear killed him. Even the widow said it served her husband right. He should have known better than to disturb peace on earth!

"If the Christmas signs do not fail," is the weather prophecy which originated with these early celebrants. Each of the twelve days in Yuletide represented a month, and the father of the house made twelve daily weather records on the rafters. If the first day was stormy, so would its first month of the coming year be; if the sun shone brightly on the tenth, the tenth month would be lovely.

Twelfth Night was a gala occasion. Did not the sun, parent of warmth, light, and fertility, shine upon them again? Feasting and dancing was in order.

"The horn was blown for silence, come was the votive hour,
To Frey's high feast devoted they carried the boar."

According to the Eddas, Odin (Wodin), traveler of the Northlands and descendant of Saturn, fled out of Asia through "Russland to Saxony" (Russia to Germany), on to Frankland (France), Jutland, Sweden, and Norway. A more virile, vigorous, if not too virtuous man never lived. He had a son to place in charge of each conquered country, and to establish the customs of his ancestors.

THE ORIGIN OF some of these includes the story of Balder, the sun god, who lost his life because of jealousy, at the scheming hands of Loki, fire god. Loki knew Balder was immune from every earthly element—fire, water, air, and earth. Only mistletoe, a parasite directly dependent on none of these, could injure Balder. Loki, therefore, set out to find mistletoe and found it growing on an oak tree, "on the eastern slope of Valhalla." Craftily, Loki fashioned himself a mistletoe arrow and waited until the gods assembled for Yuletide when their favorite sport was to shoot darts and throw battleaxes at Balder, the immune. Then Loki placed his arrow into the hands of the god of darkness, Hoth, who was, of course, blind. When it came Hoth's turn to throw something at Balder, he let go with his mistletoe arrow. The sun god fell dead. He descended into hel. The gods itched to kill Hoth—but it was "peace time!"

Great was the mourning of Frigga, Balder's mother, the goddess of beauty, and of the other gods, so a long period of mourning ensued. Balder's grave was showered with gifts, and he showed his appreciation by sending gifts from his grave, so was established the custom of exchanging gifts at Yuletide. Frigga decreed that never again should mistletoe be used as an instrument of destruction. Because she herself was so beautiful, henceforth it should serve as a beautifier. When a swain kissed his maiden beneath it, that maiden would, like Frigga, become so beautiful the swain would be sure to marry her before next Yuletide. After Balder's death, Druid priests cut mistletoe only with golden scythes, never used for another purpose. Because the connection of mistletoe with Christmas is so pagan, to this day it is not used in church decorations.

The Christmas tree itself is said to be a bridge between Yule and Christmas celebrations. Christmas, of course, means: Christ's mass. Back in the ninth century, St. Winifred traveled north to preach Christianity to the Druids and their followers, who believed in human sacrifice. He found a crowd gathered around a great oak tree for such a ritual. As a minister of Christ, he demanded a halt in the proceedings and chopped down the oak. As it fell, a tiny fir tree rose in its place. St. Winifred cried: "Here is a new tree, unstained by blood. See how it points to the sky. Call it the tree of the Christ Child. Henceforth you shall not go into the shadows of the forests to hold your feasts with secret and wicked rites. You shall hold them within the walls of your own home in the north where on the birthday of Christ, the whole family will gather around the fir tree in memory of this day and to the glory of God."

THE EXACT DAY of Christ's birthday is not known. There was a time when, like Easter, it was not celebrated on the same date each year. It fell anywhere between January 1 and January 6, the Jewish celebration of Hanukkah, or Feast of Lights. Pope Julius, served from A.D. 337 to 352, after much research, decided Christ must have been born the second day of Yuletide, December 25. Bishop Liberius declared it the legal Roman date in 354 and by the Christian world. During the Jewish Hanukkah candles were not only given as gifts but were used extensively in the households. This explains why all Palestine was alight the night of Christ's birth. Today, Greeks still call Christmas the Feast of the Lights.

SINCE ODIN LEFT a son in Saxony and the Saxons eventually came over to England, these customs and celebrations were brought along.

Celts celebrated in cowhides. Holly adorned their long hair. Home fires were cut out, in order that they might be rekindled during Yule from the fires of Druid temples. Young men were dispatched to leave gifts of mistletoe, the cure-all, and recipients made substantial gifts in the temple.

Banquet plates were huge half biscuits heaped with fish and fowl. When the meal was over, plates were thrown into alms baskets. Guests helped themselves with their hands and ate with their fingers. Juice ran into the biscuit plates and was quickly absorbed. After the meal came games and musical entertainment.

King Alfred added grandeur to the occasion. Walls were hung with tapestry. Food was served on golden platters and golden goblets supplanted gourds and horns. Men cut their flowing beards into fancy figures; tunics were of cowhide, wool, linen, silk with heavy embroidery. Chains, bracelets, and rings weighted them down, but clanked merrily during the dancing and dining.

Christmas

By Phillips Brooks

The earth has grown old with its burden of care,
  But at Christmas it always is young;
The heart of the jewel burns lustrous and fair,
And its soul full of music breaks forth on the air
  When the song of the angels is sung.

It is coming, old earth, it is coming tonight!
  On the snowflakes which cover the sod;
The feet of the Christ-child fall gentle and white,
And the voice of the Christ-child tells out with delight
  That mankind are the children of God.

On the sad and the lonely, the wretched and poor,
  That voice of the Christ-child shall fall,
And to every blind wanderer opens the door
Of a hope that he dared not dream of before,
  With a sunshine of welcome for all.

The feet of the humblest may walk in the field
  Where the feet of the holiest have trod;
This, this is the marvel to mortals revealed
When the silvery trumpets of Christmas have pealed,
  That mankind are the children of God.

During the merry 1500's the Yule log was so big it required four to eight men to bring it into the great halls. The log was never placed horizontally with the back of the fireplace, but at right angles extending deep into the room. As the end burned off, it was pushed farther across the hearth. Children and men sat on its cold end to make Yule wishes. An oak log was preferred. If luck was to be with the family, a piece of the log must be saved to rekindle next year's fire.

Following the autumn boar hunts, the heads were pickled for Christmas. The serving was preceded by a procession with trumpets. The father of the household

The Carol That Was Written for Sunday School Children

By Vincent Edwards

IF the thousands who join in singing O Little Town of Bethlehem during the Christmas season, it isn't likely that one in ten is aware that this popular carol was originally written for a group of Sunday school girls and boys

Its author was the beloved Bishop Phillips Brooks. He wrote it in 1868, when he was the thirty-year-old rector of the Church of the Holy Trinity in Philadelphia.

Few noted churchmen have ever shown such a fondness for children and Christmas. Whenever the joyous season rolled around, it seemed as though Bishop Brooks caught an added glow of happiness, and his feelings are reflected in the lines of his carols:

"Everywhere, everywhere, Christmas tonight!"

and

"The earth has grown old with its burden of care
But at Christmas it always is young."

At his Philadelphia church Phillips Brooks had already attracted a great following. When he preached, the church was so packed that seats had to be set up in the aisles. He was especialy popular with the children of the Sunday school, for he was one of the jolliest parsons who ever lived, and he took great delight in the singing of so many girls and boys.

When the Christmas season arrived in 1868, the gifted rector remembered the trip he had made to the Holy Land three years before, and wrote O Little Town of Bethlehem for the young folks who had never been there. It is said that his visit to the land where the Saviour had lived made a lasting impression on Phillips Brooks and intensified his own religious life. These Christmas verses lead one to believe that he stood out under the quiet stars of the Bethlehem sky when he came to the place of the Nativity.

It is one thing to have the words of a beautiful carol and quite another to have music to which they can be easily sung. Finding himself in this situation, Phillips Brooks turned to the man that was the superintendent of his Sunday school and the organist and choir leader of the church—Lewis H. Redner. He was also adept at composing music.

Mr. Redner seems to have been inspired on this occasion. He told the rector he would do the best he could and took a copy of Mr. Brooks's carol home with him. Only a day remained before the Christmas service, but that very night he woke up from a sound slumber with his lovely tune "St. Louis" ringing in his mind. It is this tune to which the words are universally sung, and a finer matching of melody to text can hardly be imagined.

The carol was enthusiastically sung by the Sunday school, and it made an instant appeal to all listeners. Gradually it came to the knowledge of people in other churches, not alone in Philadelphia, but all over the country, so that, in time, it was given a place in most hymnals. O Little Town of Bethlehem is now one of the season's most familiar carols.

Yet, when it is sung today, it is not inappropriate to remember the youthful audience for which it was first intended. In the now yellow Christmas program of the Church of the Holy Trinity of the year 1868, there appeared an additional verse, which proves that the author's first thought was of his Sunday school girls and boys:

"Where children pure and happy
Pray to the Blessed Child,
Where misery cries out to Thee,
Son of the Mother mild;
Where Charity stands watching,
And Faith holds wide the door,
The dark night wakes, the glory breaks,
And Christmas comes once more."

Comments by the Editor-- "Program Materials"

ANYONE who has had the job of making up a program for his local youth group knows the task he has. It is not easy to make up a program in a creative way. It is quite easy to fill in an hour's time, but to have an effective program is not filling in an hour's time, as we all know. Doubtless, all too many of our programs are the "filling in an hour" variety. What we need is effective material, well-planned, creatively used.

This Autumn, the Young People's Union has been publishing Program Materials. Each month a set of materials has been sent out dealing with a pertinent topic. The first material issued was on Missions, the second on Stewardship, the third on Christmas. These materials were issued in a file folder. They are not complete in themselves. They need additional material. For instance, the Christmas materials could well be used with additional material gleaned from periodicals. Had you ever thought of using articles from the Mennonite for your collection of Program Materials?

In this issue there are articles on a Christmas theme. They would be excellent for storing away and using in a Christmas program. The article on origins of Christmas customs, "Christmas vs. Yuletide," would be of value and interest. Sometime, in a group discussion, you may want to discuss such a subject as the origin of customs. Then you could use such material telling of the origins of Christmas customs.

There are program materials everywhere, just as there is a sermon in every day's experience. By keeping our eyes open, we can find them and make use of them for our purposes—if we file them away and collect them! Let us work toward vital, dynamic programs by collecting our programs in a Program File. E.L.

Christmas Customs in Other Lands

In Spain it has been customary to release minor offenders from the prisons and give special treats to those in hospitals on Christmas Eve.

* * * *

Also in Spain, before the bells announce the stroke of twelve on Christmas Eve, everyone must see to it that he has done at least one good deed.

* * * *

In Italy the shepherds come down from the mountains to sing and pray at the shrines of the Virgin and Child. They also pray and sing before all carpenter shops in reference to St. Joseph, the carpenter.

* * * *

The climate is too warm for Santa in Mexico so the Aztec god of the sun and air takes his place as the one who does good deeds.

* * * *

The Midnight Mass is an integral part of Christmas observance among many people, including the French, Spanish and Italian.

* * * *

In Italy an old fairy rewards or punishes children on the twelfth day after Christmas by putting sweets or dirt and stones into the stockings which the children hang near the head of their beds.

* * * *

Candles are placed in the windows and doors are left unlocked on Christmas Eve in Ireland so that the Virgin may enter if she should happen to pass.

* * * *

Lighted candles are also placed in the windows in the homes in England. The tradition comes from a legend that the Christ Child wanders the fields and streets at Christmas and goes where the welcoming candle lights the way.

* * * *

On New Year's morning Polish children wake to find a switch or a gift under their pillow. The switch is a reminder to the naughty that they are to mend their ways.

* * * *

The nativity is re-enacted in every hamlet in Poland, peasants playing the role of the worshiping shepherds at stables buried in snow.

The Yule Log and the singing of carols have long played an important part in England's merry Christmas festivities.

MORE BAR MAIDS THAN COLLEGE GIRLS

Dr. W. P. Clemens, a Methodist layman, says, "There are three times as many criminals in America as college students. There are more bar maids than college girls. Children spend eight times as many hours at the movies as in the Sunday school, and one out of twelve persons in America attends church regularly. Seven out of eight children quit church and Sunday school when they are fifteen. There is a murder every twenty two seconds. The people of America spend $750.00 for amusements and luxuries for every dollar contributed for mission. Certainly we are a godless nation." —The Christian Leader.

Our Christmas Paryer

Eternal Father, we thank Thee for a faith so high it can link the far-off pilgrim stars with the cradle of a Little Child . . . .

Make us truly wise, with the wisdom of a Little Child, that the highest truth may be born in our hearts, shepherded by Love and Joy and Wonder. May we be brave to seek and faithful to find Thy need to keep close to the warm heart of life. Call us back from a wisdom that is not wise, because it is hard, untrustful and doubtful of those starry ideals by which Thou art revealed. . .

Let not our souls be busy Inns that have no room for Thee and Thine, but homes of prayer and praise, ready for Thy welcoming. Make us to know that near us even in our city, is Christ the Saviour, whom seeking with joy, we shall find. Humbly we offer our Christmas prayer in His Name.

laid his hand on the "boar of atonement," and pledged fidelity to his family for one more year. Only a man of good reputation could officiate.

Often boar's head was followed with pheasant pie. The bird's body was drawn, stuffed with herbs and baked, then placed in its original skin and decorated with feathers.

About 1380, Richard II held a Christmas party at Litchfield, when 2,000 oxen and 200 tons of wine were consumed. Regularly this king kept 2,000 cooks to prepare food for his 10,000 "regular boarders." In return for this lavish feeding constituents were expected to give handsome gifts, and dance and sing for the King and Queen. This was the origin of Christmas carolers who, in many communities, even today, sing until they've been fed.

With the advent of Puritanism in England, all English Christmas merry-making ceased. In fact, in 1652 Parliament ordered: "No observance shall be had of the five and twentieth day of December, commonly called Christmas; nor any solemnity used or exercised in churches upon that day in respect thereof." No Yule fires burned, not even candles. Today, the English Christmas is akin to ours—church, gifts, and dinner.

This year, may we be mindful not only of the ever-returning sun, but of the ever-living Son whose coming shed light upon the world during its darkest era of ignorance and superstition.—Front Rank invited guests would not come. People truly believed it was the acceptable year of the Lord, and lived under that inner compulsion.

This also seems to be the theme of the book of Acts—not tomorrow, but today. There was present in the hearts of the early Christians this divine sense of urgency, an inner compulsion, a powerful dynamic, which literally "set the world on fire."

The spread of the gospel can be compared to the flowing of a river as seen from a high mountain. Once it flows swiftly. Again it flows sluggishly along the plains. Looking at history, one can say that when the Gospel seized men with a sense of divine urgency it made progress. This is clearly illustrated in the (1) rise of the Reformation movement; (2) the Wesleyan movement; and (3) the nineteenth century missionary movement. These are places where the gospel has cut the deepest. But where men sailed with complacency and indifference, Christianity ceased to be a force and became a form, and at times completely dry.

In our own time we have seen "ism" after "ism" grow and sweep across a nation because of this sense of urgency and untiring effort on behalf of those who were unreservedly committed to a cause.

The story is told of a church in Florida, which was installing rocking chairs instead of the traditional pews. Now, I realize that there is no particular merit in sitting on hard pews, other than economy, but, when the rocking chair becomes the symbol of the church, it might as well close its doors.

Rufus Bowman, president of Bethany Biblical Seminary, upon returning from his world tour and on his opening chapel address, pleaded with the students for the recovery of this lost sense of urgency and that we once more return to the pulpits, the conviction that all men, everywhere, are LOST, without Christ.

May the Christian church and the Mennonite Church in particular awaken to the needs of the hour and restore once again the TOTAL gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, which will give to every member an intelligent faith, a passion for evangelism, and a divine sense of urgency.

Announcements

The Executive Committee of the General Conference is glad to announce that P. K. Regier, of Reedley, California, has been selected, and has consented, to give full-time service to the work of the Conference in the capacity of Executive Secretary. Walter H. Dyck had held this position in connection with his work as General Secretary of Conference, but this spring he felt led to accept the pastorate of the Emmaus Church, Whitewater, Kansas, and desired to be relieved of full-time Conference work. Brother Dyck continues as General Secretary while Brother Regier will take over the many other duties of an Executive Secretary, spending about half of his time in the field, representing the work and needs of the Conference, and the rest of his time at the Headquarters Office at Newton, Kansas. May our united prayers sustain him as he undertakes this important work in the very near future.

For the Executive Committee,

THERE IS AN ETERNAL NEWNESS about Christmas. Whenever it seems that it is nothing but the same old story, the same old rush, and the same old program at one year's end after another, we may be sure that we have lost the true Christmas. Either we have permitted the reality and sparkling splendour of its message to become overlaid with a deadening vaneer of sentimental associations or else we have forced the message into the mold of dogmatism and thus cut off its tremendous life-changing dynamic. If we permit either of these to happen, we sustain a terrible loss.

If we sense the fact that we are drifting in either of these two directions, we may check our course by the underlying inescapable elements that made the first Christmas possible. There is a Christmas equation that is as eternally relevant and changeless as two-plus-two-equals-four. This equation is simply, God plus man equals life. The Virgin Birth, the angelic messengers, and the guiding star represent the mysteriously Divine elements or the God-factor. The yielded parents, the birth of a child, the humble shepherds, and the believing wise men represent the human factor. When the desire of God to lift up and save, which is always present, and the willingness of man to be used of God in helping others, which is long in coming—when these two factors meet there is "Joy to the world!"

SOMETIMES WE CONCENTRATE on the sentiment of Christmas. We glory in the so-called "Christmas-spirit" that sends us on what would almost seem endless and aimless shopping escapades or that lists for us terrific and sometimes almost unbearable social schedules. It even invades our church programs n the form of irrelevant recitations that turn our eyes manward instead of Christ-ward. We have worked out a Christmas ritual for the holiday season hat leads to the crowded and noisy inn instead of he humble, peaceful stable. And, oh!—let us not orget the annual donation to the poor. How far we have wandered from Bethlehem! So far, in fact, hat we become like the woman who stopped short n front of a store in the midst of her holiday shopping pree; and, noting a manger-scene display, she remarked to her co-shopper, "It beats all how they rag religion into every thing!" We have accepted he fruits of Christmas without the roots, and the fruit is spoiling on us.

To break this thick veneer of sentiment is most ifficult. But it must be done if the gospel is not to ome into greater disrepute in our world. We must ome to understand that Christmas is God's judgment pon our human ways as well as His manifestation of ve and grace. Life in and of itself is not automatically God-possessed. Christmas is the eternal reminder that without the righteousness and love of God as revealed through our Lord Jesus Christ, history and life are empty and meaningless.

AGAIN WE CONCENTRATE on the God-factor and miss Christmas. While we cannot eliminate miracle from Christmas or from the gospel without losing its essence, it nevertheless is possible for us to become so involved in explaining or defending these mysteries that we fail entirely to recognize that God could never have touched earth in this way without people like Mary and Joseph, the shepherds, and the wisemen, who were in a position to receive and be used of God. Furthermore, God intended that Christmas, much more than being the central event in the life of history, should be the central event in the life of every individual. As history had a new birth at Bethlehem and Calvary, so each individual must have a new birth with Christ being formed anew in us because of the same Bethlehem and Calvary.

As history had a new birth at Bethlehem, so each individual must have a new birth with Christ being formed anew in us.

At this point, of course, the Christmas message has rough going. There are still political systems which, while tolerating Christmas and its message, nevertheless fear the intrusion of the mightiest power in the world—God's love. There are still mercenary innkeepers (if we may be permitted to read between the lines of Scripture) who would rather be host to the world's 'great' than to heavens guests. Like Herod, we too would go to worship, but with a dagger under our coats. While there is a Christmas dogma, it must never be forgotten that dogma marks the end of true living if it fails to find expression—'incarnation' in our lives.

The eternal newness of Christmas can be sustained only as God inspired love becomes incarnate anew in the very midst of our fitful, hateful, and self-centered human ways and not canned in a dogma. The redemption that is in Christ Jesus attains its highest glory when it is brought into direct contact at all points with the sinful world it is intended to redeem.—J.J.E.

GARA LOSES CASE IN COURT OF APPEALS

The U. S. District Court of Appeals in Cincinnati, in a unanimous decision handed down Monday, refused the appeal and upheld the conviction of Larry Gara, former Bluffton College instructor, who is serving a sentence in the Federal Correctional Institute at Milan, Michigan, for violation of the peacetime draft act.

Gara, however, will be paroled next Tuesday, the parole beginning five days after the earliest possible date on which he could have become eligible, according to a probation official.

"Where Christ Should Be Born"

by Walter H. Dyck

"When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled and all Jerusalem with him. And when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born." (Matthew 2:3-4).

ACCORDING to ancient historians there was in the East a prevalent expectation that out of Judea a sovereign would arise who should rule the whole world. Having seen the "star in the east," a number of wisemen came, expecting to find all Jerusalem in excitement about the coming king. How odd it seemed that, instead, they themselves should be the ones to herald the advent of the King of Kings to the otherwise informed leaders of His people.

The question of the wisemen, "Where is he that is born King of the Jews?" caused all Jerusalem to be troubled. Herod immediately sent the Hebrew "wisemen" to find "where Christ should be born." This question needs to be regarded both as an inquiry as well as an imperative declaration. The great, crying need today is for men willing to explore and expose areas "where Christ should be born."

Consider three of the many areas "where Christ should be born": Christ needed to be born into the manger in Bethlehem; He needed to be born into individual hearts of lost and sinful men; and He needs to be born into the lives of professing Christians.

Forsooth, you are standing
"Where Christ should be born;"
Your heart is the manger, though fainting and small;
You honor this Christmas convincingly well
By trusting the Savior, by heeding His call.

Into the Manger

Every devout believer in Israel expected the birth of the Messiah. Prophets had foretold his place of birth. To the little town of Bethlehem, Micah had said, "Out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel." Isaiah had prophesied: "Behold a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel," the name meaning "God with us." To Joseph, the angel of the Lord said, "Thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins." God came to be with man in the person of His Son that might assure him of His love. Christmas is God's pledge to man that there would be a Calvary; that He would save His people from their sins, A Christian is happy for the manger in Bethlehem.

Into the Heart

The Christmas of Bethlehem must become the Christmas of each individual heart. Jesus says, "To this end I was born, and for this cause I came into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth." The sacred truth is that man needs a Saviour. "The heart is . . . . desperately wicked." God alone can cleanse it. Christ must be born into your heart and mine. Jesus said, "Marvel not that I say unto thee, Ye must be born again." As there is joy when "a man is born into the world." so there is also joy "in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." The Apostle Paul could humbly say of himself: "I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." This is what the Bible calls being "born again." A Christian is glad and thankful for this experience.

Into the Life

There is another "birth" to which the Bible refers. The heart into which Christ comes to live is the gateway to a Christlike life. Deathbeds too often witness "saved souls," but "lost lives." We have emphasized that the Christ-Life naturally follows being "born again." Unfortunately, growth often ends at the point where it should begin. The Apostle Paul compares his concern for his converts to the experience of a mother. "My little children, of whom I travail in birth again until Christ be formed in you . . . . for I stand in doubt of you." Thoughtful Christians today stand in doubt as to our birth into true Christlikeness. What kind of a Christ will we worship this Christmastide? Is the Christ of the Scriptures being formed in us? "Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another." A Christian covets this as a growing experience for each and all. (Reprinted from Mennonite Life.)

CHRISTMAS STORY A LA 1949

Last night, John Elzey, watchman at the Grand Eagle Department Store, while making his rounds of the bargain basement, found the body of a man lying under a counter. He was thin to the point of emaciation, apparently in his middle thirties, and was shabbily dressed. His pockets were empty and there were no marks of identification upon his person. Store officials believe that he was trampled in the Christmas rush and crawled under the counter for shelter. But they are unable to account for what appear to be nail wounds in his hands. The police are investigating.—From Saturday Review of Literature Dec. 25, 1948.

NO "MENNONITE" NEXT WEEK — A JOYOUS CHRISTMAS TO ALL READERS.

Experience Christ Through the Music of Christmas

by N. Laurence Burkhalter

THERE are, in general, two types of music which stir the human heart; first, just music itself, and second, music associated with a great thought. During the Christmas season, we will have occasion to listen to both types. In the literature of so called "pure music," there will obviously be none which can be identified as especially pertinent to Christmas, yet may I suggest that whatever music thrills us with its sheer beauty of form, melody, harmony and tone quality is a partial revelation of the One who is Absolute Beauty, and whose translation into the Son of Man we commemorate at this joyful season.

A Life-encompassing Subject

The greater amount of the music which we will recreate through singing, playing and listening will be that which is associated with the specific thought of the Advent of Jesus. It is music which is very definitely connected with this idea through the medium of poetry. We are willing to accept what appears to be a limitation imposed by the single subject, or idea, because that Subject touches the whole of the Christian's life, and has within it a tremendous scope of related thoughts and situations. Furthermore, the very nature of poetry is such that response to it is unlimited. Wagner once stated that the greatness of poetry can best be measured by what is left unsaid, in order that the inexpressible may speak to us in secrecy.

The words of our Christmas music alone could give us the heart of the Christmas message, but the music gives us the emotional stage-set for a much more meaningful reception of that message. The extent to which the music can do this is very largely in the hands of the performer. I am not referring to a select group, because every reader will very probably perform some piece of Christmas music—either solo, or perhaps with a large group of people. You have a double task then—to set the emotional stage for your listeners appreciation, and, what will perhaps be more tangible—your own inspiration.

Search for That Inexpressible Something!

Although I feel that I am stepping outside my qualifications in suggesting ways to let the poetry speak to our hearts, the scope of this article requires at least a mention of this aspect of the subject. In so doing, I realize also that to seek to interpret poetry to someone else is to destroy its intrinsic value, so rather let me simply and briefly suggest, in the hope that it will stimulate the reader's mind to search for that inexpressible something which will give him his richest inspiration.

Continue This Search!

Let us consider the words of perhaps the best known of our Christmas hymns Adeste Fidelis. What do these words . . . each of them . . . imply?

"O come" . . . an act of volition.

"all" . . . implies complete universality.

"faithful" . . . do we qualify here? . . . the faithful and the full-of-faith?

"joyful" . . . a joy not dependent upon circumstances!

"triumphant" . . . "more than conquerors!"

"with one glad accord" . . . leaving resentments behind!

"King of angels" . . . King of infinite souls as well as finite minds.

"adore Him" . . . with intellect, emotion, body, and soul!

This is just a beginning. I urge you to continue this search so that Christ may speak to your particular needs.

The Stark Picture of What is to Come

In the familiar "We Three Kings of Orient Are," the music suggests traveling at night. The tedium is eclipsed by the beauties of the oriental night, the sounds, the fragrances, the cool clean air, the rhythmic plodding of the camels, and the extraordinary beauty of the new star! The wise men are urged on by the burning hope of their mission! Yet, the mode suggests something unexplainably poignant.

Universal Subscription Under Consideration

CONTINUATION OF REPORT ON COUNCIL OF BOARDS MOUNTAIN LAKE, MINNESOTA

A PLAN for putting THE MENNONITE or DER BOTE into every General Conference home was presented at a joint session of all boards and committees Tuesday evening and was later endorsed by four of the Conference boards and committees—Home Mission Board, Board of Education, Peace Committee, and Executive Committee.

The plan as outlined by the Board of Publication would increase the circulation from some 7,000 to 11,000 of our General Conference homes. Subscription price would be decreased from $1.80 as at present on the 100 per cent plan to $1.00. All churches not now on the 100 per cent plan would be asked to submit a list of names and addresses of their families. Churches not able to pay their subscription price would be asked to contribute what they can. The deficit (if any) would then be divided among the various boards in proportion to their annual contributions (e.g., if a board would receive one-eighth of total Conference income, it would automatically share one-eighth of the deficit it being assumed that the interests of each board or committee is promoted in the church papers.)

Joint Sessions, Two Evenings

Two joint sessions of the boards and committees dealt extensively with the proposed revision of the Conference Constitution as presented by H. A. Fast, chairman of the Coordinating Committee. This Committee plans to publish before the August General Conference a proposed revision of the Constitution which will have the effect of integrating Conference organization and making Conference action more efficient.

Thursday afternoon a service was conducted in the First Mennonite Church for the ladies of the various mission societies of the community and being led by Missionary Association leaders, Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz of McPherson, Kansas, and Mrs. W. C. Voth of Newton were speakers. A large crowd was present.

Mennonite Landmark

Arrangements to bring the deed of the Germantown, Pennsylvania, Church property under General Conference trusteeship have been made by the Historical Committee, for whom S. F. Pannabecker, Chicago, Illinois, reported. The Germantown Church was the first Mennonite Church to be erected in the Western Hemisphere in the year 1683. This committee was responsible for the book FROM THE STEPPES TO THE PRAIRIES edited by C. Krahn, North Newton, Kansas. Another book to follow in this series of Mennonite historical studies is THE LIFE OF PLOCKHOY.

In cooperation with the Old Mennonites this committee is recording the archives having to do with Mennonite historical materials in Amsterdam. Some 10,000 exposures, or about a third of all the material has been photographed. Three volumes of early source material concerning early Mennonite history is ready for the press. (To be continued)

Innkeepers

by Leo Goertz

And yet in years of warfare, hate and blood
We heap upon that inn-host prideful scorn.
At Christmas we do fete Him, eve and morn.
But time is with us, and in truth we should
More clearly see our Lord than he who could Not pierce the womb to see our Christ unborn.
And seeing, we use tinsel, tree, and horn
To magnify our gain of highest good.

The Babe was sweet, He hushed the angel's song.
The Child was fair, It gardened in the wild.
The Man was wise, He saved men from wrong;
The Man was loving, humble, firm and mild.
The Child grew up to lead us in God's plan.
We take the Child, and yet take not the Man.

WHAT THEY SAY . . . . . about

The Handbook to the Mennonite Hymnary

"Would it not be a fine thing for churches which use bulletins or hymn boards to put a copy of HANDBOOK TO THE MENNONITE HYMNARY in each pew pocket so worshippers could read the setting or background of the hymn before it is used in the service?"—R. L. Hartzler, business manager of the Central Mennonite Publication Board, Bloomington, Illinois.

Editorial Note.—Why, yes, indeed it would be a good idea! How many copies may we reserve for your church, good friend reader?

FRIEDA REGIER ENTZ 1885—1949

A surrendered life! This was the secret of her abundant living and loving. She was friend to us—we who lived in her "Jerusalem," her "all Judea," her 'Samaria," or in her "uttermost parts of the world."

These outreaches of her love were, to a large extent, made possible through her more than twenty-five years of teaching in the junior department of the Sunday school; her work on the executive committee of the Women's Missionary Association, helping to form decisions on which the large work of the organization was built; her attendance at General Conferences and the interest in all its work.—(Adapted from Missionary News and Notes.)

P. H. RICHERT 1871—1949

Memories will continue to linger with us who have known and loved P. H. Richert. The young people will remember him especially as a peace-loving man. During the first world war he was sent by the General Conference to Washington to intercede for the young men. He also contributed much to the C.P.S. Program.

The old and the sick will treasure his visits. He seldom made a social call but many pastoral calls. The Book of Romans seemed to be his favorite book for family worship services.

The work of Bethel College, the Western District Conference, and the General Conference to which he gave 35 years of service as Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, were very dear to him. Even during the three and one-half years of his sickness he had some one read to him THE MENNONITE to keep posted as to what was being done in the field of missions and schools. Bethel College and the Conferences will miss his suggestions and his service.—H. B. Schmidt, Pastor of the Tabor Church, Newton.

P. A. PENNER 1871—1949

P. A. Penner lived. Multitudes rejoiced in meeting him as God brought him through the course of his life. His was a ministry on two continents. Then came death—sorrow and grief were the experience of many in India, America, Canada, England, and Australia. People under stood that they would no longer find help through P. A. Penner's ministry and counseling. But slowly came the realization that what will be missed even more than his ministry will be the man, himself. Hundreds of Indians, both Christians and non-christians, understanding that the person is not synonymous with his deeds, when speaking of Penner would most often say, "He is a man of love." "He is truthfulness and honesty." "He is gentleness and generosity." "He is kindness and humility." The passing of this pioneer missionary reminds us that a person is greater than his deeds and that the most potent force in the world is the Christian who permits Christ's character to radiate from his life so that the world beholding the Christian's life is conscious not only of great deeds but of love, truth, gentleness, kindness and humility.—O. A. Waltner.

And on Earth Peace

A Cross-cent

(This article is the English original of a German address read at the international Mennonite peace conference held at Elspeet, Holland, in July of this year. Ed.)

THERE are overwhelming arguments against war. Some people equate nonresistance and pacifism with propaganda against war. One can operate on the level of logic and can make a good case against war, but such logic does not always satisfy.

One can repudiate war on the grounds that it won't pay. But that argument is bound to look dull, unheroic, cowardly when the banners are flying and men are being called upon to lay down their lives for the honor of the fatherland.

One can argue that war will mean the collapse of civilization. Another atomic war might well result in that. But such an intangible concern has little power over the hearts of men.

Memorials to Man's Stupidity

One can visit Coventry or Berlin or Heilbronn or Rotterdam or Hiroshima and amid the ruins see the tremendous economic folly of war. I stood once with a German pastor amid the fields of rubble of what was once Heilbronn. I suggested to him that the ruins of Heilbronn should be left as they are, serving as a reminder to future generations of the ultimate stupidity of war. He shook his head sadly and said it wouldn't help.

One can propose the conclusive argument that wars always beget wars. Why not break that demonic chain of events? Again that is too much in the realm of the philosophic to grip the wills of men.

Against Our Best Judgment

One can testify against the diabolical savagery of the ways wars are fought, a savagery which makes any plea that wars are compatible with Christian love an ethical farce. Yet in the rush of national events, we are swept into wars against our best judgment.

One can appeal to the compassion of people, pointing to the 12 million refugees in Germany today —the human back-lash of war. One can point to the children in Hiroshima whose faces are scarred with burns. And yet short is the memory of man. A decade from now we may have forgotten.

We must draw lessons from those mountains of rubble, from the sadness of those refugee camps, from the bitter memories of war. And yet logic and arguments are not enough to inspire men to give themselves to a nonresistant life. I am led to speak from personal experience.

The Pilgrimage of Personal Experience

I was nurtured in a Mennonite home where nonresistance was woven into the very warp and woof of our thinking. It was inconceivable that we would ever go into the army in case of war. Then came college and university and I was attracted to the desire of making my nonresistant position intellectually respectable. Hence, I reached out and grasped all of these arguments against war which I have just reviewed. Unknowingly I came to rest my pacifism on the pillars of logic rather than on the ground of faith. Then came 1939—the invasion of Poland and in the spring of 1940 the sweep of the German armies through Holland and Belgium and down into France. Soon it appeared that England might fall. I remember photographs in the newspapers showing the devastation in Rotterdam—scenes which I had seen in all their peacetime stability but two years before. I felt so helpless as a pacifist against this hard-driving, ruthless force which seemed so bent on world domination. Amid these onrushing events I felt so insecure in my pacifism. The carefully-built house of logic seemed destined to fall because an ugly, demonic force was lashing about in the world.

I Rediscovered . . .

Through the grace of God I rediscovered in that moment my faith. It was a simple discovery, so simple that I have wondered why it so long escaped me. My discovery was this that the Cross of Christ stands in the center of life. The Cross is the supreme redemptive action of history, the central revelation of God's method of dealing with evil, the affirmation that love is the core of the gospel. I found in the Cross of Christ the heart of the Christian mystery. The Cross may be a stumblingblock to Jews and foolishness to Greeks, but nonetheless unto them who are called the Cross is the power and wisdom of God. The foolishness of God is wiser than men. (I Cor. 1:23-24). The foolishness of nonresistant love in a world of hate is wiser than men. Discovering this, I felt better. My calling was no longer that of doing that which was respectable in a world rushing to war. Our calling is to do the will of God. Christ gave us this concentrated call: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me." (Luke 9:23). If the Cross stands in the middle of our faith, in the middle of our nonresistance, then we have a message which can stand despite the shifting sands of reason and argument. The Cross is Christ's witness to the weakness and folly of the sword, to the triumphant power of nonresistance, to the new way of overcoming evil with good.

I Am Convinced . . .

Why do I give all this as background? Because I am convinced that to be an effective witness for nonresistance, one must first of all be a witness to the total gospel which finds its heart in the convicting judgment and atoning love of Christ. Our specific mission is not simply that of changing people's attitude toward war. Our first mission is to invite men to be disciples of Christ in the fulness and concreteness of its New Testament meaning. Discipleship means first an experience of regeneration through the atoning love of Christ; the ethical life of the Christian must flow forth from this experience. Nonresistance should be a fruit of this experience. This is a revolutionary experience. It demands a genuine change of mind and outlook, a rejection of the ugly egoisms and aggressiveness of man, a rejection of man's standards of glory and greatness, a new set of life values. If anyone would question this, we may reflect on the fruit of the Spirit: "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance," (Gal. 5:22-23), and in contrast the opposite catalogue of "works of the flesh": "idolatry, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, murders and such like." (Gal. 5:19-21).

Confronted by the Cross

Confronted by the Cross we hear those words of Christ which come to us as a divine commission: "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." (Matthew 5:48). And yet we must bow our heads with Paul and make the confession: "For I know that in me dwelleth no good thing:. for to will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good I find not, For the good that I would, I do not; but the evil which I would not, that I do." (Romans 7:18-19). However, we can have the confidence that through Jesus Christ will come to us enabling Grace. If we would be effective witnesses for nonresistance, we can find no better starting point than the Great Commission of Christ: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," (and now the ethics and the nonresistance:) "teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." (Matthew 28:19-20). "All things" means the whole gospel ethic. It means the principles set forth in the Sermon on the Mount, Christ's teachings, and in the writings of the apostles. It means, among other things, nonresistance. The gospel ethic, the Cross, and suffering love are inseparably bound together.

The Proper Preaching Base

One can witness in two ways. We can be doers of the word. We can also be speakers of the word. The two go together. The spoken word is illuminated by lives lived in Christian love. The proper preaching base for nonresistance, therefore, is the Christian community where nonresistant love is a fact of everyday life. Emil Brunner at the Amsterdam conference last year made this most penetrating observation: "Brotherly community is the very essence of the church. . . . The history of Christianity in the first centuries shows that the incredibly fast expansion of the church was due just as much to the contagious example of community life in the local churches as to the preaching of the gospel."

How may we be effective witnesses for nonresistance? If we scan the pages of Scripture we find clues to the techniques and principles of effective witnessing. We have earlier said that we dare not isolate nonresistance from the total gospel message. We have added that the proper base for witnessing is the Christian brotherhood which lives under the shadow of the Cross.

1. Toynbee's Principle of "Withdrawal and Return"

Study the life of Christ and John the Baptist and Paul, and one notes that their periods of great teaching and preaching—that is witnessing—were preceded by periods of self-examination, preparation, prayer, spiritual-refueling. The historian Toynbee calls it the principle of "withdrawal and return." We need those periods of spiritual retreat and re-examination. We, who would tell others that love is the law of life, need first to look within and clean out all the inconsistencies in our own lives. Do I really love other people? If I have a grievance with my brother, do I go to my brother and seek to be reconciled with him in love? Have I conquered the resentments in my heart? Can I sit at a table with a Negro? Are my attitudes right regarding the Mexicans, the French, the Germans? Can I respect and love a Jew? Cleansed of all uncleanness, filled with the spirit of Christ's love—only then can we share the gospel of peace.

2. This Daring Prophetic Quality

In the 10th chapter of Matthew, Christ asks his disciples to tell their message with simplicity and with courage—even to "preaching from the housetops." If no one wants to hear the good news, then "depart out of that house or city." Through one's witnessing we must have patience and endurance. Listen to our peace teaching today and so much of it seems so respectable, so middle-class. In Christ's message of suffering love, however, is a prophetic message which can be shattering to our complacency. Our witnessing ought to have about it this daring, prophetic quality—proclaiming the Word of God wherever we find tension, injustice, hate.

3. Recognizing "Diversities of Gifts"

The Apostle Paul in the 12th chapter of Romans and in the 12th chapter of First Corinthians informs

BETHEL'S STUDENT VOLUNTEERS IN OKLAHOMA

A group of six Student Volunteers went to Oklahoma during the Thanksgiving vacation for the purpose of giving programs in some of the churches. The programs consisted of vocal and instrumental music and messages. The students hope that by giving the programs they will have stimulated a greater interest in missionary activitiy in our churches.

Member of the deputation team were: Alma Smith, Pawnee Rock, Kansas; Marjorie Wienss, Beatrice, Nebraska; Ruth Neufeld, Enid, Oklahoma; Ramon Jantz, Drake, Sask., Canada; Joe Duerksen, son of Missionary and Mrs. J. R. Duerksen in India; and Arthur Isaak, Aberdeen, Idaho.

H. A. Fast, newly returned from Canada, told of his experiences in a recent chapel hour. He said that of all things he met during his trip he was most interested people. He told of various people he had met and praised the hospitality of the Canadian people.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Three Gospel Teams will travel during the week between Christmas and New Years. Each team will consist of a quartet and speaker. The Crusader men's quartet with Dale Dickey as speaker will visit churches at Meadows, Normal, Washington, and Tiskilwa, Illinois; Mountain Lake, Minnesota; and Freeman, South Dakota. The Ambassador men's quartet with Robert Ramseyer as speaker will visit Carlock and Summerfield, Illinois; Fortuna, Missouri; and Pulaski, Donnelson, and Wayland, Iowa. The women's quartet with Mary Gallagher as speaker will visit Souderton, Deep Run, Allentown, Bally, West Swamp, Lansdale, and Schwenksville, Pennsylvania. Faculty sponsors of the three groups are, respectively, Rev. Paul R. Shelly, Rev. Howard Raid, and Miss Edna Ramseyer.

The College closed for Christmas vacation on the evening of the 16th of December and classes will begin again January 3.

The student's annual Christmas banquet was held in the Ropp Hall dining room Thursday evening, December 15.

FREEMAN CONTINUES "WHITE GIFT" TRADITION

Several new students enrolled for the winter quarter.

The Board of Directors held their December meeting this week.

Willard Claassen, pastor of the Salem Church, spoke recently to the students in chapel challenging the group to new life in Christ. He emphasized the changes wrought in those who accept this new life—changes in judgment, in desires, in speech, and in action.

The Student Association decided to continue the "White Christmas" practice which is becoming traditional. Instead of exchanging gifts the group chooses some worthy organization or group and Christmas gifts are sent to them for distribution.

C.M.B.C. HOST TO SISTER SCHOOL

On the evening of December 3rd, the Canadian Mennonite Bible College was host to its sister Bible College here in the city of Winnipeg. The students of the Mennonite Brethren Bible College visited our college and presented a very interesting program. The subject that they presented and discussed was, "The Value of a Higher Christian Education." After the formal meeting a fellowship lunch was enjoyed by the two student groups.

On Tuesday morning, November 29th, William Enns of Springstein, Manitoba, was the guest speaker in chapel. Enns is on the Board of Directors of the Canadian Mennonite Bible College. As a basis for his chapel message Enns used John 1:29, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." The College choir is planning to give a Christmas program in his church on Sunday afternoon, December 11th. Pioneer of the Christmas Seals

by Vincent Edwards

It was just forty years ago this Christmas season that a big, jolly clerk in a Danish post office had a happy inspiration.

Einar Holboll was stamping the usual stream of holiday letters in Copenhagen when the thought flashed into his mind, "Why couldn't every one of these carry a stamp that would be sold to raise money for poor, tubercular children?"

Einar was not the man to forget something good. He brought his idea to the attention of several leading citizens. All pronounced it a capital scheme.

The post office officials enlisted in it to help put it over, and finally good King Christian himself gave it his hearty approval. A design had to be chosen next. As it was not a regular stamp, something quite different in size and shape was required.

When the next Christmas season rolled around, two million of these special seals were printed and ready for distribution. What fun it must have been for Einar to see them come through the Copenhagen post office! They sold like hot cakes.

The price was 2 oere or one cent, and they were on sale in every post office in Denmark. So great was the demand that the first lot were all gone by January 6, 1905, and another huge quantity was ordered printed. When the officials in charge came to reckon up, they found that a total of 4,113,000 seals were sold that first year, and the sum of nearly $41,000 had been raised. This amounted to about two seals for every man, woman and child in Denmark. Not bad, would you say? It must have made Einar Holboll feel as happy as Santa Claus himself.

The good thing about these seals, too, was that it set people to thinking, not alone about the sad sufferers from the disease, but about how it could be prevented. The very next year a fine sanatorium was planned, and a sitewas bought at Kolding, Denmark. A building was started at once. Four years later it was ready for patients.

Meanwhile, the sales of those Christmas seals had soared beyond all expectations. Those merry Danes had their own way of boosting the distribution. They would get hold of an old hat or a worn-out broom or a funny toy and send it through the mail unwrapped except for a covering of seals.

Sometimes one post office staff would start it off themselves. If they found an old shoe or another article that had been kicked around in their office, they'd plaster it with Christmas seals and mail it off to a neighboring office. Here, another lot would be stuck on and off it would go again. By the time that shoe or whatever it was wound up its journey, it would look like an object from "Alice in Wonderland"!

Einar Holboll was pushing the sales on his end, too. He liked to tell around that "letters without the stamp just simply are no good." Catching his zeal as a Christmas seal crusader, one old lady in a country town refused to accept two letters that had come without the holiday insigna. She gave the senders to understand that she was not going to have any friends who didn't use Christmas seals.

It is strange how a scheme to help others will sometimes travel like wildfire. It shows that there must be some kindliness left in the world, no matter how hopeless and dismal things may look at times.

The way the Christmas seal-buying habit caught on is a good illustration of this. Sweden adopted it right after Denmark. Then came Norway two years later.

Of course, it was bound to spread and spread. Another jump and it was clear across the Atlantic to North America. But it couldn't stop there. On, on it swept until, at last, there are today forty-five countries using it to fight the dread White Plague.

Einar Holboll did not die unhonored. In 1909 he was decorated by the King of Denmark, and appointed postmaster at Charlottenlund, the summer residence of the Royal Family. He passed away on February 23, 1927. By that time his Christmas seal symbol had completely encircled the globe.

The fourth stanza, describing the gift of the third wise man, brings us the stark picture of what is to come. O God! Does Thy Gift have to cost so much? Then the everpresent picture of the result of man's sin and selfishness appalls us as we reflect. Yes . . . it could not be had for less! He had to know our death, the aggregate total of it, to give us life! Now the new association changes the once foreboding strains into a triumphant "Allelujah!"

These are but two of a host of Christmas songs. Let us together seek new spiritual food through the inspiration of God's gift of music, by associating it with our deepest and most searching meditations, and with our most exuberant manifestations of praise and gratitude to Him.

Things to Do at Christmas Time

Harmon 8844

Of all seasons of the year, the Christmas season offers an unusually rich variety of activities in which youth may participate. Not only the annual Christmas program at church, the sharing of gifts with your family, the family dinners and get-togethers are to be thought about, but many other experiences as well.

The Young People's Union has mailed out Program Materials in which there are suggestions for activities as well as programs in which you may participate. They are well-planned programs full of good suggestions.

As a fellowship of youth, there are many other things you may do. Here are a few suggestions:

1. At a meeting, about the fire place if possible, read the Christmas story and sing carols. A good reader would read the Christmas story as found in Luke. All of you together would sing carols.

Another suggestion is to read Dicken's "A Christmas Carol" which is a classic story revealing the sort of character selfishness and self-giving mold in the persons of Scrooge and Cratchet. We do not do enough of such reading among ourselves. It is a good custom to cultivate.

2. Go caroling. This hardly needs to be suggested for it is done so universally. However, by careful preparation and placing of voices you can do a much better job of your caroling than sometimes is done. Before you go caroling, make out a list of folk to whom you want to carol.

3. Have a banquet or party and homecoming for students and others who have been away from home. It is a good way to renew old acquaintances and to express your pleasure at having them home. Plan talks, singing, and use the talents of the group for your program.

4. By all means hear great Christmas music and oratorios. All over the country, every year, "The Messiah" is being sung during December. By hearing that over and over again, it becomes one of the richest expressions of Christian faith and something you would go miles to hear.

5. Make Christmas real by sharing with poor families and needy children in your community. One group once had a Christmas party for a group of needy Negro children. It was one of the most memorable experiences the group had ever had.

6. Use the Christmas holiday season for attending a conference, or a short trip. Many youth and student conferences are held during the Christmas holiday season. By attending these, you have the opportunity of getting a broader and richer appreciation of the church and the Christian faith. By taking a short trip to a mission or to a community which lives quite differently from the way you do, you will appreciate more the home community and what it has to offer. A group of students made such a trip once to the cotton country of Mississippi and included an Ozark mission. The experience will never be forgotten.

7. Encourage everyone to find good Christmas programs on the radio. By announcing them and sharing the information, more people will be able to hear them.

8. Besides your own Christmas programs in your church, you might find time to attend Christmas services of other churches or groups. If you live near people with different backgrounds, this becomes especially interesting, for customs vary so greatly.

As you see, there are many things you can do to make Christmas a never-to-be-forgotten season.

A CROSS-CENTERED GOSPEL OF PEACE

us that among us "there are diversities of gifts." In witnessing for nonresistance to some it is given to work with children, to others to give talks, to others to write stories, to others to challenge youth, to others to have friendly discussions with people about the gospel of love and nonresistance.

4. Missionaries With Love in the Heart

We are propagandists for nonresistance. As propagandists can we tell our message in love, not dispising those who do not believe? Can we free ourselves from condescending pity for those who are not nonresistant Christians? Paul wrote to the Ephesians that they are to "speak the truth in love" and "to walk in love as Christ also hath loved us." It is in this area that we of the peace movement so often fail. Too often we judge harshly and unkindly those who do not take our nonresistant position. It is the sin of the spiritually proud that creeps into our hearts. Missionaries of nonresistance must have love in the heart.

5. Solidly on Biblical Ground

Our witnessing for nonresistance should be planted solidly on Biblical ground. If we "live and move and have our being" in the Bible, then our nonresistance should have a sturdiness for ourselves and, we hope, an attractiveness for others. It is interesting to note that the opponents of non-resistance rarely argue against the Biblical bases of nonresistance. One is confronted rather by such non-Biblical hypothetical questions: "What would you do if . . ." Often times the only answer to the critic is an answer of faith founded on the Bible.

I have not attempted to spell out concretely what are the techniques to be used in spreading the principles of nonresistance—whether we are to mimeograph news-letters, print books, sent out peace teams, hold conferences, write letters to our government officials, organize Sunday school classes . . . The important concern is that we must be active in this the Lord's work.

On a Simple Affirmation

What do we expect to achieve by all this witnessing for nonresistance? Nothing earth-shaking; perhaps nothing even noticeable in history. As John Yoder has expressed it: "To be dismayed by the appearance of futility would be to repudiate our entire purpose. For our work is not undertaken in any anticipation of success. We preach in the face of the indications of history and psychology that we shall never get much closer to having everyone converted; we must feed the hungry regardless of whether we have grounds to expect that they will be filled; we refuse to fight, yet with no expectation of stopping war." Ours is a practical gospel, but it is not to be judged on the grounds of practicality. The Cross stands in the center of our faith. That is beyond pragmatism. Our faith rests on the simple affirmations of God in Christ: "Love one another, as I have loved you."

Comments by the Editor -- Looking Toward 1950

With the ebbing of the year 1949, and the approach of the half-century mark of this twentieth century, it is well to look to the coming year with especial prayer and concern.

As this year closes, the darkest and most tragic half-century in the history of man comes to an end. Never has there been destruction rained down upon peoples in such a total manner as has taken place during this past half-century. Never has there been such cool calulating destruction planned for the future. This is true because man never possessed such extensive powers as he possesses today.

It may well be that, should historians write of this at some future date, they would characterize the twentieth century as the darkest of centuries man has ever known—yes, darker than the so-called dark ages of medieval Europe. And, if they would say that, they would say it in the face of the so-called 'progress' about which we all are so proud.

It shocks one a bit to say that. We are so proud of our intelligence and our 'know-how' that we have at times forgotten what we have done with our intelligence and 'know-how.' Yet, today, as one reads literature, listens to great thinkers, watches the defenders of theologies, one is impressed by the cynicism and despair so prevalent in a supposedly enlightened age when one would expect only sunshine and happiness.

It has often been said and remains true that man's control of power has increased greatly, but his sense of morality and right has failed to increase accordingly. And, in the midst of his selfishness and desire for gain, he sows the seeds of bitterness, hate, and greed.

As the new year approaches, we are celebrating a birthday of a manger child. His message of salvation is immortal; his way is the only way of hope for man. He lived in a world we call quaint and ancient, but he brought a message which no man can live without and which is as modern as tomorrow.

So, as we look to the last half of this tragic century, let us look with a clear eye on Bethlehem and the Galilean, determined as never before to give ourselves to Him and become His Disciples.—E.L.

Beyond Our Own

The American Legion national executive committee on November 6 approved a campaign for compulsory "security training" of all the nation's youth. The use of the word "security" instead of the word military is for propaganda purposes only, since the Legion proposal is for four months of military training in the summer. Boys would be liable when they reach 18 or when they complete high school, whichever comes first.—Conscription News.

NEW JERSEY. Bingo, a game frequently seen at carnivals and other places of commercial amusement, has become an issue which threatens to divide Protestants and Catholics at the polls in New Jersey. Republican Alfred Driscoll, up for reelection as governor of New Jersey, said: "Some people characterize bingo as a harmless pastime. I say it is gambling and has been known to be run at times by gangsters and racketeers." His opponent, Democratic Elmer H. Wene, said he saw nothing wrong with the game.—Moody Monthly

These Services Urged

WATCH NIGHT

As the churches approached the Christmas Season the United Evangelistic Advance urged every local church and minister to plan a Watch Night service on New Year's Eve from 11 to 12 midnight.

As New Year's Day opens, marking the arrival of the closing year of the first half of the 20th Century a 24-hour vigil of prayer will begin in many churches.

On New Year's Day, which comes on Sunday, every minister is urged to preach on the text, II Chronicles 7:14, "If my people who are called by my name, shall humble themselves and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land."

give to them that ask us, without being too cautious about it. God loves the cheerful giver. According to Matthew 5:42, Jesus wants us to give so, without strings being attached to our gifts, even if that should mean for us to suffer ourselves to be defrauded (I Corinthians 6:7). We would like now, not only to believe in Santa Claus, but to be one, and to dash through the air by reindeer team, dropping into every chimney of our good friends a parcel that would tell them how much we appreciate and love them, and how grateful we are for everything that they have done to us. And into the chimneys of the grateful needy of Europe, and even of the undeserving that they may know, there is a God, and a Saviour Jesus Christ in whose name loving helping hands are being extended to needy people without guile.

But, alas, we are no such Santa Clauses, mother and I. We cannot consider half of the letters which we received. We turn them over to local benevolent organizations for consideration, and give most of them to the M.C.C. whose faithful workers, certainly, will see too it that everyone is being helped who needs help. I wish the needy Europeans would send their supplications to the M.C.C. directly, without causing delay by detouring via Waterloo.

Our friends, near and far have been good to us, not only at special festival seasons but throughout the year, and we have already adequate proof that they have not forgotten us at this season, but are remembering us so liberally that we are unable to reply to all the letters and cards individually, try as we may. The goodness of God and of His people, whom He uses to help and to comfort His own has not lessened but increased, and we wish, therefore, to thank all and every one through our papers who has been good to us all these years, and in the year 1949 especially. May God give you all a blessed Advent Season, a Merry Christmas, and a happy and prosperous New Year, and may he grant us all a glorious entry into the heavenly mansions when our course here will be finished. Then and there we shall celebrate in perfection with HIM at the Marriage Supper of the Lamb.

Yours in the Lord,
Eliese and Jacob H. Janzen.
